"GYPSEY PARTY" CAMPS AT HOME OF DR. EDWARDS

Last Tuesday evening sixty-five young people camped at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Edwards, for a most enjoyable social evening together. The guests came dressed as gypsies and the beautiful lawn was decorated to represent a gypsy camp. In a small tent at the side of the gypsy fortune teller prophesied the future of those who wished to know their fate. Various games were played by the gypsies but perhaps the most interesting was the watermelon feast or spoon race. Each couple with a watermelon and a spoon together tried to get the watermelon into the half of a big tin can. It is interesting to note that there seemed to be a tie between two couples. The prize for their effort was a prize. The evening was a success and a most enjoyable one. The guests were most cordial and the evening was most enjoyable. The guests were most cordial and the evening was most enjoyable.

SUNRISE-BREAKFAST PARTY GIVEN BY MRS. MASTERS

A sunrise breakfast party given by Mrs. W. J. Masters last Monday morning proved a most enjoyable occasion for all the guests who arose in time to attend. A luncheon was served in the Lea pasture and consisted of many tempting edibles. Every thing went well with the party makers until Mike undertook to secure blackberries but incurred the displeasure of a nest of bees. The bees put him to flight and he fled with several bees on his face. The party was a success and a most enjoyable one.

CLAIMS DISCOVERY OF COPPER TEMPERING

A New York glass blower, Walter Bunton, claims to have discovered what was thought to have been a lost art, that of tempering and hardening copper. He has offered his discovery to the United States Steel Corporation and if his method makes good, copper in many instances will be substituted for steel. This, of course would effect the steel market and in turn effect the commerce of the world. Messrs S. M. Clonts, L. N. Bridges, W. H. Vazey and Jim Humobries accompanied the boys of the Methodist church on a fishing trip from Monday till Wednesday of this week and report a great time and that they had all the fish they could eat.

CHURCH OF CHRIST WILL BEGIN REVIVAL MEETING

Rev. U. R. Forrest, of Stamford, a minister of the Church of Christ, will begin a revival meeting in the Christian church of this city on Thursday night, August 25th. A special singer has been engaged for the occasion and a good meeting is expected. Everyone is cordially invited to attend the services. Rev. J. W. Hawkins closed his revival at the Rochester church last Sunday, with about five professions and recommitments. There were forty additions to the Methodist church. A revival of the church is also a gratifying feature of the meeting.

HERRING CHILD INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Lattie J. B. Herring, age five years, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Herring, received a painful injury last Saturday afternoon when in attempting to cross the street he was struck by a moving car being driven by Z. A. Hamack and although the car stopped almost instantly the child's body breaking his leg. The accident was unavoidable as the car was parked so thick that it was impossible to have seen the child. In any case that he took across the street he is recovering nicely at this time, however, and we hope will soon be among his playmates again. The accident was greatly regretted by Mr. Herring who is a driver of long standing although this is his first accident.

WHAT A HOUSE-KEEPER EARNS BUT NEVER GETS

She never "earned" any money. She lives on an Ohio farm, but she lives on almost every other farm. She is somebody's mother, maybe your own. She has earned nothing. No, but her thirty working years, she has served 432,983 meals; she has made 3,123 garments, 32,000 loaves of bread, 5,930 cakes, 7,932 pies, 1,5000 gallons of lard, she has grown 1,432 bushels of vegetables and 1,550 quarts of all kinds of fruits; she has raised 7,660 chickens, churned 5,430 pounds of butter, put up 3,625 jars of preserves, scrubbed 177,725 pieces of laundry, and she has put in 35,589 hours of sweeping and washing and scrubbing. At accepted prices for this work it is worth $115,485.50. She can't retire on her savings—she has to keep on. Not earning! agriculture. These studies bear out the general impression that on the average the farmers' families have an abundant diet, with enough different kinds of food to insure their obtaining all the substances necessary to keep them in health. In mere matter of bulk the farm families received 19 pounds of food per day, in comparison with the average for all families, which eat only 14.12 pounds. What any family eats depends on what it has to choose from, what its members happen to like and dislike, and what it can afford. Local products were much more important before the days of quick transportation than at present. Difference in the tradition of the various nationalities that have settled in this country have caused local difference in diet. Much the same kinds of foods can be produced throughout the Middle Atlantic States, but the early "Pennsylvania Dutch" settlers tried to use American material as they had used similar ones in Germany. Thus dishes typical of their sections came to be quite different from those of their neighbors from England or Holland. These regional differences are decreasing to some extent because of the increased use of food products from other sections. Bananas from the West Indies, lemons and oranges from California and Florida, canned corn from Main, sweet potatoes from New Jersey, cheese from Wisconsin, maple syrup from Vermont, flour from Minnesota, and crackers or breakfast foods made anywhere and sold in most small towns at reasonable prices, India succotash, Dutch crullers, Italian macaroni, German sauerkraut, and Spanish pimiento are common foods whose names betray their various foreign origins. Whether the food was well cooked and attractively served, the studies do not show. The fact that almost twice as much cooking fat was used by the...

Wow! Congress has at least struck a proposition which the press dispatches state is being seriously considered. A movement has been started under the guise of "shifting the burdensome taxes from the people" by permitting the manufacture of beer with 2 3-4 per cent alcohol. A tax of $10 per barrel would be levied on this beverage, which it is estimated would amount to a billion dollars per annum. But back to the analysis of the proposition. Will some one kindly show us where this would be "shifting the burdensome taxes from the people?" Won't it be the people who consume the beer and in so doing will they not only pay for the beverage but pay the tax in addition? Of course imbibing about 100,000,000 barrels of 2-3-4 per cent will might put them in a better tax paying humor or might make them pay less attention to it but they would be paying the tax just the same. The government does not seem to be making any serious effort to reduce taxes but are trying desperately to find some way to shift the people's attention from them even though they have to appeal to their appetite to do so. The wise men have learned that a great many people will buy drink no matter what over head tax is put upon it and they have come to the conclusion that the only plan is to simply because he won't vote for war-time salaries long after war-prices on all commodities have disappeared? Is a man who protests against the high rates being charged by the railroads an enemy of transportation? Would you expect the business man who says that he is paying too much freight expected to be anxious for the roads to pull up their rates and leave the country? The merchant is obliged to have transportation and he knows it, but he is entirely within his rights when he demands that service at a fair and equitable price. So with the college and University men and all others of whatever profession. A man cannot set a safety valve on his intelligence and say "this much for $3,000 and that much for $5,000. His ability is the same, it is merely a price adjustment that is sought. The University professor who will contend for his salary to remain at the par level when the producer and tax payer is experiencing the greatest depression in a life time, is not a fair man the sooner he departs the profession the better off it will be.

With every state administration has arisen a penitentiary scandal and the present one has proven no exception. It would appear now that no system under the direct control of the political ring can ever be relied upon to maintain a humanitarian management of that institution. In the first place the inmates of the pen are not altogether susceptible to uplift or moral reformation. Many of them are hardened criminals to whom any reform method is repulsive, and many times harsh treatment has to be resorted to in order to break the spirit of the more obdurate. When a man becomes a prisoner in the penitentiary he is given a chance to reform, and if to no avail, the only recourse is to treat him as an outlaw and enemy of his race and force him to do sufficient work no matter how unwilling, to pay for his board and upkeep.

Line is well supplied in milk. The is probably a fair proportion of iron, amines, and indigestible bulks though the margin of safety for these would be greater with more eggs, more coarse cereals; and a greater variety of vegetables and fruits, especially more green vegetables.

Does Not Rust.
The attention several school children called to a corner waiting for a car. A man invited them to sit on his car to wait for the car to be repaired. The conversation soon turned to the color of a certain girl's hair. He asked if it was red, another that it was Auburn, and another that it was brown.
At the height of the discussion two children entered the office. As soon as they understood the nature of the argument, one of the youngsters exclaimed:
"Oh, shucks! Her hair ain't red, it's brown!"—Indianapolis News.

Great California Industry.
Nearly a million acres are planted to the fruit trees that supply the canneries of California, according to Kilton R. Gray in an article in the Old Colony Magazine, the organ of the Old Colony Club. Statistics tell us that of the 100,000,000 acres of land in the state of California, about 900,000 are devoted to fruit trees; so it is easily conceivable that the fruit-canning industry is no small part of the general industrial activities of the "Golden State."

Perfidious Albion.
The phrase "Albion perfide" (perfidious Albion) is generally attributed to Napoleon, who undoubtedly used it, though the idea long antedated the great emperor. Thus Perlin in his "Description des Royaumes d'Angleterre et d'Ecosse" (1588), says: "One may say of the English that in war they are not strong, and in peace they are not faithful." The Spaniard says: "Anglaterra buena tierra mala gente." "England, good country, bad people). On the other hand Francois Maximilien Nisson, the noted French writer, who had lived among the English many years while in exile, and knew the people well, says in his "Travels" (1719): "I cannot imagine what could occasion the notion that I have frequently observed in France that the English were treacherous. It is certainly great injustice to reckon treachery among the vices familiar to the English."

Announcement

We find it necessary to close our business for a period of 60 or 90 days. This does not mean that cream will be shipped from Knox City. We have made arrangements with The Harlan Grocery Co. to receive the cream this week and next, and a letter will be sent to each cream producer as soon as permanent arrangements have been made for its handling. Speed up your production, you can, raise all the poultry you can, and in the near future we will be back with you again.

The Grocery people will buy the eggs you bring in.

A FISH STORY

Fisherman: "When I was out the other day I hooked the finest bass I ever saw. I had to play him for thirty minutes and just as I was lifting him into the boat he got away. It nearly broke my heart, he was such a beauty—weighed just six and a quarter pounds."

"How do you know what he weighed," spoke up a friend, "you say he got away?"

Fisherman: "Why, by the SCALES on his back."

Now if we were all like this bass we wouldn't need the stock of scales we are now carrying. We have a scale for every need, and a good scale is often needed, and always a good investment.

The Credit System

The credit system is one of the greatest evils that the laboring man has to contend with. It tempts him with its alluring deceptive bait, and chains himself—a slave.

He can build a fine house, or buy a fancy carriage, own a new piano like neighbor B's, by simply giving his note to be paid next year, and the desire overrules his better judgement. In an evil hour he allows the trap to be sprung upon him, with a load of interest bearing down upon him he struggles on, growing fainter and fainter beneath the burden, and when the time payment arrives he is no better able to pay the debt than he was the day it was contracted.

The interest eats into his prosperity like a corroding cancer and gradually takes away everything he can earn above what is absolutely necessary for his family. The financial horizon looms up dark and threatening. An hour of Adversity happens and the crash comes. His property is sold under the hammer at less than half its value and he is turned out upon a cold world, penniless destitute. In many instances the shock of transition from affluence to pauperism is more than his mind can bear, and he finds relief in a suicide's grave.—Bonham Favorite.

LIGHT ON ANCIENT HISTORY

Some Interesting Data Bearing on the Strange People Known to Fame as the "Aeifs."

Evidently some one who had eaten a great deal of army corned beef in Europe wrote this amusing skit in the "Watch on the Rhine," remarks the Youth's Companion. The piece is headed, "Documents Published in the Year 2473 A. D., by an American Historian":

I have just been journeying along the Rhine gathering data on the ancient tribe of men known as the Aeifs. The origin of this strange people is one of the great mysteries of history. Likewise their sudden extinction has been just as baffling.

The Aeifs appeared in western Europe very suddenly about the time of the beginning of the Teutonic dark ages—the latter part of the second decade of the Twentieth century. For a short period they flooded in great numbers the entire territory of Gaul from the Pyrenees to the Rhine. Then they suddenly vanished.

It was recently thought that a clue had been found to the kind of food eaten by these nomads. In an old mine at Andernach there were found at first looked like peculiarly shaped bricks, but what later proved to be cans of a strange sort of meat. Certain investigators soon decided that this could be nothing other than elephant meat, and students were about to make trips to Africa in search of further evidence, when the result of some chemical tests was published. This showed that the meat was at least 1007 years old, and as the Aeifs were in Gaul about 550 years before Christ, it is believed that this store of food belonged to them. It is much more probable that it was left there at the time Hannibal and his soldiers and elephant supply trains made their long expedition against Rome.

It is probably a good thing for the Aeifs that the mysterious disappearance of the Aeifs came about, for there is plenty of evidence that this barbaric race was planning to invade North America and establish a permanent settlement.

The tubes are designed to be benzyl iodide, tear-gas stuff, or any other suitable chemical which when it expands, is calculated to asphyxiate the robber or at least get him to flight. Bulbous expansions of the tubes furnish containers for the deadly material.

The robber has only to start something by setting off a charge of explosives. The concussion breaks the tubes; out flows the lethal chemical, and the business of burglary interests the nocturnal bandit no more for that occasion.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Beat Them to It.

An Irvington man planted several hills of bantam sweet corn in an isolated part of his garden to grow seed for next year. He remarked to a neighbor woman about the time that "the blackbirds and sparrows had not succeeded in finding his seed corn this year." The woman, "smirning" after making this remark, he found about forty blackbirds, near sunset, busy devouring his corn. He "beat" them away and that evening pulled all the ears and put them away for safe keeping. The next morning he looked out to see whether any blackbirds were on hand. Sure enough an immense flock was sitting on the ground at the base of the now barren stalks looking at each other and around. The puzzled look on their "countenances," he says, was unobscured in the extreme.—Indianapolis News.

Elevated to Bishopric.

Seldon has there been discovered a more clever and effective device for spreading the gospel than that arranged by wise old Bishop Amator of Armoria. He evolved a scheme which promised the linking of the Church with the powerful state.

Catching Governor Germannus in church one day, the bishop slipped up behind that official. A pass with one hand and he had snipped off the gubernatorial locks; a pass with the other hand, and a bishop's robe was slipped over the tonsured dome. Before the governor could say the American equivalent for "Jack Robinson," he was informed that the Bishop Amator had resigned and that he was ordained in his stead.

French Hostess Houses Closed.

Because of the small number of visitors to the American cemeteries in France during the cold months, the hostess houses maintained by the American Red Cross and the Y. W. C. A. at Bonn, Fern-en-Tardenois and Belleau woods, for the comfort of parents and friends who are visiting the graves, are closed this winter. The house near Romagne, at the Argonne, the largest of the American cemeteries, will remain open, if the need is renewed in the spring the houses will open again. Hundreds of American travelers who have visited the graves have been taken care of in these small houses, the only quarters affording meals, restrooms or any traveling comforts near the cemeteries.

HAVE KEEN EYE FOR DANGER

Hunter Asserts That It is Practically Impossible to Surprise the Mountain Sheep.

"The mountain sheep is one of the most difficult of all our American game to approach in the open," says Charles L. Smith in an article on the "Rocky Mountain Sheep" in Boys' Life. "It has eyes like a telescope for keenness and can discover and make out a man farther away than any other animal of which I have any knowledge, and there is considerable herd life in feeding one will see usually several others standing on some prominent point where they can get a view of the surrounding country. I know of no more inspiring sight than one of those old rams with his massive horns outlined against the sky, standing as motionless as a statue. And it is a wonder to the hunter how they get across the rock slopes with such ease and grace. There has been much written of the mountain sheep, of its wonderful feats of springing from ledges and lighting upon its head and horns, which is without foundation in fact. While it is true they can stand an immense shock in falling, yet if one of those sheep weighing 300 pounds should drop from a ledge of any considerable height and land on his head his neck would be broken. I spent several years in the sheep country in the Canadian Rockies and was near the sheep or among them during all seasons of the year and they seem to be less sensitive to the rigors of winter and the ever-changing elements of the high altitudes than any other animal except possibly the mountain goat, and of these animals I think they have the advantage, because I have a number of times found mountain goats yarded in the deep snow in places where food was scarce, but I have never yet found mountain sheep in this condition."

Immense Herds of Caribou.

Late arrivals at Vancouver, B. C., from the Yukon, report that wandering herds of caribou are appearing in immense numbers on the banks of that river. They declare there are millions of the animals. Two men who tried to get down the river just at the time of the first ice were held up for three hours by a multitude of caribou which were crossing the river below them. How long the migration had been going on when they were stopped they did not know. The stream of animals bisected the water on a space one-half mile wide and continued unintercepted during the period the men were held up.
