School Adopts New Dress Code Policies

Earrings are not to be worn by male students when they are at school or participants in any school event.

Hair for male students must be cut to a length that will not touch the shoulders.

Silverton Volunteer Firemen were honored at a Mexican Stack dinner at the First United Methodist Church last Thursday evening. It was the way the church members expressed appreciation to the firemen for their service when the steeple was struck by lightning, resulting in a fire in the sanctuary, last year. Wayne Nance, chairman of the church board, complimented the firemen on their work and said that companies carrying the church insurance were high in their praise of the way the fire was managed.

Scientifically Sizzling

by Ronda Alexander
Briscoe County Extension Agent

Why do we cook meat? The most important reason we, as consumers, cook meat is out of tradition to enhance the appearance and flavor. Scientifically, we know that cooking will help improve tenderness and contribute to the characteristic flavor of meat. Cooking also destroys any potential bacteria and parasites that could cause food-borne illness.

Cooking can cause both tenderness and toughening. Knowledge on cooking meat properly to ensure a juicy, tender and flavorful product is necessary. Cooking rates also affect the final product. The faster and hotter the cooking method, the greater the loss of moisture and fat in the product and possibly the greater the toughness.

There are two primary cooking methods for preparing meat. Dry heat cookery methods use direct or indirect heat without adding moisture during cooking. These methods include roasting, broiling, grilling, pan-frying, stir-frying and pan-broiling. Tender cuts of meat are suited to dry-heat cooking methods. Less tender cuts of meat require moist heat cooking. This uses indirect heat and the addition of a liquid or retained moisture. Some moist heat methods include braising and cooking in liquid.

Whether you cook for fun or out of necessity, now is the time to turn your skills into cash. The National and Texas Beef Cook-Off is searching for amateur chefs to submit their favorite original recipes for the 1992 competition. More than $35,000 will be awarded this year.

Entries are divided into three main categories: Indoor, Outdoor Barbecue and Microwave. All recipes are judged

TEXAS COMPTROLLER OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS

The young life of the Texas Lottery reached one of its most important milestones recently when the Comptroller's Office sent licensing application packets to more than 56,000 potential lottery ticket retailers. With $125 and a clean record, most Texas businesses can become a part of the state lottery.

We're making the process as easy as possible for Texas merchants. We've planned a series of helpful seminars all around the state; we've designed a unique system to reduce the application cost; and we're installing a retailers-only, toll-free hotline.

That hotline number is 1-800-37-LOTTO.

By late January, the owners of every convenience store, grocery, drug store and gas station—as well as thousands of other Texas merchants—will have received the application packet. Businesses who haven't heard from us by then should call the toll-free retailer hotline.

We sent the application packets to the more than 3,000 businesses that called or wrote ahead of time asking us to make sure they were on the list. And, we identified another 53,000 firms through the Comptroller's sales tax records by the type of product or service they provide.

Of course, we're not limiting the application process to those 56,000 merchants. Any interested business that sells a product or service can call our hotline and ask for a packet.

I want to urge all retailers to wait until the end of the month to call. We sent the packets by bulk mail, and it may take that long for the Post Office to deliver them all.

By the time this process is over, we anticipate licensing 15,000 to 20,000 ticket sellers in time for the July 1 start of initial scratch-off games. All of them

Toll-Free Hotline
for Retailers Only:
1-800-37-LOTTO

should reap considerable benefits from their association with the Lottery.

First, they will have the 5-percent commission on all sales. Also, their sales should pick up from customers visiting the stores to purchase tickets—and from customers redeeming winning tickets. In addition, our statewide advertising campaigns promoting the Lottery games should bring business their way.

The $125 application fee includes $25 from each business that will be deposited into a special fund to protect the state's financial interest. We are doing that instead of requiring each retailer to purchase a surety bond, which would have cost them $100 to $200 each. This creative plan will save money for each retailer and still protect the state—as the Legislature required.

Although the license application, as might be expected, is quite detailed, we want to make sure that every interested business fills out a form and sends it in. That's why we've planned a series of regional retailer assistance seminars to help merchants through the application process. We will announce the times, dates and places for those seminars shortly.

The people of Texas want a fun, fair, honest and efficient state lottery. For the first fiscal cycle, the Legislature expects the lottery to generate at least $461 million.

The recruitment and licensing of ticket vendors is the first concrete step in our drive to make sure the Texas

Lottery is on time and on target. Most every qualifying business that applies will be licensed. And we urge all interested Texas firms to apply as soon as possible so they'll be ready when the games start.

Emergency Loans Available From FmHA

Emergency loans for farmers, ranchers or aquaculture operators are available through county offices of the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA), Becky V. Rainer, FmHA County Supervisor, said.

Mrs. Rainer asked that those who need farm credit as a result of drought and hailstorm make their needs known at the Farmers Home Administration office at 104 E. California Street in Floydada, Texas.

Applications for assistance in the disaster-stricken counties will be accepted by Farmers Home until August 31, 1992 for physical and production losses.

FmHA loans covering actual physical and production losses may be used to replace installations, equipment or buildings (including homes) lost through this disaster. Funds may be used to buy feed, seed, fertilizer, livestock or to meet interest and depreciation payments on current real estate and chattel debts.

Funds can be used for essential operating and living costs," Mrs. Rainer said.

Applicants that certify that other credit is not available may receive loans covering actual losses at an interest rate of 4.5 percent and are scheduled for repayment as rapidly as feasible consistent with the applicant's ability to pay.

4-H Members Adopt Honorary Grandparents

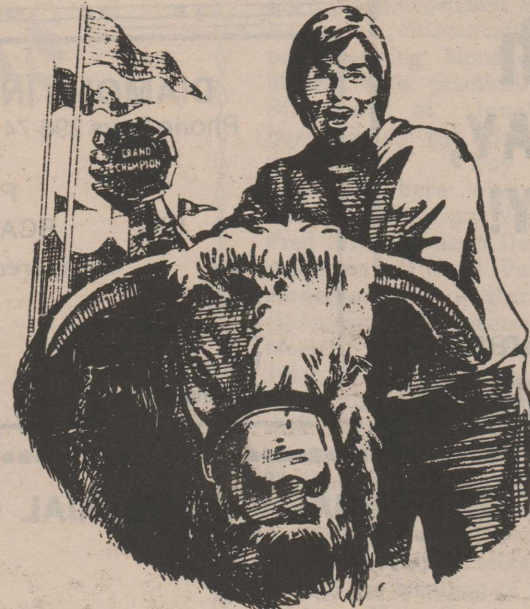

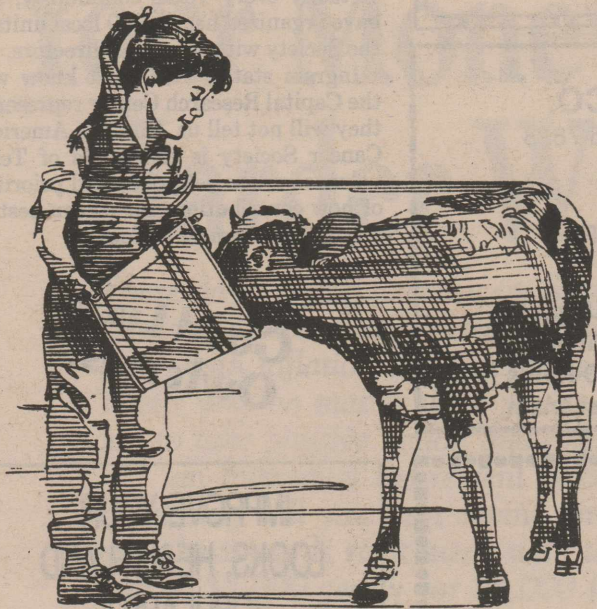

At the meeting of the 4-H Clover Club last week, the members adopted grandparents, and will be honoring them at a tea on February 7.

If you are an older citizen and find yourself receiving anonymous gifts of food or other items, you may guess that you have been "adopted" by one of the 4-H members. They will reveal themselves to you at the tea on February 7.

This is a citizenship and service project of the club, which has proved to be a lot of fun in years past.

A good man is somewhat like a bouncing ball. He springs ever upward from a fall . . . Without faith we are as stained glass windows in the dark . . . Surely it is not the work in life, but the worry of life, that robs us of strength and breaks down our faith.

We cannot decide whether we will live or die; we can only decide what we will die for . . . If absence makes the heart grow fonder, some people must really love the church . . . One wonders why there is so much anxiety in the world in view of its fruit. It does not empty tomorrow of trials—it simply empties today of its joy . . . It does not

American Cancer Society Responds To CRC Attack

Texans may be wrongfully misled by a study released by an East Coast group that is a self-proclaimed "watchdog" organization with politically motivated views, and that may be trying to discredit the American Cancer Society because of its anti-tobacco advocacy efforts.

"We don't understand the motives of this group, or why they are attacking the American Cancer Society, except that this group, the Capital Research Center, seems sympathetic to positions taken by the tobacco industry," explained Danny Ingram, spokesperson for the Society's Texas Division.

The Capital Research Center began criticizing the American Cancer Society, along with other major health organizations like the American Heart Association and the American Lung Association, who during the past three years have increased anti-tobacco advocacy efforts on state and federal levels.

When officials of the Capital Research Center have been asked if these studies were funded by the tobacco industry, they would not deny affiliation.

The most recent criticisms concerning the Society's Texas Division, and its alleged "wealth" and the supposed misleading of the public regarding research expenditures. "While these charges are obviously not based on facts, we feel that it is our responsibility to the public to make sure no one is misled by this unfortunate situation," said Ingram.

The author of the study claims to have used public documents, such as annual reports, to conduct his research. But, he admits he did not talk to an official of the Texas Division of the American Cancer Society.

"What's wrong with the study," said Ingram, "is that it claims we carry large cash reserves, when in fact, our annual report clearly states that the American Cancer Society raises funds one year, spends them all on programs the following year—holding virtually no reserves. The study also charges that we're growing huge assets in buildings and land, when in fact, we have financial policies that forbid us from buying permanent office space unless a large savings in expenses can be demonstrated over renting."

Ingram continues, "Finally, the charge of us overstating research expenditures is just as absurd as the others. Had the author bothered to check, he would understand that Divisions don't administer research money, but send 40 percent of funds raised to the national organization, who makes the grants. The year that Bennett claims only 23 percent of the contributions raised in Texas went to research, the American Cancer Society invested more than $5.6 million in Texas research. This represents 43 percent of the money contributed directly from the public, or 32 percent of total income, including legacies, grants and in-kind services."

According to Ingram, the reason this is more than the 40 percent sent by Texas to the national office, is that the quality of research conducted by Texas investigators warrants a higher allocation of funds—in effect, Texas receives more money than it sends to the national American Cancer Society.

The American Cancer Society, Texas Division, is a statewide, community-based and grass roots organization. Over 200,000 Texans volunteer to help fight cancer. These volunteers reside in virtually every Texas community, and have organized nearly 300 local units of the Society with boards of directors.

Ingram states, "We don't know who the Capital Research Center represents, they will not tell us. But, the American Cancer Society is thousands of Texas volunteers who set policy and priorities of how contributions raised can best be used to fight cancer in Texas."

Public Notice

On October 4, 1991, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (Southwestern Bell) filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas (Commission) that proposes a new optional service called DigiLineSM Service. The application was assigned Docket No. 10655.

DigiLine Service uses a 144 Kbps facility, typically divided into two 64 Kbps B Channels and one 16 Kbps D Channel to provide access to and from the public switched telephone network for circuit-switched voice communications. DigiLine Service also provides transmission of circuit-switched data and packet-switched data within the customer's service office area only. This service allows the simultaneous transmission of voice and data over a single residence or business telephone line from a serving office equipped for DigiLine Service.

The monthly recurring charges for DigiLine Service consist of three major rate elements: Basic Interface Facility ($19.00); Basic Interface Equipment ($12.00); and, an Integrated Services Network Component for each B Channel (rate varies from $1.90 to $7.25 per B Channel depending on the customer's class of service and location.) Other charges may also be applicable depending on the options requested by the customer.

DigiLine Service operates only with compatibly-equipped FCC Part 68 registered equipment. The service will be offered initially in the following exchanges and within the following serving offices:

Exchange	Serving Offices
Dallas	Fleetwood, Richardson, Riverside
Austin	Fireside
San Antonio	Capitol, Medical Center
Houston	Clay, Medical Center

DigiLine Service may be furnished in other serving offices in any of the above exchanges in combination with foreign serving office charges. In addition, DigiLine Service may be available in other exchanges upon a customer's bona fide request. A bona fide request is a written request for service. Upon receipt of the bona fide request, Southwestern Bell will conduct an economic analysis to determine the financial viability of offering the requested service.

Southwestern Bell expects DigiLine Service to generate first-year revenues of approximately $236,000.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in this docketed proceeding should notify the Commission as soon as possible, but not later than by February 10, 1992. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at 512-458-0256. The telecommunications device for the deaf (TDD) number is 512-458-0221.
