NEW SEARCH BEGUN NEAR EULA FOR SHALLOW OIL

Spudding of one well and announcement of a new location Tuesday south of Eula gives promise of a new search for shallow production in the south part of Callahan County as well as exploration of the deep Ordovician zones, previously announced by Hal Hughes of Abilene.

B. F. Robbins of Big Spring said 12 1-2 inch surface casing was being set on the Robbins and Webb No. 1 Annie Thompson, two miles south of Eula, after drilling through pyrites of iron to a depth of 52 feet.

Robbins has blocked about 2500 acres on which the test is to be sunk to 2 000 feet, contracted by W. L. Jackson & Son. It is located 150 feet out of the southwest corner of the southeast quarter of section 13 BBB&C survey.

He said two tests to the east about a mile, drilled in 1925-26 had found good showing around 1,800 feet. Thompson & Gallagher No. 1 Barr, he said filled about 500 feet, with oil as it topped 1,700 foot sand.

Test Drilled in 1926

A mile and a half to the south a test drilled in 1926 had a good showing of oil at 1,421 feet; and Charles Sanger's wildcat a mile to the west was reported to have had good showing at 840 feet.

To the south of the Eula wildcat, Joe Gallagher of Abilene and H. B. Herring, Dallas operator, have made location on the Quincy Loven land for another 2,000 foot test in the center of a 2,000 acre block which adjoins the Hal Hughes 8,000 acre spread.

It is slated for spudding by July 1, and is located near the center of the east line of section 354, George Hancock survey. It is three quarters mile northwest of the Pruitt No. 1, Tom Windham drilled in 1924 which Gallagher reported as showing for 20 barrels daily under 12 million feet daily of wet gas at 1,420 feet. Subsurface geology was worked by Carl Shoultz of Abilene.

The Gallagher and Herring test is about two miles north of the Hughes et al No. 1 Tom Poindexter, projected Ordovician wildcat which will seek Ellenberger lime pay at 4,500 feet.

South of Wildcat

Hughes will drill to the south of the Beams and Wooten wildcat which showed for an estimated 1,000 barrels daily, based on three flows after it struck deep pay in 1933.

Rig and materials for spudding the No. 1 Poindexter are being moved to location now. After spudding, a rotary will be moved on and the lighter machine used for starting a second proposed deep test to the southeast.

Empire's Oplin gusher on the Johnson tract south of Clear Creek west of the Baird-Coleman road southern Callahan Co. line produced about 30,000 barrels in one month when it reached the deep pay about ten years ago. It was later junked when casing collapsed.

The Hughes tests will be to the north.

Cross Plains-Abilene Highway Bond Election Set For July 8

Residents of Taylor-Callahan counties road districts No. 7 will vote July 8 on whether or not to issue $25,000 in bonds to purchase right-of-way for highway 36 toward Cross Plains.

Bond election for that date was called Monday morning by the Taylor county commissioners' court, which has jurisdiction of the special district, in a hearing on petition submitted May 22.

No opposition was voiced to calling of election, asked in the petition signed Tom K. Eplen and 65 others. The petition was circulated by the highway committee of the Abilene Chamber of Commerce. Unanimous vote of the commission was given the motion to call the election.

Ballots will be cast on the proposition of issuing $25,000 in bonds at 4 per cent interest, to be retired in a maximum of five years. Bonds would be liabilities of property owners in the special district composed of precinct of Taylor county and a four-mile wide strip extending 16 miles into Callahan county.

For Right-of-Way

The $25,000 would be used in buying right-of-way to a point in Callahan county 28 miles from Abilene. Connection would be made with another highway, giving direct routing to Cross Plains.

The commissioners' court named 12 voting boxes for the election, to be held under usual Texas election laws. They are, in Taylor county Butternut street fire station, Cedar street fire station North Park school, Hamby school American Legion building east of Abilene, McMurry filling station, Caps WOW hall, Tye WOW hall, and Potosi school.

Reducing in Hospital

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

A MAN, thirty-two years of age, height 5 feet 11 inches, weighing 310 pounds, consulted his physician in an effort to rid himself of his excess weight. He was carefully examined and found to be in good health although his blood pressure was above normal, a common condition in overweight.

A metabolism test was made—rate at which the body processes work—and it was found that they were about the normal rate. In many cases of overweight the body processes work too slowly and do not burn up the excess food or fat. Such was not the condition in this case.

As there was thus no reason to use thyroid extract, the patient was given the new weight reducing drug dinitrophenol and in a period of ten weeks he lost 30 pounds. Naturally he was pleased with this satisfactory loss of weight but at this time proven cases of cataract due to the use of dinitrophenol were being reported in the medical journals. It was estimated that 1 in 1,000, perhaps even 1 in 100 users of this drug to reduce weight were being afflicted with cataract. The physician promptly stopped using the drug.

The physician then used thyroid extract but it had little or no effect upon the excess weight and caused the heart, already a fast heart, to beat much faster.

The physician then discussed the case with an authority on weight reducing, giving him a full history of the case to date. This authority made two suggestions. The first suggestion was that the use of anterior pituitary extract might be helpful, which would depend of course on whether the individual was not the pituitary type of overweight. When the pituitary gland, lying on the floor of the skull, is not sending enough juice into the blood, not only are the starch foods not used or burned completely but the fat that accumulates is not spread equally over the whole body as when the proper amount of thyroid juice is lacking.

Put Him in Hospital.
The second suggestion was that the physician should place this overweight in hospital; that is treat him as a patient. For, after all, he really was a patient—fast heart, high blood pressure and excessive overweight, easily tired and got out of breath on slight exertion.

As treatment by dinitrophenol might lead to serious results, even death, and thyroid extract had no effect except to increase the rate of his heart beat and increase his blood pressure, the only treatment that remained was to cut down on his food intake.

"A useful procedure in such cases, when the patient is able to afford it and can withdraw himself from home, business and social life, is to administer the prescribed diet under supervision in a hospital for a week or two."

I believe the suggestions for treatment of the above case will appeal to our common sense. Excess weight can be due to only one cause—the eating of too much food for the requirements of the body.

Starch Foods for Diabetics.
Before the discovery of insulin, the lives of diabetics were prolonged by feeding them just enough starch foods—sugar, bread, potatoes—to maintain life. They were thus very weak.

When insulin was discovered by Dr. Fred Banting it was found that diabetics could eat more starch foods as the insulin enabled the blood to carry and use the starch foods for the work of the body instead of having it thrown out of the body in the urine.

Now insulin is expensive, and must be administered by the hypodermic needle which, of course, the patient learns to do for himself. Therefore research men have been trying to increase the amount of starch food the patient's body can use so that less insulin will be necessary.

Dr. J. M. Rabinowitch, Montreal, in the Journal of the Canadian Medical Association records his experiences in lessening the total amount of food eaten but giving a large percentage of starch foods so as to enable the blood to hold and use more of these starch foods.

There were 50 cases and the patients followed the treatment carefully for five years. The records show that this diet leads, in the majority of cases, to marked improvement in the amount of starch foods which the body is enabled to use.

Further, the daily doses of insulin finally needed in these cases were found to be less than with all other diets that have been used heretofore in the treatment of advanced cases of diabetes.

Circus Tycoon Unworried by Labor Trouble Flurry.
NEW YORK.—The circus left Washington after a brief stay, with Samuel W. Gumpertz, general manager of the mammoth Ringling Brothers Barnum and Bailey show, completely untroubled, serenely unruffled, by a flurry of labor trouble at the national capital which involved a campaign by Ralph Whitehead of New York, head of the American Federation of Actors, for recognition of the union by the circus authorities.

Always a diplomat, quiet-spoken but nonetheless poised and, when necessary, incisive, Gumpertz does not appear to have made any strong objection to the unionization of various elements not now organized, including members of the "bull gang," as roustabouts and others who put up tents and do general heavy work are known. Business, he admitted, has been very good indeed, so why break the amiable processes of prosperity on the wheel of feudal pride and economic recalculation?

When we first knew Sam Gumpertz, he was the great American freak impresario, exhibiting his collection of curious and abnormal humanity at the Dreamland circus side show on Coney Island, part of a varied entertainment provided by the late Senator William H. Reynolds over a course of several years in the middle 1900s.

Since he was a boy of nine, Gumpertz has been of the circus, beginning his career as an acrobat with the Montgomery-Queen show. Seventeen years later, he was winter manager for Col. John G. Hopkins, operator of a chain of seventeen theaters, while he helped conduct the Barnum and Bailey and Buffalo Bill shows in the good old summer time. Later came his association with Senator Reynolds at Dreamland and he was thus engaged when, as a result of the illness of his old friend, John Ringling, he was drafted to the biggest circus of all.

Taking hold in the years of depression, he saw the need of a greater efficiency in the conduct of business and in certain radical revisions in the form and variety of entertainment. Consequence was that the circus remained a going concern, a very progressive concern, in fact, as witness financial statements showing that the "Greatest Show on Earth" last year played to record business.

Gumpertz rules with an iron hand encased in a velvet glove. Supreme in authority over a community comprising 1,600 men, women and children, representing forty-nine races, he knows everyone, from the lowliest roustabout to the highest-paid entertainer, by first names, is his confidant in all their troubles and declares he has less difficulty with his personnel than he would have with "a little wagon show."

French Journalist's Visit.
MANY Americans with memories of their war days have been greeting Jacques Chastenet, editor of Le Temps, who arrived here on his first visit to this country. Asserting he should have come here long ago, M. Chastenet purposes a survey of conditions in the United States in the course of a trip which will carry him through the Middle West.

A liaison officer with the second division, A. E. F., during the World war, now editor of one of the world's leading newspapers, the visitor is renewing many old American friendships.

The paper of which M. Chastenet is the distinguished editor deals very prominently with foreign affairs, including, of course, those of the United States and is considered in the chancelleries as a first class authority on international questions. Born in Paris in 1893, educated at the Lycee Condorcet he has written several books of profound legal character, is a chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

What a Nazi Thinks.
RETURNING to Germany after a tour of the United States, Prof. Friedrich Schoenemann asserts in a lecture that public opinion in the United States could be mobilized for a war against Germany "in a few hours," if such a war were pictured as a great crusade for a great ideal. Referring to the recent Nazi press attacks on Mayor La Guardia of New York City, he laments the folly "of judging all Americans by La Guardia."

Director of the American section of the English seminar at the University of Berlin, Professor Schoenemann has degrees from Göttingen and Heidelberg, where he studied. He is well known in this country through his long sojourns here and from his analytical essays.

Himself a Nazi, albeit a calmly poised one, evidently, his remedy for present states of mind and trends of thought in America concerning Hitlerism is counter propaganda setting forth the benignities, urbanities and profound logical bases of the ruling conceptions of social, economic and administrative practice in Germany.

GREAT SMOKIES

Typical Great Smoky Mountains Cabin.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.
THE 1,500 species of flowering plants that blossom before June 1 are spreading their color over the slopes of the Great Smoky mountains.

Haze-shrouded, the Great Smoky mountains dominate the horizon of eastern Tennessee. Visitors often are amazed to find such lofty, wild, and unspoiled mountains straddling the Tennessee-North Carolina state line. In 1923, when public-spirited men and women of the two states organized to encompass soaring heights and plunging valleys in a national park, even the mountaineers, grandchildren of pioneers who had braved the arrows of cunning Cherokees, had not explored the whole area.

Adventurous hikers who did invade the mountains found the undergrowth so thick in places that they had to chop their way through it with an ax.

A few naturalists and surveyors visited parts of the Smokies. Hunters sought their quarry amid the stately trees and dense cover that sheltered bears, deer, and numerous smaller animals.

Revenue officers occasionally tried to penetrate the wilderness, and lumbermen, with dynamite, axes and saws, pushed their roads and railroads only as far as the most recent cutting.

To business men of eastern Tennessee and western North Carolina, the Great Smokies long were a trade barrier. No road leaped the rugged ridge along which the state line rambles for 71 miles. Commerce east and west in this latitude still moves around either end of the mountains, but the "barrier" now is an asset as the Great Smoky Mountains National park.

Life There Was Primitive.
A few years ago it took more than a week to go to Knoxville and return to the cabins in the hills.

In those days there was little reason for the mountaineer to leave the mountains. A few sheep supplied wool for clothing and the mountain woman was an adept spinner and weaver.

When cows and oxen became useless and were dispatched, bears were made of their hides. Bears, deer, and birds, brought down with five-foot rifles or caught in traps, supplied the family meat platter. "Sweetnin'" was produced from sorghum.

Nearly all the land in the Great Smokies was privately owned when the park movement was initiated. Arrangements had to be made for its purchase before the land could be turned over to the national park service for development. An intensive money-raising campaign was planned. Private subscriptions aggregated $1,000,000. Appropriations by the adjoining states brought the fund to $5,000,000.

But this was only one-half the funds required. The campaigners for many months sought vainly for the other half. Then John D. Rockefeller, Jr., announced that the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial would match dollar for dollar any money raised in the campaign.

In 1926 congress authorized the establishment of the Great Smoky Mountains National park on condition that the citizens of Tennessee and North Carolina present 427,000 acres of acceptable land in one solid tract, the acreage to be equally divided between the two states. Officials who had investigated were enthusiastic.

"Nature is at her choicest here," they reported. Development of the area as a national playground began, and today the thousand resident families have shrunk to about four hundred.

Highways Are Being Built.
For six years now government agencies under the supervision of the national park service have been building roads and trails and restocking forests and streams.

The work is just begun. Only seventy miles of high-standard roads, twenty-five miles of secondary roads, and fewer than 600 miles of trails have been completed. Yet for the last three years this infant of our national park system, not yet dedicated, has been attracting more visitors than any other of our 25 national parks.

Less than a mile east of Gatlinburg, Tennessee, a white and green sign announces the boundary of the Great Smoky Mountains National park.

At the end of a long curve, a short distance beyond, the highway forks. You stop and peer through the haze at the steep, tree-blanketed slopes of Mount Le Conte and Sugarland mountain, whose lofty summits are often hidden in lowhanging clouds.

There is only one modern road over the mountains between Tennessee and North Carolina. It winds through the scenic valley of the West Prong of Little Pigeon river, crossing and recrossing the stream to the state line at Newfound Gap.

The Chimneys, rugged twin peaks, thickly forested, stand like sentinels, guarding the bridge which carries the highway across the West Prong. From the bridge all the way to Newfound Gap the traveler is hemmed in by steep, wooded mountain slopes, unbroken except where a waterfall, too high above and too far away to be heard, gleams in the sun like a white silken ribbon as a mountain stream sweeps over a precipice toward the noisy river cascading below.

At Newfound Gap along the state line the mountain top has been excavated and space provided for parking several hundred automobiles. Here the arboreal wonderland that is the Great Smokies spreads before you in both states.

Down Into North Carolina.
From this point the highway descends into North Carolina along the Oconaluftee river, through the Qualla Indian reservation, toward Asheville and Bryson City, North Carolina gateways to the park.

Southward from Newfound Gap, the Skyway, one of the highest highways in the country, is taking shape. It has been completed nearly to Clingmans Dome, the loftiest peak in the Great Smokies. Ultimately it will wind forty miles over and around peaks along the state line until it reaches the western end of the park, affording amazing vistas of jumbled mountains and billowy valleys. Portions of the Skyway are already 6,300 feet above sea level.

It is along the trails that the hiker meets isolated mountain families in their cabins, and stumbles upon the remnants of abandoned mills that not long ago ground out the mountaineers' "turn" of cornmeal.

Nearly everything one observes in and around a mountain cabin is homemade. Trundle beds, high-backed chairs, spinning wheels, and looms are usually heirlooms.

One of the first known white men to study the wonders of the Great Smoky mountains was a botanist, William Bartram of Philadelphia, who climbed among these heights about the time patriots in Independence Hall signed the Declaration of Independence. After him came other botanists who have found the mountains their paradise, one of the largest and last vestiges of the native forest that swathed the hills and valleys of colonial America.

Orchids and Ferns.
So diversified are the wild flowers of the Great Smokies that visitors from many sections of the country find species that grow abundantly in their fields and woodlands among others that are rare to them. Twenty-two orchids find a natural habitat in these rugged and well-watered mountains; there are 50 kinds of lilies; 7 of trilliums; 22 of violets, and 5 of magnolias.

The native wild orchids, while not so large as the more familiar cultivated species, have all the exquisite form and dainty coloring of their "civilized" cousins. Like many other plant families in the Smokies, the orchids are found throughout a long blossoming season. Certain species make a bold debut in the very early spring; others appear reluctant to yield sway to chilly autumn.

Ferns range from the most delicate, with lacy fronds, to the most hardy types. There are lush carpets of mosses and lichens of many varieties, and hundreds of mushrooms and other fungus species range from almost microscopic sizes to the large and showy varieties, many of which are prized edibles.

Here the catwba rhododendron is at its best. In late June and July its white and purple blossoms cover whole mountain spurs, fleck sweeping slopes, and envelop trails and streams. Mountaineers call rhododendron and laurel thickets "slicks" and "hells." Indeed, the plants grow in such tangled masses in some areas that only wilderness animals can get through them.

Huggins Hell, covering about five hundred acres, is one of the largest rhododendron and laurel thickets. It was named for Irving Huggins, a mountaineer who sought to drive his cattle from one mountain to another. On the way he was trapped in the Huggins Hell area. It took him several days to find his way out. Mountaineers avoid the "slicks," identified by such colorful names as Devil's Tater Patch, Devil's Courthouse, Woolly Tops, and Breakneck Ridge.

STAR DUST

Movie - Radio
By VIRGINIA VALE

ALWAYS a dauntless trail blazer, Sam Goldwyn has just announced that in future all of his productions will be filmed in Technicolor.

Where Sam leads, others feel that they must follow, and the chief drawback is that it is going to be very expensive, because Technicolor film costs considerably more than black and white. First of the Goldwyn Technicolor films will be "Folies" with Helen Jepson, the Ritz Brothers, Zorina, the great Russian ballerina, Virginia Verrill, beloved of radio fans, to swing those blues and a vast array of comics.

Robert Young got a wonderful break when M-G-M loaned him to play opposite Claudette Colbert in "I Met Him in Paris." His own studio officials who lately had been treating Bob rather like a comfortable old shoe, went to the preview and came out raving about him as if he were a new discovery. Right away they went out and bought the screen rights to a grand story called "Witness to a Murder," and presented the star role to Bob.

There is a pretty thrilling story of grit and courage connected with the Hal Roach picture "Pick a Star." A blonde beauty named Rosina Lawrence who sings and dances light heartedly in that and in "Nobody's Baby" was paralyzed as a child as the result of a back injury. After months of consultations, her mother located a doctor who thought he might improve her condition by giving her exercises. Now she is strong and healthy and agile—much more so than other girls who did not have to fight for a chance to walk and dance.

There isn't a busier girl in all Hollywood than Dorothy Lamour, which is a break for film fans, but bad news to the many radio fans who have been wishing she would find time to sing regularly on a radio program again. She has just finished roles in "High, Wide, and Handsome" and "The Last Train From Madrid" and will start any day now on "Her Jungle Love." Her first big success, you will recall, came when she played "The Jungle Princess" and Paramount has been looking for a sequel to it ever since.

Connie Boswell is the latest radio singer to succumb to the pleas of motion-picture producers. She will warble in Paramount's "Artists and Models." But the most exciting news on the Paramount lot is that Mary Livingstone, the giddy comic of Jack Benny's program and in private life, his wife, is such an inspired screen comic in her first picture that all her supporting players are sulking. The picture, called "This Way Please," was supposed to star Shirley Ross and Buddy Rogers, but Mary is just romping off with all the scenes.

It looks as if Kenny Baker of the air waves will be a strong rival of Bing Crosby's on the screen just as soon as "Mr. Dodd Takes the Air" is released. Walter Wanger, who has been searching for a good-looking young singer to play the lead in "52nd Street" persuaded Mervyn LeRoy to let him see as much of the picture as has been filmed. Immediately, he decided Kenny Baker was just what he had been looking for. Kenny Baker will have Pat Patterson, wife of Charles Boyer, playing opposite him in the Wanger film. That's a break for him, because she is one of the most utterly charming young women in all Hollywood.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Screams of rage and violent protest broke loose on the Paramount set for "Artists and Models" when he-men like Richard Arlen and Rube Goldberg, the cartoonist, found they had to get all pretied up in knee breeches and lace ruffles for a masquerade scene . . . Motion picture producers are trying to argue Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor out of galloping through mountain passes on frisky horses. Barbara took a nasty fall the other day—with the horse landing on top of her. She wasn't seriously hurt, though . . . Motion picture stars can get into accidents anywhere, it seems, because Sylvia Sydney took a header on the slippery floor of a beauty salon and cut her face quite badly . . . Ginger Rogers and Harriet Hilliard have more fun on Sundays when streams of tourists are haunting all the well-known Hollywood cafes. They pack a lunch and go picnicking, and nobody recognizes them.

FRIED CHICKEN PRIME FAVORITE

Preparation Method Varies in Different Sections.

By EDITH M. BARBER
FRIED chicken! The very words bring water to the mouth. The battle, however, in regard to the methods of its preparation continues to rage. Shall it be dipped in flour crumbs or batter, or shall it be fried in its natural state? Should butter or lard or a mixture of both be used? Shall much or little fat be used in the frying? What is the difference among the terms Southern, Virginia and Maryland fried chicken? How does Kentucky prepare it?

While fried chicken is certainly a specialty in every state, the South seems to have been given the palm, so let's see how Southerners describe their methods of cookery. In "Eat, Drink and Be Merry in Maryland," by Frederick P. Steiff, I find two different recipes under the term Maryland. In one, the chicken is rubbed with salt, pepper and flour; in the other it is dipped in milk and then in flour. In one it is fried in hot fat to half cover; in the other it is fried in butter and salt pork.

In the book "Old Southern Recipes," by Mary D. Pretlow of Virginia, the chicken is rubbed with salt, pepper and flour and fried in lard to half cover. In the "Savannah Cook Book" by Harriet Ross Colquitt, we are directed to season, dredge with flour and fry in deep, very hot fat. Emma Speed Sampson, who says she started in Kentucky but hopes to end in Virginia, gives two recipes. In one, the chicken must be dipped in milk and then in flour and fried in a small amount of lard; in the other, it is prepared in the same way and cooked slowly in deep hot fat. In the "Blue Grass Cook Book" by Minnie C. Fox, the directions tell us that the chicken must be dredged in seasoning and flour and cooked slowly in equal parts of butter and lard. In "Two Hundred Years of Charleston Cooking," the recipe tells us to season the chicken with lemon juice, salt and pepper, then to dip it in a mixture made by beating two eggs with a tablespoon of milk. It should be fried in plenty of fat until brown, then covered and cooked slowly.

Apparently the secrets of preparing really fine fried chicken lie first of all in the selection of tender birds, as well as in the method of frying. If the chickens are older, a very little water may be added after they are brown. The pan may be covered and cooking continued until the meat is tender. This process is suggested in several Southern recipes. Instead, I sometimes place fried chicken in a casserole, add cream, cover tightly and finish the cooking in the oven. Most of the cream will be absorbed and the final product will have a delicious rich flavor.

Chicken Maryland.
(From "Eat, Drink and Be Merry in Maryland," by Frederick P. Steiff.)
Take half spring chicken and season, rub over with flour, then immerse in beaten eggs. Heat some clarified butter in a saucepan, fry the chicken in it very slowly to cook and attain a fine color; then finish cooking in a slack oven for ten minutes. Dress the chicken with cream sauce and garnish the top with small corn fritters and slices of broiled bacon. Decorate the legs with paper frills.

Blue Grass Fried Chicken.
(From the "Blue Grass Cook Book," by Minnie C. Fox.)
Prepare young chicken and sprinkle with salt and lay on ice twelve hours before cooking. Cut the chicken in pieces and dredge with flour and drop in hot, boiling lard and butter—equal parts—salt and pepper and cover tightly and cook rather slowly. If it cooks too quickly, it will burn. Cook both sides to a rich brown. Remove chicken and make a gravy by adding milk, flour, butter, salt and pepper. Cook until thick and serve in a separate bowl.

Georgia Fried Chicken.
(From "The Savannah Cook Book," by Harriet Ross Colquitt.)
Cut up the chicken, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dredge with flour and fry in deep and very hot fat. Pour off most of the fat in which the chicken has been fried, leaving a little in the pan. To this add a large tablespoon of flour and cook, stirring it constantly, until a golden brown. Season with salt and pepper, add one half cup of cream, heat thoroughly and pour over chicken.

Casserole of Chicken
1 chicken (4 pounds)
2 teaspoons salt
Pepper
Flour
6 tablespoons butter
1 cup water.
2 tablespoons chopped celery
2 teaspoons chopped onion
1/4 cup mushrooms
1/2 cup cream
Wash the chicken and cut into pieces for serving. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Roll each side in flour. Sauté in butter until well browned on both sides. Place in a buttered casserole. Add water, the celery, onion and mushrooms. Cover and cook until tender, one to two hours, in a moderate oven 350 degrees Fahrenheit. Remove the cover and add cream. Cover and cook another five or ten minutes.

Modern Living-Dining Room.
A clever method of dividing a room that has to be used both as living and dining room consists of painting a low white dado around the base of the wall and building white bookcases out into the room the same height as the dado. These bookcases set off the corner of the room to be used as a dinette. This division is further accentuated by having a different shade of brown carpet than is used for the balance of the room. The upper walls are painted sand color, while the modern furniture is in natural dark walnut, varied by some bleached pieces.

Household Hints

By BETTY WELLS

THIS summer's bride should wear something old and something new to the altar by all means, and even something borrowed if she must be literal. But she might save the "something blue" for the theme of the bedroom in the new home. Because men like blue rooms—remember when the most romantic song a young swain could croon into the ears of his lady love had words that said something about a "blue room far away upstairs"?

A blue room that would please everybody, even the bank book, might be papered in ice blue with a tiny white floral pattern in it, with woodwork painted this same ice blue. The draperies could be white glazed chintz with mulberry red ball fringe for a finish. The dressing table could also have a white chintz skirt with ball fringe for trimming.

Something Old and Something New, Something Borrowed and Something Blue.

and a pair of slipper chairs might be slip covered in a mulberry and white figured chintz. (Use that fine vibrant shade of palace mulberry that's come "in" with the Williamsburg, Va., restorations.)

Cherry would be nice for the furniture in this room—in a pleasantly colonial design. And on the bed a quilted spread made of the mulberry and white chintz—have it just big enough to fall about four inches over the sides of the bed to overlap a flounce of white pleated chintz. A deep blue bedroom rug would be a satisfying finish for the room, yet inexpensive. Lamps in pale blue and white and accessories in blue porcelain for accent.

That's a bride's room that even the groom could feel at home in, yet it has allure, too, for all its simplicity.

Sentimental.

We've been thinking of English homes in terms of roast beef for long enough. Now we are rebuked properly—a new series of model rooms recently shown in London are as sentimental as strawberry soda.

The theme of the design of each room is the personality of the owner, and the colors are selected because of their becomingness to her. The theory—we approve of it!—is that a lady's own home should set her off at her best.

And so there's a room for a brunette in corn color, light maple and beige, with accents of cerise. For a Titian haired woman there's a room with pale green walls and curtains, with carpet, furniture coverings and accessories in Parma violet shades. The bed is set in a niche papered in light green with a mauve and silver pattern, and silver metallic cloth upholsters the headboard of the bed.

Chooses to Run

Give them $716 a month. They will spend it in the shops. Then make the shopkeepers give it back to the government.

By JOHN LARDNER
AN OPEN letter to Party Chairmen, Presidential Delegates, and also to Whom It May Concern (address unknown):
Sir:

I will come to the point at once. My hat is in the ring for the next Presidential nomination. The sooner I have your endorsement, the better for this great, stricken republic of ours, which I trust you love as much as I do, even though election is four years away.

I will match my love of my country with any man's, at catchweights. I love her rocks and rills, her woods and terraced hills, her Constitution, her history, her climate, her employed, her unemployed, her tax-payers, and also her tax-exempt.

I love the people of America—black, white, yellow, and red (Note to HQ: Check size and distribution of Indian vote, if any).

But our great nation is tottering on the brink of destruction, into which she will certainly fall if you elect any of the present Democratic and Republican candidates.

I do not say for certain that I can save her, for I am fundamentally modest. But I can have a darn good try. (Note to voters: Believe use of strong word like "dark" justified in circumstances. I am a man's man.)

"On the Record."
My program is not a New Deal, or an Old Deal, or a Deal Off the Bottom. It is the SQUARE DEAL.

I know about the Square Deal. I learned about it in the greatest school in the world, the School of Hard Knocks. (Note to heirs and bankers: But I appreciate the importance of having a little capital to work with. Don't misunderstand me, fellows.)

The voters are familiar with my record. It might be a good idea, however, to mention some of my personal beliefs and characteristics.

My smile is quiet but steady—one of the best all-around smiles in public life. It has been with me almost as long as my faithful cook (23 1/2 years) and my wife (30 years without a spat). Friends say that my quiet but steady smile hides a lot of deep thinking and homely philosophy. They are too kind. I have been lucky in my friends.

I love to fish—boy, how I love to fish!

Football is a grand game, too, and baseball builds character. I follow baseball. Jimmy Foxx hit 35 home runs last year.

I am dry personally, but I do not mind people taking a drop now and then, in moderation. I am no prig. Still, the dry movement was a lovely movement. Lovely people in it, too.

That will be enough about myself. It's not a favorite topic with me, and my friends say that they practically have to burn the soles of my feet to make me talk in the first person. I have been lucky in my friends.

Now for the ISSUES. A great deal is at stake in this campaign. The man who dodges ISSUES is guilty of bad faith. The public deserves the truth.

First, there is the matter of TAXES.

Greed an Ugly Thing.

I do not propose to soak the thrifty, who have toiled so long to put away a few dollars vs. a rainy day. Nor do I propose to soak the laborer who lives from hand to mouth, God bless him.

The rich should not be soaked. Many of my best friends are rich people. I am not in the pay of Red Russia.

On the other hand, there is a lot to be said for Russia (in the right places), and I guess some people are too rich. Only it's not richness so much as greed. Entrenched greed—that's the phrase I want. Entrenched greed is an ugly thing, any way you look at it.

And "soak" is an ugly word. I do not plan to soak the rich or the thrifty or even the poor. My tax program might be called the SOAK NOBODY program.

It is eminently practical. A glance at my record will show that I balanced the budget of the Osceola County dog-pound in three successive terms as a dog-catcher. Incidentally, I love dogs. I only caught them through a sense of public duty.

There is just one way to balance a budget. Take your mean norm of income over a period of seven years, divide it by the net profit quotient (N. P. Q.), and subtract your dividend. In this way you get 1,034 times the nation's taxable wealth, and it is a simple matter to divide by 1,034. My Secretary of the Treasury will be a man who can not only divide but also recite the multiplication tables without a peek at the back of the book.

In short, COMMON SENSE will balance the budget.

I soak nobody.

Old Age Security.
As for power, I say CONSERVE it. Conserve it and use it. Properly controlled, natural power in this country is quite a thing.

Next to power and taxes, there is one great issue in this campaign. That is the issue of the OLD FOLKS. By OLD FOLKS I mean people over forty-one. They have struggled and sweated for us until their bones are weary and their hair is sparse and gray. Are they not entitled to $716 a month for the rest of their lives? Why, certainly.

And I can show you how to give it to them. I am not going to have any starving old folks on my conscience. Or any high school kiddies, either.

Every high school kiddie under the age of 17 is entitled to $20 a week or its equivalent in tobacco. Every venerable, toil-worn older over the age of forty-one is entitled to $716 a month, unless he or she is a convicted murderer.

I have no patience with MURDERERS and HORSE-BEATERS. But I have all the sympathy in the world for old folks and high-school kiddies. And here is my PLAN.

Give them $716 a month. They will spend it in the shops. Then make the shopkeepers give it back to the government.

This will necessitate a DOLE for the shopkeepers. And no dole is too good for the shopkeepers, either, because they are the backbone of this country. They and the farmers.

Farm Problem Overlooked.
The farm problem has been completely misunderstood by the Administration and by the Republican party. The farmer is an honest and human fellow. All he wants is a fair shake. I will suspend all mortgages on farms and pay the mortgage-holders out of the Federal Treasury. The Treasury will be steadily replenished by the C. I. F. (Constant Increase in Funds). The interest on the C. I. F. alone will take care of the national debt.

As for FOREIGN RELATIONS, I favor a wise and thoughtful blend of the Monroe Doctrine and the League of Nations. The great Jefferson expressed my feelings in a nutshell when he said ("pick up any 2 p. of any Jefferson speech.")

Above everything else, let me assure you of my staunch disapproval of war, amounting almost to a prejudice. In the words of the great Sherman, War is H—L. Let us avoid it.

And to this end, let us develop our Army, Navy, Air Force, etc. If anybody threatens our peace, let us hammer the tar out of him. War is H—L.

Wings Are Handy Things

A bird's wings are not just for flapping and flying. Among uses some birds find for their wings, J. W. Sugden, University of Utah, cites these: balancing, display or drumming in courtship, to shelter young, as a striking weapon, for aid in climbing, to stir up fish, and to support the body in place of the feet as a substitute for perching.—Science Service.

AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife

Topping for Sundaes.—Extracted honeys make excellent toppings for ice cream sundaes.

When Meat Appears Tough.—Add a tablespoonful of vinegar to the stock or water in which it is cooked, and simmer slowly.

When Food Is Scorched.—Place the pan containing the scorched food into a large pan of water and the food will lose its burned flavor.

Cleaning Unvarnished Wood.—A solution of soda and warm water will remove grease from unvarnished wood.

To Clean Varnished Floor.—Clean off well with steel wool and benzine and, when thoroughly dry, re-varnish.

To Remove Lettering.—When making tea towels or the like from cotton sacks, soak the sacks for several hours in kerosene before washing, to remove lettering.

Swedish Eggs.—Make a rich white sauce with milk butter, very little flour or cornflour, mustard, salt and finely chopped parsley.

Boil the required number of eggs for four minutes; they must be allowed to get hard. Shell them, cover with the sauce and serve at once.

When Cleaning Mirrors.—Be very careful about using so much water that it trickles under the frame. A semi-dry method of cleaning is preferable.

Salmon Wiggle.—One small can peas or fresh peas in season; one pound can salmon, flaked; one pimiento chopped fine, two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, two cups milk. Seasoning. Melt butter, add flour and seasonings. Stir in milk slowly and cook until thick and smooth. Add salmon, peas and pimiento. Serve hot on toast or in puff paste shells.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

AUSTIN.—The legislature this week moved in the second phase of its anti-gambling special session and took up laws to prohibit dog race betting, and operation of bookmakers' shops after taking in its stride its major task that of outlawing pari-mutuel betting at Texas race tracks.

Race track betting, major objective of Gov. Allred, which was conceived in legislative iniquity and spawned in parliamentary sin by means of a conference rider on a major appropriation bill, went out in a dramatic session of the Texas senate, which saw 16 stalwart anti-racing votes, marshaled in the senate by Sen. G. H. Nelson, of Tahoka, hold consistently together and administer the severest drubbing of their careers to two senate parliamentary sharks, Frank Rawlings of Fort Worth and Clint Small of Amarillo. They went down fighting like wildcats, each making bitter speeches attacking the governor but helpless to block the repeal action, as it was blocked in the regular session.

SMALL IS BITTER — Repeal was accomplished neatly and with dispatch, when 16 senators caucusing in Gov. Allred's air-conditioned office, agreed each to be in his seat, to remain there throughout the session, and to follow the voting leadership of Nelson until the matter was finally disposed of. The repealist strong men were Aiken, Beck Burns, Collie, Cotten, Davis, Head, Hill, Isbell, Lemens, Neal, Nelson, Newton, Oneal, Redditt and Woodruff. Westerfield of Dallas voted with the repealists, but was unpledged while Small voted aye as he could move to reconsider. This he did and the trick almost worked but Westerfield stood fast with the 16 and the effort failed.

Small in a bitter speech, charged "those two political demagogues Allred and Ferguson," with caring nothing about repeal, until the race track people ceased to hire the right lobbyists, which he called stupid.

BOOKIES, DOGS NEXT — Gov. Allred promised to submit immediately a request for legislation to outlaw dog races and bookies, and "other forms of gambling." He has indicated no other important legislation will be sent up this session, which likely will drag out the full 30 days as legislators argue details of additional anti-gambling bills. The governor announced he will veto the appropriation for the racing commission, as a move to prevent fall race meetings before the repeal law takes effect about September 24.

U. S. FUND FIGHT RAGES — Scene of the battle to earmark a third of President Roosevelt's relief billions for highways rivers, and harbors and WPA projects already approved shifted to the senate in Washington this week, as Rep. Sam Rayburn, house majority leader, whipped the recalcitrant house into line, and killed off the ear-marking amendments there. Rayburn, in an embarrassing position as majority leader, while county judges of his own congressional district in North Texas were urging the ear-marking program, had no choice but to stand by the president. The ear marking would give Texas a bout $9,000,000 for federal state road construction, nearly $40,000,000 for approved WPA projects, and more millions for lakes and ponds in the dustbowl. It would not only provide much useful work but would assure construction projects that will be of permanent value, instead of boon-doggling jobs of temporary nature. Many influential Texas individuals and organizations were wiring Senators Connally and Sheppard this week to urge support for the ear-marking plan.

TAX SESSION IN FALL

The state's general fund deficit dropped below the ten million dollar mark last weekend, as State Treasurer Charley Lockhart paid off warrants issued in early January. This is the peak of tax-collecting period, and the deficit shortly will begin to mount again. Great confusion exists in Austin as to future taxation aims. If Gov. Allred is appointed to the federal bench by the time, and Lt. Gov. Walter Woodul becomes governor, a revenue session is still probable, for with the loss of nearly $500,000 of revenue from racing, new constitutional amendments necessitating additional large expenditures, and the climb deficit, some new revenue apparently is presently absolutely unavoidable. But Woodul is known to be extremely conservative on taxation matters, as compared to Allred, and if he is governor, recommendations for minimum new or increased taxes are expected by lobbyists here. If Allred remains governor however, the oil, sulphur, gas and utility representatives are girding their loins to re-enact the battle that occurred in the regular session. They expect the house to vote large additional taxes upon them; they pin their hopes of escape to the senate, which during the regular session gave little evidence of sympathy with Allred's high tax program. The lobbyists are hopeful that bitterness engendered by the race-track fight will aid their cause, when the tax bills get to the senate, if Allred is still governor then.

THOMPSON TO EUROPE

Apparently content that his campaign for governor in 1938 is in good shape, Railroad Commissioner Ernest O. Thompson this week was en route to Europe, where he will serve as one of the 12 petroleum experts named by President Roosevelt to represent the U. S. at the World Petroleum congress, in Paris this month. Meanwhile, Atty. Gen. McCraw continued his full program of speaking engagements; while the first formal declaration came from Marvin P. McCoy, Houston lawyer and former house member who said he would run for governor on a platform of more pensions and less taxes. Clarence Farmer, leader of the house liberalized pension bloc, likewise plans to seek the governor's chair on a pensions for everybody platform.

County Agent's Column

By Ross B. Jenkins, County Agt.

THREE YEAR QUAIL LAW FOR CALLAHAN

Since a move was started at the beginning of the year intended to preserve, promote, and improve the conditions of our wildlife in Callahan the county agent has watched with keenest of interest a bill presented in the legislature that would prohibit the taking of a quail in the county for the coming three years. That bill has now become a law and has received the signature of the Governor. This law comes right at the time when men all over the county are becoming interested in setting up a voluntary game preserve in cooperation with the Texas Extension Service which has secured the cooperation of the State and Federal Department in wildlife preservation.

The Extension Service of Texas was the first organization to create the office of a Wildlife Specialist. This was done in 1936 and has met with a tremendous success thus far. The aims of the Association are that men will band themselves together and form game preserves where fish, birds, or fur-bearing animals, if desired, may be grown and protected. It is not the intention of the Association to prohibit hunting or fishing on the lands owned by the members of the Association, but that there shall be regulated hunting and fishing on such property so that a true sportsman may enjoy a days outing at hunting and fishing without having to return home empty handed and feeling worse for having spent the day in such manner.

It might be of interest to some to know that the State and Federal Government will cooperate with the county agents in securing for members of these associations fish and birds for their preserves. Already this county agent has ordered application blanks from the Federal fisheries and also has on hand applications for fish to come from the State fisheries this year. Members of the Association may call at the office any day and their application will be taken. Many of the farmers and ranchers, both of the small and large landowners, are becoming members of the Association. They wish to be good neighbors with other. They intend to see that the game and fish, our wildlife, shall be protected and the supply increased and that men who have no regard for the other fellows property shall become a most unwelcome guest on their property.

The wildlife of Texas even in its present depleted condition has an annual value of ninety million dollars. Such a valuable natural resource commands our attention. It is a thread of natural of natural fibre that should be woven in to the fabric of a well balanced farm program in this state. Since our wildlife in Texas has such value it is necessary that we protect this most valuable farm crop.

Letters have gone out this week to many landholders that they may avail themselves of the opportunity of signing thus becoming a member of the Association. For any who might have been missed the county agent would appreciate their dropping into the office and signing and asking any questions.

relative to this move. This proposition meets with a ready response with all true lovers of nature and very very few men in Callahan who own their property have been slow to see the value and need of such a demonstration.

MOST AAA CHECKS HAVE BEEN PAID

With payments under the 1936 Agricultural Conservation Program practically complete, the Texas Triple A force has certified for payment to the General Accounting Office 482 Callahan County Applications, totaling $49,358.06 according to R. B. Jenkins, county Agricultural agent.

Total payments for the State are expected to be slightly in excess of 33 million dollars. To date the Texas office has certified for the payment of 182,929 applications totaling $32,482,416.53 figures released by Geo. Slaughter, chairman of the Texas Agricultural Conservation Committee, how.

It is expected that Callahan will receive about $1500 from the applications still pending.

PRAIRIE DOG POISON ALSO AFFECTIVE ON GROUND SQUIRRELS

Mrs. Mamie Johnson of Oplin told the county agent last week that she found prairie dog poison to be equally as affective against ground squirrels as against prairie dogs. She said she had placed about one-half teaspoonful of the poison grain in the holes of these squirrels and the next day she found her squirrels on the outside dead.

Fred Cutbirth reported that he had been very successful in the eradication of dogs on his ranch and expected to complete the job later on after the green grass has died down. This poison may be secured in any amounts in the county agent's office.

GARDEN CLUB

Thirty members and guests of "The Old Fashioned Garden Club" met in regular session on Tuesday June 8, at the home of Mrs. J. F. Boren. Roll call was answered with "Garden Hints". The Club voted that it be federated with the state Organization and that our Club flower be the Holly hock, song, "In An Old Fashioned Garden," Colors Red and White, and Motto: "To Make lovely the paths where all must travel."

It was reported that the delegates from the various Clubs in Baird had met with the City Council and had secured an additional 1000 gallons of water for the months of June, July, August and September. The following program was rendered:

Club Song, "In An Old Fashioned Garden," Summer Care of Roses, Mrs. Earl Hall, Group of Poems Mrs. Frank Bearden, "How to Cut Flowers," Mrs. Ellis Adams, "Flower Arrangements for the Home," Mrs. J. F. Boren.

ATWELL H. D. CLUB

Minerals and Vitamins are necessary in the diet if a good standard of health is to be maintained, said Miss Clara Brown Home Demonstration Agent, to the Atwell H. D. Club June 8, in the home of Mrs. Otis Purvis.

Miss Brown discussed the principles in cooking vegetables that would preserve the vitamins and minerals. She demonstrated the principles of vegetable cookery by preparing a mild flavored vegetable by baking and a strong flavored vegetable by boiling and serving it with a cream sauce.

The finance committee reported that there would be a play presented by the club members July 3 at the Atwell school house.

a leafy vegetable and the boiling of a strong flavored vegetable. The president, Mrs. E. J. Barton presided over the meeting. The program committee reported that a 3 act play was to be given the later part of June to raise funds for the Club.

Windsor and Wallis Are Married, Anglican Church Outwitted—Tax Dodging by the Rich to Be Investigated—House Rebels Yield.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD © Western Newspaper Union.

EDWARD, duke of Windsor, and Mrs. Wallis Warfield, the American woman for love of whom he gave up his throne, were married in the Chateau de Candé, Monts, France, and are now spending their honeymoon at Wasserleoneburg castle in lower Austria. Almost at the last moment the Church of England was outwitted by the action of an obscure provincial clergyman from the north of England, and the civil ceremony performed by the mayor of Monts was followed by a religious wedding conducted by that same minister, Rev. Robert Anderson Jardine, in flat defiance of the protests of the leaders of the church.

Duchess of Windsor

Sixteen principal guests were present in the chateau when Mayor Mercier, pronouncing the English names with difficulty, and speaking in French, performed the civil ceremony and pronounced the duke and Wallis man and wife. Vicar Jardine, who had volunteered his services, recited the solemn religious rites as prescribed by the church, the duke placed the ring on the duchess' fourth finger, and they knelt on white silk cushions while the minister prayed. Throughout the entire service the famous organist, Marcel Dupre, played softly. The duchess, who cannot be called "her royal highness," wore a gown of Wallis blue and the correspondents privileged to be present were agreed that she was a beautiful, gracious and serene woman. The Chateau de Candé, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bédaux of New York, was lavishly decorated with flowers. Wedding presents were numerous, of course, and some of the richest were sent by members of the British royal family.

Vicar Jardine was reproved by the church dignitaries for performing the religious ceremony, but the Bishop of Fulham, who has jurisdiction over Anglican church affairs in France, after sending a telegram of protest, admitted the vicar might not be disciplined. He insisted the only valid service Mr. Jardine could perform was benediction after the marriage. All Anglican church ministers on the continent had been warned not to marry the duke and Wallis.

ADMINISTRATION leaders, from the President down, "turned the heat" on the rebellious members of the house, and the latter sullenly gave in and passed the billion and a half dollar war relief bill about as Mr. Roosevelt and Harry Hopkins wanted it. One after another the restrictive amendments earmarking $505,000,000 of the total for projects of a solid type, flood control and highways, which had been adopted in committee of the whole, were called up again and voted down by substantial majorities. The final vote by which the measure was sent on to the senate was 323 to 44.

The revolt collapsed after Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, Democrat, Texas, outlined Mr. Roosevelt's position. He said the President had agreed to provide adequate funds from the relief bill for PWA projects, highways, grade crossing elimination, flood control and water conservation work.

Taunted by Minority Leader Bertrand Snell, Republican, New York, for the general character of his statement, Rayburn admitted he did not know the exact amount of money that the President would divert to the various projects, which have been described as "vote-getting" and "pork."

One of the "rebel" leaders, Joseph Starnes of Alabama, though voting for the bill, announced that congress would never again "relinquish its control of expenditures."

Still sore, especially at Harry Hopkins, the congressmen discussed the need for investigation of the relief administration, and a resolution calling for such action was introduced by Maury Maverick of Texas.

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR HAROLD L. ICKES was taken to the Naval hospital in Washington to be treated for an intestinal disorder. Physicians said he probably would be absent from his office for several weeks, a protracted rest being imperative.

said these veterans were "too poor" to make the conversion at this time, and added: "The President apparently didn't consult with those familiar with veterans' affairs when he vetoed this bill."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT sent a message to congress asking for legislation creating seven regional power authorities patterned after the TVA. He proposed the country be divided into these regions:

- The Atlantic seaboard.
- The Great Lakes-Ohio valley.
- The Tennessee and Cumberland river basins.
- The Missouri and the Red River of the North basins.
- The Arkansas, Red and Rio Grande river basins.
- The basins of the Colorado and other rivers flowing into the Pacific south of the California-Oregon state line.
- The Columbia river basin.

TAX dodging by wealthy men and women, excoriated by President Roosevelt in a special message, is going to be investigated speedily by a joint committee of congress.

Sen. Harrison

Sen. Harrison introduced in the senate on June 10 a bill to investigate the alleged tax evasion and to provide congress with information necessary for the drafting of corrective legislation. Senator Harrison said: "I am sure that congress expects that, where the law has been violated, prompt action will be taken by the government against the violators."

He added that men and women referred to, not by name, in the President's message, would be given the opportunity to testify before the committee if their names were disclosed.

Accompanying Mr. Roosevelt's message was a long letter to him from Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in which were outlined eight devices which he said are being employed by a minority of rich individuals to evade taxes.

Legislation asked by the President would be an emergency measure. It is not to be confused with legislation to revise tax schedules, the President said.

"In regard to that subject," Mr. Roosevelt continued, "I have already suggested to the congress that at this session there should be no new taxes and no changes of rates."

GENERAL HAYASHI's semimilitary government of Japan was forced to resign by the major political parties, and Emperor Hirohito summoned Prince Fumimaro Konoe, president of the house of peers, to form a new cabinet. This the prince proceeded to do, and he was meeting with almost complete success in finding men who would accept office. Temporarily he had trouble in getting a finance minister. The new government includes representatives of the big Seiyukai and Minseitō parties and is considered, therefore, a national coalition cabinet. Presumably it is committed to a large army and navy, a strong foreign policy and drastic administrative reforms.

Prince Konoe said he would strive to end the rivalries among the various forces in the empire, meaning especially the disputes between the army and the political parties. The army will support him, but its domination over Japanese policies is practically ended with the retirement of Hayashi who was accused of trying to set up a Fascist regime.

BEFORE adjourning to October the Supreme court overruled a government request that it refuse to review litigation challenging the constitutionality of federal financing of municipal power plants. By consenting to pass on the controversy, the court deferred a final verdict in the case until next fall, after arguments are heard.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Reporting Alien Criminals.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Wouldn't it be lovely if the other states, not to mention the federal government, followed the example set by the governor of New York?

He commutes the sentences of foreign-born, long-term convicts so they may be eligible for parole—not mind you, to go free and sin some more, but to be turned over to the port authorities for immediate deportation.

That is, it would be a lovely idea if only we could be sure that these same criminals wouldn't come slipping back in again. The present immigration law was devised as a barrier to protect decent citizens, both native and naturalized, against the human scum of the old world, but it appears to be more like a sieve if we may judge by the hordes of nondesirable aliens who somehow manage to get in and stay in and even go on relief, some of them.

In other words, when we give these unpleasant parties a complimentary ride back where they come from, let's make sure it's not going to be a round trip.

Missionaries From China.

FROM Peiping a group of believers in the doctrine of Confucius are sending missionaries to the United States. We've been sending out missionaries to their country for centuries, but that Chiamen should dare to try the same thing on us—well, that's a white horse of a yellow color.

What if, not content with seeking converts, these interlopers inculcated among us certain phases of their heathenish philosophy, such as teaching young people consideration and respect for their elders; and showing that rushing about in a frenzy does not necessarily indicate business energy; and that the natural aim of man is not always to worship speed and—up to thirty-odd thousands a year—to die by it; and that intolerance as between religious creeds isn't invariably proof of true piety; and that minding one's own affairs is really quite an admirable trait?

Why, native Americans wouldn't be able to recognize the old home place any more!

Such threats against a superior civilization are not to be borne.

Vanished Americans.

IT'S exciting to prow around the ruined cities of the first Americans, who scattered into the twilight of antiquity when the Christian era was still young. They were our oldest families, older even than old Southern families—and who ever heard of a new Southern family or even just a middle-aged Southern family?

But afterwards, it's confusing to read the theories of the expert researchers who have passed judgment on those vanished cliff-dwelling peoples, because few such learned gentlemen agree on any single point. There is one very eminent authority who invariably insists that all the rest of the eminent authorities are absolutely wrong about everything. He is the Mr. Justice McReynolds of the archeologists.

After reading some of the conflicting literature on this subject, I've decided that a true scientist is one who is positive there are no other true scientists.

Unemployment Statistics.

THANKS to bright young bureaucrats in Washington, we know how many goldfish are hatched every year and what the gross annual yield of guinea pigs is, and the exact proportion of albinos born in any given period, but it never seemed to occur to anybody to compile reasonably accurate statistics on unemployment.

Yet, with depression behind us and business up to boom-time levels, it's estimated that between eight and nine million people are out of work, not counting those on strike, and judging by the papers there must be a couple of million of them. Apparently the more prosperous we grow on the surface, the more deplorable becomes the status of those off the payroll. It doesn't make sense. Or anyhow there was a time when it wouldn't have made sense.

This curious situation puts a fellow in mind of the old old story of the chap whose wife had an operation, and, every day when he called at the hospital, he was told the patient showed improvement. One morning, as he came away, weeping, he met a friend.

"How's the wife?" inquired the latter.
"She's dead."
"I'm so sorry," said the friend.
"What did she die of?"
"Improvements," said the widow.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field
FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—Detroit and Los Angeles merchants are burned up because their citizens buy so much in Canada and Mexico, bringing their purchases in duty free under the $100 exemption. So they are trying to get congress to amend the law. They have no objection to the $100 limit being applied to returning European tourists, or for once a year tourists who take their vacations in Canada or Mexico or Cuba.

But the man who runs across the international line from some near-by American city every little while, chiefly for the purpose of getting tariff-free bargains, that's the fellow—and his wife—they are after.

Detroit merchants estimate that citizens of that city buy about $5,000,000 worth of merchandise a year in Canada under this $100 exemption clause. The city's board of commerce has representatives in Washington working to stop this "leak." They are getting co-operation not only from Los Angeles but from Seattle, El Paso, Buffalo and Erie.

The American Retail Federation and other retail groups are co-operating. Some of the estimates for the total amount of Canadian and Mexican goods brought in legally without payment of duty under this $100 exemption runs as high as $50,000,000 a year.

They say it is not only the money—they always do say that. But when Mrs. Smith Jones meets Mrs. Brown Robinson after such a foray to duty-free stores across the line she boasts about it. This not only encourages the second lady, and her sisters and neighbors to go and do likewise, but it builds up the sneaking impression that the American storekeepers are a lot of gyms, and that it is positively a civic duty to thwart them in their attempted robbery.

The Old Come-On

Then, too, the storekeepers know perfectly well that the person who goes shopping to get a bargain generally buys something else. That is the whole underlying basis for the "loss leader" device so frowned upon by the federal trade commission. The store advertising some particular bargain knows that if it can get people into its doors by selling something the customers know is very cheap, the probability is that one in every two will buy something else—something on which the storekeeper makes a real profit.

So this mouth to mouth propaganda that bargains are to be had over in Windsor, when the Detroit folks are talking, or down in Agua Caliente, if the Los Angeles and San Diego wives are talking about their shopping, is insidious.

Some of these tariff dodgers really buy only for their own use, and many of them resell, and make the trip as often as the law allows—once every thirty days. Canada offers tempting furs and duty-free British wool cloth and garments. Mexico has fine Indian art objects. Both admit varieties of foreign goods almost duty free because they do not happen to compete with local industries.

According to the Los Angeles merchants, the movie stars are the worst offenders. They like to run over to Mexico anyhow, for one reason or another. They resent federal taxes in a really big way and get a thrill out of cheating Uncle Sam legally, which may not bother the Treasury much but is certainly a pain in the cash drawer for the Los Angeles department stores and specialty shops.

Incidentally, Los Angeles thinks the proposed amendment futile. It would permit the $100 exemption only if the tourist had been out of the country at least forty-eight hours.

"That's just a nice week-end," say the southern California dealers. They want the period made much longer.

Not an Accident

It was not just an accident that several newspapers had prominently displayed stories the day after the announcement of Justice Willis Van Devanter's resignation that the probable appointee in his place would be Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader of the senate for these many years.

The story was deliberately fed out by several senators who are strongly opposed to President Roosevelt's Supreme court enlargement plan. It was intended to embarrass the President in his fight, and to make absurd the contention that the court needed "young" men.

Being as the Arkansas senator is sixty-five, and is known to be a conservative at heart, the idea of his appointment was calculated to open the way to columnists and editorial writers all over the country to point to the absurdity of the situation.

would certainly appoint Robinson, and getting it in print, were opposed to the court plan more because they were against Roosevelt than for any intrinsic merit in this particular battle.

Now the point is of course that Robinson has cherished the ambition to sit on the Supreme court bench for nearly twenty years. There is not a member of the senate who does not know about it, not because he talks about it all the time, but because in such a long period of time such an ambition would naturally reach the ear of every member of the upper house.

Robinson Popular

Now Robinson is a very popular man among his colleagues, all magazine articles and general reports to the contrary notwithstanding. Not that he has been particularly misrepresented in either magazine articles or gossip. He is hot tempered. He would do almost anything for the sake of the Democratic party. He would sacrifice almost any conviction if it seemed to interfere with the chances of success of his party, and he goes to what some think are extremes in loyalty to whoever is the party leader at the time, whether it be Woodrow Wilson insisting on ratification of the League of Nations treaty without the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a "t," or whether it be Franklin D. Roosevelt insisting on six "young" justices for the Supreme court.

But his colleagues understand that. They are politicians too. They know what the Democratic party means to a man of Robinson's age, who was raised in the South, and who has seen local federal officeholders appointed by an opposition President during all his adult life. So they do not let the things that seem to offend some outsiders trouble them at all in appraising Joe. Outside of these points, which do not bother or even mystify them, they think Joe a grand person. He is an old friend of most of them, a co-worker, a pal, a hunting companion, a golfing opponent—yes, even a drinking companion.

So if the President throws him down, after all this build-up which has been fed to the newspapers by the President's enemies, the least that can be said is that it will not do the President any good. In fact, it is apt to raise the suspicion that loyalty to this administration does not pay. Which is exactly the impression those who started the story want to create.

Much Like Revolt

President Roosevelt is confronted with the most difficult situation he has yet encountered. It has all the earmarks of a revolt. It may peter out utterly, in fact, the reasonable probability would seem to be that it will. And it may turn into the sort of mess that will continue to plague the President as long as he remains in the White House.

Senators and representatives are insuring in every possible degree, and on every possible issue.

It began with the government reorganization proposal. This was something to give every member of the senate and house pause.

There was not a vote in either house which was not slightly or importantly influenced by personal friends and lieutenants scattered through the government departments and bureaus—any or all of whom might be put at the mercy of the White House in the course of the re-organization.

The insurance became positively eruptive after the President asked congress to surrender its control over appropriations by permitting him to cut any one of them fifteen per cent in his discretion. This followed the proposal to enlarge the Supreme court, which has received plenty of public attention, and does not need any diaphragm.

So there is bad feeling, among members of his own party, toward the President all over Capitol Hill.

Pass Up Big Guns

It is notorious how such senators as David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, Royal S. Copeland of New York, Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, and Vic Donahey of Ohio have been bypassed on many appointments on which senators would normally be consulted.

Two preliminary moves figured as weather vane to indicate how things were shaping. A house committee voted five to four to cut relief expenditures from a billion and a half to a billion flat. This challenged not only the President's views as to what should be appropriated for relief but his own economy plan—to cut fifteen per cent from such appropriations as he might choose.

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for June 13 THE BROTHERLY LOVE OF JUDAH

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44:18-34. GOLDEN TEXT—Let brotherly love continue. Hebrews 13:1. PRIMARY TOPIC—Benjamin's Big Brother. JUNIOR TOPIC—Big Brothers. INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Loving as a Brother. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Self-Sacrifice in the Family.

The fundamental unit of society is the family. It is of more importance than the state, the church, and the social order of which it is a part. The breakdown of the home and the sacred relationships sustained between parents and children, or brothers and sisters, points to the destruction of society itself.

God established the family in the Garden of Eden. His plan and purpose have never been changed, nor have his laws for the protection of the home, for the sanctity of marriage, for brotherly love, been set aside. Men and nations may devise other plans and follow the dictates of the flesh, but that road always leads to ruin.

The continuation of our story of the life of Joseph and his brethren brings before us today the filial and paternal love of Judah, and affords us an opportunity to stress true brotherly devotion. No one should fail to review the connection between the chapter before us and the lesson of last week. Joseph had been dealing with his brethren who had failed to recognize him as the one they had sold into captivity. He was bringing them kindly but definitely to that point of repentance at which he could show himself gracious to them. In doing so he had brought disaster upon them. Being happily on their way homeward with a new supply of food, they were overtaken and Benjamin, the beloved of Jacob, stands accused as a thief, and by their own words condemned to die.

In this crisis the mouths of the ten others are closed, but Judah, who had really saved the life of Joseph (Gen. 37:26; 27), stands forth to make an eloquent and pathetic appeal to Joseph. It presents him as a brother who is

I. Courageous
Easy rests the yoke of family life as long as all is joyful and prosperous. But when adversity strikes, when sorrow comes, or sickness, or sin, then the true test of devotion is at hand.

It was a brave and manly thing for Judah to stand before the one whom he knew only as the man who was "even as Pharaoh." The circumstances were all against him. He expected the flaming anger of the offended ruler. His brethren had collapsed in despair. It was one of those dark hours which come to every family when someone must demonstrate true love by being strong-hearted and steady.

II. Intelligent
Crises call for more than a cheerful smile or an encouraging word, much as they do mean in such an hour. But we must be prepared by our close contact with our loved ones to speak and act with vigor and assurance.

The plea of Judah is a masterpiece of logic, argumentation, and appeal, demonstrating that Judah was not only well-informed about his family and its problems, but ready to use his knowledge skillfully and effectively.

III. Sacrificial
One step deeper goes the devotion of this man to his father and his brother. He has done no wrong that merits punishment, but evidently his brother has been guilty. Had he been of the spirit of Cain he would have said "Am I my brother's keeper?" Why should he suffer for another? Why should he allow himself to be imprisoned in a strange land to save his father from sorrow and his brother from what seemed to be the just reward for his deeds?

Thus reasons the man of the world, but such is not the language of love. "Let thy servant abide instead of the lad as a bondsman"—so speaks the true brother. And this is but a faint prefiguring of the One "who sticketh closer than a brother," who "though he was rich, yet for your sakes became poor that ye through his poverty might be rich" (Prov. 18:24; II Cor. 8:9).

Let us improve the opportunity to review our relations with our own family, to determine whether there is aught that we in intelligent and courageous self-sacrifice should do for our own.

Never Despair
Let no man despair of himself. We may be sepulchres full of dead powers; but Christ is the resurrection and the life, to make us shrines full of living, seeing, soaring, rejoicing thoughts and passions.—Dr. W. L. Watkinson.

Faults Showing Up
The good often show more over little faults than the wicked over great. Hence an old proverb, that the stain appears greater according to the brilliancy of what it touches.—Palmieri.

Don't Irritate Gas Bloating

If you want to really GET RID OF GAS and terrible bloating, don't expect to do it by just doctoring your stomach with harsh, irritating alkalies and "gas tablets." Most GAS is lodged in the stomach and upper intestine and is due to indigestion and the consequent constipated bowels that are loaded with ill-causing bacteria. If your constipation is of long standing, enormous quantities of dangerous bacteria accumulate. Then your digestion is upset. GAS often presses heart and lungs, making life miserable. You can't rest or sleep. Your head aches. Your back aches. Your complexion is sallow and pimply. Your breath is foul. You are a sick, grouchy, wretched, unhappy person. YOUR SYSTEM IS POISONED.

SYNOPSIS

Brooke Reymburn visits the office of Jed Stewart, a lawyer, to discuss the terms of an estate she has inherited from Mrs. Mary Amanda Dane.

Mark Trent stopped speaking to stare at the ceiling. Had a door banged overhead, or had he imagined the sound?

A man entered the room with a purposeful stride. He was ample of jowl, slightly opulent as to waistline; he had the flinty eyes of an eagle who can stare straight at the sun.

"Here I am, Mark. That Jap outside wanted to bow me in, but I shooed him off."

"Glad you've come, Inspector. This is my friend Jed Stewart."

"Yes, he's staying here to help me—us solve the mystery."

"What else have you lost?"

"Why do you think we've lost anything else?"

"Would you two city guys come to this burg to stay just to find a lot of silverware?"

"It's more than mere silverware; the pieces are antiques of great value."

Inspector Harrison pulled himself from the enticing crimson depths to his feet.

"All right, Mark, have it your own way, but I ain't mixin' up in a case where folks are holding out on me. I work best when the interested party works with me. Get that?"

Mark's laugh was quick and disarming.

"Hold everything, Bill Harrison; you can't walk out on us like that. Sit down again. Jed, tell him what Mrs. Gregory told us about the will she witnessed. You understand, Inspector, that there may be nothing to it—so it's off the record."

"Say, Mark, do you suppose I climbed up on the force by talking my head off? I play the rules. Spill it, Mr. Stewart."

Stewart repeated Mrs. Gregory's astonishing announcement that she had witnessed a will of Mary Amanda Dane's of a date later than the will allowed; told of the decision of Mark and himself to turn detectives and of their absolute unsuccess to date.

Inspector Bill Harrison blew a perfect smoke ring.

"Did Mrs. Gregory say there was anyone else present but Mrs. Dane and the other witnesses when she signed?"

"No."

Mark Trent's answer was nothing short of explosive. The inspector's soft grudging laugh, in such marked contrast to his bird-of-prey eyes, brought guilty color to his face. It wasn't keeping back information not to tell that Brooke Reymburn had driven in that afternoon just as Mrs. Gregory had driven out from Lookout House, was it?

Inspector Bill Harrison rose. With a cigar tucked in one corner of his mouth, he nodded

"I'll be going. Guess I've got all the dope. Don't give that Henri Jacques and his wife the idea that you've missed the silver. Let it drop out of their minds. When you have any news, come to headquarters, don't phone. That reminds me. Know anything about the people who've started the filling station here on the point?"

"No. But I understand that Henri Jacques is recommending them."

"Oh, he is? That Henri's just naturally helpful, ain't he? Well, I must get back." He added in his soft persuasive voice:

"Whenever you're ready to come across with the name of the other party who was in the neighborhood of Lookout House the day that last will of Mrs. Dane's was signed, Mark, I'm just across the causeway. I'll be seeing you."

"Don't go yet, Bill!"

He mustn't leave thinking that he and Jed were holding out on him, Mark realized.

Jed Stewart grabbed Mark's shoulder.

"Hold on, Mark. See who's here!"

Mark Trent turned. Surprise brought him to his feet, wiped the smile from his lips. That couldn't be Lola on the threshold! It was Kunt, her name was now, Lola Hunt, he must remember.

"Say, Mark, I'll be making my get-away."

He nodded response to Bill Harrison's mumble. Knew when he opened the door which led to the print room and vanished. Evidently the inspector didn't care to meet Lola. Who did? With the question Mark thrust his hands hard into his coat pockets and took a step forward.

"Well?"

The sound was more a growl than a word, he realized, as he looked steadily at the woman who had been his wife. Had been. At last he had come to think of her in the past tense. It had taken three years to accomplish that. The shame, the humiliation, the unbearable heartache he had suffered in the years they had lived together swept over him in a sickening tide. What did she want now? She was the type of woman who constantly and everlastingly wanted something. Wasn't he giving her enough? There had been no justice in his giving her anything, but when she had written him that her current husband was out of a job and that she was hungry, what could he do but make her an allowance till the man found work? Her clothing had a cheap smartness; the dark brilliance of her eyes was intensified by artificial shadows; her skin was thick and flushed; her short black hair needed trimming; her mouth drooped at the corners. She pouted lips which resembled nothing so much as a bloody smear.

"Don't stare at me as if I were a ghost from out a purple past, Mark. I told your Jap that I was an old friend, that I wanted to surprise you. I hate to keep the gentlemen standing. Won't you ask me to sit down?"

Without waiting for an answer, she sank into the large chair before the fire.

"Still pals you two, aren't you? Funny how much longer friendship lasts between men than love between a man and woman. Mark, I came here to talk to you. Jed, you may go."

Mark Trent's hand closed on Stewart's arm with a grip which turned his nails white.

"Jed will stay and hear what you have to say. Surely we can have no secrets from the man who saw us through the divorce court."

She shrugged. "All right with me. I've nothing to lose. Thought you might object to having what I say get on the air."

"Methinks the lady is implying that I'm a gossip."

"I don't like the twist you gave that 'lady,' Jed Stewart. Don't shake your head at the Jap, Mark. Why shouldn't I have a cup of tea with you? I'm famished. Place it here."

The servant looked at Mark Trent before he pressed the springs which released the legs of the tray he was carrying and set it before the woman. He brought in a muffin stand with sandwiches and cakes.

"You needn't wait," she dismissed the man as if she were the mistress of the house. Mark nodded confirmation as the Jap's eyes sought his.

Did he know that the woman so dictatorially giving orders had been his wife?

Side by side the two men watched her, watched her restless hands. Once she had been told by a stag that her hands were like pale butterflies, Mark remembered, and they had fluttered ever since. In the silence the tick of the clock set the air vibrating; the fire snapped and blazed cheerily; the tide against the ledges boomed a dull undertone.

Lola Hunt flung a crumpled doily to the table.

"Now a cigarette, Mark, and I shall be ready to proceed with my story."

"Sorry, haven't any."

She raised brows which had been plucked to a thin arch.

"You do want to get rid of me, don't you. Well, I strive to please." She rose and crossed to the desk. With a glance over her shoulder, she opened a box of Chinese lacquer.

"You see I still know my way around. Oh, by the way, your aunt's legatee is living at Lookout House, I hear. Henri wrote me—"

"Henri!"

"Yes. I always got on with Henri, perhaps because he knew that I detested your aunt as much as he did. He wrote that Miss Reymburn evidently didn't like his wife and himself, asked if I would give him a reference in case they lost the position."

Was that all Henri Jacques had written, Mark wondered. There was a hint of mockery in Lola's voice and eyes. What was behind that letter? He watched her thoughtfully as she perched on the corner of the desk, crossed her knees and lighted a cigarette. She blew a ring of smoke toward the two men standing back to the fire.

"Forgot these were in the box, didn't you, Mark? You really should do something about your memory; it's slipping." Her eyes and voice sharpened. "Well, here's my news, Bert Hunt—he's my present husband, in case you've forgotten—is planning to go into business in the residential part of this town, has gone, in fact. I shall help when he's rushed or indisposed. When I heard that you'd opened this house, I thought perhaps you wouldn't care to have your former wife working—I've been warned that I've been taking chances with my heart—that perhaps you'd like to buy us off. With $20,000 we could go abroad and stay for a time. Don't stand there like a bronze Nemesis ready to swoop. Nothing shameful about any kind of a job these days, is there?"

Mark Trent laughed. It was not an especially merry burst of sound, but it would serve.

"Do you call extortion a job? Nothing doing, Lola. Your heart! You've used your weak heart as an excuse to get what you wanted for years. Why should I deprive the town of Hunt's business ability and so charming an assistant?"

She slid to her feet. Her face, which had been blank with amazement at his laugh, went white with anger.

"You mean that you don't mind my working—here?"

"If it's what you like, why should I? But," his face was as colorless as hers, "if you do stay in this town, the allowance I am making you—which, you may remember, is purely voluntary—will stop."

"Are you threatening me?"

"Not for a minute. I'm merely reminding you—"

"Then I'll remind you that it may cost you more—"

"Mrs. Gregory, Miss Reymburn," murmured Kowa at the door.

Mrs. Gregory registered amazement and anger when she saw Lola. Her skin mottled, her eyes flashed as she thumped her cane on the rug and went into action.

"What are you doing in this house, Lola?"

"I might ask you that." Lola Hunt's eyes moved insolently from her to the girl beside her. "Match-making mayhap? As I remember it was one of your passions." Her glance brought color to Brooke Reymburn's face.

"Just as cheap in your answers as ever, aren't you, Lola? Wise-cracking, I believe they call it now. Don't tell me you have taken her back, Mark."

"Taken me back! That's the joke of the week. He couldn't get me back."

Lola Hunt pulled the silver fox cape about her shoulders and drew on the fabric gloves.

"So glad to have met you here, Mrs. Gregory. It will save sending you a card."

Anne Gregory's face took on a purple tint. She thumped her cane on the rug.

"A card! A card to what, you brazen hussy?"

Lola Hunt shrugged. "Don't try to stop her, Mark. She would call a woman who chose to live her life according to modern ideas of marriage, a hussy. You'd know that from her clothes, they're so deliciously Victorian. I really must go."

She stopped on the threshold.

"Dear Mrs. Gregory, I didn't answer your question, did I? The card to which I referred is an invitation to patronize the business which we have started in my old home on the point. You remember that house, I am sure, remember how you and your friends tried to freeze out the girl who came there to live. She didn't freeze, did she? She burned up a few of the husbands and all the lads. Is it any more shocking for me to go into business than for some of your pet socialists to sponsor cigarettes, soap, or bedding in every magazine in the country?"

She turned to Brooke.

"You are Miss Reymburn, aren't you? I'll give you a tip. Had I been left the late, not too lamented, Mary Amanda Dane's money, I would be wondering why her rightful heir and his lawyer had camped down in the house next to mine, why they were hobnobbing with Inspector Bill Harrison."

She looked back over her shoulder.

"Think over my proposition, Mark, darling. It may be cheaper for you—in the end."

CHAPTER V

Lola Hunt's malicious laugh lingered eerily in the silence which followed her theatrical exit from the room. Somewhere a door closed with a bang which clanged through the house.

Her spiteful warning struck like an irritating burr in Brooke Reymburn's mind. She glanced at the two men standing back to the fire; Stewart's eyes, still on the doorway, smoldered with anger; the tortured look in Mark Trent's hurt her unbearably; even with his pride knifed, his courtesy had been invincible. The woman had warned him also. Why think of him, she asked herself angrily. Better have her mind on what Mrs. Hunt had insinuated. Had those two men come to live in this house because they suspected her, Brooke Reymburn, of dishonestly influencing Mary Amanda Dane? If so, what could they do about it? Drag her into court? Was that why Inspector Harrison had been with them? It was fantastic, incredible, yet hadn't she wondered times without number why they, city men so obviously, should have come to this village for the winter?

As if her thoughts had drawn his eyes to her, Mark Trent regretted:

"Sorry, Miss Reymburn, that you should have been bored with a scene."

He pressed a bell beside the fireplace. With a little snort of anger, Anne Gregory settled heavily into a chair and flung back her sable cape. The color of her face suggested a red-hot balloon. Temper and voice blew up.

"How about me, Mark? Do you think I liked meeting that shameless woman here? Shameless! Perhaps I'm too hard on Lola. She was right. The old residents did our best to snub her when she came here to live, and she did have every man in the place parking on her doorstep sooner or later. And what did Lola mean, she hoped I'd patronize the business she and her husband were about to start?"

"She didn't say what sort of business, did she? Let's forget her. Let me take your coat, Miss Reymburn."

Trent stood behind Brooke as the servant appeared in the doorway.

"Kowa, take out the tray and bring fresh tea."

Mrs. Gregory removed her gloves and resumed cross-examination.

"Did Lola really mean that she and her present husband are going into business in this village?"

"What's strange in that? It's being done every day." Mark Trent crossed his arms on the mantel and stared at the fire.

In spite of her suspicion of his motive in coming to live next door to Lookout House, Brooke's sympathy surged out to him. Why didn't Mrs. Gregory drop the subject of the Hunts? Couldn't she see that he was sick at heart over the whole sordid situation? With more kindness than finesse, Jed Stewart plunged into the breach.

"Has that pair of Japanese goldfish I ordered for you arrived yet, Mrs. Gregory?"

Anne Gregory looked up at him with eyes made shrewd by years of living, by joys, by uprooted affections, by hopes unrealized. She shook her head.

"You can't sidetrack me, young man, even with goldfish. I mean to get at what Lola is after—not merely customers, I am sure of that, she was here to hound Mark, I know her. I'll see that she doesn't get a license to carry on business on this point. I still have influence. Miss Reymburn will pour the tea," she directed, as Kowa approached her with the replenished tray.

Involuntarily Brooke looked at Mark Trent. He smiled.

Goose Saved Courier's Life

A long time ago, says a writer in the Washington Post, a Chinese emperor sent a courier to the north where he was treacherously detained. He captured a wild goose and remembering the bird's migration southward affixed a letter to its leg. The letter was addressed to the emperor. The latter, out hunting, by chance brought down this same bird. He read the letter and had his messenger rescued.

Dictator Once Dependent On Charity

YOU may not agree with the principles advanced by Adolf Hitler, or you may be an enthusiastic admirer of his. In either case you will be interested in looking at the man and his life to see what lesson we may learn. Perhaps the greatest inspiration to be drawn from the German dictator's life is a word of encouragement for those whose early lives may seem failures.

Adolf Hitler was born on the Bavarian frontier of Germany in 1889, the son of a customs official who had political ambitions for him. The boy developed a desire to be an artist. His father opposed him, so Adolf refused to study in school. He was the despair of his father and mother. When he was eight, he went to Vienna and applied for admission to the Academy of Art. His art was too poor to qualify and they directed him to the architectural school, but his loafing in early grades made it impossible for him to pass entrance requirements there. At nineteen, his mother died, and as his father had died five years before, he was left alone.

For three years he slept in a cheap men's hotel in Vienna, getting his meals at a monastery and occasionally, begging from passers-by. In the winter he shoveled snow to make a living. Whenever he earned a few kronen, he stopped work and went to some cheap cafe to deliver political speeches. He painted poor water colors which a friend peddled for him, he painted picture postcards, and when hungry enough was a house painter. During the war he was a corporal.

Here was a man in his thirties who had never shown any real promise in anything he did. Then, Adolf Hitler formed an ideal of government.

FATHER DIVINE WAS A HEDGE TRIMMER

WHAT are the limits of human credulity? To what heights may not the spell-binding orator rise? For thousands of simple blacks in that section of upper New York city known as Harlem, the answer to those questions is "God! Only God is the Limit!" For George Baker, once a Baltimore hedge trimmer and dock worker, who is reported to have served 60 days on a chain gang, is the negro who claims to be God.

Early records of his life have not been found and George Baker, who now calls himself Father Divine or God, will not talk. It is known that he came from the South, and that he worked at odd jobs in Baltimore in 1899. Starting as a Sunday School teacher, he established a new cult, and moved to New York with a few followers who believed him to be God. New disciples joined him and were provided with food and lodging, while he found jobs for them and collected all their earnings. In 1919, he changed his name to Father Divine (God) and conferred the title of Angels on all who turned their possessions over to him. Thousands of dollars became his in return for new, more glamorous names, such as Ruth Rachel, Hozanna Love, and Frank Incense. Today Father Divine's Angels number about 1,000 and there are 3,000 "Children" or followers who retain some of their possessions, living in apartment houses and flats of Harlem. Heaven is his headquarters, where meals are served and where about 75 Angels sleep. He has established Extension Heavens now in Bridgeport, Jersey City, Newark, and Baltimore; and he owns profit-making stores and shops throughout Harlem. It has been estimated that his income is $10,000 per week, but no property is held in his own name.

Correct Vacation Toggery

VACATIONING they will go—Vera, Mom and Flo. And they will enjoy themselves the more because their wardrobes after Sew-Your-Own are just exactly right.

Mother in this model will be mistaken for daughter many a time because her design and dots are so very youthful. She will have various frocks in various materials developed on this theme, and in one of them, at least, the dots will be red.

Dates for Dancing. Vera, to the right, has a date for dancing and when her escort admiringly effuses some such nonsense as, "That gown must have come on the last boat from Paris" she will toss her dark head and say, "No foreign frocks for me, I Sew-My-Own." Her dress of soft flowered material with demure braid at the neck and hem almost makes a sweet old-fashioned girl of her, but the tailored collar and trim cut label her the sophisticated young thing that she really is.

Collegiate. Only a snappy sophomore can fully appreciate just how smart are those buttons down the back of the model to the left. Her yoke and neckline are "Oh, so new, my dear"; her plaid as British as she would like her accent to be. Best of good vacation wishes to the three of them from Sew-Your-Own.

Ex-Chorus Girl Relates Experience

Had No Desire for Food Afraid to Eat for Gaseous Stomach

Mrs. R. June Daniels, 328 Inez Street, Fresno, had to leave her work and stay home because she suffered from the terrible pains caused from a sluggish stomach and kidneys. Mrs. Daniels' letter reads like a miracle. This letter is hers' and hers' alone. It is a frank statement of her experience. In case you doubt its authenticity, write to her and find out for yourself.

MRS. DANIELS' LETTER

"About two years ago I was taken ill with what I thought was 'Intestinal Flu.' I had to leave work and stay home. I had no appetite. As soon as I did eat anything I had to go and lie down on the bed. I resumed my household duties but my nerves were on edge. I was irritable and my head ached almost constantly. My back was sore as though I had strained it and it was necessary to arise several times nightly with my kidneys. I became bloated and the gas pains were unbearable. My weight went up to 145 though normally I should weigh about 115 pounds. I was constipated most of the time. A friend told me of Williams S. L. K. Formula. I decided to try it. I secured a bottle. I took this medicine religiously for some time. I noticed a change in my condition. I noticed that I could eat without feeling such pains caused from bloating and gas. I now eat with zest and I get up from the table feeling much better. I do not flop on the bed any more. Although my appetite has improved, my excess weight has been reduced. I notice that my kidneys and bowels are more regular. Well I am just a happy girl. I certainly want to express my appreciation to the Williams Company.

Many Hundreds of Sufferers Have Such Relief with Williams S. L. K. Formula

If you are listless, tired and worn out, actually so sick you can hardly keep going because of poisonous impurities resulting from a stagnant bowel condition, if your appetite is gone and you are suffering from awful biliousness, tormenting sick headaches and skin eruptions resulting from the sluggish action of your stomach and bowels, if your kidneys are sluggish causing frequent night risings, resulting in sleeplessness, try Williams S. L. K. Formula. See for yourself. It helps so to relieve these conditions because it acts as a stomach tonic, diuretic, carminative and laxative

In spite of the fine rain we had our regular services Sunday, the attendance was small but we had good services. The good rain made it to wet to begin our meeting out on the Hickman, so I preached here at the church at night as well as the morning hour.

At Your Favorite Drug Store

I. N. Fulghum living in Abilene and pastor at Potosi, Royce Gilliland who preaches at Belle Plain and Gilliland school house, and myself. We went down Monday afternoon and came back Friday afternoon and all the week was spent in the most profitable religious exercises. There were over 1200 preachers present and they are back on their fields now and shall spend the next three months in the most intensive evangelistic campaigns ever carried on in any large section before in the history of Christianity, all of Texas will be covered every church, every school house and many places where there are no school houses or churches, meetings will be held 3000 or more meetings will be held in the next 3 months by the Baptist preachers of Texas, who are going out to win 100,000 souls this summer. Some 25 of those meetings will be held in Callahan county. Besides the Churches the following places will have meetings; Bro. J. F. Wood will hold one in the woods between Clyde and Eula, Bro. Hollis will hold one Zion Hill, Royce Gilliland will have one at Gilliland school, I will hold a meeting at Midway and Hart and we are hoping to have one in the Gardenea Community, and Burnt Branch and Deer Plains communities, and if there are any others we want to get into them to with a revival meeting this summer.

My earnest request and urgent appeal to the brethren and sisters are to get in and help out these meetings while the preachers are giving themselves, let those who are not preachers, back them up with their prayers and by attending the services of the meeting while it is being held and doing personal work or anything else that may show up needing to be done. How it will encourage the little old preacher if a nice crowd from his and other churches around will come into the meeting he is trying to hold out in some mission point, and why should not they go out and help him? Its as much their job as his, Under God dear people lets do it, in this county this summer and people are dying, and some of there will be if all christians will them, yes many of them without do their part. Come to our church God, they are not ready, if they next Sunday morning and I will die as they are they will go to tell you about it. Hell and they are waiting to I will preach at Midway next hear you tell them of your savior, Sunday afternoon all are invited and the Lord is waiting for you to attend and help.
