Flag Is More Than Cloth,
It's A Valuable Symbol

By R.A. Bradley

The USA flag is more than just a piece of cloth sewn together. It is more than just a decoration. The USA Flag is "America". It is Freedom - freedom to work, freedom to travel, freedom to believe or not believe, freedom to speak or act.

People who demonstrate and burn the flag are destroying the one thing that gives them the right to speak their mind and demonstrate. They are destroying the one thing that protects them. With these freedoms to speak, freedoms to act, also come responsibility. A responsibility to protect the one thing that protects them. That is the flag, the flag is America!!

Everyone in the past, present and future, who has worked and died for America is stitched into every star and stripe of the flag.

The flag is a symbol. It is more valuable than all of the silver, gold and precious metals in the world. The flag represents all of the people of the United States of America. Big or small, rich or poor, this flag is your flag. It is my flag.

We may not always agree with everything that is done in the USA, but we have the best country in the world. As far as I know, we live in the only country that people risk their lives to break into! Even with all of its faults, it is still the best.

Hold your head up high. Stick your chest out and be proud of the Stars and Stripes. It is ours. Let us keep our flag the emblem for freedom, love, opportunities. Some time you must fight to have freedom and peace. Let us pray that all of the world might someday have peace.

Have you really looked at your pledge to the flag?

Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag I (me, myself) pledge (promise, guarantee) Allegiance (loyalty) to the flag. (Stars and Stripes Symbol of the United States of America) a nation bound together and to the Republic (A commonwealth, a bunch of separate states bound together by treaty and trust) for which it stands. One (all for one purpose) Nation (a group of people by a common political institution) under (beneath) God (the one supreme being) with Liberty (freedom, without restraint, permission to leave or stay, free to speak or act) and Justice (to be treated fair and right without prejudice) for all (everyone regardless of race or creed)!!

Two Arrested For Tractor Theft

Friday morning the Journal spoke to the New Mexico State Police in Demming, N.M. concerning two arrests made in connection with the theft of tractors in this area.

Although they declined to release the names of those arrested, they stated that two arrests were made in Columbus, N.M., approximately 25 miles south of Demming, and the suspects were incarcerated in Demming Jail.

"These arrests were made due to outstanding cooperation between the F.B.I., State and County officers" Bailey County Sheriff Jerry Hicks said.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT ACCIDENT--Three local youths occupied this 1980 Jeep Wednesday night when it was involved in a collision at West 17th Street and American Blvd. David Lutz, driver, attempted to make a left hand turn onto American Blvd. when the jeep was struck by a suburban driven by Patrice Osborn of Spring, TX. Campaign To Sharpen Media Literacy Skills

In the age of MTV, sound-bites, "informercials" and declining readership of newspapers among the nation's youth, the Texas Federation of Teachers is providing families with a publication to increase children's understanding and appropriate use of media.

The American Federation of Teachers summer learning calendar entitled, "Tune in to Media" features tips and activities for each week in June, July and August to help children think critically about information they see, hear and read in media each day.

"Kids in the U.S. are saturated with media messages," said John Cole, President of the Texas Federation of Teachers. "Our goal with the summer learning calendar is to help them learn to be better media consumers."

"Whether they're reading books and magazines, watching TV, listening to the radio or playing video games, children--as well as adults--should be able to recognize the intent of what they see and hear and understand the techniques being used to get information across," Cole said. "The media literate person watches, listens and reads more carefully and analytically."

Media literacy courses are common in schools throughout Great Britain, Canada and Australia. But few school districts in the U.S. offer them--this, despite the increasing prevalence of media technologies in American society.

For example, a 1990 A.C. Nielsen report on TV viewing shows children age 2 to 17 watch two dozen hours a week. Most children watch 6,000 hours of TV before they enter school, and 21,000 hours before they graduate.

A 1990 Times Mirror report, "The People and The Press" points to declining news consumption and decreased interest in public affairs among young citizens. Those who went to school during the past two to three decades are less likely to read the newspaper or watch news on television than those in the past two generations.

"The very nature of our democratic system of government is jeopardized when the only information people consume comes in ten-second sound bites and quick emotional bursts," said Cole.

To overcome these problems, the Texas Federation of Teachers summer learning calendar helps families work with children to:

1) Recognize the many forms of media in their daily lives, understand their effects, and learn to use and enjoy them appropriately.

2) Learn about media production techniques through observation and direct experience, and understand why various techniques are used.

3) Learn more about the cultural practices, ideas and values presented through mass media and become more aware of their implications on society.

4) Understand the differences

'Don't Bag It'

A project that can preserve 25 percent of Texas landfill space by recycling instead of bagging lawn clippings has earned a two-member Texas A&M University System team a USDA superior service award.

Dr. Bill Knoop, a Dallas-based turf grass specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, and Robert A. Whitney, former county Extension Service, and Robert A. Whitney, former county Extension Service agent in Fort Worth now serving at Comanche in Central Texas, received the award June 12 in Washington, D.C.

Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan recognized Knoop and Whitney for the development and implementation of the "Don't Bag It" program.

The Texans were cited in the environmental and natural resources protection category, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, Extension Service director in Texas.

Knoop devised the program that was piloted in 1989 by the Tarrant county office of the Extension Service and the city of Fort Worth, using volunteer demonstrations directed by Whitney.

During summers, as much as 50 percent of all solid waste in landfills comes from yards, according to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Landfills, however, are running out of space, and recycling is an increasingly important alternative.

Grass clippings can be easily recycled with no storage or processing. Research also has shown there is no need to bag grass clippings if good turf management practices are followed.

"Examples of this," Carpenter said, "are athletic fields, and similarities among various forms of media; and learn to distinguish their entertainment, informational and promotional functions.

5) Understand how news and information is gathered and how editorial decisions are made in different media.

6) Learn to be critical and responsible consumers of media and by so doing, learn to demand more from media.

Children can receive more media literacy tips and activities, by calling the "Learning Line" at 1-800-242-5465. This toll-free telephone service, sponsored by the Texas Federation of Teachers' parent organization, the American Federation of Teachers, can be reached 24 hours a day.

"Tune in to Media" was developed with expert contribugolf courses and park and recreation areas that have attractive turf without bagging. People in many residential areas have been taught to bag grass clippings to protect their lawn from disease, but our research shows clippings do not cause thatch."

Carpenter said the "Don't Bag It" program includes recommendations for mowing, fertilizing and watering lawns.

A year after the program began, a survey of the first 200 participants in "Don't Bag It" showed 98 percent of the respondents would not bag their grass clippings again. They also said their lawns had improved, and that they mow their grass in 38 percent less time.

"In Fort Worth alone, 30,000 bags of lawn clippings were kept out of the landfill," Carpenter said.

Knoop and Whitney, encouraged by the success in Fort Worth and interest expressed by other cities, developed a "Don't Bag It" handbook, slides, video and publications to show others how to use the program in their own communities.

By March 1991, more than 100 Texas cities had initiated "Don't Bag It" programs, over 1,500 demonstration lawns had been designated across the state, and three million Texans had received information on the program.

The Texas program developed by Knoop and Whitney is a model for many cities throughout the United States, Carpenter said.

The "Don't Bag It" program also earned the EPA's 1990 Award of Excellence and the 1989, national Keep America Beautiful Award.

tions from Kathleen R. Tyner of the Center for Media Strategies in San Francisco and Dr. Jerome Singer and Dr. Dorothy Singer, co-directors of Yale University's Family Television Research and Consultation Center.

Copies of "Tune in to Media" are available by writing to Texas Federation of Teachers at P.O. Box 776, Austin, TX 78767.

Fireworks Safety Tips For A Happy 4th

Independence Day 1991 will be a joyous celebration, marking the traditional holiday and the victory of the United States and its allies in the liberation of Kuwait. However, of Texas follow their traditional habits, July 4, 1991, will also be marked by tragic fires caused by the careless use of fireworks.

"Fireworks are a holiday tradition," said Claire Koriath, chair of the State Board of Insurance. "However, they traditionally are involved in needless fires, usually because someone chooses to use fireworks carelessly or thoughtlessly."

The State Fire Marshal's Office, which is a division of the State Board of Insurance, licenses companies and persons involved in manufacturing, storing and selling fireworks within the state. It also oversees fireworks technicians that design and operate large public displays of fireworks.

State Fire Marshal Ernest Emerson said that although most cities have banned the use of fireworks within city limits, fireworks are still easily available for sale to the public. He pointed out that fireworks require high temperatures to operate and that many discharged fireworks retain enough heat to start a fire or cause burns for hours after they are discharged. The result, he said, is that many fire departments will be called to battle fireworks-related fires this holiday.

"During 1989, fire departments in Texas reported that fireworks, including sparklers, caused more than 700 fires," Emerson said. "It is reported that these fires caused 13 injuries to fire fighters, one injury to a civilian and approximately $375,000 in property damage."

Emerson added that another nine fires were caused by smaller explosive paper caps and party poppers, available for sale at stores without restrictions year round. These nine fires caused seven civilian injuries and $330,000 in property damage. The statistics are taken from the Texas Fire Incident Reporting System, which includes 300 fire departments about 74 percent of the state's population.

Nationwide, more than 44,000 fires, about 20 deaths and $41 million in property damage were caused by fireworks-related fires during 1988, the latest year for which national statistics are available.

The statistics gathered by the State Fire Marshal's Office on fireworks-related fires do not include fireworks injuries not related to fires. Such injuries include eye injuries, cuts and burns from contact with firework materials. The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) estimates that 12,400 fireworks-related injuries were reported to hospital emergency rooms during 1990.

The CPSC also reports that: Sixty-six percent of fireworks-related emergency-room injuries involved privately used devices that were legal under the federal law administered by the CPSC.

Twenty-seven percent involved fireworks considered illegal under the federal law.

Sparklers caused three-fourths of the injuries to children under 5 years old.

Children under 19 years old suffered three of every five fire fireworks injuries. This means that children generally are more than four times as likely to be injured by fireworks as adults over 24 years old.

Using fireworks more safely can reduce the number of fires and injuries caused by fireworks. The State Fire Marshal's Office lists 10 recommendations for using fireworks as safely as possible:

1. Purchase fireworks only from a licensed vendor that displays a SFMO license certificate.
2. Remember that many cities and communities regulate the possession and use of fireworks.
3. Never let children use fireworks. Always designate a responsible, sober adult to ignite the fireworks.
4. Use fireworks outdoors only, in a clear area away from houses and flammable materials, such as grass, trees, gasoline cans or wooden decks.

Be sure that the fireworks, especially aerial fireworks, will not contact or land on potentially dangerous objects such as power lines or automobiles.

5. Keep a bucket of water nearby while setting off fireworks. Use the water to douse any malfunctioning fireworks or accidental fires and to immerse minor burns.
6. Keep everyone, especially children under 15 years old, a safe distance away from the area where the fireworks are ignited.
7. Read and follow the directions exactly. If you don't understand the instructions, don't take a chance by lighting the firework.
8. Never touch a firework after it has been lit. If the firework malfunctions, do not try to relight it or pick it up. Carefully douse all used fireworks with water.

9. Never experiment with fireworks. Don't take fireworks apart or mix anything with the contents. Never make fireworks at home. Don't set off fireworks in metal, glass or other types of containers.

10. After you have finished lighting fireworks, cool the remains with water. Then collect all used fireworks materials and put them in a metal container. Cover with water again to reduce the chance of an accidental fire.

Emerson made another suggestion for parents who allow children to use sparklers.

"Keep a metal bucket nearby, and have the children put their used sparklers in the bucket," he said. "Be sure the children are wearing shoes to avoid burns from stepping on hot wires that are dropped accidentally."

The State Board of Insurance chair concluded that avoiding fireworks is the safest choice.

"Go to a local public fireworks display," Koriath said. "Or choose another method of celebrating the Fourth of July, such as organizing a neighborhood parade or participating in one of the many Operation Desert Storm commemorations that will be held across the state."

Africanized Honey Bees Attack Maintenance Worker

A maintenance worker at Siesta Mobile Home Park in Brownsville became the first stinging victim of migrating Africanized honey bees in the United States May 20 when he was attacked while mowing.

Jesus Cenobio "Sonny" Diaz, 35, was stung 18 times after the riding lawn mower he was operating disturbed an AHB colony in a pipe near the road. He was treated at a Brownsville hospital and released.

Jorge Trevino, environmental coordinator at the Brownsville City Health Department, destroyed the colony and took a sample of the bees to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) office in Brownsville.

The sample was preliminarily identified as Africanized by APHIS personnel, according to Joe Davidson, the agency's assistant regional director. It was received on June 3 by the USDA-Agricultural Research Service lab in Beltsville, Md., which confirmed the report.

More than 50 migrating AHB swarms have been detected in the Texas area since the first was found Oct. 15 in Hidalgo. Scientists said spring swarming activity has diminished but is expected to resume in the fall.

Pregnant Women Participate In Program

Pregnant women who participate in the Supplemental Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) are less likely to give birth to low weight infants, according to an article published in June issue of Texas Medicine.

A study of Texas women who participated in the WIC program during 1988 showed that women who entered the program during the first trimester of pregnancy had significantly fewer low birth weight babies than those entering the program later in their pregnancies, Dr. Barbara N. Samuels writes in Texas Medicine.

Dr. Samuels is director of community health services for the Texas Department of Health. Texas Medicine is the official news magazine of the Texas Medical Association. WIC is a state-federal program to improve nutrition for low-income children and pregnant women. It is administered by the health department.

"Women who entered WIC during the first trimester of pregnancy had a smaller percentage of babies with low birth weight and a higher percentage of babies with normal birth weight and heavy birth weight," Dr. Samuels says. "Women entering WIC during the second trimester displayed better patterns of birth weight distribution than did women who entered during the third trimester."

Low birth weight was defined as less than 2,500 grams (5.51 pounds). Normal birth weight was defined as between 2,500 and 4,499 grams (9.92 pounds) and heavy birth weight was defined as more than 4,500 grams.

The survey of 35,599 pregnant women showed a rate of six low birth weight infants per 100 live births for those who enrolled in the program during the first trimester. That compared to low birth weight rates of 9.1 and 13.1 per 100 live births for those enrolled during the second and third trimesters, respectively.

While the results show a significant relationship, Dr. Samuels says other factors also impact birth weight, including maternal age, ethnicity, adequacy of prenatal care and maternal weight gain.

"Nevertheless, this exercise suggests that birth weight can be improved (for whatever reasons) by increasing the number of women who enroll in WIC during the first trimester (or the first two trimesters), even if the total number of women receiving prenatal WIC benefits remains constant," Dr. Samuels concludes.

The Texas Medical Association is a professional organization of more than 30,000 physician and medical student members. It is located in Austin and has 119 component county medical societies around the state. The Association represents 82 percent of the doctors of medicine licensed and residing in Texas and 96 percent of the state's allopathic medical students. TMA's key objective is to improve the health of Texas through professional and personal development of its members.

On Monday, June 24 the Senior Citizens met at the old Depot for their regular covered dish luncheon. The invocation was by Bro. Dale Berry and 21 were present. One new member attended. It was Leola Stroud. Bro. Dale Berry, Pastor of Trinity Baptist Church was our guest speaker.

In the absence of president Katie Rubinek, Odessa Shanks had charge of the business meeting. The minutes were read and approved. There wasn't any new business.

IN FASHION

With summer just around the corner, it's time to select swimsuits. Solid black or white or a combination of black and white swimsuit continue to be popular choices. Newer is the combination of black and gold.

Tropical Mediterranean prints in beachwear are good choices this year.

Veterans Housing Program Expected To Double

The maximum amount available through the Texas Veterans Housing Assistance Program (VHAP) is expected to more than double from $20,000 to $45,000 on Sept. 1 as a result of new legislation signed into law by Gov. Ann Richards.

"Increasing the maximum loan amount to $45,000 brings the program more in line with the realities of today's economy said Garry Mauro, who serves as chairman of the Texas Veterans Land Board.

The Texas Veterans Housing Assistance Program currently makes 30-year, fixed-rate loans at 8.5 percent for the purchase of a new or existing home.

Mauro said Texas veterans can combine a Texas VHAP loan with a conventional, FHA or VA loan to get a lower overall mortgage rate and lower payments.

Tentative approval has also been given to the VLB to raise the maximum loan available through the Texas Veterans Land Program from $20,000 to $40,000. Mauro stressed, however, that this action cannot be taken without additional approval from Congress. Mauro said changes in federal tax law are required to increase the ceiling and he is currently working with the Texas delegation to accomplish this.

Mauro said boosting the home loan limit to $45,000 will "provide a financing alternative for low-to-moderate income veterans who are currently locked out of the housing market.

When the Veterans Land Program was initiated in 1949, the land board set the loan limit at $7,500. On the average that was good for the purchase of about 150 acres.

"If you apply a conservative inflation rate to those figures, the equivalent figure in today's market would be a $39,000 loan limit. And that same 150-acre tract now goes for $103,000 at today's prices."

The land loan ceiling was last raised in 1979 from $15,000 to $20,000. The home loan program was created in 1983 with a $20,000 ceiling.

The Texas Veterans Land Program will lend eligible Texas veterans up to $20,000 at 7.99 percent interest to purchase at least five acres of land.

Become A Coast Guard Officer

United States Coast Guard Academy Nationwide Competition is underway and the United States Coast Guard Academy is now accepting and processing applications for appointment as Cadet, U.S. Coast Guard, Class of 1996. Applications are being accepted for both men and women. Appointments as Coast Guard Cadets are tendered solely on the basis of an annual nationwide competition with no congressional nominations or geographical quotas. Applications must be submitted to the Director of Admissions prior to 15 December 1991. Candidates must arrange to participate in either the College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or American College Testing Assessment (ACT) prior to or including the December 1991 ACT and SAT test administrations.

Appointments as Cadet are tendered based on the candidate's high school record, performance on either the SAT or ACT, and leadership potential as demonstrated by participation in high school activities, community affairs and/or part-time employment. Most successful candidates rank in the top quarter of their high school class and have demonstrated proficiency in both the mathematical and applied science fields.

Candidates must be unmarried at the time of appointment, have no legal obligations resulting from a prior marriage, and must have reached the age of 17 but not 22 by 1 July 1992.

All candidates must be assured of high school graduation by 30 June 1992. All candidates must have completed a minimum of three years of English and three in mathematics to include algebra and plane or coordinate geometry or their equivalents, and must fulfill basic physical requirements.

Coast Guard Cadets obtain an excellent undergraduate education at no personal expense. In addition, they receive pay and allowances fully adequate to fulfill their ordinary living expenses. The constantly updated Academy curriculum leads to a Bachelor of Science degree with a strong academic emphasis on engineering and science. The selected major studies, when combined with varied elective courses, establish a solid foundation for a challenging career. Graduates of the Academy are commissioned as Ensigns in the United States Coast Guard. Selected officers may pursue further postgraduate education and specialized training at many leading civilian and military graduate or professional schools in such fields as aviation, business administration, electronics, engineering, law and oceanography.

The young Academy graduate can look forward to a varied, exciting, and demanding career as a regular Coast Guard Officer. Under the Department of Transportation, the Coast Guard performs a variety of missions. These include search and rescue operations by ship and plane, maintenance of advanced electronic and other aids to navigation around the globe, operation of icebreakers which clear the way for all polar expeditions, and enforcement of marine law and all aspects of merchant marine safety. In addition, the Coast Guard has responsibility for boating safety and marine environmental protection.

To obtain an application or further information write: Director of Admissions, U.S. Coast Guard Academy, 15 Mohegan Avenue, New London, CT 063-20; or call (203) 444-8501.

Senator Phil Gramm Reports

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm has recommended 10 Texas attorneys to serve Texas as federal judges.

They are:
Southern District, Jane Akin Brasch of Harlingen and Andrew Hanen, state District Judge Russell Lloyd, Lee Rosenthal and Ewing Werlein Jr., all of Houston.

Eastern District, Leonard Davis of Tyler.

Northern District, state District Judge Joe Dendall and state District Judge Carolyn Wright, both of Dallas.

Additionally, the senator has recommended Terry Means of Corsicana and Terral Smith of Austin for the federal bench. Means had originally applied for and was recommended to fill a vacancy earlier this year. Having applied from Waco, where he had served as a state appellate judge, Means was recommended for the Western District. The new recommendation shifts him to the Northern District, where he lives and now practices law.

Means will replace Dixon Holman of Fort Worth, who experienced a mild heart attack which substantially delayed his consideration and prompted his recent decision to withdraw.

Smith has been recommended for the Western District vacancy which Means originally had been slated to fill.

"I am confident that the demonstrated legal talent and high personal and professional integrity of each of these attorneys will make each an outstanding federal judge," said Gramm.

"I am sure I will always be proud of the job they will do as federal judges," the senator said. "They each believe strongly that Congress, not the courts, should make our laws. And they are concerned about the rights of victims, not just criminals."

The recommendations are to fill judicial posts which were created by Congress last year, expanding the number of federal judges in Texas by 11 and the number nationwide by 85.

On a related front, Gramm said, state District Judge Jorge Solis of Abilene is expected to be formally nominated by President Bush for a place on the Northern District federal bench.

Gramm recommended Solis, judge of the 350th state District Court, in mid-1990.

The senator's recommendation to President Bush marks the first step in a formal process of selecting federal judges. Following an extensive background investigation and evaluation by the Justice Department and the American Bar Association, judicial candidates must be formally nominated by the President and confirmed by a vote of the full U.S. Senate.

Fragile X Syndrome

An international team of scientists has cloned a gene involved in Fragile X syndrome, the most common form of inherited mental retardation.

The group identified the location of the gene adjacent to the Fragile site on the X chromosome and found DNA mutations occurring in Fragile X patients. This discovery now makes possible accurate diagnosis of Fragile X affected males and carrier females by DNA methods. The isolation of the gene offers the opportunity to understand the mechanism of mental retardation in this disorder.

The work was conducted at Baylor College of Medicine and the Howard Hughes Medical Institute (HHMI), both in Houston, at Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta and at Erasmus University in Rotterdam, The Netherlands.

Fragile X syndrome occurs in 1 in 1,000 males and 1 in 660 females. Symptoms range from subtle learning disabilities to severe retardation.

Dr. Steve Warren of Emory was leader and coordinator of the international research effort. His laboratory developed essential cell lines from Fragile X patients which were made to break at the Fragile site.

Using these cells, a yeast artificial chromosome (YAC) clone isolated in the laboratory of Dr. C. Thomas Caskey at Baylor and HHMI and in the laboratory of Dr. David Nelson, also at Baylor, was found to be physically and genetically close to the Fragile X site.

Using this reference clone, Dr. Ben Oostra of Erasmus University obtained a larger overlapping YAC clone. This clone was shown to contain the Fragile X site and to encode a gene at the Fragile site.

Automated DNA sequencing of the gene was carried out at the Human Genome Center at Baylor.

This collaborative effort enables the investigators to conclude that the Fragile X region has been cloned, that a gene of unusual sequence composition has been isolated and that the Fragile X mutations in patients have been identified near or within this gene.

The international research effort was supported by the Human Genome Initiative of the National Institutes of Health, by the U.S. Department of Energy, by Erasmus University and by HHMI.

Water: The Liquid Of Life

All cell functions depend on it. It is the basis of all body fluids, including digestive juices, blood, urine, lymph and perspiration. Without it, we would die within days. What is this vital ingredient necessary for human survival? It's water.

Water is integral to many vital functions for the body. One of its main functions is to act as a regulating agent for your body temperature. This is accomplished through the distribution of heat when your body temperature falls and cooling the body via perspiration when your body temperature rises.

Under normal circumstances the body loses two to three quarts of water every day, which need to be replaced.

"If you're exercising or doing physical work outdoors like most people are during this time of year, you're losing a lot more water. It needs to be replaced, but not with alcoholic or caffeinated beverages, which further dehydrates the body. If the lost water is not replaced you can end up suffering from heat exhaustion or dehydration," said Cindy Rowell, R.D., outpatient dietitian at Methodist Hospital.

We do get some water from the foods we eat, especially fruits and vegetables. And, some water is produced as a by-product of metabolism. But, six to eight glasses of liquid-including juices, milk and soups are usually needed to make up the difference.

Fascinating Facts

The following interesting facts are from the June 1991 issue of "University of California at Berkeley Wellness Newsletter."

•Ounce for ounce, raw green peppers have two and a half times as much vitamin C as oranges, and red peppers nearly four times as much.

•Opening a bag of freshly microwaved popcorn releases a burst of steam that may cause burns, especially to the eyes, according to a report in the "New England Journal of Medicine." Always open such bags carefully, away from your face.

•A new statistical analysis has shown that the link between elevated blood cholesterol levels and the risk of coronary heart disease appears to be stronger than was previously thought. For each one percent rise in the cholesterol level there may be a three percent increase in coronary risk, rather than the earlier estimate of two percent.

Open Letter To The Public

As we are hurrying and working to prepare the special "Welcome Home" activities for our service men and women home from the Persian Gulf and to "Thank" all of the men and women who have served in the Armed Forces, we want to thank you for all the publicity you gave our support effort.

Let us also say here that several ladies brought cookies already baked for us to send like: Mrs. Jinks Beller, Mrs. Agnes Wolf, Mrs. Katie Roubinek, and Nelda Merriott. Boxes were placed around town for people to put personal items in and the ladies of the Nazarene Church gave a large number of items and letters for this.

Thank you for publicizing every phase of the project from making the badges to promoting everyone to wear them and support our troops, the Cookie Bake-off" when the group baked cookies at the Depot on Nov. 24th and another group baked at the Catholic Church on Nov. 26th. Thank you for publishing the names of the men and women and for the coverage of the Support Rally held on March 2nd in conjunction with "Toast to Texas."

We do not know all the things that you have done-but we know our projects and activities would not be successful without the wonderful support you give our organization.

Thank you,
The Jennyslippers
Mary Ann Ramirez, President

Youth Labor Force Smaller This Summer

Each summer, large numbers of students seek temporary jobs, while high school and college graduates, many of whom were not in the labor force while attending school, obtain or look for permanent jobs. This summer, the 16- to 24-year-old labor force is expected to reach a level of 23.3 million, about 440,000 below that of last summer, the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the U.S. Department of Labor reports.

This over-the-year decline in the youth labor force results from the combination of a decline in both the 16-to 24-year-old population and their rate of labor force participation. Their population has been falling since 1980 and is expected to be about 300,000 lower this July than last. The proportion of youth in the labor force is expected to be below last July's 75.2 percent rate, which itself was down from the record high 77.5 percent reached in July 1989.

The 16- 24-year-old labor force is projected to expand by 3.3 million between April and July of 1991. Students entering the labor force for temporary summer jobs are expected to account for about 70 percent of this increase in the youth labor force. The remaining growth will come from the permanent entry of high school and college graduates. In addition to these entrants, an estimated 900,000 graduates who were already in the labor force in April as students (the vast majority in part-time jobs) can be expected to shift to full-time labor market participation during the summer months.

Letter To The Editor

Please be reminded that the Department of Public Safety is in the process of implementing the Commercial Driver License (CDL) portion of the Commercial Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1986. This law, federally mandating uniform standards for the testing and issuance of the CDL nationwide, makes it illegal to operate a Commercial Motor Vehicle (CMV) after April 01, 1992, without a CDL. Issuance of the CDL requires a written (and in some cases, driving) testing of those drivers requiring this license.

You or your personnel will need to obtain the CDL if you operate a CMV that: Has a Gross Vehicle Weight Rating or registration of 26,000 pounds or more, either by itself or in combination with towed vehicles in excess of 10,000 pounds; Is designed or modified to transport 16 or more passengers, including the driver; or Is used in the transportation of hazardous materials requiring the vehicle to be placarded under 49 CFR, Part 172, Subpart F.

(Certain persons, however, are exempted from the CDL, such as farmers under many circumstances, firefighters/emergency vehicle drivers, military vehicles, and recreational vehicles driven for personal use.)

We must emphasize that drivers needing this new CDL complete their testing and obtain this license THIS YEAR. We anticipate a large group of individuals who will wait until the deadline to come into our offices-at that time, it will be "First come, first served" and we wish to avoid having to turn people away.

To encourage this early testing, a "rebate" is being offered-the cost for issuance of the CDL is $40.00, but $4.00 will be deducted for each full year left on the existing license. In addition, the Department will go "off-site" and test at your location if a group of 15 or more drivers to be tested can be organized.

If you are affected by this new law, please allow us to assist you in obtaining a CDL. If you have any questions concerning this, or wish to set up off-site group testing at your location, contact your local Driver License office (in Lubbock, call 747-4491). Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely,
G.D. Riplett, Sergeant

Revolutionize Beef Grading With Ultrasound

In 1984, a commercial and a presidential campaign made the question "where's the beef?" a part of the American vernacular. Now, a team of Texas A&M researchers may revolutionize beef grading by answering the question of where the fat is.

Ultrasound waves, long a part of human medical diagnosis, should soon be used to determine marbling and possibly tenderness of beef, said Dr. Dale Whittaker, associate professor at Texas A&M's department of agricultural engineering.

The technology may help inspectors grade beef more quickly and consistently, as well as improve cattle breeding and food safety.

Although the beef industry has used ultrasound for three decades to predict the amount of sellable beef in animals, it was unable to determine how much of an animal's fat was intra-muscular, how much was subcutaneous and how much was seam fat.

The composition of each type of fat is the same, but subcutaneous fat is below the skin of an animal and is the portion trimmed off the outside of meat cuts. Seam fat is deposits between muscles and is also trimmed when possible.

However, it is the intra-muscular fat or marbling --small deposits of fat within muscle--that helps blend the various "tones" making up desirable flavors of beef, said team member Dr. Rhonda Miller, an A&M assistant professor of animal science.

Consumer taste tests indicate a desire for between 3 and 7 percent fat in meat products, Miller said.

Some Americans are willing to give up some palatability for beef with 3 percent fat and a slightly more "bloody" or "grainy" tone, she said. Others prefer higher levels of cooked beef fat, but above the 7 percent level, many consumers perceive a greasy "feel" and flavor, she said.

Grading of beef depends on subjective visual inspections of the fat on a cut surface. Highly marbled beef is particularly prized in Japan, for example.

Now, a team led by Whittaker, Miller and Dr. Dan Hale has found how to ascertain whether fat is located in the muscle or around it, and Texas A&M is currently seeking a patent on the technology. Hale is a meat specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in A&M's animal science department.

The three were assisted by six others from Texas A&M's departments of agricultural engineering and animal science, as well as the Extension Service and A&M's Non-Destructive Testing Laboratory.

The team's work depended on finding the proper mix of sound frequencies to send into meat through a transducer, a contact on the ultrasound device which receives and records sound waves.

Muscle and fat absorb or reflect waves of varying frequency at different rates. The sound waves reflected to the transducer were analyzed by computer to determine proportions and types of muscle and fat.

Oddly enough, Whittaker has used information from medical literature to develop ultrasound techniques for beef analysis. Because beef was the cheapest and most ethically acceptable tissue for testing, it was used to develop parameters for ultrasound use on humans, Whittaker said.

Fat is also a factor in tenderness, but accounts for only about a third of the variability in a meat product's tenderness. Other factors include the way an animal is aged, the way meat is cooked, and the amount and structure of collagen (or gristle), which is what binds muscle fibers together, Whittaker said.

Whittaker eventually would like to use ultrasound to help determine tenderness by evaluating collagen content in meat.

"That would probably be the largest contribution we could make," Whittaker said. He said that while he has been able to determine the best way to apply a transducer for fat determination, he needs to tune transducers differently to detect collagen.

Collagen and fat will be chemically extracted by Miller and other researchers, and an analysis of the beef composition will then be correlated with Whittaker's frequency readings.

In addition, Whittaker said, medical researchers recently have found ways to use ultrasound to determine elasticity of tissues, and he thinks the approach may have applications in the area of determining meat tenderness.

The technique is used medically to find cancerous cells, which become harder than the cells surrounding them but have the same acoustical characteristics.

If ultrasound could be used to help determine both taste and tenderness of meats, instrument grading could supplement or possibly even replace visual meat grading, Whittaker said.

He said food safety would then be improved, because carcasses wouldn't need to be cut for visual inspection before processing, thus lessening meat exposure to microorganisms. Instrument grading should also be less expensive and more reliable, he said.

In addition, Whittaker said, "If you can determine fat and tenderness in live animals, you can go a long way to determining quality traits for selective breeding."

Chlordimeform Selected By Environmental Success Index

A model pesticide collection and disposal program, funded by CIBA-GEIGY's Agricultural Division and NOR-AM and carried out in cooperation with government agencies in seven states, has received national recognition.

The cooperative program to collect a cancelled cotton pesticide, chlordimeform, has been selected for listing in the 1991 Environmental Success Index. Other organizations and companies will use the Environmental Success Index as a resource when planning similar operations.

Cotton growers have been prohibited from using chlordimeform (marketed under the names Galecron and Fundal) were faced with the complicated and expensive task of properly disposing of it. Because liquid chlordimeform is ignitable, it is classified as hazardous waste.

"The collection program solved this problem for farmers, and provided a way for us to be sure the product was properly disposed of," says John Stone, CIBA-GEIGY's manager of environmental safety and compliance.

CIBA-GEIGY and NOR-AM bought back 65,500 pounds of leftover chlordimeform from farmers, averting potential environmental hazards which could have resulted from illegal and unsafe storage, use, and/or disposal of the product. The companies collected the material in cotton growing states including Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas.

A key element of the program was the agreement by state and federal officials to temporarily allow farmers to transport chlordimeform to designated drop-off sites without the paperwork and regulatory procedures usually associated with materials classified as hazardous waste. CIBA-GEIGY, NOR-AM and state agencies then worked in close cooperation to collect, transport and dispose of the chlordimeform in full compliance with hazardous waste regulations. The manufacturers bore all costs associated with the recovery program.

"The Texas Department of Agriculture was delighted with the success of last year's chlordimeform collection. The department believes that CIBA-GEIGY acted responsibly by initiating the recall of this cancelled product," says Alvin Ashorn, assistant commissioner for regulatory affairs.

"By purchasing unopened containers of chlordimeform and managing disposal for all of the product received, CIBA-GEIGY, along with NOR-AM, helped alleviate potential environmental, health and financial problems for numerous Texas cotton farmers," he says.

The Environmental Success Index is compiled by Searching for Success, a national campaign to identify, reward and promote successful environmental programs.

The announcement of Environmental Success Index programs is being made at the Searching for Success National Environmental Leadership Conference in Washington, D.C. in cooperation with the U.N. World Environment Day.

Lifestyles Changes Aid In Preventing Urinary Tract Infections

Millions of women with urinary tract infections can prevent recurrent bouts by making simple changes in their lifestyles.

"If a woman has a urinary tract infection, she has a 25 percent chance of having another one," said Dr. M'Liss A. Hudson, an assistant professor of urology at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. "Active women who empty their bladder infrequently, such as once in the morning and once at night, are especially susceptible."

A urinary tract infection can affect the kidneys and the bladder, which forms and excretes urine. Bacteria spread from the rectum through the urethra, a tube that carries urine, to the bladder or through the ureters to the kidneys, causing inflammation. Bacteria quickly travels to the bladder because the female urethra is considerably shorter than the male urethra.

Hudson said women can lower their risk of repeated urinary tract infections by following these simple steps:

- Drink plenty of fluids daily and urinate when the need arises.
- Urinate before and after sexual intercourse.
- Wear cotton panties, which allow air circulation and prevent the moist environment that harbors bacteria growth.
- Avoid wearing tight-fitting clothes, such as pantyhose and jeans, which may rub in the vaginal area and avoid extended wearing of a wet bathing suit.
- Wear sanitary napkins instead of tampons, which may partially obstruct the urethra.
- Avoid foods such as coffee, tea, chocolate and spices that upset the stomach and may irritate the bladder.

"Some women drink orange juice or cranberry juice to prevent infection," Hudson said. "Although the acid in these juices impedes bacteria growth in the urine, it is not always the best answer." She suggests women drink six to eight glasses of water per day to flush the urinary tract and take a vitamin C tablet three times daily.

One in five women suffers from multiple symptoms associated with urinary tract infections.

"People with kidney infections usually experience fever, chills, back and stomach pain and nausea," Hudson said. "People with bladder infections often feel the urge to urinate and feel a burning or stinging sensation while urinating."

Urinary tract infections are more common among women than men; high-risk groups include pregnant women, sexually active women, diabetics and post-menopausal women.

Eighteen percent of pregnant women may develop kidney infection, increasing the risk of low birth weight and premature babies. "This can result in the risk of spreading the bacteria to an unborn child via the bloodstream. Preventive antibiotics are relatively safe for pregnant women and may provide the best defense against recurrent infection in some cases," Hudson said.

Antibiotics are also effective in combatting "honeymoon cystitis," bladder infection related to sexual intercourse. These drugs destroy bacteria present in the vagina and urinary tract. They should be taken regularly before or after sexual activity.

Women who take antibiotics should have their urine rechecked while on and after they have taken the drugs to ensure successful treatment.

"Even the smallest amount of bacteria can start a new infection," Hudson said. "Take the necessary steps to prevent bacteria on the skin from spreading to the urinary tract."

Great joys, like griefs, are silent.

Summer camps in Texas can be compared to little cities, which must meet all the sanitation and safety needs of the campers.

This season the Texas Department of Health (TDH) will regulate more than 500 summer camps through its licensing and inspection program.

As might be expected, TDH inspectors will check for safe drinking water supplies, adequate garbage and sewage disposal facilities and sanitary food service operations. But the inspectors also ensure that the camps meet the specific standards of the Texas Youth Camp Safety and Health Act.

"The Act specifies that camp activities such as swimming, archery, horseback riding and riflery must be conducted by experienced counselors whose qualifications are on record at the camp," said Travis Mansell, a chief sanitarian with the TDH Youth Camp Program.

"Also, each camp must have an infirmary or first-aid facility to handle health and emergency cases," he said.

The infirmary must keep a health record on every child and a physician must be on call at all times. Any serious accident, illness, or death must be reported to the camp inspection program.

Food-or water-borne diseases, such as dysentery, salmonellosis, shigellosis or infectious hepatitis, must be reported immediately.

Recently, the 72nd Texas Legislature passed a bill amending the Texas Youth Camp Safety and Health Act by establishing standard license renewal fees and allowing administrative fines for violators.

Under the new law, camp operators can be assessed an administrative penalty not to exceed $100 per day if the Commissioner of Health, following a hearing, finds them in violation of the law. Violators also may be subject to a fine of $50 to $1,000 in civil penalties.

In addition, the bill establishes a nine-member Youth Camp and Health Advisory Committee under the Texas Board of Health.

America the Beautiful...

From the time that Columbus discovered America men have thought of this country as something special. It was here that Ponce de Leon sought the Fountain of Youth, and men have long admired America's majestic mountains and beautiful valleys. However, the real beauty lies not in the land, but in the people. The people came seeking a land where they could worship God in freedom, and under God developed a kind and loving spirit. This is what makes America beautiful.

Attend church regularly... help keep America beautiful

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.
