Who's Fault Is It?

By KATY BURLESON

I write this as a tax-paying citizen of Baird, and not as Editor of this newspaper. I direct all my statements to the official board of the City of Baird.

I am not pleased at the way the men are operating the business foundation of this city, in which I pay my taxes to help in its operation. I do not understand the workmanship of the City Councilmen. In this statement, I mean just this, the simplest of requests are left undone, the problems which I have brought up before has been left undone as if I had not made a contact at all.

The problems are the following: the dangerous intersections with tall Johnson grass, the pitiful road conditions that prevail throughout this city, the washed-out gaps in the middle of the streets, the gutters that never receive any attention, the uncovered pipes that are now exposed in the streets, which will create numerous problems in the winter, alleys that need grading so that residents may help clean, and help keep both front and back parts of their property looking neat, the vacant lots with old houses making that part of town unattractive, vacant lots with tall weeds, Market Street with weeds and grass growing out in the cracks in the cement, I will go on and say, it is kept like a ghost town. However, I know its not because of the dogs that run wild through the streets.

In the City of Baird, you do not know who to contact, you ask one, and he says, go tell some one else, you go to that person, and its the same story. I think its called "passing the buck." I think it is poor cooperation within the City Council, afraid to give an order and stand behind it 100 percent, afraid that someone will get mad.

I know that there are problems in operating a city, and I do not overlook the good these men have done, but I do expect more out of a city that can produce more and better things for its town and people. I realize that numerous calls are made to various members of this body of officials concerning various problems throughout the city, and if this certain problem had been taken care of properly, that call would not have been made.

Somewhere in our city the relationship has broken down between people and their fellowman, and we cannot succeed with out cooperation. We have the ability to make anything work, we could have a beautiful little town with just cooperation and wanting no credit for what we had accomplished.

The Board of Equalization for the City of Baird will meet on July 18th at 7:30 p. m. for the purpose of determining, fixing and equalizing the value of all taxable property within the City of Baird, and most people are green as just what this means. The only hope they have is, "I hope they don't raise my taxes, because I don't seem to be getting much for what I'm paying now." We sit at home and don't understand just what we are griping about, we don't know if our house is qualified in value in accordance with our neighbor, and we are at fault as citizens when we don't get behind this body of men and see they they are doing the job we elected them to do in the first place.

Where is the fault? I think it stands with every citizen in this town, because he or she is not doing their best to put their best foot forward. We sit at home, or go up and down the street saying what we are going to do, or what he or she should do, but for some reason it never gets done. For the sake of our town and community let's take a stand on something, back it to the fullest and make it successful. This wishy-washy attitude is killing our town and we as citizens need very much to have it corrected.

Born Sept. 1, 1891 in Minerva, she was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Ferguson Edwards. She married Will Cutbirth in October, 1937 in Eastland. She came to Callahan County in 1902 and settled in the Eula community. She moved to Clyde from their ranch home in 1968. Her husband, who died in July, 1971, was a longtime Callahan County rancher. She was a member of the Nazarene Church.

NEW SHAPES - COLORS MAKEUP TEXAS HIGHWAY SIGNS

AUSTIN — Although the "new look" in highway signs is not as revolutionary as the miniskirt - Texas Highway Department engineers hope it will be as eye-catching.

In many cases, symbols, shapes and colors are substituted for words. It is hoped that this will give the message to motorists at a glance and remove language barriers.

The new symbol signs and pavement markings adopted by the Texas Highway Commission are from the revised "Manual on Uniform Traffic Control Devices" released by the Federal Highway Administration.

The new prohibitive signs are probably the most important. These signs all have a red circle with slash cutting diagonally through the center which means "DO NOT" or "NO." The symbol inside the circle shows what is prohibited.

The yellow diamond-shaped signs still stand for a warning, but some of the symbols showing hazards are new. In addition, most warning signs continue to have a word message, but the message is located under the sign on a plaque.

For example, the word message "MERGING TRAFFIC," is replaced by a black arrow being joined by a smaller black line. A plaque under the sign will have the word "MERGE." It is hoped this will minimize confusion as to which stream carries the merging traffic.

School signs are shaped like a schoolhouse, containing the silhouettes of two children on a yellow background.

Color is a key in the new system. Red indicates stop or prohibition; green shows movement permitted or gives directional guidance; blue signifies motorist services; yellow indicates general warning; and black on white is used for regulatory signs such as those for speed limits and for most guide and destination signs.

In addition, orange (new color in the Manual) will convey construction and maintenance warnings.

The shapes of the new signs are important. Diamond shaped signs signify warning; rectangular signs with longer vertical dimensions provide traffic regulation; rectangular signs with longer horizontal dimensions contain guidance information. An octagon always means stop and an inverted triangle means yield.

"WHEN LAST SEEN HE WAS STILL FLYING"

In the beautiful little cemetery at Baird, Texas, a reddish granite memorial stands in a family plot. It guards not the grave of the one whose name is chiseled on this everlasting piece of granite. It is an inarticulate stone erected in memory of a young Air Force lieutenant named Robert Walls. This young officer was lost on a combat mission over New Guinea in 1944. The inscription on this memorial stabs you awake and creates a reverie of gratitude for his life, sacrificed in the dark days of World War II.

It seems to me that this memorial says something to each of us today, for here on this rock is inscribed the words, "When last seen he was still flying." Who among us cannot visualize the courage and dedication of this young officer as he flew into the wild blue yonder to be swallowed up by the vast creeping jungle of vine and tree. His bones and his plane have long since bleached and mildewed into oblivion. The muffled drums' sad roll has beat this airman's last tattoo. Words carved in his memory may even surpass in motivation his full measure of devotion and the oblation of his life. "When last seen he was still flying." Rhetoric can neither add nor detract from the offering that Robert Walls gave to his country. The score has long been settled. The lengthening shadows of the years are drawing the blinds on those who knew him personally, and the comrades that flew with him. To try to fathom a measure of understanding of what was at stake in the conflict that cost him his life seems unimportant now. No discourse can explain the devotion and courage and what "When last seen he was still flying" meant to the young man from West Texas.

More important, what does "When last seen he was still flying" say to you and me today? Can these words inspire us when the motor is missing, the runway is obscure, and the clouds are thick? Can we keep flying? Every day we come in contact with individuals whose flaps are down, who are skimming the treetops of life with a throttle closed, and are heading for a crash landing. So often we want to say, "Raise the flaps - open the throttle - keep flying."

I paused in a ward recently in one of our mental hospitals and looked upon a pile of flesh that had once been a young and beautiful girl. Her life has been virtually destroyed by a hypodermic needle. This young lady had already decided that the navigation of life was rough and she had folded the map, turned off the engine and bailed out, depending on a parachute that was full of holes.

Recently, a person I know went home and put a bullet in her head. She had lost the radar of radiant living and, she struck the tent and faded away.

Day after day, we see marriages that break and splinter for the lack of effort. The prisons are full of those who missed the runway of right direction. Welfare rolls, skid row, flop houses, junkies, hippies, and others are testimonials to failure. Many can offer excuses, few will say - "When last seen we were still flying." Many are unwilling to pay the price that will enable them to glide over the ramparts of life.

Is there a refrain that can touch your heartstrings today? Is there a voice crying out that says, "Stretch yourselves." Is there one among us that cannot remember the time when the road was forked and the choice made affected our life? Are we thankful when we look back to those souls that influenced us to reach for the stars and keep flying?

It seems to me that America needs a sweeping revival of motivation. We need inspiration that says to the individual, "Fight one more round." Personally, I ask that I be numbered not among those meek souls that always stay in port. Let us be one who cries as the Biblical prophet of old, "Give me that mountain," - to challenge me, to enrage me, to determine me, to beat it, and to climb it. If that mountain is despair, grief, disappointment, let me always attack and let my scars always be in front.

Let us also remember that each individual must make an accounting. In the final analysis, it will not be the company, club, group, or even the family that will answer. No, it will be each of us, individually, with the ledger of our life and the ways we used it. It will be wonderful on that day, after our records have been checked, the ledger is closed, and we head down the road toward eternity, if that Man in the Tower is asked if He has us in the flight pattern, and He replies, "When last seen he was still flying."
