Colonel Horton arrives Monday Colonel Reynolds heads for HQ AETC/IG

Colonel Kodak Horton will assume duties as the 64th Flying Training Wing vice commander on Monday. Horton succeeds Col. Bill Reynolds.

Horton arrives at Reese from Randolph Air Force Base, Texas, where he served as the chief of inspections, Air Education and Training Command Inspector General.

Reynolds will become the new AETC/IG.

A native of Des Moines, Iowa, Horton received a bachelor degree in Sociology from the University of Iowa in 1971. He also holds master's degrees in Public Administration from Ball State University in Indiana and in National Security and Strategic Studies from the Naval War College, R.I.

Commissioned through the Reserve Officer Training Corps, Horton completed flight training at Williams AFB, Ariz., in 1972.

Horton then served as an RF-4C instructor pilot, flight commander and flight examiner at Zweibrücken AB, Germany through 1978. He was reassigned to Seymour Johnson AFB, N.C., where he was an F-4E instructor pilot and assistant chief of wing standardization and evaluation until 1981, when he was transferred to Kunsan AB, Korea, as an F-4D instructor pilot and wing executive officer.

Selected as a member of the initial F-16 cadre at Kunsan, Horton completed his tour in Korea as an F-16 flight commander.

In 1982, Horton became the assistant operations officer and an F-16 instructor pilot at MacDill AFB, Fla. After completing the Air Command and Staff College at Maxwell as a distinguished graduate in 1985, he was assigned to the directorate of Operational Requirements at the Pentagon.

From 1987 through 1989, he served on the staff of the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force for Acquisition, as the executive officer in the directorate of Strategic, Special Operations Forces and Airlift Programs.

A fully qualified joint-specialty officer, Horton left the Pentagon in 1989 to attend the Naval War College.

In 1990, he became the commander of the 58th Training Squadron, Luke AFB, Ariz. In General Kehoe to get third star

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AETCNS) — Maj. Gen. Nicholas B. Kehoe III, 19th Air Force commander, has been nominated for appointment to lieutenant general.

Once the Senate confirms his nomination, he will assume the position of deputy chairman, NATO Military Committee, Brussels, Belgium.

Maj. Gen. W. Thomas West, special assistant for Theater Air Defense, Headquarters United States Air Force, Pentagon, Washington, will replace Kehoe as 19th Air Force commander here.

Officers Call

AETC vice commander to address Reese officer corps

by Col. Randy Gelwix
64th FTW commander

Lt. Gen. Clark Griffith, Air Education and Training Command vice commander, will be the guest speaker for Officers Call at the Reese Club at 4 p.m. today.

The general's visit provides an excellent opportunity for us to learn first-hand about AETC's vision of the future and our role in it.

That is one of the keys to the success of today's Quality Air Force — understanding how our individual piece of the puzzle fits into the "big picture," or vision.

It is also one of the reasons I resurrected the monthly Officers Call at Reese. It provides the senior leadership of this wing and command a forum to provide you with the information you need to succeed as officers and leaders. The focus of these meetings is on you — the officers of the wing.

When I was an F-4/F-16 assignments officer at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas, in the late 1970's, the commander of Air Training Command was General Bennie L. Davis. One of the areas he continually emphasized was the importance of officership. He had a formula he called the 3c's of Officership. That formula is still valid today.

The first "c" is commitment. Being an Air Force officer is a 24-hour-per-day profession. It demands the highest standards of integrity, dedication and self-sacrifice.

The second "c" is communication. We as officers must be effective communicators. That means being good listeners as well as good speakers. It isn't enough for us to understand what the mission requires; we must ensure our subordinates and peers share the power of knowledge.

The third "c" is courage. One of the greatest challenges all of us face as officers and leaders is having the courage to let others make mistakes. If an instructor pilot never gives the stick to a student, he or she never learns to fly on their own. Denying people the "opportunity to fail" will ensure they never succeed.

As we add Reese closure and reuse to our pilot training mission, the officers of the wing must work together to meet the challenge.

Gelwix

I look forward to seeing each of you at Officers Call today.

Observations of former base commander still ring true

(Editors note: Lt. Gen. Clark Griffith will be the guest speaker at today's Officer Call. The general was the 64th Air Base Group commander here from 1985-1986. Many of the observations he made in his first Roundup column form an accurate picture of Reese today. Then "Colonel" Griffith's column is reprinted in part below.)

Griffith -- 1985

When I left the Pentagon last month, I was obviously relieved to be going back to the field where the day-to-day action really happens.

More importantly, I was thrilled to be assigned to Reese since people at both the Pentagon and Air Training Command Headquarters always described Reese differently than any other base.

Typical comments were: "Reese is best!" "If you want to do it right, find out how Reese does it!" "You will not find better people or facilities than they have at Reese."

"Reese is on a roll—they are the many self-help projects that I see all over the base. This leads me to the main point of this article. How does all this happen?

The answer is obvious—even to a new guy like myself. You, the men and women of Reese, make it happen! It is done through dedication, professionalism and good old-fashioned hard work that you demonstrate every day.

Your teamwork and support remind me of a story

I heard recently about the Statue of Liberty. All of us know that France presented the statue to the United States and it was dedicated by President Grover Cleveland on Oct. 28, 1886.

However, what few people have heard is that there was no plan, nor money to erect the statue. Even though times were hard in those days, the people of the United States banded together and contributed pennies, nickels, dimes and hard work to build the foundation for the statue.

Thus, one of our nations most prominent landmarks was not just a gift from another country, but was made possible by the determination, dedication and sacrifice of the American people.

Like the Statue of Liberty, Reese is the best around, because the people of Reese provide that solid foundation every day which makes us stand above all others.

General Boles cites CFC

by Gen. Billy J. Boles
AETC Commander

The 1995-96 Combined Federal Campaign is under way and the call goes out once again for our help.

The men and women of AETC have always stepped up to the challenge when asked to help those in need. Our people are always there saying, "we care ... and we want to help."

Caring for people in need is the business of the more than 1,200 charitable organizations sponsored by the Combined Federal Campaign.

These organizations count on our contributions for the services they provide.

I encourage everyone in the Command to support this annual CFC appeal.

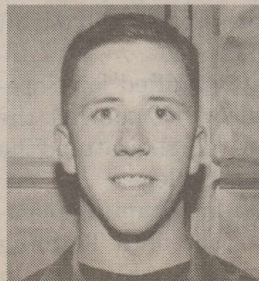

Working as a dedicated team we can make a difference ... bringing help and hope to those in need.

Be careful -- today is Friday the 13th

by Ralph Monson
Public Affairs

Grab your lucky rabbit's foot, knock on wood, find a four-leaf clover -- it's Friday the 13th.

There are a variety of theories defining why Friday the 13th is considered so unlucky. Ironically, the most popular explanation stems from the betrayal and crucifixion of Christ. There were 13 in attendance the Friday that Judas betrayed Christ.

The bad-luck link between Friday and the number 13 was strengthened by Leonardo DaVinci's painting of "The Last Supper," in which he portrays the revelation that one of the disciples would betray Christ. Clearly evident before a shocked Judas is a spilled container of salt; even then a symbol of bad luck.

There are other supposed roots for the number 13's unlucky legacy. But, one thing is certain, no superstitious belief is as widespread nor has as big an effect on society.

In France, there are very few homes with the number 13. Skyscrapers rarely have a 13th floor and many airlines have no 13th row of seats. Few professional athletes are willing to wear the number 13.

Here are a few common theories about other superstitions:

Walking under a ladder

The fear of walking under a ladder can also be traced to theological beliefs. When erected, a ladder forms a triangle—the ancient symbol of Trinity. It was believed that walking under a ladder, or into a triangle, violated the sanctity of the Trinity.

Just how strongly this belief is felt was recently demonstrated by an English university. Students erected a ladder across a busy London sidewalk. During a 15-minute period, 52 people walked down the sidewalk. Forty-two of the pedestrians stepped into the traffic-filled street rather than walk under the ladder.

Black cats

The superstition surrounding black cats is simply explained. In the Middle Ages, people believed that witches could take the form of a cat—usually a black cat.

This belief was strengthened by an English tale of a villager and his son chasing a black cat away with rocks.

The next day, a woman suspected by the village of being a witch, was seen wearing bandages on her head—obviously from the previous day's stoning.

Lucky horseshoes

It is the Romans who gave us the superstition of lucky horseshoes. Romans believed horses were lucky because they were not liked by witches. After all, why else would a witch ride a broomstick instead of a horse.

Hanging a horseshoe over the front door prevented a witch from entering the house. To prevent the luck from running out, the horseshoe had to be hung with the points up.

Lucky rabbit's foot

There are several theories concerning the lucky rabbit's foot, but the most plausible is the notion that carrying a rabbit's foot may bestow the bearer with some of the rabbit's prolific abilities.

Breaking a mirror

The first mirrors were pools of water in which people believed they could see their own souls and the future.

A calm reflection meant good fortune, a disturbed reflection the opposite. This belief continued as man developed glass mirrors. Some believed that if the mirror was broken, the soul was lost.

Wrong side of the bed

This is one of the most interesting superstitions. Its roots trace to the early Roman Empire.

The Romans believed there was a good and evil side of the body. Since most people were right-handed it made sense that the right side was the strong (good) side.

In fact, the Latin word for left hand is sinister. Since the left side was evil, all actions should be begun with the right side -- shaking hands, walking into someone's home and even getting out of bed.

The correct way to get out of bed to avoid bad luck is to put your right foot down first, making it necessary to get out on the right side.

An ironic twist to this is that although many of our military traditions are also traced to the legions of Rome, most marching drills begin by stepping out with the left foot first.

Perhaps this explains why some bluesuiters have difficulty staying in step, especially on Friday the 13th.

64th MSS, SVS set changes of command

by Senior Airman
Tim Dempsey
Public Affairs

Two squadron changes of command will take place this week at the Reese Club.

The 64th Mission Support Squadron will hold its change of command today at 10 a.m. and the 64th Services Squadron change of command will take place Tuesday at 10 a.m.

Lt. Col. Jean Daniel Dailey will replace Maj. Joseph H. Vivori as the commander of the 64th MSS.

Dailey, a native of Beckley, W. Va., graduated from Baylor University, Waco, Texas, with a bachelor of arts degree in sociology in 1967. Also, she received a master of arts degree in Guidance and Counseling from St. Mary's University, San Antonio, Texas.

She was commissioned through Officer Training School, Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.

Her last duty station was Phillips Laboratory, Kirtland AFB, N.M.

Vivori, a native of North Adams, Mass., has been assigned here since October 1992 where he was the chief of the military personnel flight.

He assumed command of the 64th MSS in August 1993. He will become the division chief for Air Force and Joint Policy at Peterson Field, Colo.

Capt. Jonathan A. Grammer will replace Capt. John Povelones, III, as the 64th SVS commander.

Grammer, who enlisted in the Air Force in 1977, received a bachelor of science from Utah State University in 1987 where he was a distinguished graduate of the Reserve Officer Training Corps.

He previously served as the flight commander of the 90th Services Squadron, F.E. Warren AFB, Wyo.

Povelones, a native of Columbia, S.C., assumed command of the 64th SVS in January 1994.

He will now be assigned to the Pentagon.

35th FTS change of command

Col. Bruce Burda, 64th Operations Group commander, formally presents Cmdr. John Hollyer with command of the 35th Flying Training Squadron here Oct. 6. Hollyer succeeded Lt. Col. Don Stiffler. The change of command ceremony marked the first time a Navy officer was given command of an Air Force flying squadron.

General Pelak succeeds General Rankin

KEESLER AIR FORCE BASE, Miss. (AETCNS) — Brig. Gen. Andrew Pelak will assume command of the 81st Training Wing here in early November.

Pelak, currently the director of military personnel policy at Air Force headquarters in Washington, D.C., will succeed Brig. Gen. Karen Rankin.

Rankin heads to Air Education and Training Command headquarters, Randolph Air Force Base, Texas to become director of technical training.

A native of New Jersey who calls Illinois home, Pelak has served at his current assignment since January 1994.

The 26-year Air Force veteran was commissioned through Officer Training School at Lackland in 1969.

Since then, his assignments have included executive officer to the 21st Air Force commander, McGuire AFB, N.J.; deputy chief of staff for personnel, Military Airlift Command, Scott AFB, Ill.; and chief of general officer matters, Washington D.C.

Rankin has led the 81st TRW since it stood up in July 1993. Eighteen years earlier,

New vice commander arrives Monday

Horton is a command pilot with more than 3,500 hours in various F-4 and F-16 aircraft.

He and his wife, Deborah, she commanded the 3411th Student Squadron here.

Reynolds previously served as the 323rd Operations Group commander, Mather AFB, Calif.

Chief Sanford eyes end to drawdown instability

GOODFELLOW AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AETCNS)—Force stability is on the horizon as the end of the military drawdown nears, said the Air Education and Training Command senior enlisted advisor during a recent visit to Goodfellow.

That's good news for young airmen and officers who have experienced nothing but change since they joined the Air Force five or six years ago, said Chief Master Sgt. Thomas Sanford.

The top enlisted advisor to Gen. Billy Boles, AETC commander, said,

"It's time for people to realize a stability, not only for their own career potential and growth but for the sake of their families as well," Sanford said.

As the Air Force enters the post-drawdown era, Sanford said improving quality of life and other initiatives will help lay the foundation for stability.

Better family and dormitory housing will likely be a product of funding the Air Force is getting to boost the quality of life for its members, he said.

"The money is there for housing. We have made magnificent strides with Congress," the 29-year Air Force veteran said.

"For the first time ever we got money specifically for dormitories in the budget. In this command, where we do the bulk of the Air Force's training—not to mention the training we provide our sister services where we are joint in nature—it's a real godsend."

"General Boles has penned a letter to wing commanders indicating support for enlisted heritage," Sanford said.

"As we construct new buildings and open classrooms, we should consider the pioneers who wore the stripes when it comes to naming these facilities. It lets us recognize the people in this command who were doing wonderful things for our Air Force, and it lets us capture it for posterity.

"If we don't soon capture what the folks who went before us did to make this Air Force what it is, it will be gone forever. No one will be around to remember," he said.

Sanford cited the recent dedication of the Goodfellow fire training complex as the Louis F. Garland Fire Academy as a perfect example of preserving heritage. Garland was a former enlisted person who, from 1965-1976, developed much of the current Air Force firefighter training program.

While honoring those who contributed in the past, the chief said it's also critical to prepare young people for the future. In AETC, that responsibility rests mainly with the command's instructors.

Instructors must do more than simply teach from behind the podium; they must be facilitators for the learning process, he said.

"We can no longer be satisfied to do lock-step instruction," the chief said. "We're using terrific technology in our classrooms, not to mention that audio and visual presentation has changed—we've got real F-16s on the ramp!"

The new high-tech environment means instructors have to become actively involved with the students. "And that's what I have seen around the command," he said.

Korey Nowlin, 64th CS, is stopped by a 64th OSS defender after a reception in intramural flag football here Oct. 5. The 64th CS won the game 34-12.

64th CS downs 64th OSS

by Senior Airman
Tim Dempsey
Sports Editor

The 64th Communications Squadron upended the 64th Operations Support Squadron, 34-12, for its first victory in intramural flag football here Oct. 5.

Korey Nowlin lead the 64th CS with a touchdown reception and two interceptions including one for a touchdown.

"I was watching the quarterbacks eyes," Nowlin said about his interceptions.

"The first pick was straight to me and I just headed to the end zone. I had to leap to come down with the other pick," he explained.

The stingy defense of the 64th CS intercepted Curtis Bartells four times on the night. Nelson Perkins and Will Hightower recorded the other interceptions.

Defense controlled the game in the first half for both teams as the 64th CS scored two touchdowns and the 64th OSS scored one.

In the first quarter, Tracy Jones, quarterback for the 64th CS, connected with Steve Oravec on a 45-yard touchdown pass. The 64th OSS defense prevented the completion of the point after attempt (PAT). The 64th CS took an early 6-0 lead.

The 64th CS appeared to have another touchdown in the quarter as Jones swept left for an 18-yard touchdown run. However, the play was called back on an illegal pushing in the back penalty to end the quarter.

After the 64th CS offense moved the ball down to the 64th OSS 12-yard line, Jones again kept the ball and swept left for the score. Jones hit Hightower in the end zone for the PAT. The 64th CS went up 13-0.

On the ensuing drive, the 64th OSS found itself fourth-and-three on its 40. On a quarterback keeper, Nowlin stopped Bartells a yard shy of the first down.

The 64th CS took over on downs and three plays later found itself in a fourth-and-one on the 21-yard line. Charles Strock broke through the offensive line to sack Jones for a 9-yard loss. Strock had two sacks in the game.

The emotions from the 64th OSS defensive stand carried over to the offense. On its own 30-yard line, Bartells hit Damond Tidwell on a 31-yard reception.

On the following play, Bartells connected with John Tholen over the middle for a 19-yard touchdown strike. The PAT failed and the 64th CS led 13-6 to end the half.

The 64th OSS started off the third quarter driving past mid-field. Bartells dropped back looking for a receiver but Hightower intercepted the pass on his team's 35-yard line and returned the ball to the 64th OSS 31-yard line. The 64th CS was penalized on the pick and was backed up to its 39-yard line.

The 64th OSS offense mounted a drive down to the 20-yard line. On the following play, Jones found Nowlin through the air who high stepped into the end zone. The PAT was good and 64th CS extended its lead, 20-6.

The 64th OSS took over on its 20-yard line. On second down from the 22 yard-line, Nowlin picked off Bartells' pass and returned 30 yards for his second touchdown. The PAT was complete to Marco Tiberio for a 27-6 lead.

It didn't take long for the 64th OSS offensive to respond. On its first play from scrimmage, Bartell hit Ed Acuavera on a 60-yard touchdown pass. The PAT failed as the 64th OSS cut the lead to 15 points. The 64th OSS defense held the 64th CS to end the third quarter.

Nowlin recorded his second pick to start the fourth quarter. Nowlin leaped above the 64th OSS receivers to come down with the ball.

On the following play, Jones went up top to connect with Hightower on the 4-yard line. Then Jones rolled left to hit Hightower in the corner of the end zone. The PAT was complete to Matt Fells for the final score, 34-12.

Nelson Perkins intercepted Bartells on the 64th OSS 36-yard line to end the game.

"We have some good hearted athletes," said Fells, coach and player, after the game. "Tonight we had enough players to give our starters rest. Usually we have seven players and we have to go both ways."

Reese Closure Survey Team Visits Oct. 10-13

Reese Air Force Base, Texas — Headquarters Air Education and Training Command (AETC), the parent command for Reese's 64th Flying Training Wing, will send a 16-member site survey team to Reese, Oct. 11-13. Following the stop at Reese, the survey team will also visit AETC's three other undergraduate pilot training bases before mid-November.

The visit marks the beginning of Reese's closure process and the redistribution of Reese assets and mission to the other three bases. According to Major Mike Connolly, survey team chief, "The objective of our visit is to identify all assets requiring redistribution from Reese, to determine Reese closure costs, to validate data gathered during Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC) site surveys in March and April, to assess the capability of all remaining bases to accept the increased workload generated by Reese closure, and to review beddown plans for additional resources. In addition to these BRAC '95 requirements, we will also determine the military construction required to allow the three remaining bases to accomplish peak pilot training production in future years."

According to Colonel Randy Gelwix, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, "The fact of Reese's closure became law Sept. 28 and the official closure date is set for Sept. 30, 1997. After the survey team completes its visits to each base, a time line will be developed for the orderly, phased drawdown of the base's mission and personnel from Reese."

The team will visit Vance AFB, Enid, Okla., Oct. 23-26; Columbus AFB, Miss., Oct. 30-Nov. 2, and Laughlin AFB, Del Rio, Texas, Nov. 6-9.

Team representatives will work with their Reese counterparts in the areas of aircraft maintenance; airfield operations, civil engineering; command, control, communications, and computers; contracting; services, supply and equipment accounts.

News Release, Oct. 6, 1995

Yes, Reese will close Sept. 30, 1997.

But for now, life at Reese Air Force Base goes on as usual.

Flying missions continue as usual and new people are arriving at Reese each month. Orientation sessions are being held to acquaint newcomers with Reese and Lubbock.

Reese continues to be a vital part of Lubbock and the area.

Reese workers — officers, enlisted men and women, civilian employees and contractors — will earn combined salaries of more than $80 million this year. Most of this payroll will be spent in Lubbock and the surrounding area. Air Force people with their stable income can afford quality goods and services.

You can increase your chances of winning Reese customers by advertising in The ROUNDUP, the base's weekly newspaper. Because of the advertising dollars generated in the Roundup, no tax dollars are used in the printing of the newspaper. As long as the advertisers' support is there, the newspaper will continue in its current format.

Local businesses can increase their chances of tipping the profit scales in their favor by placing ads in the base paper.

The Roundup has always been a vital part of Reese in helping the commander keep in touch with the "troops." The paper also keeps Reese folks informed about what is going on for entertainment on the base as well as in Lubbock.

Don't miss the only market in town where everyone has a job and everyone has money to spend!
