Cooksie Is Charged With Wife's Murder

Goree Man Faces Serious Charge In Connection With Death of Companion

Melvin Cooksie, about 20 years of age, is in the Knox county jail at Benjamin, where he was carried on Wednesday of last week following the death of his wife, the former Miss Ollie Naylor of Wichita Falls. Cooksie has been directly charged with the murder in a verdict rendered by Justice D. C. Osborne, whose verdict, following an inquest, was that Mrs. Cooksie came to her death from a blow dealt by Melvin Cooksie with an unknown instrument.

Cooksie reported to Judge Osborne Wednesday evening that his wife was dead in the barn at their home north of Goree, as a result of a kick in the head by a mule. Judge Osborne notified County Attorney Billingsley, and together they began a thorough investigation into the affair which resulted in the serious charges being filed against Cooksie. Much incriminating evidence has been found, according to Mr. Billingsley, among other things a blood-stained hammer is said to have been found in Cooksie's car, upon which he claims to have been working at the time his wife received her fatal injuries.

Immediately following the finding of the coroner Cooksie was placed under arrest and carried to Benjamin and placed in jail. A preliminary hearing was conducted by Judge Osborne on Thursday morning in which Cooksie waived an examining trial and his bond was fixed at $5,000, which he has so far failed to make.

Reports are to the effect that feeling over the affair was very intense in the community in which the crime is alleged to have been committed and every precaution was made by Sheriff Melton at Benjamin against any move of violence that might be made, however, those familiar with the citizenry of Knox county are inclined to discredit rumors of possible mob violence.

Funeral services were conducted for Mrs. Cooksie on Thursday morning and the remains were laid to rest in the Bomarton cemetery. In attendance at the funeral were her mother, Mrs. Alice Naylor of Wichita Falls, and five brothers, and following the funeral four of the brothers went to Benjamin to confer with Knox county officers concerning the tragedy. Mrs. Cooksie is survived by a fourteen-month-old daughter and it was brought out in the coroner's inquiry that she was an expectant mother.

Mundayites Will Go To Hogg Revival In Body Tuesday Evening

A large delegation of Munday people are planning to attend the Will Hogg revival at Seymour on next Tuesday evening, and it has been planned that the party will leave the square promptly at 5:00 o'clock carrying basket lunches, which will be spread in the beautiful municipal park at Seymour. The Rev. Hogg and party have been invited and have accepted an invitation to have lunch with the Munday people. The Rev. S. J. T. Williams, who is organization manager for the Hogg party, has advised that a section of seats will be reserved for the Munday delegation and he urges that all who can come do so. While the meeting at Seymour is being conducted under the auspices of the Methodist church of that city, it is well known that the Hogg meetings are interdenominational, and everyone is cordially invited to join in this trip. Those who heard the Rev. Hogg during his great revival in Munday will be glad of the opportunity to hear him again.

DO YOU WISH TO LEARN BAND MUSIC?

I am in a position now to give private music lessons to anyone who is desirous of taking such lessons. If you are interested in learning to play a band instrument, you will have an opportunity to learn one now. I can reasonably assure you that, if you are desirous, ambitious, and possess a little bit of musical talent, I can teach you to play in a very short time. I have had ten years experience as band instructor and as a result feel capable of giving instructions with results. My price is reasonable.

I shall be at the Munday Times office Saturday afternoon from 2 to 3, May 26. All who want to avail themselves of private instructions in band music meet me at the Times office. Be sure to remember the place, date, day and time. JOHN J. HOFFMAN.

Mrs. A. Mulry of Royce City is a guest this week in the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. F. Billingsley.

While young Cooksie is a member of a most excellent family it is said by neighbors that the Cooksies have not gotten along well at times since their marriage about three years ago, and according to the records in the county court, Mrs. Cooksie filed a complaint against Cooksie some months ago charging assault, to which Cooksie entered a plea of guilty and paid a fine.

H. L. Gantz, representing the Farm and Ranch, was here on Wednesday of last week in company with County Agent W. O. Logan, and together they paid this office a very friendly visit. Mr. Gantz is working throughout the state in the organization of the 4-Square Community organizations, which operate along similar lines as do chambers of commerce organizations, except that the former works in the rural communities for the advancement of the community while the chamber of commerce organizations look more after the interests of the towns. Mr. Gantz works largely through the rural schools and is therefore handicapped in his undertaking just now by reason of the fact that a major portion of the rural schools have closed. He stated that it was his purpose, however, to pay a visit to Knox county at a later date.

HOGAN-McGLOTHLIN

On Thursday evening of last week at six o'clock Miss Marguerite Hogan of this city and Mr. Glenn McGlothlin of Knox City were united in marriage at the Methodist parsonage, the Rev. R. E. Freeman officiating. The young people were accompanied by the bride's mother and a few other relatives.

The ceremony had been planned for later in the evening but due to the threatening clouds was performed earlier in the evening.

The bride is one of Munday's most popular young ladies and a favorite among the younger set. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hogan and was practically reared in Munday, and numbers her friends by her acquaintances.

The groom is a son of E. W. McGlothlin, also of this city, and is a young man of exemplary habits, and is associated with the First National Bank at Knox City. He was reared at Bomarton, and was associated with the bank at that place until some months ago.

We join their many friends in wishing for them a long and happy married life.

Little Edith Neff Is Called By Death After Week's Illness

It is doubtful indeed if ever an announcement was the occasion of such universal regret and sorrow as that which came on last Sunday shortly after noon that little Edith Neff, daughter of Mrs. R. H. Neff, had passed away in a Wichita Falls hospital, where she had been carried some days previously. Reports that came from her bedside the latter part of last week were encouraging and friends of the family had felt hopeful that she would win the uneven battle.

She was stricken with acute appendicitis on Friday, May 17th, and from the very beginning attending physicians declared that her condition was critical, as an examination revealed that an operation was hopeless. She was transferred to a hospital at Wichita Falls, where she received the very best of medical attention, but the disease had gained such headway that it was only a question of time until it exacted its toll, and the end came at noon Sunday. At her bedside throughout her illness were her mother, her uncle, Dr. Wm. P. Farrington, and other loved ones, as well as the most skilled physicians in that city, and in their great sorrow they have the consolation of knowing that everything that could be done by frail humanity was done, and God, in His infinite wisdom chose to call this sweet little girl to be with Him. Charles and Nollie Farrington came from Austin, where they are students in the University, and were at her bedside for several days at Wichita Falls, but when she seemed to be improving they returned to Austin and could not have attended the funeral services.

The remains were shipped to Munday on the afternoon train Sunday afternoon, and while the news of her death had not become generally known, a vast throng of friends gathered at the station, and as the remains of the little girl were transferred from the train to the awaiting hearse the expressions of the faces of friends bore mute evidence that their hearts were torn by grief.

Funeral services were conducted at the Methodist church on Monday afternoon at three o'clock by the Rev. R. E. Freeman, pastor, and the Rev. P. D. O'Brien, pastor of the Baptist church. Long lines of friends for arrival of the funeral cortege the church was filled to capacity, and every available nook of the edifice was utilized in making room for the many friends who came to pay their tribute of respect and love. In the audience were hundreds of schoolmates, and the numerous number of tear-stained eyes among them portrayed their intense sorrow and grief.

The floral offering was one of the most profuse that has ever been witnessed here, a great mound of beautiful flowers completely filling the available space around the altar, and clearly portrayed the high esteem and love in which this little girl was held.

Edith Virginia Neff was born in Munday March 17, 1916 and had spent her entire life in this city. She was converted in a meeting conducted by the Rev. R. E. Freeman last summer and became a member of the Methodist church. She was a regular attendant at Sunday school and scattered sunshine in her pathway wherever she went. Especially was she loved by her classmates in school, where she was recognized as one of the brightest pupils.

Among those who came to attend the funeral services were Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Ware, Tol Ware, C. R. and Bob Garner, all of Amarillo, Mrs. J. J. Ewert of Lindsey, Oklahoma, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Lee and Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Pendleton of Wichita Falls.

Honorary pallbearers were Arthur Ware, Amarillo, Will Monning, Amarillo, Woods Eiland, Amarillo, W. E. Herring, Amarillo, J. J. Ewert, Lindsey, Oklahoma, Tom Isbell, Goree, C. B. Farrington, Huntsville, R. L. Briggs, W. H. Atkinson, Fred Broach, John Ed Jones, G. R.

Edland, Leland Hannah, L. M. Palmer, J. C. Elliott, Alf Campbell and W. R. Moore. Active pallbearers were J. C. Campbell, Homer Lee, H. A. Pendleton, F. O. Campbell, Dr. Joe Davis and C. A. Eiland.

Following the services at the church the remains were conveyed to Johnson cemetery where interment was made. Little Edith is survived by her mother and little sister, Lucille, her father, R. H. Neff, who was one of Munday's most highly respected citizens, having preceded her in death some four years ago.

Masonic Educational Services To Be Held Here On July Fifth

Officers of Knox Lodge, A. F. & A. M. have been advised by Wilbur Keith, executive secretary of the Committee on Masonic Service and Education, that Munday has been chosen as the place for holding this important event for this district, and that July 5th is the date that has been set. The meeting here will be under the supervision of D. P. Ratliff, D. D. G. M. of Haskell, and prominent speakers of the Masonic fraternity will be here and address members of the order on this occasion.

A more detailed program of the meeting will be available at a later date and we shall give further details concerning the meeting at a later date.

MUNDAY COUNTRY IN FINE CONDITION AFTER RAIN

Farmers over the Munday country are beginning farming in earnest this week following the excellent rains that have fallen during the past few days. To date the rainfall in this immediate section has been three inches, but, according to Mr. A. E. Whittemore, who makes a close study of agricultural conditions, the three inches have fallen in such a way that all has gone into the ground and it is therefore equal to an ordinary five or six inch rain. Mr. Whittemore states that the moisture has penetrated to a depth of from two to three feet and that there is sufficient season to bring up crops and start them off nicely.

REDWINE-HAYES

On Thursday evening of last week, May 17th, Miss Eula Redwine and Mr. Ray Hayes were united in marriage at the home of Dr. G. A. Trott, who officiated.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Redwine of this city and is a granddaughter of the late R. P. Munday, from whom our town took its name. Miss Eula was reared in Munday and was graduated from the Munday High School, and later attended the state normal school at Gunter, from which institution she holds a teacher's certificate. During the past year she has been engaged in teaching at the Lake Creek school, and all who know her are unanimous in the belief that Mr. Hayes has picked one of Munday's fairest flowers and one who is qualified to create a happy home.

The groom is a resident of Gunter, Texas, and is a young man of sterling character, so the match is in every way an ideal one and if the good wishes of many friends avail anything in fulfillment of an old saying that they will live happy forever after.

They will make their home at Gunter.

D. T. Mauldin, J. C. Campbell and E. H. Stodghill were in Wichita Falls on Tuesday and Wednesday attending the state meeting of the Retail Credit Men's Association.

Sheriff and Mrs. J. W. Melton were here from Benjamin on Tuesday and report that Benjamin has had an abundance of rain. They also report that some damage resulted from a heavy hailstorm that fell there on Thursday afternoon of last week, many cars being badly damaged and hailstones as large as hen eggs, going through the roofs of houses. They are very grateful, however, for the water situation has been relieved.

TEN THOUSAND WOMEN EXPECTED IN SANTONE

San Antonio, Texas, May 22.—When 10,000 women from all parts of the United States meet in San Antonio May 28 for the biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and 40,000 more assemble here on October 8 for the annual national convention of the American Legion Auxiliary, they will find the last stronghold remaining in the United States of old-fashioned devotion to an aristocratic social ritual and elaborate social convention.

In addition to the many things of historic and scenic appeal in this Southwestern country, they will find also the old Spanish customs and the influence from two centuries under the rule of Spain. The tradition of the Moorish restraint of woman, brought in this way, has had a big influence and still

Knox County Singers Will Convene Here Sunday Afternoon

The Knox county singing convention will be held at the Baptist church in Munday on Sunday afternoon, beginning at 3:00 o'clock, and a most interesting program is being arranged for the occasion. Singers from all sections of the county will be here and we are assured that there will be some excellent singing. Invitations have also been extended to some good singers from outside the county.

If you are a singer you are urged to be present and if you enjoy good music you are cordially invited to be there. Let's make this the banner meeting of this organization.

TWO OR THREE THINGS

Dick O'Brien

I have had occasion to visit in a number of communities within the past few weeks, and have noted some of the things that our neighboring towns are doing to make their community programs contribute to the growth and progress of their towns. I would like to note here a few things that towns the size of Munday are doing, and that we are not doing, that ought to be done, and can be done. In the first place I would mention the fact that all of the towns our size, and many that are much smaller have good brass bands, orchestras and other musical organizations that contribute much to the pleasure and profit of those living in the community. I understand that another effort is being made to resurrect our band, and it is to be earnestly hoped that the ones who have undertaken this work will have the enthusiastic support of the entire town. We need a band.

We have the material for a band. Let's have a brass band. Second: We need some kind of Luncheon Club. There is no progressive town anywhere in West Texas the size of Munday that does not maintain a live luncheon club of some kind, that meets the social needs and business needs of the community, am not suggesting what kind, whether Lions, Rotary, Commercial, Chamber of Commerce, or what-not; but Munday needs a luncheon club, and some of our problems will never be solved until we have and support one. Next: The name of our town should appear in the daily press more often than it does. The word needs to know that Munday, "Heart of the Famous Knox Prairie," is very definitely on the map of West Texas, and is a community where things are happening.

In the last place I would call attention to the fact that every town in this whole section, small or large have a wide awake Boy Scout organization, except Munday. We have at least sixty or seventy boys who ought to have an opportunity to get the character building influence of this great and growing organization. They are anxious, willing and ready, all they need is for the dads of the community to give them a little co-operation. Let's see what can be done about these needy matters.

Another powerful factor working in the same direction is found in the very large German element which has settled in San Antonio and all Texas. The German woman is, traditionally, very much circumscribed and has for centuries been held pretty much to the old ideal of "Hausfrau" and "Hausmutter."

With these two influences in the direction of conservatism in woman's economic and social relations goes a third, perhaps even more powerful, San Antonio and all this part of the country, from the standpoint of its American element, was settled almost exclusively by people from the old South—from Virginia, the Carolinas, Tennessee, Georgia, where the aristocratic idea of protection, and also restriction, of women reached its full flower.

These influences have, it is true, been tremendously modified by modern conditions and ideas, especially the idea of greater freedom for women, and also by the cosmopolitan population which is to a surprising degree characteristic of San Antonio. But they play a large part in giving the cast to society here.

Only within the past six months or so, for instance, have women ventured to smoke in public in San Antonio. More of the courtesies and formalities are observed in business as well as social life than in the north and east. Women in offices expect, and receive, those old-time courtesies and attentions which have very largely vanished from the business atmosphere of the hurrying north and east. Men still very generally give up their seats in street cars and buses to women and remove their hats when women are in office building elevators.

West, Rogers and Cass Are Winners In Golf Tournament

I. M. West, Joe Rogers and Otha Cass were winners in the first, second and third flights respectively of the golf tournament conducted by the Munday Golf Club last week, and on Tuesday afternoon the winner of the first flight played R. E. Alexander for the final championship, the game going 27 holes with a handicap for West of two strokes on each nine holes played, and the contest resulted in a victory for Alexander 1-up. It was a game filled with sensational golf by both contestants and the game was nobody's game until the final putt was sunk.

In the finals West defeated Jack Mayes 9-8 on 36 holes; Joe Rogers defeated U. R. Houser 1-up for second flight honors and Otha Cass defeated J. A. Kennedy 3-2 for third flight honors.

SAMS-McSTAY

On Monday morning at the home of the bride's parents at Benjamin, Mr. John Dee McStay of this city and Miss Mary Bell Sams were united in marriage, and immediately following the ceremony the happy young couple departed for a honeymoon trip to Dallas, Fort Worth and other points, after which they will be at home in Munday.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Sams, pioneer and highly respected citizen of Benjamin, while the groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. McStay of this city, and is associated with his father here in the grocery business. He is one of Munday's most popular young business men and we join their many friends in wishing for them a long and happy married life.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Warren returned the latter part of last week from Dallas, where they had spent several days with their daughter, Mrs. Harold Davis, and had welcomed the arrival of a little granddaughter.

T. G. Bengé was in Wichita Falls on Tuesday and was accompanied home by Miss Frances Dashner, who will visit in the Bengé home for several days.

Another powerful factor working in the same direction is found in the very large German element which has settled in San Antonio and all Texas. The German woman is, traditionally, very much circumscribed and has for centuries been held pretty much to the old ideal of "Hausfrau" and "Hausmutter."

With these two influences in the direction of conservatism in woman's economic and social relations goes a third, perhaps even more powerful, San Antonio and all this part of the country, from the standpoint of its American element, was settled almost exclusively by people from the old South—from Virginia, the Carolinas, Tennessee, Georgia, where the aristocratic idea of protection, and also restriction, of women reached its full flower.

This is the last issue of The Roundhouse for 1927-28, and now, dear readers, we will bid you a fond farewell until next year. Our purpose in giving this section has been to give you a few minutes of amusement each week and to acquaint you with the activities of the school. At the same time the staff has received some training along the line of journalism. If we have partly succeeded in our aim, we have been well repaid for our efforts.

We wish to thank Mr. Kennedy for his kindness in letting us use this section for a school paper.

The most interesting chapel program ever given in Munday by a class was given by the sixth grade on last Wednesday afternoon. These young men and women have great talent, and they showed exceptional training. The teachers in charge are to be complimented for the excellent way in which their pupils performed.

Seniors
 It seems everybody is trying to make us wish that we were not leaving Munday. Why, only last Saturday night we were entertained with another swell banquet. This banquet was given by the Women's Missionary Society of the Baptist church at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Brock.

The home was beautifully decorated in the senior colors. A delightful program consisting of a talk by Rev. Mayes of Baird, a talk by Mr. H. V. Standley, a piano solo by Mrs. Louise Ingram, a vocal solo by Mrs. Sweatt, a reading by Miss Lillian Aycock was immensely enjoyed. Rev. P. D. O'Brien was toastmaster, and as usual, he made an enjoyable talk.

A delicious two course luncheon was served to about twenty-five. The main plate consisted of fried chicken, cream peas, cream potatoes, fruit salad, and rolls. The last course consisted of angel food cake and brick ice cream.

This was some "swell affair that the ladies gave us and we certainly do appreciate it.

Oh, yes, our president, Otis Burnett, made a good talk to have eaten so much chicken, but just the same, he sure can speak.

Now we will not attempt to say good-bye, for we are on the verge of tears and every time someone says something about us leaving we burst out bawling. But we have enjoyed our last year, and we appreciate the many things that have been done in honor of the seniors.

Dr. Caldwell's 3 Rules Keep You Healthy

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not grip. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

J. B. Caldwell, M.D.
 AT AGE 83

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without gripping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It saps your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up livers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

was out last Friday, therefore, they are going to school with us this week. They did not have biology at Haskell, but they will get up their note books that they had started before they left here, and will take the final examinations, so that they will make a credit on biology. We surely are glad to have Clara and Henrietta back for it seems like old times to have them with us.

Last Friday evening Mr. Palmer, Chan, Earl Pruitt, Virgil and Weldon Parker went on a fishing trip to Lake Kemp. Saturday we marooned Mr. Palmer on a tree, about a mile out on the lake, because he had been a bad boy. We left him there for an hour or so, and when we went back to him he had cut our initials all over the tree, but had not had any luck with the fish. But before we left it looked as though we were going to catch all the fish in the lake.

The Munday Home Demonstration Club will meet on Friday afternoon, May 25th, at the lunch room, at 2:30 o'clock, and the subject will be a time-saving cooking demonstration.

J. W. Cowan returned the latter part of last week from a visit to Alabama. This is the first visit Mr. Cowan has made back to his old home in thirty-two years, and he says that he was able to recognize some of the men whom he knew as a boy. He states that much of the land that was in cultivation when he was there has grown up in pine trees, many of which are three feet in diameter and are 25 feet to the lowest limbs. These trees, states Mr. Cowan, grow very thick—about one thousand to the acre—and when they reach this size sell for about one dollar each.

J. E. (Uncle Jake) Matheny returned the latter part of last week from Little Rock, Ark., where he attended the annual reunion of Confederate Veterans, and he reports a most enjoyable time. He states that the veterans were so arranged in their quarters that it was an easy matter to find anyone from any desired state, and he and the few other remaining vets who wore the gray and followed the stars and bars had a great time recounting experiences of by-gone days, and here's hoping that this good man may be spared to attend many other reunions.

Mrs. M. F. Billingsley has as her guest this week her sister, Mrs. V. E. Asford, of McCombe, Texas.

Mrs. Clem Calhoun of Abilene is here this week visiting in the home of her mother, Mrs. C. R. Haymes, while Mr. Calhoun is assisting in the prosecution of a bank robbery case in the Panhandle.

Men who have thrown away the wrong card in the biggest poker hand of their lives might have some ingling of the way I felt. For three minutes I stood fuming, watching the vanishing end of the train. It soon swept out of sight.

"Is this Dr. Long?" spoke a voice behind me. The voice was deferential; yet it had neither thence nor the rhythm of our Florida colored men. I think that I expected to turn and see a white servitor—one of those graduated English butlers of an old and incomparable school. It was a low voice, with a rather peculiar purring quality. And so I was surprised to see the dusky face that looked into mine. It wasn't black, yet quite dark enough to be that of a mulatto. But in a glance I knew that the man had no African blood whatever.

The shape of his features was distinctly Bryan. He had a straight, finely chiseled nose that was almost classical, thin lips and rather high cheekbones. He wore the snow-white turban of a Mussulman. But most of all I noticed his eyes. They were the eyes of a mystic, very black, and astonishingly deep. They gave no key to his thoughts, but suggested the somber mysticism of the East. Of course he was one of Southley's servants, and a native of Hindustan.

"Yes, I'm Long," I told him. "I come from Southley Downs, sahib—and the car is waiting," he went on in his strange, purring voice. The great, black eyes fascinated me.

He took my bag and led the way to the car. I am not usually particularly observant of casual acquaintances; but I found myself studying the dark, straight form in front of me. There was a quality in his carriage that was particularly absorbing. I couldn't quite grasp what it was. I rather think it was the somewhat stealthy way with which he placed his feet, a sinuousness and a grace that one might expect in a dancer. I couldn't hear his footfall on the gravel; and I fell to conjecturing what a successful hunter he would be in the Western mountains. It usually takes years of practice to learn to stalk. He seemed to know how intuitively. The man walked just like a cat. He placed his feet the same way.

"The other must have missed the train," he told me in his correct but faint English, as he helped me into Southley's great touring car. Southley himself met me on the great veranda. The shadows were heavy there, and his face just a white blur. But (Continued on back page)

when we went into the lighted hall, I saw that the mouths had changed him. The sight of his fine, old face in the soft candle-light was, I think, the first real shock of my stay at Southley Downs.

He greeted me with the finest hospitality. He couldn't live in a Southern manor house and do any other thing. It's in the air and the atmosphere, as all men know who have visited the South. It is a tradition, too. The voice itself was rather wavering and shrill, rather more aged than I remembered it. Then he turned to the impressive Oriental behind him.

"Ahmad Das," he asked, "didn't Joe come?" I didn't hear the answer, for I turned to shake hands with a tall, straight youth that was Southley's son. He was about twenty-one, evidently an undergraduate at college.

"My son Ernest," the old man told me. He tried to straighten up. "Already taller than his father."

We walked into the great drawing-room; and there two other men arose to greet us. "Mr. Hayward," my host explained. "And another Mr. Hayward, his son."

It was wholly possible that his voice changed slightly when he introduced these two. But, of course, it was to be expected. An instant before he had just introduced his son, evidently the joy and pride of his life. But now it seemed to me that the voice had an alien tone—a strain and a nervousness that was not readily explained. I bowed over the older man's hand.

He was a huge creature—six feet tall and more than a little obese, and perhaps sixty-five years of age. He was closely shaven, and his white hair was clipped close. He had rather peculiar, piercing gray eyes, a firm mouth, and he had the look of overflowing opulence. As I shook his hand, a bell jingled in the hall. For an instant the Hindu's face flashed in the doorway, and Southley went to meet him. They talked together an instant, and the old man was beside me again by the time I had turned to the younger Hayward.

He was a man possibly my own age. He also was in the newest of dinner garb. He had a rather large, dark face—perhaps a trifle severe and forbidding. There was a dull light that might have been ambition and might have been a thousand other things in his eyes.

"I've heard Southley speak of you," the younger man told me. "I am Vilas Hayward. It may help you to keep us straight to know my given name."

"I think that is Joe now." Then we all stood up. The whole world faded—the glittering lace, the watchful faces of the men, the dark body of the Hindu servant—and left only the slender form at the threshold of the door.

"She's been on a visit to the shore, and she was carried past her station—like the little stupid that she is," I heard Southley saying from far away. "I had to send for her in the car. Josephine—come up and meet my friend Doctor Long. Long—my daughter, Miss Southley."

The girl at the doorway was the same girl I had carried in my arms that afternoon; and she had not yet removed the intriguing little hat from the fine, brown hair.

"I hope you don't mind candle-light," Southley apologized during the excellent meal. "We have a private lighting plant, but it's seriously out of order. We're sending for new parts. "I prefer candles, and I'd have 'em if I had enough servants to keep them trimmed," I replied. "It's the most restful light on earth."

Then the elder Hayward granted in his place. "I fall all over the house with 'em," he said. "I like bright lights, and lots of 'em. And the worst of it is the plant broke three days after I came Spite word, I think."

I looked at him, expecting to find him in jest. There are men that joke like that sometimes. But his face gave no sign. And I was to learn before the night was done that such remarks were quite to be expected from the elder Hayward.

A long, tremulous call suddenly shivered out of the darkness—seemingly just below the veranda. It was a plaintive, haunting cry, but except to a naturalist not worth a moment's thought. I had been enough in the wilderness to recognize it as the cry of a certain large species of owl—a night-hunter that is often found in our Florida marshes. Those on the veranda with me must have heard the same sound dozens of times. But four of them started in their chairs, and one of the four uttered a half-smothered gasp of dismay.

Something was radically wrong with the nerves of these occupants of Southley Downs. Evidently the swamp air had got into them and left its poison. The elderly Southley had evidently not heard the sound. At least, he gave no sign. His son, the nerves of whose handsome body should have been of steel, gave a scarcely perceptible start. Both of the Haywards turned with a nervous jerk, and the elder said something that sounded like an oath under his breath. Josephine had been the most affected of all; and when I looked at her again I saw that lingering, haunting sorrow in her dark eyes.

She uttered a little, nervous laugh—a sound that was joyously musical in spite of her embarrassment. "Did you ever encounter just this atmosphere before?" she asked me. "It's these marshes, I think—the traditions of this old house."

"All it needs is a ghost," I told her. "If you can present a ghost, it's going to be the biggest week of my life."

"It's here already."

"You don't mean it?"

"The newest, most novel ghost in the world."

She said it lightly, and I kept my eyes upon her. Then we heard the elder Hayward granting from his chair.

"Oh, don't tell that silly story again, Josephine," he muttered. "I've heard it till I'm tired."

"Then take him into the library, Joe," her father suggested. "I do want him to hear it—and since it loves Mr. Hayward, you'd better not tell it here. I want him to see the beams, anyway."

Josephine and I went through the long hall, and into the library. There were other candles here, and the shadows were long and unwavering. I held a chair for her, and took one myself.

"Of course, I know you," she said at once.

"I glad of that. I was sure you had forgotten."

I was watching with immeasurable delight every change of expression in her face, every shadow in her eyes, the delicious rising and falling of the color in her cheeks. She was in the middle of a sentence, and all things else were forgotten. Then, slowly as water freezes, the life utterly died in her face.

There is no other word. In a moment, the witchery and mystery that men call life was sparkling in her eyes and dancing in her smile. Her color was at its height, and I was drinking it like wine. In the next it was wholly gone. Probably my first impression was that her color was fading.

She was watching something just over my shoulder. Her gaze was almost trance-like. The light went out of her eyes, and they widened, too. And a no less perceptible change came in the set of her lips.

Very slowly I turned. I don't know what I expected to see. But I certainly expected nothing as commonplace as I saw. Her eyes were fixed on the form of Ahmad Das, the servant, who was doing some household task at the end of the long room.

For an instant I also followed his motions with a senseless fascination. He was on his hands and feet on the rug, evidently cleaning a soiled place on the carpet. And even in that awkward position he seemed to move with a strange, feline grace, a lithe sinuousness beyond all words.

I did not forget that this was natural in the man. But by some Satanic contriving of fate and circumstance, his candle-light had found a reflection in his eyes. I am a cold-blooded, self-disciplined man, and it was not just imagination not just delusion or moon-madness that revealed to me a strange, greenish glare, not unlike the light to be seen in the eyes of certain great beasts of prey in the blues depths.

Ahmad Das left the room, and I spoke in the deadly quiet that followed his departure.

"What is it, Miss Southley?" I asked her as gently as I could. "What has frightened you?"

"I must be ill," she said. "It was just Ahmad Das."

"I know—and that wild light in his eyes was natural. It was just the glare from his candle."

She smiled at me, took me through some of the great, downstairs rooms of the manor house. The place was almost Georgian. There were many little alcoves—the best of hiding places—and long corridors and indefinite flights of stairs. I was amazed at the size of it.

"And what traditions it must have!" I exclaimed. "You forgot, Miss Southley. You were going to tell me about the ghost."

She paused and looked at me. "I've decided I hadn't better."

"I'm so sorry. It would give an added zest to this visit—"

"But you wouldn't believe it—"

"And you wouldn't want me to! Ghost stories aren't meant to be believed."

"But this story is a little different, Dr. Long. It has one or two rather troublesome points—and it isn't to be laughed at."

even if it isn't to be believed. I hope you'll be able to laugh—but I'm afraid you won't. It's been a tradition in this house since my father came, forty years ago. And it isn't nice—at all. It's just that Southley Downs needs a doctor—even more than I do."

"And maybe I'm the one it needs."

"Our ghost isn't the ghost of a man," she said. "It isn't the ghost of a lovely girl who died for a sweetheart—or even a little child."

"I'm glad it isn't a little child. I can't bear to think of their sleep being so uneasy that they would walk."

"Our ghost—isn't a human being at all."

I Couldn't laugh into her earnest face. I didn't feel like laughing.

"It isn't very cheerful, is it, doctor?" she went on. "And it is rather embarrassing to sit here and tell you things I know you can't possibly believe. My father came from India forty years ago; and he brought a tiger-cub with him. It was a pet a tawny little creature that played and romped—and pulled at the curtains. He brought two servants, too—a Hindu man and my mother's ayah. Both those two servants are dead. Although you would hardly guess it, Ahmad Das was born after they came to this plantation."
