FRUIT AND BERRY CROP BRINGING GOOD PRICES

The fruit and vegetable crops are bringing money to the growers of Callahan County. This is the first good fruit year we have had for several years and it is bringing a good price. Peaches are selling fast at 75cents and $1.00 per bushel and are being hauled away to other places in truck load lots. The Clyde Enterprise last week reported one man said that a thousand bushels of peaches could have been sold in Clyde last week.

The berry crop has been fine, the best we have had for a long time and the market has been good; berries selling from 25 to 35 cents per gallon. More than 400 gallons were picked from one half acre patch at Clyde this season, and others are in proportion. J. F. Browning, who lives three miles west of Baird, on the Highway, has at 75 cents and $1.00 per bushel and a fine strawberry patch of about 1 1/2 acres. He began picking berries from this patch on April 16th and has picked about the last of the berries. He has gathered 129 crates, or about 3000 pint boxes of berries, which were sold at a little above 10 cents per pint which brought him the neat sum of $325.65 from the 1 1/2 acres of berries. In addition to what was sold Mrs. Browning has made 85 pints of strawberry jam for the family use. Mr. Browning also has a fine apple orchard.

In addition to the peach and berry crop the plums, apricots, apples and all kinds of fresh vegetables are being sold on the market. The tomato and the melon and cantaloupe crops are growing fine and promise a fine yield. Never before in the history of Callahan county was there a more bountiful yield of fruits and vegetables and our people are preparing to save for future use that which is not sold now for from every home comes the report that canning of fruit and vegetables is the order of the day. In some places Community Canning Clubs are being organized to take care of the surplus fruit and vegetables.

There are a number of young orchards of Delicious apples around Clyde, which are reported to be heavily loaded with fruit this year. The Delicious Apples, of the Clyde country have always brought a fancy price.

The grain crop is being harvested and the yield and quality of grain is fine in most places. The harvesting has been delayed some on account of so much rain, but the past few days of sunshine has been fine and hundreds of acres of grain have been cut.

Boatwright and Miss Bessie Mae Gillit, of Mission, who have been visiting here for the past three weeks, left Tuesday for their home in Mission, down in the Magic Rio Grande Valley, where the Boatwright's have one of the finest farms in the valley, which Mr. Boatwright was anxious to get back to. Mrs. Boatwright health continues to improve and they have spent a most pleasant three weeks with their children, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Boatwright and family Mrs. Lenora Boatwright and family and their many old friends here. Miss Gillit spent the time with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Gillit.

On last Saturday night a large number of old friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Boatwright, down on Deep Creek where several hours were spent in listening to Mr. Boatwright play his 'fiddle', which he has been playing for more than a half century. Jennings, pitching for the Coyotes was right Sunday, allowing the Ranger crew only seven safeties, which were well scattered—and striking out 12 men.

Vernon has the leading hitter for the Coyotes, getting four hits out of six times at the bat, while Young, Bell R. Ray, Thompson and Jennings got two hits each.

NEXT SUNDAY, the Coyotes will play the Radford Grocery Team from Abilene. The game will start promptly at three-thirty. Lets all be down and root for the Coyotes.

Howesley Candidate For State Senator, Spoke in Baird Saturday

Andrew M. Howesley, candidate for State Senate, from the 24th District, was a visitor in Callahan County last week, meeting the voters. He spoke to a large crowd in Baird, Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

A large crowd heard the Albany man on Market Street in Baird.

Howesley, following preliminary remarks concerning his candidacy took up various timely questions in which the people of the State and this section are interested. He directed the attention of the audience especially to the work he had done in trying to reduce the governmental expenditures of our State Government, citing the passage of the bills in the House of Representatives of which he is a member, reducing the expense of State Government over a Million Dollars. As the author of these bills he secured the passage of them in the House, but they were killed in the Senate. "Give me a chance in the Senate and I will make the same fight there that I made in the House, and I believe I can get results", Howesley said.

He said the issue in this campaign was that of a reduction in governmental costs and in this connection invited the people to investigate his record, "Believeng," he said, "it will disclose that I have done my utmost in the interest of the tax payers of my State."

It was the fifteenth speech Howesley has made in his campaign until the 23rd day of July.

Mr. Howesley made a most favorable impression on the people of the county and he was delighted with the reception given him in Baird Saturday. Mr. Howesley was accompanied by Rev. J. T. Ray, former pastor of the Methodist Church here, who is now pastor at Albany.

Mr. Howesley's name will be found in our Announcement Column, this week.

Rodeo Draws Big Crowd Here Sat.

The Free Rodeo again drew a big crowd to Baird last Saturday, the crowd being estimated to be as large as on the two previous occasions.

There were a large number of participants in the different events, and the crowd was given many thrills.

Many candidates for county and District offices attended the rodeo, which gave them an opportunity to meet voters from every part of the county.

Some Street Improvement Here This Week

For some months Third Street leading east from Market Street has been in bad condition, the ditches and culverts being filled up so that the surplus water could not drain off. H. Schwartz, W. O. Wylie and W. G. Bowls, who own the property on the south side of the street in this block decided that they would fix this block up at their own expense, so on Monday morning, J. W. Hammons, Commissioner of Precinct No. 1, was asked to come down and superintend the grading of the street, which he did, and opened up all culverts and ditches leading out and put the street in that block in good condition and ready for a topping of chat which is being put on by Jess Walker, and son Charlie. A culvert has been put in on the north side of the street at the alley, back of the Shaw Motor Co., to carry the drainage on east, and the entire expense of this work has been paid by Messers Schwartz, Bowls and Wylie, the city was not out one dime on the work and these enterprising citizens are to be commended for their progressive spirit. May others of our citizens seeing the effect of their good work, do likewise and we will soon find our streets in good condition.

Judge M. S. Long Announces for Re-election as District Judge

JUDGE M. S. LONG

Judge M. S. Long announces this week as a candidate for reelection to the office of District Judge of the 42nd Judicial District.

Judge Long has served the people of this district for the past five years and has made one of the best District Judges we have ever had, or ever will have.

To the voters of the 42nd Judicial District of Texas:

For more than five years I have served the people of the 42nd Judicial District of Texas as their District Judge, having served about two years under appointment and the larger portion of the term under election. I am deeply thankful to the people for their many courtesies and cooperation extended to me during the time I have held such office, and appreciate their support in the last election. During the time I have been in office I have endeavored to administer the affairs of the office upon the following principals:

1 To give all parties in both civil and criminal cases a fair and impartial trial alike under the law as interpreted by me and under the evidence.

2 To bring to trial as swiftly and promptly as possible all criminal cases in the District, having due regard for the rights of both the State and the Defendant.

3 To cooperate with grand jurors, sheriffs, chiefs of police and other peace officers in the District, in assisting them in any way I could in performing their various duties and enforcing the law of the country.

4 To treat with kindness and consideration all jurors who appeared before the Court for jury service.

5 To administer the affairs of the office economically and in a business like manner.

During my tenure in office I have tried in Callahan County 287 cases, consisting of 167 civil cases and 120 criminal cases. Of this number thirty-three have been appealed, eight have been reversed and twenty-five have been affirmed.

Upon the principles outlined above and the record as shown by the Minutes of the District Court of Callahan, Shackelford and Taylor Counties, I announce my candidacy for re-election to this office and will greatly appreciate the support and influence of the voters of this District.

REVIEW FORCE FINDS SOMETHING NEW UNDER SUN: SNAKE IN TYPE

A case of type was "piled" and three printers and a pencil pusher were somewhat excited Thursday morning, when a big angry snake hopped out of a type case into their midst.

It was press day and things were moving fast until—someone opened a type drawer to set a line and the snake rose stiffly defying further intrusion.

Snakes in the grass are one thing and reptiles in type cases are another. Yet they say there is nothing new under the sun.

—Cross Plains Review.
May we ask what brand of "prune juice" the Review force drink that day.

With Baird Baptist

Well, the nice day Sunday enabled us to have good services for which we are truly thankful.

We are looking for another good day next Sunday. Let's every one be on hand for each service, with prayerful hearts and surely the Lord will give us a great time.

Sunday morning I will bring a Missionary message from the book of Revelation—it's there, and we will see if we can find it.

Sunday night, I mean to speak on "Soul Winning" and I shall discuss it from the view point of the Bible.

The joint Workers Meeting at Leuders Thursday and Friday of last week was splendid; good attendance and the spirit was fine, just as fine that we are going to try another one some time soon.

Thursday, we had our Monthly Meeting of the Callahan Workers, at Cottonwood—the rains made it hard for the people to get there and the crowd was small, but we had a mighty fine meeting.

We will have no other workers meeting before the meeting the association, which is to be Wednesday, the 2nd Sunday in September, at Cross Plains. The hour to meet, is 1:00 p. m. Let's all get ready for that. Come worship with us next Sunday.

Respectfully,
Joe R. Mayes.

THE PEOPLE OF TEXAS MUST DECIDE THE FATE OF TEXAS RAILROADS

● THE WELFARE of Texas and Texans has gone and will always go hand in hand with the welfare of Texas railroads. Their dependency upon each other is absolute.

In 1929 Texas railroads gave employment to 82,956 employees, to whom they paid annually $126,674,543 in salaries and wages. In 1930 this number decreased to 70,739 while the payroll declined to $109,892,226. In 1931 the number of employes fell to 57,098 and the payroll to $89,505,918.

This represents a decrease of more than $37,000,000 in purchasing power in Texas communities. There has been a corresponding decrease in purchase of materials and supplies by Texas railroads. The ability to have maintained railroad payrolls and purchases would have been a very important factor in overcoming the present trying economic condition.

The decline in railroad payrolls and purchases is due only in part to economic conditions. The revenues of the railroads have been affected not only by business conditions but to a very large extent by loss of traffic to trucks and buses using the public highways in competition with the railroads.

● The time has come when the people of Texas must decide whether the traffic of this state can best be carried by the railroads, using facilities which they built and maintain at their own expense, or by trucks and buses using the highways built and maintained at the taxpayers' expense.

THE TEXAS RAILROADS

Here's Simplified Cooking

Actually, cooking consists of only three fundamental operations: preparing the foods . . . putting them in the oven . . . and placing the meal on the table.

But so many more are required by old-fashioned methods! So much pecking, tasting and testing is necessary! So much time is wasted on these unnecessary, tiresome tasks!

With a modern Electric Range, cooking is reduced to its three fundamentals. You merely prepare your meal, place it in the oven, set the Time and Heat Controls, and forget the actual cooking! All the work is done automatically . . . requiring none of your time or attention—and leaving you free to enjoy happy leisure hours!

And this Freedom is only one advantage of modern Electric Cookery! Foods look better, taste better and are more healthful. In fact, there are so many advantages you'll wonder how you managed with old-fashioned, inefficient methods!

Call us for an individual investigation of your use of electric service, to determine the cost of cooking by electricity in your home. You may be surprised to know that there are many cases where electric cookery actually decreases the total of electric and gas bills.

MAN MADE THE TOWN

by RUBY M. AYRES

Diana, a young English girl, in love with Dennis Waterman, a married man, undergoes a nervous collapse and is sent to the country to recuperate under the care of Dr. Donald Rathbone, who lives near the cottage where she stays. She finds herself falling in love with the doctor, but still trying to hold Dennis' affection. Linda, Dennis' wife, tells her that she offered Dennis a divorce but he would not accept it; he would have felt compelled to marry Diana. Diana's love for Doctor Rathbone is tempered by jealousy of a woman named Rosalie, who lives in the doctor's house. At last Rathbone finds that he is deeply in love with Diana, but he confesses to her that Rosalie is his wife.

He had married her out of sympathy when her husband had been killed in the war. But Rosalie was hopelessly insane. Diana and Rathbone part, and a letter comes from Aunt Gladwyn calling Diana back to London.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

THIRTEENTH INSTALMENT

She could not quite fathom the relationship between Diana and the good-looking man whose voice made her own lonely heart turn over with such wistful memories. She had once thought . . . but, of course, that was too absurd; Rathbone would never seriously consider a child like Diana, though it was quite possible that she might have taken a wilful fancy to him. The Creature had known other cases where patients had temporarily fallen in love with the doctor who looked after them, but seldom came to anything.

Diana went out into the garden. She was full of curiosity to know what Dennis would say to her; she supposed cynically that there would be more lies and pretense.

He came quite early. The smart two-seater raced up the road and came to a standstill at the gate where last night . . . Diana could not pursue that memory. Last night was like some live creature waiting to pounce upon her directly she was off her guard and tear her in pieces.

She opened the gate and greeted Waterman with a smile. "You're an early bird," she said calmly.

She led the way and as soon as they were in the sitting room Waterman broke out:

"What became of you last night, Diana? I was worried to death. I thought something dreadful had happened. They told me at Palmeiro's that you had been and had left suddenly."

Diana met his eyes serenely. "Yes. I ran away," she said.

"Ran away? . . ."

"Yes, I found out that I didn't want to see you after all."

"What do you mean?"

"While I was waiting Linda came in. It was quite an accident—she was not spying on us."

"Linda? She went to Paris yesterday morning."

"She didn't; she was at Palmeiro's last night, and we had quite a little talk together."

She was quick to see the sudden suspicion in his eyes.

"It was Linda who made you change your mind," he said savagely.

Diana nodded.

He stared at her for a moment; then he broke out:

"I've told you again and again that you cannot pay any attention to what Linda says. She is a jealous woman."

"Oh, no; she's not in the least jealous of you OR of me, if that is what you mean," Diana said calmly. "I am not at all sure, Dennis, that you don't really like her a great deal better than she likes you."

"I don't understand what you mean. Whatever Linda told you, you can take it from me it is not the truth."

"Isn't it? Not when she said that she had offered to divorce you and that you refused? I think it is the truth, Dennis."

He took a step towards her. "It's a damned lie, Diana. You know I've told you scores of times that I would give anything I possess if only she would give me my freedom."

Diana smiled faintly. "I know you have," she agreed. "But THAT is a damned lie—not what Linda said."

She saw the dull colour rise slowly to his face, as she turned her eyes away.

She felt sick and ashamed; not for her own sake, but for his. She had once thought this man so splendid; there had been a time when she would have given him everything she possessed—body and soul—and it hurt her unthinkably to know that he was so unworthy—even of her! she told herself whimsically.

After a moment she looked at him again; in the last few minutes he seemed in some unaccountable way to have lost stature—to have grown ordinary.

"So I ran away," she said again. "And I shall never run back any more, Dennis."

She saw his lips move as he tried to speak, but he could find no words. Then suddenly he went down on his knees, encircling her with his arms, hiding his face against her.

"Don't send me away, Diana. . . I love you so. . . I'll do anything you want—anything in the wide world—if only you won't send me away."

Diana tore his hands from about her.

"It's too late," she said again, and then, breathlessly, "Don't make me hate you, Dennis."

He stood up, his face convulsed with agitation, but now she no longer pitied him: she was only conscious of that sick, ashamed feeling that was almost physical.

He went on pleading, imploring, reminding her of all they had been to one another—all they would yet be.

Diana put her hands over her ears. She felt that it was more than she could bear; she felt as if he were trying to strip her naked instead of trying to cover and protect her, as Rathbone would have done.

She said at last, brokenly: "If you only knew how you're hurting me."

He misunderstood that, eagerly grasping it as a sign that he was to be forgiven; he made the fatal mistake of trying to take her in his arms.

Diana fled away from him, putting the width of the little room between them, staring at him with wild eyes.

"Don't touch me—don't ever dare to touch me again!" she stammered.

They stood looking at one another as if they had been mortal enemies; then Waterman said thickly:

"If I go away now, Diana . . . I shall never come back."

Diana felt her lips twitching into a smile, but she repressed it and answered gently:

Waterman left the cottage with as much dignity as he could command. His conceit refused to allow him to admit defeat; he and Diana had quarrelled so often before, and she had always been sorry. Soon—to-morrow or the next day—there would come a letter from her. He knew so well what its contents would be.

Her last night there, she received a letter from Dr. Rathbone.

"My dear Miss Gladwyn:

"I saw Shurley this evening, and he tells me you are returning to London on Wednesday, so in case we do not meet again before then, and it is unlikely, seeing that during the next few days I shall be very busy, I want to impress upon you to take great care of yourself and not overtax your strength. I am afraid this will read rather like a homily, but you must put it down to my poor powers of expression rather than to any other cause. I want you always to look on the bright side and believe that life is very largely what we choose to make it, in spite of disappointments and sacrifices. I am preaching to myself as much as to you, seeing that we both have to learn our lessons in the same hard school.

"If I were an eloquent man there is so much I could say, but I know you will understand. Keep a brave heart, and keep well. Good-night once again, Diana.

"Yours ever,
"Donald Rathbone."

"P. S. I have added the postscript you spoke about on the other side."

Diana turned the page with a hand that trembled; her heart seemed to be turned to water, and there was a mist before her eyes so that for a little while she could hardly make out the last words he had written.

They were:

"I love once as I live once,
What case is this to think or talk about?
I love you."

CHAPTER XX

Diana's maid Anna drew the curtains back with a sharp little rattle, letting in the morning light.

She was still in London with Mrs. Gladwyn, as that lady had developed a sciatic pain and at the same had discovered a wonderful German masseuse who, so she declared, alone could cure it; so after all they had not gone to Scotland.

Six weeks . . .

Diana lay back on her pillows, letting the tea grow cold.

Six weeks—six months—six years—it was all the same.

Already she felt as if London separated her so completely from Miss Starling and the cottage that it seemed as if she could never really have been there, and at other times it seemed as if she were just in London marking time for some miracle to happen that would give her back the happiness for which she longed.

She had heard nothing of Rathbone since his letter: the letter to which she had written a dozen—twenty replies and destroyed them all.

What was the use of writing to him? He would not answer.

Miss Starling had departed for her pilgrimage to Normandy with fifty pounds in her pocket. She had written a pathetic note of gratitude to Diana and had sent her a picture postcard after her arrival, of the sea beating against a gigantic rock.

The Creature had shed a few tears when she said good-bye to Diana, and Jenny had wept copiously.

Diana had felt like weeping herself when she looked from the window of Mrs. Gladwyn's big Rolls to wave good-bye to her little group of friends: Mr. Shurey, Jonas, Miss Starling, Jenny, and one of two women from the neighboring cottages.

Since then life had gone on very much the same as before.

She had not seen Dennis Waterman again, but she had been told that he had followed his wife to Paris. Poor Linda!

Diana had heard who the gray-haired man was for whom she had been waiting that night at Palmeiro's. Mrs. Gladwyn had got the whole story complete before she had been back in London a couple of days.

"His name is Anthony Jevons," she informed Diana. "Apparently he and Linda Waterman have known one another for years."

"A married man?" Diana asked without much interest.

"His wife has been in a lunatic asylum for fifteen years," Mrs. Gladwyn said with relish. "I always think it is iniquitous, tying a man to a lunatic. This is a case where divorce is really justified—if it ever is," she added righteously.

"Perhaps he didn't want to divorce her," Diana said.

"Well, he is free at last, poor man," her aunt went on. "She died about two months ago, when the Watermans were in America, so I suppose the next thing we shall hear will be that there is a divorce there."

She looked at her niece sharply as she spoke, but Diana's face was indifferent.

Diana and Mrs. Gladwyn were dining at the Fosters' that night.

Diana had only consented to go under extreme pressure. She disliked Mrs. Foster: she was a "climber" of the most flagrant type who shamelessly "collected celebrities," and who scandalized them as soon as they had left her house.

Jonas had written her that Rathbone's house was up for sale, and Donald was going to live in America.

Diana permitted herself one moment of anguish.

"Oh, God, I can't bear it any longer," she said aloud.

She greeted her hostess with a vague smile and discovered her aunt comfortably seated in a big chair with a large cocktail and a plate of viand at her elbow.

Diana looked around the room without interest. The same old crowd one always met everywhere. Diana spoke to one or two of them and refused a cocktail. People were still arriving, a starchy footman announcing their names at the door in stentorian tones.

"Sir William and Lady Marley."

Lady Marley had been a chorus and there had been a violent love affair with a minor prince to her credit before she caught old Sir William on the bank of the grave and suddenly became respectable.

"In memory of William George Roberts, the forty-second vicar of Horsley, England (A. D. 1828-19—). "A scholar of but average ability and a preacher of but medium prowess, he nevertheless obtained a hearing by speaking the truth. Though just as selfish as most men, like them he was often capable of doing a kindness when the opportunity came his way. Fairly good tempered on the whole, though a bit irritable at times, he enjoyed a happy family life, and was fond of convivial society." "Gold" Is Still There
All that glitters is not gold. P. E. Morrison, interior decorator of Philadelphia, visiting Reno, Nev., admitted after abandoning all illusions about prospecting, especially in old wells. A metallic gleam at the bottom of a dry shaft on the Berks ranch west of Reno lured Morrison to investigate. But when he had lowered himself with a rope to within four feet of the bottom, a chorus of hisses and buzzes informed him he was intruding on a rattlesnake residence. His shouts for help brought rescuers, including the fire department.

Landed Nine-Foot Shark
A nine-foot shark weighing several hundred pounds was harpooned at Ocracoke, N. C., by David Gaskill, Ocracoke, and Carl Jacobson, Washington, N. C. When the shark came within five feet of the boat, Gaskill threw the harpoon. It struck the shark in the back. The little boat was pulled several hundred yards down the channel. The shark was finally brought to the shore and landed with block and tackle.

Patsie

June 12th.—Well how is The Star force? We are all washed away almost. We surely are having lots of rain and farmers are awfully behind with their grain.

Quite a few have their grain cut and the row crops are getting in the weeds. Give us time and we will come out all ok.

Gardens are fine and quite a lot of canning is being done. As long as we don't go hungry, we will get by some way.

We don't know what the price of cotton will be; we can only wait and see. We will do our best to make a good crop and take a chance, you know we work by chance any way.

I was in Baird Saturday; met so many of my friends. You know it is nice to all meet and talk with each other and find out how the other fellow is getting along. I find we are all in the same boat, dragging along each one thinking he has the hardest times.

I was sorry my good friend, Al Irvin got hurt. Sure hope he will soon be up and going again.

Quite a few from Eula attended the Rodeo at Baird Saturday afternoon.

We are so glad to learn that Miss Clark is improving.

There is not much sickness at Eula.

I want to hand The Baird Star a few flowers. We have a newsy paper and the managers, take a great pride in putting out a good clean paper, and I am sure that all who read The Star looks forward to the time for The Star to come into our homes. When I look back and see how the late W. E. Gilliland worked so hard to make The Star a good paper it makes me feel proud of Miss Eliza and Haynie, who have taken up the work and are going right ahead with the work started by their father.

Well, if this don't reach the waste basket, I will come again.

With best wishes to all the readers of The Star.

PATSIE.

NOTE: We sincerely appreciate your kind words and are truly glad that our efforts to give our readers a good weekly paper is appreciated by you. It is the knowledge of the appreciation of our efforts that encourage us sometimes in the face of difficulties, to keep on with the work. Like Patsie, we too believe in giving flowers and kind words of appreciation to our friends while they are living.—Eliza and Haynie Gilliland.

Bill Taylor was carried to the doctor Sunday afternoon to have his eye dressed, which was badly hurt in a ball game at Admiral Sunday afternoon. Leon Ross was also slightly injured in the game.

We have been having lots of rain lately. We need lots of sunshine now so the farmers can work their crops
