Democratic leaders say that we failed because the people were not ready for the tariff question. Well, yes, it looks as though something was lacking, but it strikes us that it was votes principally.

Every democrat has his own theory about the cause of disaster which overtook the party Nov. 6th. Some say it was the tariff and then in the next breath swear it was Hill's treachery in New York.

We believe in a Civil Service reform that will put our political friends in office and turn the opposition out. We have never cast a ballot with any other intention and never expect to.

There is some talk of organizing a building and loan association in Baird. This would certainly be a good move for our town, and THE STAR hopes the organization of such an enterprise will take definite shape at an early date.

Mr. S. Hogg is being groomed by the admiring friends as a candidate for Governor, two years from now. He is a good sized man, in more ways than one, but we are thinking it will be a good while before he will root his way into the gubernatorial chair.

The Mercury of the 13th says, that the Exchange have married and the club man and wife. Which is "him"? Husbands and wives never head of each others faults, so we see the Exchange and Mercury will part from this time on, constituting mutual admiration society.

There are two applicants for the Baird post-office already. What's the matter with Frank Rettig? He's all right. The only trouble is, he is a democrat, but that does not disqualify him for the office. You know Harrison is a civil service reformer, and he surely will not turn out a man simply because he is a democrat. We will see what we shall see.

This is an unlucky year for the Cleveland family. Brown county sacrifices a Cleveland for district judge, Coleman county knocked one out in the senatorial race, Texas refused to put one on the Court of Appeals bench, and, lastly, the United States refused to have one for President. The strangest part of the whole thing is that everyone one of them are men above reproach. The Cleveland star is not in the ascendant this year, that is all.

Connelley, of Eastland county, was elected to the legislature after all the fuss and fury kicked up over in the 42nd district. The Cisco Round-up, that opposed Connelley so bitterly, says it will never oppose the democratic nominee in that district unless Ed Davenport, editor of the Breckenridge Texian, is the nominee. The Round-up, Eastland Chronicle, and Texian, ought to bury the hatchet, now that the war is over.

Dr. Macune seems to have downed all opposition and he is in no immediate danger of having that $300 per month salary cut off. Some people who did not have much faith in Dr. Macune as a financier, will have to change their opinion on one point at least. A man that can get, and hold a position worth $12.50 per day, when he formerly could not earn a dollar a day, is certainly a good financier. Dr. Macune, individually is a decided success, as manager of the Exchange we are unable to say, as the Alliance can not determine whether the Exchange is a success or a failure, an outsider of course, is not capable of forming a correct opinion.

Four years ago, President Cleveland was elected on the campaign cry of "turn the rascals out." He disobeyed the commands of the people and kept the rascals in, and the people repudiated the Cleveland administration at the very first opportunity. The democratic party has never gained anything by concessions to the republicans, and never will.

President Cleveland kept thousands of republicans in office who were bitter against his administration and were continually giving information to their political friends on the outside. This is all very fine in theory, but is very poor in practice. Democrats who are hunting for the cause of the late disaster to the party might do well to examine this question also.

A Pittsburg Man Has a Bill Drawn Up Making It a Misdemeanor to Show Them in Public, but It is Not Yet a Law.

(Dallas News.)

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 23.—[Special.]—A spirit of retaliation has been aroused here by the publication of the following from the Pittsburg Times: "A number of gentlemen who are known in this city as business and professional men, some of whom served in the union army during the civil war, met to protest against the flaunting of rebel flags, which has of late become so common, and a bill was prepared to be presented at the next session of congress making it a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment of three years, to display a confederate flag in parades or on other public occasions." In last evening's Richmond State a call is issued by country merchant addressed to patriotic merchants and consumers of the south, requesting them to "ponder well this action of leading business men of Pittsburg, and to make a solemn vow that they will henceforward buy nothing from the city of Pittsburg, or, indeed, from the state of Pennsylvania, where such a spirit of persecution prevails. Let them buy from some democratic state or town, or better, still, at home. Let them buy their iron in Birmingham, cotton or wooden goods from Georgia, etc., as did our forefathers in 1776. We can only hope to touch the sensibilities and arouse the sympathies of these enemies in our suffering, and awaken any interest in our dire necessities by tapping their pockets. Touch them there, and they will listen to reason."

The States says editorially: One of our most intelligent and progressive business men remarked yesterday: "I have withdrawn my custom from a wholesale dealer in Philadelphia with whom I have dealt for years. He gave $1000 to the fund used for putting in power the enemies of the south. That's business. Supporters of the bloody shirt party give thousands of dollars to aid in the election of those who have lent their countenance to the worst and most dangerous element of the south and then expect to be reimbursed from the pockets of southern men. Let every southern democrat give his custom hereafter to those northern merchants who are friends of the southern people. Northern merchants who supported men like Cleveland and Thurman deserve southern patronage, not those who delight in seeing the hopes of the best element in the south disappointed and who give their money to the party of Blaine, Sherman, Foraker and other foes of our people."

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 23.—[Special.]—A number of prominent citizens of this city were interviewed to-day with reference to the editorial comments of southern newspapers on the subject of "the rebel flag must go," as telegraphed by the united press, and the effect the threatened boycott would have on business generally. Mr. J. H. Stevenson, real estate agent and prominent G. A. R. man, said:

The whole matter is in a state of "mixed-up." In the first place there was no such meeting of business and professional men, "some of whom served in the union army," ever held in this city in regard to the confederate flag business. Of course, a bill to be presented to congress has been drawn up making it a penal offense to display a confederate flag in any parade and in other public affairs, but it was not gotten up by a committee or at a meeting of soldiers. The bill was conceived and drawn up by myself. It was suggested to my mind at the time of the unveiling of the monument to the southern Gen. Pickett, who fell at Gettysburg. Then it became known that southerners would carry confederate flags and union men refused to carry the stars and stripes in the same procession and feel very sore over it. After that a number of soldiers who have talked with me about the matter favored the preparation of the bill, but there was no meeting whatever. I shall not present the bill at the coming session of congress because it will be too short to get the bill through. As far as boycotting Pittsburg is concerned there is nothing in the story. Southern people are going to patronize anybody or any state that suits their interests best.

Major A. Burchfield, past senior vice commander G. A. R., said: "There has been no such meeting and I have heard of no such bill as you speak of. As for old Virginia and some other southern states Pittsburg don't care a snap. There are only a few people now talking about the bloody shirt and I think they had better leave it alone. We can attend to that part of the matter for ourselves."

PERSONAL MENTION.

Cliff Hill was in town, Tuesday.
John Collins was in town, Saturday.
J. M. Allen was in town, yesterday.
W. B. Dodds was in town, Saturday.
J. W. Jones went to Abilene, Fri-
day.
Cap Gilliland was in town a day or two, this week.
W. L. Gilliland and family were in town, yesterday.
J. W. Jones and wife went to Tecumseh, yesterday.
Rev. J. A. Wallace, of Abilene, was in the city, yesterday.
M. M. Terry's familiar phiz was seen on our streets, yesterday.
John Bowyer, of Abilene, ran down,
Saturday, to see how a live town looked.
Judge I. M. Omis, President of
of Belle Plaine College, was in town, Saturday.
Mrs. C. T. Phillips, of Carbon, visited the family of Mr. R. Phillips, last Saturday.
Miss Minnie Kershaw made a short visit to her home in Abilene,
last Friday.
R. J. Harris was in town, yesterday.
He had something to say about straight roads.
Mrs. Sparkman, of Minneola, returned home, Saturday, with her daughter, Mrs. Marache.
Bob Palmer mounted his Roseanna and took a spin down to the Cottonwood country, Saturday, to see his Dulciana.
Rev. R. R. Raymond, of Sipe Springs, was in town, Tuesday, long enough to say howdy and kipped
out again.
E. J. Hicks, of Lytle Gap, was in town, Tuesday. He says everything is lovely out at the Gap, and that Harrison stock is considerably above par.
H. N. Marache and wife went to Minneola, last Saturday, and will make that place their temporary home. We regret that Mrs. Marache's severe illness caused their removal from Baird.
Ed McMinn, of Presidio county, stopped over at Baird, last Monday night, on his way to Chicago with a lot of beef-cattle. He is the same old Ed of former days when he sold goods in Brownwood, in the good old times gone by.
Mr. J. B. Mabie and family, of Polk county, arrived, last Thursday,
on a visit to the family of Mr. E. K.
Kane. There is some probability of their locating here. They returned home, yesterday, and were accompanied by Miss Lillie Kane.

PREACHING NEXT SUNDAY.

Rev. R. F. Dunn will preach at the Methodist Church next Sunday at 11 a. m. and at night. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

WHITLEY HOUSE.
I desire to notify my old patrons and the public generally that I have resumed charge of the above Hotel.
A splendid corps of assistants. The table will be supplied with the best of the market affords.
Respectfully,
W. C. WHITLEY.
Mrs. C. N. Nelson, mother of Geo.
F. Nelson, and her niece Miss Alice Schaffler, from St. Paul, Minn., stopped at Baird, Monday night, with the family of Capt. J. L. Lea, and to-day, in company with George, boarded the cars for California, where they will spend the winter.
T. E. Powell, one of our enterprising dry-goods merchants, shows his faith in Baird by investing $4000 in real estate. He purchased the S. L.
Robertson building, last Saturday,
paying the above mentioned sum therefor. Mr. Powell has had the building rented for the last year, so he will continue in his old quarters where he has built up such a splendid trade.
Lives there a man in town, with so much moss on his back that would refuse to pay a reasonable tax, to have our streets and sidewalks repaired?
We think not. What is the remedy?
Incorporate the town.

IN MEMORIAM.
PEARL EDWARDS.
The relatives and friends of little Pearl Edwards were pained, last week, to learn that she was dead. She died at her home in Abilene, last Thursday night. She was the pride and pet of all her friends, and it is really hard for them to realize that the bright, beautiful, little girl, so full of life and the very picture of health, a short time ago, is, to-day, lying in the cold, silent tomb. Farewell, sweet little girl. Though we shall never meet thee again in this life, yet let us hope that we will meet again in that beautiful land where parting, pain, and death, shall never come. We tender our heartfelt sympathies to the sorrowing parents in their dark hour of trouble, though we know that no words of mortal can ever ease the pain or fill the aching void caused by the death of the pride of a mother's heart.
"A beautiful rose, a budding rose
blasted before its bloom;
Whose innocence did export disclose
Beyond that flower's perfume
To those who for her loss are grieved,
This consolation's given—
She's in a world of rose relieved,
And blooms a rose in Heaven."

MISSING.

The next day Kilsap called at Calton's office late in the afternoon and found the lawyer...

"Well," he said, impatiently, when Kilsap had closed the door and taken his seat...

"That's just what I want to know," answered the detective coolly...

"And when did she join the army?" "The very day after the murder."

"But she was not in the city at that time," said Kilsap, looking at Calton with a questioning look...

"Yes," assented Kilsap, rubbing his hands together. "I will be glad to see you again."

"The other one?" repeated Calton, in a puzzled voice. "What other one?"

"Calton arose from his seat with a blank air of astonishment. 'Oliver Whyte?' he said...

"But what could she have told Fitzgerald to make him act in this silly manner?"

"Kilsap looked puzzled. 'I must confess I am a little,' he said at length...

"What about the murdered Whyte?" "Well, it might not go so far as that, but it might surprise the jury in the morning."

"I dare say you are right," answered Calton, thoughtfully...

"If she's anywhere in Australia you may be sure still be in the hands of Kilsap's confidential agents."

"CHAPTER XVII. THE TRIAL. In spite of the utmost vigilance on the part of the police..."

"God will not permit such a judicial crime to be committed as the murder of an innocent man," he declared.

"At last, the day of the long expected trial came, and as Calton sat in his office looking over his brief..."

"Very well," replied Calton, almost sternly, while a look of annoyance passed over his face...

"The next coming," answered Prettly, putting on his hat...

"The next coming," answered Calton, putting his brief into his bag...

"The next coming," answered Calton, putting his brief into his bag...
