Reese employee faces possible 10 year jail term

Maj. James Moody Staff Judge Advocate

As base closure approaches, everyone needs to be especially vigilant in protecting government property from theft.

Experience shows that military and civilian personnel alike are tempted to make off with U.S. property when a base is slated for closure. The thinking often is that if the shutting down the entire base, it shouldn't miss a few items of property.

This is wrong. The United States does indeed care about even small dollar items. Government property is government property, paid for by taxpayers for use by the government, or in case of base closure, to remain behind for the government doesn't mind absorb the revenue loss produced by base closure.

> The United States will prosecute to the fullest extent of the law anyone guilty of theft.

For example, a recent Office of Special Investigations inquiry revealed that a Reese civilian employee had taken home several pictures hanging on the wall of his duty section. As a result, the individual was local community which has to notified that his employment was being terminated. The case is being prosecuted through the office of the U.S. Attorney with the potential for up to 10 years jail time.

The bottom line is base closure is not a giant "going out of business" sale. Anyone tempted to push the envelope is setting themselves up for more trouble than they can afford. This goes for military as well as civilians.

1996 Savings Bond Campaign runs throughout June

Financial planning is "in" these days because people realize that if they plan, they are more successful in reaching their goals.

Savings is at the root of all good financial plans, but it can be hard for many people to save. The U.S. Treasury Department can help.

It offers the Payroll Savings Plan for the purchase of U.S. Savings Bonds.

Financial goals vary. Some people want to take a dream vacation, others want to buy a new home. Many people want to save and provide a college education for their children, or retire in comfort. Savings bonds are flexible enough to satisfy many long-term savings goals.

101 Critical Days of Safety

Fogleman

by Gen. Ronald Fogleman Air Force Chief of Staff

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — From Memorial Day through Labor Day many of us will enjoy summer picnics, water sports, and long drives while on vacation. This time period is branded as the "101 Critical Days" — "Critical" because many people lose their lives while "enjoying the summer fun."

Each year, private motor vehicle accidents and water-related activities have taken their toll on Air Force people and their families. Last summer 31 people lost their lives in off-duty activities during the "101 Critical Days." Twenty-three of the fatalities were the result of off duty motor vehicle accidents.

Private motor vehicle mishaps continue to be the leading accidental cause of death in the Air Force. What is truly tragic is that many of these fatalities could be prevented by following two simple but proven rules; ALWAYS buckle up and NEVER drink and drive! Each one of us needs to take every precaution while operating a vehicle — drive defensively and expect the unexpected.

The summer months should be a time to enjoy a variety of outdoor activities with family and friends. Swimming, hiking, boating — all fun things to do but each has inherent dangers.

Each one of us must take the time to recognize the risks involved in whatever we do, whether on- or offduty. By identifying the risks associated with the activity, you can then take the appropriate actions to reduce or avoid the risks altogether.

By taking a few moments to plan, you and your family can have a pleasant, relaxing summer; and most importantly, avoid the heartbreak of a needless mishap.

Working safely at Reese

by Charles Gerrior Reese Ground Safety

During the 101 Critical Days of Summer Safety Campaign, many military and civilian workers think the summer safety campaign is only an off-duty safety campaign.

This is flawed reasoning as on-duty mishaps have occurred during past summer safety campaigns and probably will occur again several times this summer.

The majority of the mishaps will be categorized as non-reportable first aid injuries. The worker is injured and reports to the clinic to be patched up and returns to work with no lost time except for the time lost receiving medical treatment.

The majority of on-duty mishaps are the direct result of unsafe acts committed by workers who know better, but are willing to take shortcuts or violate published safety rules. These workers are skilled, briefed more than once on safe work procedures and are not working under direct supervision. When asked what caused the mishap, they have excuses and faulty reasoning.

The final step in the mishap prevention effort occurs when the individual worker takes the responsibility to perform their assigned duties in a safe manner. This means the worker understands the assigned task or asks questions if there is any doubt on how the task is to be performed. Workers must ensure that proper tools are taken to the worksite and used. Lockout/tagout procedures must be used to secure all energy sources per government regulations.

Some of the most common safety violations noted by the wing safety staff are:

using a chair for a ladder,

using a screwdriver with a rounded tip,

☐ failure to use personal protective equipment, eye goggles, gloves or steel toed

☐ failure to secure equipment in the bed of a vehicle,

☐ failure to use lockout/ tagout procedures when working on energy sources.

'The Gunny' says thanks, bids goodbye

by Andrew Worley U.S. Marine Corps

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of the Air Force personnel here at Reese for taking me in as one of your own.

Being a Marine at an Air Force base, I wasn't sure what I would find when I arrived here almost four years ago. At first, I felt as out of place as I looked.

As I met more Air Force personnel and was accepted, I became more at ease withmy new surroundings. It seemed easy for me to make new friends and get involved with the Reese community. This gave me a chance to learn more about the Air Force of which, until then, I had little knowledge of.

The Air Force is so much different from the Marine Corps, and I had to make some adjustments. That was made easy by people like Chief Master Sgt. Dave Ptomey and his wife Marsha, Master Sgts. Steve Hastings, Rick Miller and Mike PlesKovitch, Senior Airman Nick Canadeo, all the members of the Reese Top Three Association and many others at Reese Air Force Base.

Now, it's time for me to move on to my next assignment. For the next four months, I'll be in Philadelphia, Pa., and then I'll go on to Quantico, Va.

Again, I wish to thank all of you. I hope to see you all again soon.

Graceful Mississippi kites return to terrorize Reese

by Linda Woestendiek 64th Civil Engineer Squadron

The Mississippi kites have returned! These birds migrate north from South America each spring to nest and raise their young.

Mississippi kites are a distant relative of the falcon. Although they prey primarily on insects like grasshoppers and dragonflies, their favorite meal is the large, incessantly buzzing cicada.

Kites are graceful fliers, spending hours in the air. Their preferred nesting sites are in open woodland areas and include one of the predominant trees found at Reese, the Siberian Elm. Those you can take the following risk-reducing actions: of you who enjoy your time on the golf course will easily recognize this wide-branched tree

Although small, 12 to 14 inches big and weighing 8 to 12 ounces, the kite's wingspan can reach three feet. The adults are soft gray, with a lighter gray to white color on the head.

The kite is not an endangered species, but it is protected. It is illegal to harm them, their eggs or nests. Any hostile or aggressive bird activity in the vicinity of your home, office or recreation area should be reported to the 64th Civil Engineer Squadron service desk at 3647. In the meantime,

- ☐ Avoid nesting areas as much as possible.
- ☐ Wear a hat.
- ☐ Look directly at the bird if it dive sat you -- it expects you to run.

☐ Wave your arms or a stick, causing the bird to pull out of its dive.

Being strafed by a bird of any kind can be unnerving, especially if you're riding a bicycle or playing golf, but under no circumstances should you remove a bird or its nest. The base's permit allows designated personnel to remove a kite's nest if the bird becomes overly aggressive.

64th MDG improves base emergency care

by Tech. Sgt. Ken Loftis 64th Medical Operations Squadron

In an effort to provide improved quality care to the Reese community and exceed Air Force standards, the 64th Medical Group has made several modifications to its medical care during 911 emergency responses.

Approximately nine months ago, the ambulance crew that responded to medical emergencies on base consisted of two emergency medical technician basics.

Although well-trained, the crews' capabilities were limited by their certification and training to providing only basic care such as first aid and CPR. They could not transport patients to local hospitals because local laws dictate a paramedic must be on board when transporting patients. The crew had to wait for an ambulance from Lubbock Emergency Medical Services to transport the patient to the appropriate civilian medical facility.

The 64th MDG now has four medical technicians certified at the emergency medical technician-paramedic level. This certification not only allows them to transport patients, but allows them to provide advanced life support measures 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"It's made a big difference," said Senior Airman Thom Watts, 64th Medical Operations Squadron, who attended the year and a half paramedic course at Texas Tech University. "We no longer rely on radio for help. We can initiate any type of therapy for the patient.'

An ambulance crew now consists of one EMT-paramedic and one EMT-basic, eliminating the need for Lubbock EMS to dispatch an ambulance to the base.

Another change is how the ambulance crew is dispatched.

In the past, calls to 911 from base were answered by the command post, who in turn, routed calls to the base hospital for medical emergencies. The hospital had to take time to obtain all the appropriate information before respond-

Also, an agreement was made with Lubbock EMS to act as the base hospital's dispatcher. Now when 911 is called with a medical emergency from on base or base housing, the command post will transfer the call to Lubbock EMS dispatch instead of the base hospital. Lubbock EMS dispatchers are certified paramedics and while one dispatcher is obtaining the appropriate information, a second dispatcher simultaneously dispatches a base ambulance crew by pager.

All 911 calls for the security police and fire department are still directed to those base agencies.

As soon as Reese's crew is paged, it immediately proceeds to the ambulance and responds to the location. During the response, the dispatcher will continue to ask questions and needs the answers to provide important updates to the base ambulance crew prior to its arrival.

In addition, the dispatcher can provide instructions to the caller. These directions may include how to open the patient's airway, stop bleeding or CPR assistance.

It's these instructions that can help save the patient's life prior to the arrival of the ambulance. In many circumstances, a positive outcome is a direct result from how fast emergency care is initiated.

"The improvements bring Reese up to the level of care enjoyed by the community," said Capt. Dean Schultz, medical operations flight commander. "It's running smoothly.

First civilian seeks reserve line officer commission

ROBINS AIR FORCE BASE, Ga. (AFNS) — The first civilian applicant to seek an Air Force Reserve line officer commission through a sixweek officer training program designed for enlisted people will start training June 10.

Upon graduation from the Air National Guard Academy of Military Sciences on July 18, Sean P. McGraw of Tuscaloosa, Ala., will receive a commission as a second lieutenant. The academy is located at McGhee-Tyson ANG Base, Knoxville, Tenn.

In November the Air Force Reserve waived its requirement for applicants to be enlisted reservists, thereby allowing the Reserves to recruit officers right off the street.

U.S. troops in Germany to see major COLA reduction

Ingram explains aircraft drawdown charts to Dave Dietsch, contract manager, LMLM.

Ingram wins Star Award

George Ingram, Lockheed Martin Logistics Management maintenance operation manager, was one of six winners out of 21 nominees to be presented the Star Award for Leadership at Lockheed's inaugural Star Award dinner in Arlington, Texas, May 18.

He won the company-level award for planning the drawdown and transfer of 165 aircraft from Reese to other Air Education and Training Command bases and saving money for the Air Force customer.

Ingram will be considered at the corporate level with winners to be presented at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington D.C. later this year.

RAMSTEIN AIR BASE, Germany (AFNS) — U.S. military personnel based in Germany will see a significant reduction in their May 31 paychecks as a result of an across-the-board cut in the cost of living allowance, according to finance officials here.

The Defense Department credits a stronger dollar and low German inflation with boosting service members' purchasing power.

Although the reductions may seem like a double blow to members' wallets, U.S. Air Forces in Europe finance officials say the reduction is normal.

COLA for each location is based on local currency rates, studies of prices in the overseas area compared to the United States, level of exchange and commissary support, and surveys of people's shopping habits.

According to a message from DOD's Per Diem, Travel and Transportation Allowance Committee in Alexandria, Va., surveys indicate people rely a bit more on the local economy for their support, and German prices have stayed the same or decreased while U.S. prices showed a recent jump.

Another factor in the COLA reduction is the recent strength in the U.S. dollar against the German mark. The committee has set the dollar-DM rate at 1.51 DM, which accounts for an overpayment while the official rate stayed at 1.46 DM. The dollar bought 1.50 marks at military banking facilities as of May 21.

USAFE finance officials say DOD has a good track record of taking care of people during major exchange rate fluctuations.

The amount of the actual cut will depend on a person's grade, time in service and number of command-sponsored family members. The following examples give the monthly COLA for a person with two accompanied family members: An airman with two years service will decrease from $357.30 to $312.60; a staff sergeant with eight years service will go from $464.10 to $405.90; a first lieutenant with two years service will drop from $549.30 to $480.60; a c tain with six years will decrease from $656 to $573.90; and COLA for a colonel with 22 years service will drop from $914.40 to $800.10.

COLA is computed as an index, and the index for full-support areas, such as Ramstein and Heidelberg, has been cut from 132 to 128. The COLA index for partial-support areas, including Geilenkirchen, has been reduced from 136 to 130.

The Defense Department pays COLA to help maintain service members' purchasing power in high-cost areas. Stateside COLA began in some locations in July 1995.

Interim coach sparks 64th MDG bats

by Senior Airman Tim Dempsey Sports editor

After dropping its opening game of the season, the 64th Medical Group has been on a r in intramural softball

McCullough has brought life to the team's bats and motivated its defense.

During league play the week of May 19, the 64th MDG added two games to its winning streak by convincingly overpowering the opposition and turning heads in the league. In its game May 22, the 64th MDG sank Navy, 18-1, in three innings. The team finished the game with 21 hits.

If 21 hits weren't enough, the following night the 64th MDG offense pounded out 25 hits enroute to a 16-6 victory against the 35th Flying Training Squadron.

The victories moved the 64th MDG into second place in the National League behind the 64th Mission Support Squadron -- the team the 64th MDG lost to at the beginning of the season.

The 64th MSS continued Interim coach Eric its perfect season by winning three games. It defeated Lockheed Martin Logistics Management, 14-13, May 21; routed the 54th FTS, 29-2; and beat the 35th FTS, 16-6, May

> The 64th Communications Squadron remained the only undefeated team in the American League by squeaking by the 64th Security Police Squadron, 14-13, May 22.

> On May 21, the 64th Operations Support Squadron pounded the 54th FTS, 19-2. Navy, in a doubleheader, edged the 64th SPS, 9-7, and beat LMLM, 14-9.

On May 22, the 64th Services Squadron got its first victory of the season by holding off a nine run sixth inning rally by the 64th Civil Engineer Squadron for a 15-14 win.

The 64th OSS closed out the week's play May 23 with a 10-9 victory.

A "fit" AF improves preparedness

BROOKS AIR FORCE BASE, Texas — As the Air Force prepares for future contingencies, it requires healthy airmen who can fight and win in all types of environments. Yet, a 5 Defense Department survey indicated only 50 percent of Air Force personnel exercise vigorously three or more times per week.

To keep people in touch with exercise requirements, the Air Force designated May its fitness month with a focus on changing poor fitness habits.

Until recently, the issue of fitness was left up to the individual. Now, based on directives from leadership and recent DOD mobility requirement studies, there is growing support to get more people involved in base health and fitness programs. While the overall forecast for readiness remains high in the Air Force, medical and fitness experts believe all involved must do more than they have done in the past.

AF volleyball teams win gold, silver

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFNS) — The men and women Air Force volleyball teams had an outstanding week of competition against Army, Navy, and Marine teams during the 1996 Armed Forces Volleyball Championships, held in Port Hueneme, Calif., May 6 through 9. The men's team won first-place gold as they finished the championship with a 5-1 overall score. The women's team brought home second place silver, with an overall 4-2 final
