New wind farm will save local customers

Southwestern Electric Power Company (SWEPCO) is seeking approval of the Texas Public Utilities Commission for authorization to proceed on an Oklahoma wind energy project.

About a dozen civic leaders from Clarendon attended a meeting in Memphis last Tuesday, July 3, to learn more about the project. Community leaders from Memphis, Childress, Shamrock, and Wellington were also in attendance.

The Wind Catcher project would cost about $4.5 billion and include 800 turbines in the Oklahoma Panhandle. Energy from the wind farm would travel a new 350-mile dedicated transmission line to tie into the existing power grid.

SWEPCO will own 70 percent of the project, and the Public Service Company of Oklahoma will own the other 30 percent. Both companies are units of American Electric Power (AEP). Energy regulators in Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Louisiana have already approved the project, and SWEPCO hopes to have decision from the Texas PUC soon. Southwestern Electric Power Company says the project will start saving customers money in the first year of generation in 2021. The average reduction to customer bills in Texas over the first ten years is 6.5 percent. The project benefits will come from reduced fuel costs and the energy company being able to take advantage of federal Production Tax Credits. The Lone Star State will also benefit from the design, engineering, and construction companies being Texas companies, and a "meaningful portion" of the wind turbine towers, substation equipment, and cable will be manufactured in the state. Southwestern Electric Power Company serves 535,000 customers including 185,000 in East Texas and the southeastern Texas Panhandle.

Why so many refugees?

By Ted Galen Carpenter, Cato Institute

The initial decision by the United States President Donald Trump and his administration to separate families involved in alleged illegal border crossings generated enormous controversy and backfired spectacularly from a public relations standpoint.

Mostly lost in all the uproar, though, is needed scrutiny about why there is another spike in the number of refugees from Central America seeking haven in the United States. As with most mass migrations, there is no single cause. Like previous generations of immigrants, some see this country as an ideal land of opportunity and wish to seize it. Also, others are not merely hoping to find better job prospects but are trying to avoid outright destitution in their home countries. Furthermore, other families are fleeing a horrid level of gang violence that has engulfed some Central American societies.

Developments are making the last factor increasingly salient. The level of internal strife in areas of Honduras, Guatemala, and El Salvador has made those countries some of the most chaotic and violent outside of full-fledged war zones. President Trump has even labeled the MS-13 gang, based in El Salvador, a threat to communities throughout the United States. But MS-13 is only one of many street gangs and drug cartels plaguing Central America's so-called northern triangle.

The extent of the carnage is extraordinary. Four of the countries with the highest annual murder rates in the world are located in Central America. Guatemala ranks ninth, with 31.25 murders per 100,000 people. Belize ranks sixth with 34.4, while Honduras comes in second with a rate of 63.75. But those countries seem almost peaceful compared to El Salvador, which has the highest homicide rate in the world, 108. 64 per 100,000. Moreover, the nation with the fifth highest rate, Venezuela with 57.15 homicides per 100,000, is adjacent to the region.

To put such rates into perspective, consider that the Philippines, afflicted with a simmering local insurgency in the south, ranks fortieth with a rate of 9.84. Even Nigeria - despite the threat that the extremist Boko Haram continues to pose - comes in forty-first, with 9.79. Finally, Zimbabwe with its economic chaos has 6.74 murders per 100,000 and comes in sixtyninth. The United States claims eighty-first place with 4.88 murders per 100,000 population. The Central American countries are essentially in a league of their own, except for places like Syria and Yemen which are experiencing full-blown civil wars.

Not surprisingly, sensible people might want to get their families out of such lethal environments. According to the United Nations, there were approximately 18,000 refugees from Central America seeking asylum in 2011. That number reached 294,000 in 2017 - with 58% being new additions during that calendar year alone. All indications are that the flow has increased further in the first months of 2018, and that trend became one of the reasons for the Trump administration's harsh reaction and the divisive political uproar it created in the United States

But options for Central American refugees are decidedly limited. Trying to relocate to immediate neighbors such as Venezuela and Colombia would not be much of an improvement, even if those governments did not expel interlopers. As noted, Venezuela is plagued by a comparable level of violence. Panama's situation is only marginally better, while Colombia is just emerging from decades of civil war and trying to preserve a fragile peace settlement. Mexico certainly does not welcome Central American arrivals. Indeed, refugees just trying to pass through that country on their way to the United States endure a gauntlet of violence and exploitation. Those who manage to avoid being raped or beaten are typically taxed by the ubiquitous drug cartels and human traffickers for safe passage. Many are pressed into service as drug mules to smuggle narcotics shipments into the United States. Moreover, Mexico has daunting security problems of its own. The arrest of the leading drug trafficker, Joaquin (El Chapo) Guzman, in 2015 led to the fragmenting of the dominant Sinaloa cartel and a spike in bloody turf fights, both within that organization and among resurgent competitors. Mexico had a record 29,168 homicides in 2017, surpassing the previous record in 2011 during former President Felipe Calderon's ill-starred drug war offensive by nearly 2,000 victims. The surge boosted the country's homicide rate to 16.35 per 100,000 residents - now the twentieth in the world. The drug cartels also seem to be targeting members of Mexico's political elite to a much greater extent than before, fomenting even worse instability. Ninety-one political figures have been murdered just in the current campaign leading up to nation-wide elections on July 1. Various cartels warn office seekers that they do not control to "drop out or be killed." Journalists also need to fear for their lives as a record number of them perished at the hands of the drug gangs in 2017. Conditions in Central America are far worse. One of the early warning signs of potential failed states is a massive surge in refugees. That is now taking place as record numbers flee the growing violence and general dysfunction in several Central American countries. The Trump administration's sterile policy of simply trying to exclude the increasing number of desperate people trying to find a haven in the United States does not even begin to identify the underlying problem. It is a situation that requires far more attention and sober thinking than it has received so far. America has an emerging humanitarian and security crisis in its neighborhood that must be addressed immediately. Ted Galen Carpenter, a senior fellow at the Cato Institute.

Raining down on Priceline parade

The fingers of one hand are more than enough to count the disparaging columns I've written about online purchases that I feel warrant "red alert" warnings.

There's a current issue, however intended to be a "let-the-buyer-beware" suggestion – that could save travelers both money and grief. It concerns a respected company, Priceline©, best known for allowing us to bid on hotel rooms. It also dabbles in other ventures....

For the hotel side of Priceline[©], I say "amen," having booked rooms more than 100 times during the company's first two decades of operation. I likely will continue to do so, having faced minimal problems while saving considerable cash.

Priceline[®] also rents automobiles, and it's my hope that this practice becomes an aborted dabble, like several others in its history.

While I am certain Priceline© demands that participating hotels meet certain standards for each "star level" claimed, such indices don't seem to apply to its car rental companies.... ****

I know. All that glitters isn't gold, and sometimes doesn't even save the couple of dollars expected when one falls for the allure in ads and ignores the fine print.

More than three months ago, I sought a Priceline[©] car rental at the Denver Airport. I was notified by Ace Rent A Car that my vehicle awaited. However, I learned the day before the scheduled pick-up that Ace was "no

the idle

american have checked by don newbury

#167 among car rental locations in Denver, and Fox wasn't even to be found....

Fox Renters are "yelping on Yelp," however, 767 times so far.

The "Yelpers" cite numerous common shortcomings, and 599 offer just one "star," many indicating they would have cited "no star" if the provision were offered. ("Yelpers" suggest the fleet may resemble the one my late "Uncle Cecil" accumulated. He was an undertaker who often accepted used cars as partial payment for funerals. "Usually, the cars 'jumped naked' on me," he used to say.)

I would be a "no star" respondent, too, had there been a place to check "ZERO."...

I spoke with a Priceline[®] customer relations guy. He was cordial and understanding - or seemed to be - but couldn't understand why I felt my multiple issues with Fox involved his company. He urged me to take it up with Fox.

Unhappy "renters" cite many shortcomings. Many are repetitious, so surely Priceline[®] is aware of them. And if they're not, they should be. Shame on William Shatner, the company's ad guy said to earn millions annually for his ad endorsements.

Fox Rent A Car "hit" my Sam's MasterCard bill for a third straight month, assessing a charge of $111.90 for "tolls and fines." No doubt, the Fox folks didn't expect my wife to give the bill (and all of our bills) the "fine-toothedcomb" treatment....

I would rent a camel before giving Fox Rent A Car another chance.

Priceline[©] for hotels remains "at the top" in my book. It will remain there if the "tolls and fines" are cleared. Ten weeks ago, I wrote with tongue in cheek about the misadventures involved in trying to return the rental car. We arose at the Priceline@-booked Aurora, CO, Radisson Hotel, at 2:30 a.m. to make the 6 a.m. flight, 19 miles away (mostly freeway). Unable to find the Fox rental car return, we missed our flight. For this writing, my tongue is retracted, and my teeth are gritted over this ongoing miserable experience.

This gloom is overshadowed, however, by the loss of our rescue dog, Sadie, who had to be put away last week. We'd had her 11 of her estimated 13-15 years, and are saddened that she had too many health issues to overcome. We still have one rescue canine, a dachshund named Sailor. He scrunches beside me in my lounger every day at naptime....

Dream that changed a man's life

BZ Lewis grew up in Big Spring. When he was six years old he took piano lessons, not knowing that music was going to be a lifetime pursuit. When he was fourteen he took up guitar. "My brother was learning guitar and he showed me a chord. Since day one I was just completely absorbed, absolutely hooked. I think I've played guitar just about every day except when I was on vacation or away from a guitar."

He played in a few bands all over Texas and Louisiana. "My first one was a metal band we called Stainless Steel. Later I started paying classical guitar, a truly solo endeavor. You have to figure out how to move your fingers in a way to make a musical passage work. It's just you and your instrument and hours and hours of practice." As he approached adulthood he was concerned he couldn't make a living with music. So he enrolled in the University of Texas to study engineering. That didn't last very long. "I felt really bad about abandoning music. I felt like guitar was something I had to do." BZ has long hair, which played a part in a dream he had. "In this dream I was walking around this office building and there was this guy with long gray hair carrying a stack of papers and he bumped into them up, I noticed they were all blank musical manuscript pages except for the first few layers, which had music written on them. I looked into the guy's face and it was my face. I interpreted that dream as telling me I've got a lot of music to write."

In the dream, a classical guitar piece, Recuerdos de la Alhambra by Francisco Tarrega was playing over the loud speaker. Two weeks after the dream, the university began a classical guitar course, limited to just twelve people. When BZ showed up to talk to the teacher, he was told the class was full. BZ had his guitar with him, got it out and played Recuerdos de la Alhambra for the teacher. BZ was admitted to the class.

BZ has made is living with music since graduating with a degree in music from UT. Recently he returned to the University to lecture and encourage music majors. He has composed music for movies, television shows, commercials and international sporting events. He has a recording studio (Studio 132) and records musicians in the bay area of California, where he now lives. His music has been on virtually every television network and he has earned numerous awards including six Emmys for music he composed for television. Every speaker in his studio has an Emmy statuette on it. He is a judge for the Grammys. For the past few years he has composed music for the World Poker Tour.

BZ (Brian Zack) is my son. He is not only a great musician, he is a textbook husband to his wife Margaret and father to his two children, Max and Aiden. He has a vast array of friends and is a Lego enthusiast and Rubik's cube expert. He is handy with tools and is a dedicated off road bicycle rider. "This music business is giving me a nice ride. I'm lucky but sometimes you have to make your own luck."

Thousands are expected to do just that July 12-15, 2018 for the annual Route 66 Festival, this year hosted by Shamrock with support from all the Texas towns up and down Historic Route 66.

This festival, sometimes called the International Festival, has been held in cities up and down the Mother Road. It was in Amarillo in 2011. Roadies will come from across the U.S. and around the world to bask in the marvels of Shamrock and the other Texas cities.

Shamrock is home to the U-Drop Inn, a beautiful classic gas station that was an inspiration for Ramone's in the Disney movie CARS. The U-Drop is also home to Shamrock's Visitor Center and Historic Route 66 Museum.

McLean is home to the Devil's Rope and Route 66 Museum as well as the first Phillips 66 station in Texas.

Alanreed is home to an unrestored, but iconic, Phillips 66 Super Station.

Groom is home to the leaning water tower as well as the Cross at Groom.

Amarillo is the largest Texas city on Historic Route 66 and features a mile-long district on Sixth between Georgia and Western Streets with lots of original architecture, new clubs and restaurants and great antique and gallery shopping. The Big Texan Steak Ranch on the just west of town.

Vega is home to the Milburn-Price Culture Museum while Adrian is the midpoint of Route 66. The Midpoint Café (open April-October) is a great stopping point for roadies.

Glen Rio is a real ghost town on the TX/NM border. It is exit 0 off Interstate 40 and features the remnant of a First Motel/Last Motel in Texas sign.

The festival is focused on Shamrock July 12-15 but all the towns expect lots of explorers along Route 66 before and after the festival. Admission may be charged at some festival events.

Protecting children from the sun is very important

Even a few serious sunburns can increase your child's chances of getting skin cancer, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. To prevent sunburn, the American Academy of Pediatrics recommends that infants avoid sun exposure and wear lightweight long pants, long-sleeved shirts and brimmed hats that shade the neck. When adequate clothing and shade are not available, parents can apply minimal amount of sunscreen with at least 15 SPF (sun protection factor) to small areas, such as the infant's face and the backs of the hands. For Toddlers, preschoolers and old children, use a sunscreen with an SPF 15 or greater that protects against UVA and UVB rays. Be sure to apply enough sunscreen - about one ounce per application for an older child. Reapply sunscreen every two hours and after swimming or sweating. For the best protection, apply sunscreen 30 minutes before going outdoors.

Don't forget to protect ears, nose, lips, and the tops of the feet. Unprotected shin can be damaged by the sun's UV rays in as little as 15 minutes. Yet it can tale up to 12 hours for skin to show the full effect of sun exposure. So if your child's skin looks "a little pin" today, it may be burned tomorrow morning. To prevent further burning, get your child out of the sun. Source: American Academy of Pediatrics; U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention
