Interested Parents To Meet

Special Schooling Sought

Do you have a child whom you feel would benefit from special instruction in a small class with a teacher qualified to handle his individual problem?

Olton school officials feel there are a number of such children in the community and are now at work planning these classes. Generally termed as classes for those who are not college bound, the instruction would be of a specialized nature, built around the needs of each child.

"We would like to have a complete program of education that would carry the child through to graduation. He could progress at his own rate in a program that would best serve him in future life," Johnny Clark, superintendent, said this week. Clark said the school is interested in establishing two types of classes. One would be for students who are not attending school now. Another would be for students who are in school but are not getting the extra help they need.

He noted that, if the program is established, it will not be a financial burden to local taxpayers since the state will pay the teacher's salary and operating expense. The program is to be so designed that the teachers, students and parents will work closely together for the greater benefit of School Co-Ordinator Elmer Moore, who is in charge of the program said this week that the students would spend part of the day in the special class and return to their regular class for the remainder. The object is to give them the extra help they need and yet, let them remain with the at 2 p.m. for all parents who are interested in the program. Clark urged those who have children with special problems to attend this meeting and get a full explanation of the program and how it might help their child.

A minimum of eight students is required for each class.

For those who are interested and wish to have their children tested to see if they qualify for the classes, an educational and vocational counselor, Carolyn L. Attneave, Lubbock, will conduct tests here April 4. She will also hold conferences with the parents at that time.

There is no charge to the parents for these tests and "they could mean a great deal in the future of your child," Clark said.

GOOSE IS COOKED---This quacking bird was pitched into a meeting of farmers here Monday night by persons unknown. The group was discussing its opposition to a proposed farm labor act, and it was mentioned later that if the bill goes through, agriculture's goose may be cooked. For details see story above.

Farm Labor Bill Outlined

(1) To make workers available for agricultural employment in any area where there is a shortage of workers for such employment the Secretary of Labor is authorized to recruit qualified out-of-area workers willing to accept agricultural employment; furnish them necessary transportion to and returning from a distribution center: subsistence; temporary housing; and emergency medical care. A revolving fund to cover these expenses would be estab-

(2) No workers would be available to an employer unless the employer enters into an agreement with the Secretary whereby he agrees to: (a) guarantee each worker the terms of a contract negotiated with each worker; (b) reimburse the Department of Labor up to $15 per worker for the expenses incurred. In the event any worker failed without good cause to fulfill his agreement, the employer would be furnished a replacement without additional payment or be refunded (on a proportionate basis) any amount paid to the Department; (c) pay the cost of transporting any worker, with whom he has contracted, from the contracting center and return thereto with the limitation that the cost be in proportion to the amount of the agreed period of employment which the worker actually performs.

(3) Workers recruited under the bill will be available only upon a determination and certification by the Secretary of Labor that; (a) sufficient able and qualified local workers are unavailable at the time and place needed; (b) out-of-area workers will not be recruited at wages and working conditions less favorable than those of local workers

(4) Use of workers would be conditioned upon an employer's entering into a contract with the worker specifying: (a) the term of employment, which must be at least 160 hours for each four-week period, with proportional reductions in the guaranteed number of hours for periods under four weeks. Hours worked in excess of 10 per day would not count toward meeting the guarantee, nor apparently would any hours worked on Sundays and holidays; (b) that the wage be paid the worker shall not be less than the prevailing hourly wage paid to local workers for similar work; (c) that housing facilities furnished by the employer will meet minimum standards set by the Secretary of Labor; (d) that employers will provide, at no cost to the worker, workmen's compensation insurance in states where the law permits coverage of the worker. In states where workmen's compensation coverage cannot be obtained, the employer would be required to obtain insurance coverage at least equal to that provided Mexican Nationals under the Mexican Farm Labor Program.

(5) The right of any worker to accept or decline employment with any employer or to choose any agricultural employment he desires and the right of any employer to offer work to any worker of his choice not under contract to any other employer is specified. However, no foreign workers will be certified on the basis of the unavailability of domestic workers for any employer who rejects without good cause any qualified domestic worker for employment.

(6) The Secretary may refuse workers to any employer who had failed, without justification, to comply with the terms of his contract with the worker or with any rule or regulation issued by the Secretary.

(7) Any employer utilizing the services established by the bill would be required to maintain such records as the Secretary might require.

(8) Any profit making private employment or labor contracting agency would be prohibited from participating in the recruitment of workers under the program established by this bill.

(9) No workers recruited under the program established by this bill would be permitted to fill any job "which will aid directly or indirectly in filling a job which is vacant because the former occupant is on strike or is locked out in the course of a labor dispute, or is an issue in a labor dispute.

(10) $200,000 a year is authorized for the Secretary of Labor to undertake such studies and pilot projects which he thinks may lead to "fuller utilization of under employment thinks may lead to "fuller utilization of under employed rural Americans and to meeting the labor requirements of employers.

(11) Authority is given the Secretary to issue such rules and regulations as he determines necessary to carry out the provisions of the bill.

Federal Assistance To Communities

Do we really know what we're getting into when we latch onto the open purse offered by the Federal government?

It seems like a quick and easy way to local progress and well-meaning citizens often welcome Federal money without fully realizing the implication

The more than 100 types of Federal assistance to communities are described in a U.S. Department of Commerce publication titled "Handbook of Federal Aids to Communities."

Some of these programs sound wonderful but the results have, in many cases, fallen short. They have the tendency to stimulate activity rather than solve problems. They have not given community leaders solutions to new problems which arise constantly. Instead, they appear to merely make communities more dependent on Washington and less self-reliant.

James F. Steiner, manager of the Construction and Civic Development Department of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, has this to say:

"Here are some. . .implications which should be understood before a decision is made to reach into the Federal grab bag: "(1) Federal programs are built on averages and are not tailored to the individual needs of communities.

"(2) The trend favors big cities. Political considerations dictate that competive advantages be given urban centers (where the votes are) over smaller communities.

"(3) Federal programs are handled through the local political mechanism. Many programs take longer than one or two years to complete and hence are subject to the political fortune of the municipal administration. Political boundaries get in the way of regional solutions to problems broader than the single community.

"(4) Private initative is thwarted and the leadership role is denied civic and business voluntary associations which know best what the community requires.

"(5) Control from Washington means timeconsuming reporting and approval proced-

President Kennedy won states with 146 electoral votes by his pluralities in seven of the largest urban areas. The big cities elected this Administration. As long as they can be kept content and loyal with plenty of Federal money, the Administration has a good outlook indefinitely. Hence, the favoritism toward the big cities.

The implications on the economic front should also be considered. Under the Area Redevelopment Act, eligible communities must submit an over all economic development plan which must be approved by the Federal government. They decide whether the community has done a good job of planning, what kind and how much Federal aid the community gets. To what does this lead? Already, the government can deliberatley channel defense contracts into certain localities and withhold them from others. With this precedent, the government might decide that certain products should be manufactured here and others there. It is easy to see the serious effect this could have.

The important thing is that we do have a choice now. Many communities have developed satisfactory self-help programs using local money. In Erie, Pa., in 1960, for an outlay of less than $1,000 per person, 300 persons cooperated to draft a complete work program for the community. Other communities have followed suitacross

This does not mean that local financing will provide ready made solutions. What it can do is combine planning with decisions and actions so that growth and development can take place and communities can
