

Son, Take a Tip From Me

You Can't Make Money On The Farm Now—

In the old way of farming. I spent my boyhood days following an eight-inch walking plow, a Georgia stock and a double-shovel. Those days are gone forever. The man that makes money on the farm is that fellow who buys the latest implements and keeps up with the modern improvements. What you need to make the old plantation pay is a McCormick-Deering Farmall with the two-row Planter, Cultivator and Lister. Let it do the work of three men and in half the time. These implements you can buy at—

GUINN HARDWARE COMPANY

MUNDAY, TEXAS

McCormick-Deering AGENTS

CULTIVATING COTTON OR CORN

One man with a Farmall two-row cultivator can cultivate 20 to 25 acres a day—doing the work of 2 or 3 men and 4 to 8 horses or mules. When equipped with a four-row cultivator he can practically double this acreage.

SECTION HARROWS

THE FARMALL LISTER

The Farmall will bed-up or list more than 20 acres a day, doing the work of 2 or 3 men and 8 to 12 horses or mules—make your farm profitable—make farming a pleasure—ask the farmer who has a Farmall how he likes it.

WE HAVE THESE MACHINES

in stock and will gladly put one in your field and demonstrate to your satisfaction that they will do the work. Come in and let us show you what wonderful improvements have been made in farm machinery.

Power Machinery

IS NO LONGER AN EXPERIMENT

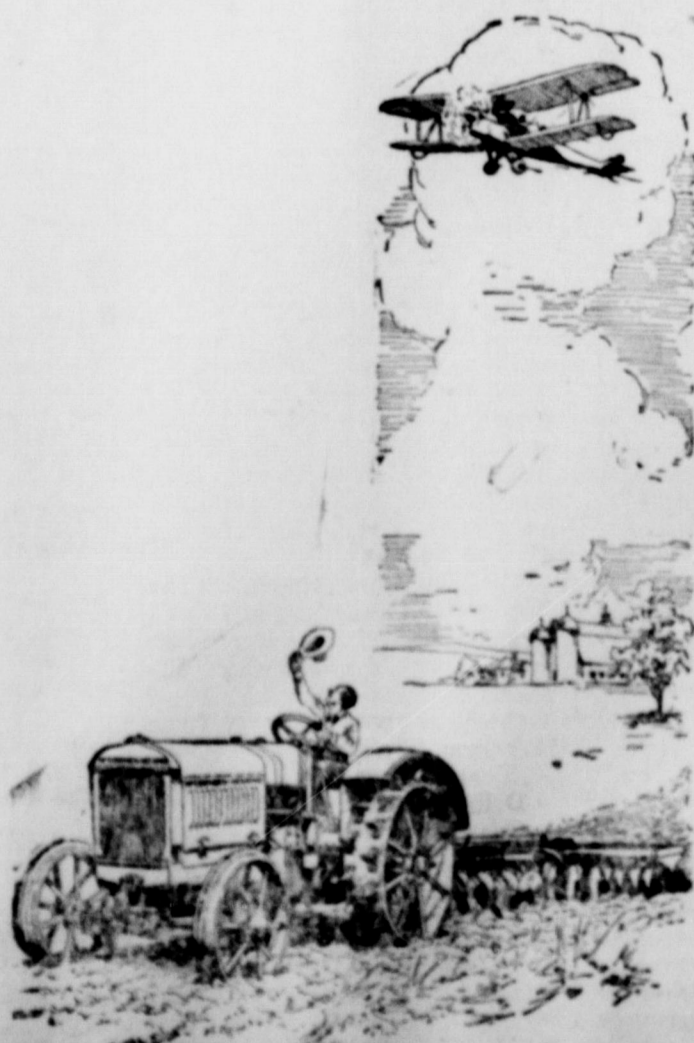

Large farms are being cultivated exclusively with Farmall Tractor with full equipment. The Farmall is the tractor the farmer has been waiting for—a tractor that will flat-break, list, plant and cultivate his ground. You'll have abundance of power to cut your grain sorghum or hay.

RECEIVED CARLOAD OF McCORMICK-DEERING IMPLEMENTS

One- and two-row planters, 4- and 6-plow cultivators, 20-, 24- and 36-disc Plows, 12- and 14-inch Walking Listers, 12- and 14-inch Riding Listers, Drag Harrows, 12- and 14-inch Sulky Plows and Disc Harrows, in fact anything you need in farm implements we have it.

FARMALL MAKES SHORT TURN

Turns in a 16-foot circle around the rear wheel as a pivot. This is a real advantage, giving you an opportunity to plow close to the fence.

THE FARMALL PLANTER

The Farmall will easily plant 20 to 30 acres a day with a two-row planter—with a four-row planter this acreage can be nearly doubled.

WALKING LISTERS 12 and 14-inch

FARMALL BREAKING PLOW

Under favorable soil conditions the Farmall will plow 8 acres or more a day—this is equivalent to the work of 2 men and 8 horses or mules, to say nothing of the sore shouldered horses and the bother of fighting flies. Ask your neighbor about the Farmall.

10-20 AND 15-30 TRACTORS

THE ALL PURPOSE MACHINE

Pulls all farm machinery. These tractors are built to be equipped with power take-off.

CHAPTER XVII

Burton was aflame with indignation, and was bursting out with comments suitable to the occasion; but Davenport silenced her with a gesture.

"Please," he begged, "let me think."

He was very grave.

"This is rather terrible," he said at length.

"It is atrocious!" she cried.

"It is treacherous! That they should treat you so!"

"Me? Oh, I don't matter. But his ideas are all destructive!"

He sees a chance to tear down and to build up his own personal power from the debris. That had not even occurred to me! I saw only the releasing of pressure."

"You aren't going to lie down and let them do this!"

"No, that must not be."

"What are you going to do, then?"

"I don't know."

He arose without further words, and the two took their way back to the camp. Grimstead roared at them jovially.

"Come and look at the rainbow!" he shouted.

Davenport stood gravely unsmiling before the chief.

"Mr. Grimstead," said he, "I overheard your conversation with Mr. Gardiner at the bend of the stream."

Grimstead's face flashed darkly.

"Well?" he challenged.

"I cannot be party to the program I heard outlined."

Grimstead considered a moment.

"Sit down," he invited.

"Have a cigar. There's plenty of time to talk this thing out, so there's no excuse to go off half-cock."

Davenport declined the cigar, but sat on the log.

"Now what's the trouble?" demanded Grimstead.

"The trouble is that your program is destructive," stated Davenport succinctly, "and aims merely at personal power without a thought to the welfare of other people. The thing is likely to prove a curse rather than a benefit. I think you are intelligent enough to understand my point without going into it further."

"I understand your point all right. And I understand your sort too well to argue with you. Argument's the long suit of your kind. So I'm just telling you. It's too bad you don't like my program, but I play the cards I hold and that is final!"

"In those circumstances I shall refuse to enter into this deal."

"In those circumstances it doesn't matter a damn whether you do or not. You've already entered into it."

"I shall refuse to sign the contract."

"You've already agreed to sign it," Grimstead pointed out, "and if you don't sign it, a court decree will put it into effect anyhow."

He eyed Davenport shrewdly.

"You are thinking that you can refuse to divulge your process," he continued. "Eh? No go! You'll either have to produce it or be buried for life, your battery would be buried along with you. Nobody but me would be allowed by the courts to touch it. It, as well as you, would be lost to the world."

Grimstead paused a moment to allow this to sink in. Then he went on in a more reassuring tone.

"You're not a business man, Mr. Davenport, and you don't realize that the business world is a fight from start to finish. It will be to the interests of every one affected to suppress that battery; in fact, it will be a matter of life and death to them. And believe me, they'll fight to do so. I don't believe you quite appreciate what it means to have nearly the whole business world solidly against you, nor what a tremendous power they wield to crush you. It is a case of fight back harder than they fight, and to get the jump on them first."

He went on developing his point, showing that only by this early and unexpected raid into the enemy's camp could the ultimate success of the project be assured.

Then he went on to point the moral by drawing a contrasting picture—Davenport in jail for contempt of court for refusing to discredit Grimstead's process, discredited, broke, and above all, inefficient; Davenport possessed of practically untold wealth, with the opportunity, if he so wished of repairing damage inevitable to the readjustment.

It was a pretty good plea, for a specious one. Grimstead himself was admirably impressed by it, and reconvinced of the entire justice and expediency of his course. Davenport, however, did not seem impressed. He arose from his log, remarked curtly that the situation was perfectly clear, and strode away in the direction of the creek crossing.

CHAPTER XVIII

"The Papers"

Burton overtook Larry at the stream's edge. She saw at once that he was furiously angry, so angry that he could not permit himself to utter a word. She took his hand.

He seized her hungrily, and they clung together for several moments while the calming, soothing influences swept through them. At length he released her with an explosive sigh. They had not kissed.

"Well, that is over!" he said. "Burton, oh, blessed one, if it had not been for you! Should have killed them both as they sa there. But I just kept thinking that he was your father—"

"I know," she soothed him. "I feel with you in every bit of it, whether he is my father or not. But let's not talk about it or we shall be crazy angry again, and that will do us no good."

"Where do you get your wisdom, Burton?" he asked her, and smiled.

At the smile she clasped her hand.

"That's better!" she cried. "Now we can talk about it. What are we to do?"

"There's one thing I'm not going to do," he stated with conviction, "no matter what the price to pay; I'm not going to permit this scheme of destruction!"

"How can it be stopped?" she asked. "Let's be practical."

"For one thing, I can refuse to give them my formula."

"And lose all you own and go to jail besides, as father told you," she pointed out.

"Well, I'll do that, if necessary."

"Listen, Larry, dear," she said. "You're not using your head. Wouldn't destroying that agreement you signed settle it all?"

"Burton, you blessed damsel," he cried. "You've got more sense in your little finger than I have in my whole body!"

"Of course that's the answer! Regular old melodrama stuff. Why, here's even the papers!"

He turned as if to put this new idea into immediate execution; but again she stopped him.

"Larry, you poor infant!" she cried. "It's time you had somebody to look after you! What do you think you're going to do?"

"Get the agreement. Don't you worry about their not handing over when I tell them to!"

"Yes, but they can swear that it was taken from them by force."

"Well, what would you do then?"

"I'd steal it. Then what proof have they, except each other's words! You could deny that. Would you lie nicely in a good cause, do you think?"

"I don't know; it wouldn't be necessary. I think the burden of proof would be on them. How will we do it?"

"Dissemble," she cried.

"Make them think that your opposition has blown over; that you're all ready to go ahead with father's scheme. Then father won't hang on to his bill fold too coarsely and—"

"How do you know it's in the bill fold?"

"I saw him put it there," she explained.

"Such a sudden about face on my part may not appeal to him," she said. "I've thought of that," she said. A slow color was mounting to her cheeks. "First of all it must become known who you are. He thinks you are a garage man, remember."

"I forgot that," laughed Davenport. "All right; I drop the disguise and appear in me full royal regalia as the Celebrated Author. Do you imagine that will impress him?"

"Then—she hesitated—

"Then we give him the plausible reason for your changing your mind."

"Which it?"

"The announcement of our engagement," she said in a voice so low that he barely heard it.

At this most unpropitious moment there came around the bend Simmins, lugging two infinitesimal trout.

"Damn!" muttered Davenport fervently.

But at Burton's suggestion Simmins was let into their secrets. "The paper belongs to me, and it is vitally necessary I get it back," Larry concluded.

"Will you help?"

"It will affect all our future happiness," put in Burton.

"It is only fair to say that if you are caught, it is probable I could help very little. If you succeed my wife and I—"

Davenport glanced triumphantly toward Burton—"will take care of you."

"It's a sporting chance, sir," said Simmins stoutly. "You have treated me like a gentleman and ere moonrise the papers shall be in our power!"

"Now, Simmins, listen," Larry impressed the point. "There are two papers. One is on a single sheet of paper; the other is on several. I want the one on the single sheet. The other doesn't matter. But if you should be in any doubt whatever, bring them both. All set?"

And then Simmins was dismissed from the scene, and matters were taken up at the point of interruption. They would not interest us.

CHAPTER XIX

Simmins, a True Knight

The campaign of dissembling went off with a bang. Grimstead's hostility melted easily. The impact of Davenport's identity as a famous author, instead of the mechanic he had believed him, was tremendous. The engagement finished him.

Davenport was an excellent match, he was a manly chap, and—if Grimstead could arrange it—he was going to be immensely wealthy. Of course he had a lot of damn-fool idealistic notions, but an author was supposed to be eccentric.

Supper passed jovially enough. Then Grimstead caused the hearts of three of the party to skip a beat.

"Simmins," he commanded little; it's got an awful fish smell about it."

As he spoke he took of the garment and hung it on a stub, replacing with a sweater. He removed nothing from the pockets, and all three of the conspirators could distinctly make out a corner of the bill-fold showing from the inside pocket.

Simmins picked up the coat, and with it started toward the creek.

"Hey!" called Grimstead after him. "Where you going? I don't want that thing washed!"

"No sir; of course not, sir. Merely a trifle of sponging, fresh running water, you know, sir," stammered Simmins at a loss.

"Well, go ahead. But there's some things in the pockets; look out you don't lose them. There's a tobacco pouch and a notebook in the side pocket, and my pocketbook in the inside pocket."

"Never fear, sir; I'll take the best of care," chattered Simmins, beating a hasty retreat.

"You're not afraid to trust him with a pocketbook?" Larry ventured to suggest.

Grimstead laughed.

"I wouldn't trust him with my roll," he agreed. "But that pocketbook contains nothing but papers; and they can all be replaced. There's nothing there to interest Simmins."

Burton and Larry exchanged another glance. It was almost too good to be true.

After 10 minutes Simmins glided unobtrusively into the firelight and hung the coat again on the stub.

"Here," Grimstead commanded at once, "bring me that pocketbook out of the inside pocket."

For a moment Simmins limbed refused to work; but he succeeded in extracting the pocketbook and bringing it to his master. Contrary to expectation, Grimstead did not open it. He examined Simmins curiously.

"You're trembling like leaf," he said. "What's the matter with you?"

Simmins muttered something about its being chilly by the stream.

"Well, bring me my small leather kit bag."

He opened the kit bag, burrowed down to the bottom, and tucked the bill fold beneath the flap.

"There! She'll stick safe enough there until we go. Take it back, Simmins."

"Yes, sir," said Simmins, "and if there is nothing more, sir, I ask permission to return to my camp to turn in."

"Well, take a drink before you go," offered Grimstead. "Here's the key. Your teeth are chattering."

Simmins gratefully swallowed the whiskey, returned the key and disappeared.

Larry and Burton wandered off toward the car and found Simmins waiting for them.

"Here, here; it is," he burst out, thrusting a paper into Larry's hands. "What is to happen when he discovers his loss, sir. I cannot for the life of me imagine."

They Challenge Comparison with the Proudest

Dodge Brothers magnificent Seniors have already achieved a unique and enviable distinction.

By delivering a quality of power unknown to their price class, they are no longer thought of in their price class, but challenge constant comparison with the proudest names in motordom.

Records of Senior brilliance are daily pouring in from all parts of America, and invariably the trend of owner enthusiasm runs the same—

"No car at any price can surpass Senior performance" . . . "I have owned several cars that cost more, but have never so thoroughly enjoyed driving" . . . "I should like to broadcast my impression of your new Senior. It is splendid!"

Once take the Senior wheel and you will understand why business men, unolicited, are writing letters of this character to Dodge Brothers.

realized he was in it. I'll settle with him later!"

"But the agreement—"

"Was not there, of course! I substituted the carbon copy."

"They'll detect the difference; it isn't signed."

"I signed it for him," grinned the man, "it isn't a very good forgery, but all he'll do tonight will be to examine it with a match to see if it's what he says."

"Clever work, chief," cried Gardiner. "But I don't see that it gets us far."

"It gets us until morning. And it corroborates my suspicions."

"Now, listen carefully, Ross," continued Grimstead, "for this is what you must do. You've got to get out of here, and you've got to get out of it in five minutes; you've got to take this agreement with you to the nearest recorder's and get it entered. That means you start tonight; just as soon as everybody has turned in."

Gardiner nodded.

"So far, so good. But there's another thing. This man is absolutely capable of laying down on us, no matter what agreements we may have."

"What do you mean?"

"Refuse his formula."

"But you can ruin him."

Doctor at 83 Found People Preferred His Prescription

The basis of treating illness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of simple and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong

TRIUMPHS OF RADIO

While the ultimate possibilities of radio, both for entertainment and commercial use, have not yet been grasped by the human mind, the advances in the art made during 1927 have been almost startling. Through the Federal Radio Act, a long step was taken toward the equitable control of the air, while the improvement of broadcasting systems and programs has made the individual receiving set a source of increased satisfaction. Receivers which operate directly off the home lighting circuit without the use of batteries have been fully developed and are now within the reach of persons of moderate means. A further exercise of control for the prevention of interference between stations is promised during the present year, which will undoubtedly add to the popularity of the radio. At present about the only fly in the radio ointment is the old enemy—static. But annoying as it is at times, it does not prevent one's getting a lot of enjoyment out of the excellent programs provided. And even static may possibly be conquered some day.

OFFENSIVE SIGNS

In keeping with what is becoming a world-wide protest against offensive signs and billboards, the authorities of Paris have decreed that no signs shall be displayed on its famous thoroughfares, the Champs Elysees, which advertise any goods not actually sold on the premises. Recently protests were heard in Spain concerning objectionable American billboards which mar the landscape. In this country the women's clubs and other organizations are waging a campaign against the billboard nuisance. By their erection of signboards which spoil the natural scenery along the highways, and by their encroachments in residential sections of our cities, the billboard people have brought upon themselves the just resentment of that section of the public which has regard for appearances. When we become more civilized the billboard will go the way of the town crier. As an advertising medium it is an anachronism already.

MALARIA VS. PARESIS

If we could only discover it, there maybe, as Jacques declares in "As You Like It," some "good in everything." It is unquestionably true that much that is good and useful has been found in most unexpected quarters. For example, in malaria germs. For quite a while experiments have been made which have tended to show that the germs of malaria have the property of controlling the progress of paresis, or partial paralysis. A report of cases made a few days ago by Dr. Edward Gillispie, assistant superintendent of the state hospital at Binghamton, N. Y., states that more than one-third of the patients suffering from paresis at that institution during recent months have been so improved by the injection of malaria germs into their blood that they have been permitted to go to their homes. Dr. Gillispie does not claim that this treatment can be relied upon as a cure, but among the cases treated all but about one-third have shown a favorable response. This is a most hopeful indication of progress toward control of one of the most dreaded diseases which menaces mankind. The idea of setting one disease to fight another is fascinating and may have great possibilities as applied to therapeutics of the future.

A PETTY BUSINESS

It has been said that Uncle Sam is a poor business man. Most of his excursions into business of magnitude have resulted rather disastrously for the taxpayers who have to pay his losses. Possibly that is why he engages in the business of printing envelopes in competition with private citizens. In such petty business he appears to shine. He might be a great success in running a chain of government-operated peanut stands. There would be about as much excuse for one activity as the other. Private printers must pay taxes, licenses and other overhead charges, besides they must make some profit if they are to continue to exist. Uncle Sam has none of these conditions to meet. The money lost by the Post Office Department is made up by further taxation, drawn in part from the very citizens who are injured by this uncalled-for competition. Bills are before Congress whose object is to end this unfair and utterly indefensible practice of printing envelopes by the government. The small-town printers who are greatly handicapped by the practice—mostly publishers of community weekly newspapers—are asking for relief from this injustice. Other business men, who stand for the principle of private instead of public control of business, should rally to the support of the printers in their eminently just demand that this rotten practice be stopped. No Senator or Congressman possessed of even an elementary sense of fair dealing should fail to see why it should be stopped, or fail to vote to stop it.

The high school students had read and heard much about the Cisco bank robbery, but on last Wednesday we found we knew very little about it. The Rev. O'Brien, who has resided in and around Cisco for a number of years, told us the story of the robbery and the chase. In order that we might understand his talk better, he drew a diagram of Cisco and the surrounding country. When Bro. O'Brien went to Cisco a few days after the robbery, he visited the men who did the robbing and learned from them many things that were not told in the newspapers. His talk was enjoyed by all and we hope that we shall have the pleasure of listening to him again.

Mr. Standley was absent from school the latter part of that week because of the illness of his sister in Amarillo. We were glad to see him back in school Monday morning and to hear that his sister is better.

Illness caused Mrs. Rhodes to be absent from school the latter part of last week. Miss Lane took her classes. We are always sorry to hear of the illness of either teacher or pupil, so we are very glad to report that she is much better and is back in school today.

Monday afternoon before the high school student body sweaters were given to nine football letter men and to coaches Palmer and Elliott. Mr. Rhodes made a speech before awarding the sweaters, then Mr. Palmer and Mr. Elliott made short speeches. Mr. Palmer made us prouder of our boys when he related an incident that proved them absolutely honest. Mr. Standley told us of his appreciation of the boys and the praise that they deserve. Otis Burnett expressed the pleasure that he had enjoyed from his association with the coaches and the boys of the team.

The sweaters this year are different from any that have been awarded. Heretofore the sweaters have been slip-ons and have been gold with the purple letter. This year they are light coat-sweaters with the purple background with gold letters and stripes.

Two boys who were to get sweaters have moved away and two have quit school, but they will get their sweaters just the same.

The tournament does not end until February 24, so don't fail to come, as it will be a year until the tournament comes ag'n after that date.

Seniors
Three of the boys of our class received sweaters. The most highly decorated sweater went to our honorable class mate, Truman White. Preacher is sure proud of the star on his sweater sleeve, because he thinks that some people will suppose it is a mark of honor. Otis Burnett and Truman Mann went to Wichita Falls Sunday. These two young men made a business trip to Knox City last Wednesday.

Ruby Manuel, Bertha McNeil, Evelyn Curry, Lucille Collins and Odell Freeman went on a hike Thursday afternoon. They walked out to the home of Bertha McNeil. They cooked a delicious picnic supper and had a wonderful time.

We are proud of our classmate, Otis Burnett. After receiving his sweater he made an excellent talk.

Elton Busby was the other member of our class that received a sweater. He has promised his girl friends that they might wear his sweater when he has worn the new off. Elton is just good natured and can't help it.

Juniors
Some of the Junior boys went to Wichita Falls Friday. We had a real time from the time we left until we returned. We hope to go back some time.

Some of the other Junior boys went to Benjamin Friday. They went on club work, but nevertheless, they report a good time.

Frances Atkison was in Wichita Falls Friday afternoon and stayed over the weekend. Frances said that she had lots of fun and we are sure that she did.

Grade 7 A.
Our room has been running a race in spelling. The side that lost had to entertain the other side. We were entertained at the home of Ruth Rice. We certainly did have a good time. Mrs. Mann and Miss Bowden were there part of the time, but left for the ball game. When they came in we were playing "Spin the Bottle," and were seeing who was the meanest. The bottle pointed straight to them. We were served popcorn balls, marshmallows and weenies. After the refreshments were served some of the boys left for the ball game, but the rest stayed and played other games.

We surely are proud of one of our class mates, Fayette Edwards, who received a sweater. We think he looks very nice.

Freshmen
"We are awake while others sleep"

We have been promised a party soon! and that is something new to us, as we always have to work so hard for a place to get one. Lela Brock is going to give us a Valentine party. At last! Helen Frances got to go to Wichita Falls. She says she had a better time than she had ever planned.

Miss Mills, in science class: "Paul, what does the air have in it?" Paul: "Airplanes."

Joe Ed Duval went to Seymour Sunday. We are sure he had a good time.

Moguls 8-Seymour 7
Tuesday night the Moguls beat Seymour in a fast game 8-7. White scored 5 of the 8 points for the Moguls while Gorman scored 5 of the 7 points for Seymour for high scoring honors.

Independents 28-Seymour 13
The Independents defeated the Seymour Independents Tuesday night 28-13. Blacklock was high point man for Munday with 9 points while Mehear scored 5 points for Seymour.

The Tournament
Friday night the tournament began with Knox City beating Vera for the first game. In the second game Gillespie beat Gilliland in a fast contest. Then came the third game, the "thriller" of the evening. The Moguls went into action against the strong Goree team, beating them 35-32 after playing an extra period. Captain White ruined two baskets by scoring 21 of the 35 points. A Stratton scored 15 of the 32 points for Goree for high scoring honors. The fourth game was not very fast and therefore not very interesting. Truscott beat Benjamin by a large score.

Saturday night Benjamin beat Gilliland by a few points in the first game. In the second game our Moguls were cheered as they came upon the court by the fans. This game was more nerve-racking than the game the night before. It was anybody's game until the final whistle blew and Truscott stood one point in the lead, 13-12. A field goal in the last thirty seconds won for Truscott. Never before have the fans of this county seen such a basket ball game. The Moguls' defense was superior to Truscott's, though their offense was not as strong. This game was equal to most college games. White was high point man for the Moguls with 8 points, while Eubanks was high point man for Truscott with 8 points. In the third game, Goree beat Vera by a large score and in the last game Knox City beat Gillespie by a few points.

HEFNER P. T. A. HAD LARGE ATTENDANCE

Some small showers are falling in this vicinity here of late but they do not put the farmers to the plow. Agoodrain is very muchly needed.

A great many of the Hefnerites attended the dedication of the new Methodist church at Seymour last Sunday. All report a large crowd and a great sermon.

Bro. Hulme filled the pulpit at the Methodist church last Sunday, both at morning and at night. A large crowd was out.

Mr. E. Holder and family are in Wichita Falls this week. Mr. I. N. Mobley was in Seymour last Sunday to attend dedication services at the new Methodist church of that place.

Mr. Ed Tidwell and family and Mr. Everett Zellers and family were in Hefner community last Sunday. The P. T. A. was in session last Friday at 3 p. m., and was attended by the largest number of patrons since it was organized. County Supt. Mrs. P. Pool made an address on "Standardization of the School". She thought Hefner school met the qualification as a standard "A" school. She was well pleased with the Clean-up Campaign that was on to put the school in order for the State inspector. The school has made many improvements on playground equipment and other needed features. Hefner has a corps of teachers who work.

Mr. Louie Jones and family were visiting the bed side of his sick father who lives in Parker county last week.

Mr. Carl Jones of Ra's, Texas, who recently moved from this vicinity, was the guest of his father-in-law, Mr. Boggs last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cure attended the P. T. A. and Epworth conventions held at Knox City Saturday, January 28th. They went as delegates and reported a great time.

Mrs. M. H. Stone is visiting the bedside to her brother, Mr. Jas. Baker, of San Antonio, Texas. Mr. Baker is reported seriously ill, no hopes for his recovery.

Mr. Harvey Butler and family were visiting relatives in Goree last Saturday and Sunday.

The box supper at the Methodist church was fairly well attended and the proceeds from the sale of the boxes were $23.35. Some repairs will be done on the church out of this sum.

Rev. Hulme of Munday and Mr. Kennedy, editor of the Munday Times, will deliver addresses at the meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association Friday 17, 3:00 p. m. at the Hefner School Auditorium. Every body invited. The Rev. Hulme's address will be "The Relation of the Parent toward the Teacher". We have not learned what Mr. Kennedy's address is to be.

THE Woman's Missionary Society of the Baptist church will hold a Saturday market at the E-B Cash Grocery and Market on Saturday, at which they will sell cakes, pies and dressed chicken. Be sure to come in and get some of the good things that will be on sale.

The name of Lincoln is linked inseparably with a love for his fellow men, a passion for the welfare of humanity. Dealing with a Nation's destiny, he came to be clothed with a nation's majesty. In his own great heart, as in a nation's crucible, he assembled and resolved the nation's complexities; and in his own pure unselfish desire, as in a nation's purified hopes, he defined and described our national goal. Abraham Lincoln's conscience was his only guide — his conscience was king. Altho Lincoln's face has long vanished, his voice hushed, this sweet and beautiful soul — one of the most beloved characters in American History will live forever.

THE NEW FORD car is here, and we have had the pleasure of demonstrating it to hundreds, and the verdict of those who have driven it is the same as has been the verdict of the thousands of people who have driven the new Ford—it is even better than the public had expected—it takes the rough spots as no other car can take them—it has the speed—it is easy to handle—it has the quickest pick-up—and the new four-wheel brakes insure the utmost safety in operation—in fact, the verdict of the public it that it is the best value on the automobile market—and many who have waited feel well repaid for their wait.

We extend a cordial invitation to all who have not witnessed a demonstration to visit us, or call us, and we shall be glad to demonstrate it—you'll be surprised at the performance of the car.

INDUSTRY HELPS AGRICULTURE BUILD UP THE SMALL TOWN

Decentralization of Manufacturing Brings Markets for Products Closer to the Farm—Gives Employment and Better Standards of Living to Rural Communities.

By T. R. PRESTON President, American Bankers Association

NO class of people has been more diligent in trying to understand the agricultural problem than the bankers of this country. The agricultural problem is a real problem and demands the best thought of everyone. This country cannot continue along happy lines with only sections of the country prosperous. Prosperity must be passed around if anybody is long to enjoy it. This question cannot be solved by the farmers alone, but the majority opinion is that there is no legislative remedy for agriculture. It is an economic question pure and simple and must be worked out accordingly.

A few years ago it was contended that agriculture did not have sufficient credit facilities. That proposition was often made a political question. I do not presume there are many who will question the fact that agriculture now has ample credit facilities.

Mixing Farms and Factories

It is a fact that no community and no state has ever become great purely from agriculture. It is not to the interest of New York and other great centers to see the small communities and the agricultural sections losing their wealth and importance. In the end it will mixing examples from my own state to prove this proposition, and I mention these because I am more familiar with conditions there than elsewhere. Twelve years ago Kingsport, Tennessee, had a population of about one thousand. Great industries like a large camera company, a big cement plant and a number of other industries were located there partly through the influence of an outstanding New York business man. In a little more than twelve years these have brought the population of that city up to seventeen thousand. Just a few miles away, at Elizabethton, they are building a great rayon plant, the first unit to cost $3,000,000. The population of that town is now two thousand, but it is estimated that this will be multiplied by five in less than two years. It is stated that the total investment in manufacturing industry in that community within a period of five years will probably reach $25,000,000.

The balancing of industry and agriculture will solve most of our so-called agricultural problems and we will not need such political measures as will in my opinion, do harm if enacted to the very class they pretend to benefit.

Mixing Industry With Agriculture Means Prosperity for Rural Districts and agriculture is called by some decentralization of industry. I would not suggest that manufacturing installations move from the cities to the small villages, but I do think it would be better for this country for future industries to be placed in these small villages rather than to be further congested in the great centers. This would in part also be a solution of our labor problem. The bringing of industries to small villages increases the market for agricultural products, gives employment to surplus labor, elevates the standard of living, increases public revenue, reduces taxes and vastly increases school facilities.

AN ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE BY OLD WRITER

Beautiful Tribute To the Book of All Books by An Unknown

(Editor's note: The following document was found many years ago in Westminster Abbey, nameless and dateless. It was reprinted in The Childress Post 17 or 18 years ago, a clipping being preserved by J. T. F. Billingsley, of Kirkland, who has loaned it to us for passing on to the present generation. Its statements are worth reading, and reflection on its conclusions, by any whose eyes chance to fall on it.)

When the last hour comes to me, when in that upper chamber, long past midnight, the flickering light burns lowly, and passing forms noiselessly and quickly too plainly show that death is there; when the bleak winter's wind whistles from without, or sends its melancholy moan through the lattice, alternating with the groan of the dying; when the soft tread and the slightest whisper falls harshly on the last scene; when feeling and sight, and taste, and speech are all gone, but immortal thought, the more immortal as it shakes away its mortal shackles, still lives in its freshness of eternal youth; in such an hour, when this present body shall have been wasted to a skeleton, this hand palsied by the strength, the eyes glazed with the film of the grave, this cheek blanched with the last chill, this forehead—high and white, and broad, and clear now—shall be thickly studded with the dew drops of death and this tongue falters out the last farewell to the dear ones around, so long loved and labored and cared for; when such an hour comes to me, I want to feel the ineffable consolation that something said or done, some sentence, published, some page composed, some sentiment recorded, shall live after me; which shall, in its influence, continue to benefit and bless some candidate for the skies to the last hour or recorded time. Feeling this now and heretofore, I desire to repeat of the Bible, that:

A nation would be truly happy if it were governed by no other law than those of this book.

It is so complete a system that nothing can be added to it or taken from it. It contains everything needful to be known or done; it affords a copy for a king and a rule for a subject; it gives instruction and counsel to a senate, authority and direction to a magistrate; it cautions a witness, requires an impartial verdict of a jury, and furnishes a judge with his sentence;

It sets the husband as lord of the household, and the wife as mistress of the table—tells him how to rule, how to manage; it entails power to parents, and teaches obedience to children. It prescribes and limits the way of sovereigns the rule of the ruler, and the authority of the master, commands the subject to honor and the servants to obey, and promises the blessing and protection of the Almighty to all that walk by its rules;

It gives directions for weddings and burials;

It promises food and raiment, and limits the use of both;

It points out a faithful and eternal guardian to the departing husband and father and tells him with whom to leave his fatherless children, and in whom his widow is to trust; and promises a father to the former and husband to the latter;

It teaches a man how to set his house in order, and how to make his will; it appoints a dowry for his wife and entails the right of the first born, and shows how the younger branches shall be left;

It defends the right of all and reveals vengeance to every defaulter, over-reacher and oppressor.

It is the first book, the best book and the oldest book in the world;

It contains the choicest matter, gives the best instruction, affords the greatest pleasure and satisfaction that ever were enjoyed; it contains the best laws and the most profound mysteries that ever were penned; brings the best of tidings and affords the best of comfort to the inquiring and disconsolate;

It exhibits life and immortality from everlasting and shows the way to glory;

It is a brief recital of all that is past and a certain prediction of all that is to come.

It settles all matters in debate, resolves all doubts and eases the mind and conscience of all their scruples;

It reveals the only living and true God and shows the way to Him and sets aside all other gods, and describes the vanity of them and all that trust in such; in short, it is a book of laws to show right and wrong; a book of wisdom that condemns all folly and makes the foolish wise; a book of truth that detects all lies and confutes all errors, and a book of life that shows the way from everlasting death.

It is the most compendious book in the world—the most authentic and the most entertaining history that was ever published.

It contains the most ancient antiquities, strange events, wonderful occurrences, heroic deeds and unparalled wars;

It describes the celestial, terrestrial and infernal worlds and the origin of the angelic myriads, human tribes, and devilish legions;

It will instruct the accomplished mechanic and the most profound artist;

It teaches the best rhetoric, puzzles the wisest anatomist, and exercises the wisest critic;

It corrects the vain philosopher, confutes the wise sophist and makes divines mad;

It is a complete code of laws a perfect body of divinity, an unequalled narrative—a book of lives—a book of travels—a book of voyages.

It is the best covenant that ever was agreed on—the best deed that ever was sealed—the best evidence that ever was produced—the best note that ever was signed; to under stand it is to be wise indeed; to be ignorant of it is to be destitute of wisdom;

It is the king's best copy, the magistrate's best rule, the house-wife's best guide, the servant's best directory, the young man's best companion; it is the school boy's best spelling book and the learned man's masterpiece;

It contains choice grammar for a novice and a profound mystery for a sage;

It is the ignorant man's dictionary and the wise man's directory.

It affords knowledge of witty inventions for the humorous and dark sayings for the grave, and is its own interpreter;

It encourages the wise, the warrior, the swift, the over-comer, and promises an eternal reward to the excellent, the conqueror, the winner, and the prevalent; and that which crowns all is, that the author is without partiality and without hypocrisy "In whom is no variableness or shadow of turning."

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1927-28 by Wynne Ferguson
Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

ARTICLE No. 10

Some of the most difficult questions of auction arise when one side has made a bid of five or more and one of the opponents has doubled. Shall the doubler's partner leave in the double or shall he renege his own suit? If he decides to leave in the double and it is his opening lead, what suit shall he open? Shall he open his own or his partner's declared suit? Or shall he open on a suit that has not been bid?

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and passed. A passed. Y bid four clubs. B bid four hearts. Z and A passed and Y bid five clubs. B doubled and Z passed. What should A do? Should he leave the double in or bid five hearts? This hand has been submitted to seven well-known players, two of whom said A should pass and try to defeat the club bid. Three said A should take his partner out of the double and bid five hearts. The remaining two said it was a toss-up. The varying opinions of these players show the difficulty of such hands, and how easy it is to do the wrong thing. To the writer, however, it seems obligatory to bid five hearts with A's hand. The great number of hearts in his hand makes it certain that B cannot take a trick in that suit, something he undoubtedly is counting on. A, of course, has one sure trick, the ace of clubs, but that trick no more than offsets the loss of B's expected heart tricks. For that reason, A should figure that Y-Z will make five clubs and he should, therefore, bid five hearts. There is a good chance to make the bid and thus win game and rubber; but even if it loses, A-B will surely save game and rubber. All in all, A's bid seems to have hearts. As a matter of fact, Y-Z can make five clubs and A-B five hearts. Y, of course, had a freak hand, as follows:

Answer to Problem No. 12

Hearts—10, 9, 7
Clubs—Q, J, 6
Diamonds—A, J
Spades—none

Hearts—A
Clubs—9, 8

Spades—none

Hearts—K, Q, J, 8
Clubs—none
Diamonds—K, 7
Spades—8, 6

Spades is trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y-Z win six of the eight tricks against a weak defense? How can A-B play so that they can make three tricks, respectively of Y-Z's play? Z should lead the seven of diamonds and play the jack of diamonds from Y's hand. Y should now lead the queen of clubs on which Z should discard the king of diamonds. Y should now lead the jack of clubs. If B makes the mistake of trumping this trick, Y-Z can win all the remaining tricks except two. Suppose B trumps with the deuce of spades. Z should over-trump and lead the king of hearts which A must win. A must then lead a diamond. Y plays the ace and if B trumps, Z will again over-trump. The only trick that B can then make is the nine of spades. At trick three, however, B could have prevented this result by discarding a heart and Z should discard a high heart. Y should lead another club, and this lead of clubs B should trump with the deuce of spades, which Z should over-trump. Z then should lead his top heart as before, losing to A's ace. When A leads a low diamond, however, B should discard his last heart. Y must now lead a heart which B should trump with his seven of spades and Z cannot over-trump as he still has one more heart. B must also make his nine of spades and therefore win three of the eight tricks. Study this problem carefully as it is very instructive.

his friends. But there was one cattle man who stood by him and that was Col. Charles Goodnight of the Texas Panhandle. When Frank P. Holland asked Charles Goodnight what he thought of such a project as establishing an agricultural paper in Texas he replied: "There is no such paper in the State, but it is certainly needed and with your ability and if you have the nerve and the money to back it, it will have to succeed." And Frank P. Holland's answer was: "I have no money but I think I have the nerve."

IMPROVING LIVING ROOMS

By Grace Nelson, Co.H. D. To encourage interest in more comfortable living rooms; to demonstrate the best use of what is on hand, as well as the wisest expenditure of money, and to emphasize the most suitable furnishings are the aims of the State-wide improved living room program, sponsored by the Extension Service.

The living-room is the one room of the house where the family life centers and to be successful it should provide for the comfort, convenience and pleasure of each member of the household, from the youngest to the oldest. For comfort it is essential that there is plenty of sunshine and fresh air, and that there is an efficient method of heating the room in winter. It is on the long winter evenings that the family benefits most by a cheerful, comfortable living room. Well fitted durable screens are a necessity for the larger part of the year. Comfortable chairs and some kind of couch are needed for rest. But in the living room one should find inspiration for thought and work as well as temptation to rest, and this can be furnished by a few good pictures on the walls, books and music. Bookcases or shelves for the books make it more convenient to use them and easier to care for the room. Tables placed near chairs where magazines can be easily put add much to the comfort and convenience. Good lamps are essential for reading or study—adequate light, both natural and artificial, should be provided.

One way to create a home-like atmosphere is to group the furniture as is most convenient for use, such as inviting places for reading, a quiet corner for writing, chairs turned to suggest a friendly visit, a study place for the children and provisions for recreation. Study your own room and decide honestly if it is furnished for convenience rather than for appearance alone. Does it furnish both rest and recreation, and does it meet the needs of each member of the family? As a final test does it look inviting?

The very next issue brought them the necessary relief by telling them how to save their potatoes from rotting. Truly the pen is mightier than the sword when it comes to building farms and ranches and homes and schools and nations. Col. Frank P. Holland was a builder of better homes throughout the world because he was a man with a world vision for all humanity.

He not only understood our domestic needs but understood our international needs and laws and relations. When Col. Frank P. Holland passed away the whole world lost a friend.

Just to illustrate his service to his country one of his neighbors, Mrs. Alvah Walker, told this little story. "Years ago an old German couple came to Texas. Of course they were thrifty. They worked early and late and soon their sod farm was covered with cotton and corn. Then the drought came. And it lasted one, two, three years. Things were getting serious. The cows, the garden, and every thing else was drying up. One day Farm and Ranch came with a removal slip enclosed. "Rachel" said the old farmer, "guess we'll have to stop Farm and Ranch." "No, no!" said Rachel, "not while there's a dollar in the house."

All Texas Loses A Friend

Phebe K. Warner broad inviting Texas, with her limitless prairies and boundless plains. But already the cities were beginning to stack up their skyscrapers. People had started the fashion of living in tiers one above another and all this beautiful, fertile land here in Texas lying bare as God made it waiting for a man with a hoe and a plow to come and take possession of it. For a few years the young man, Frank P. Holland, practiced his literary art on other publications, but as the months passed, his vision of a land of happy homes, little children, school houses dotting the land, orchards, gardens, flowers and a new Empire grew more vivid. But as usual when a young man has an unselfish vision for the little world in which he discovers himself and a great ambition to make the most of his new world for all the people in it, Frank P. Holland was confronted with all the discouragement and adverse advice of the "wise men" who wanted to inherit the whole country for their own selfish purposes. "This is a cattle country. You can't make a farming country out of it." Such was the advice he received from most of

(Continued from front page) "He'll stand that. He'll stand for anything now he's got his head set! That's the sort they used to use the thumb rack on without much success. Could you analyze this battery, if you had it, and reproduce the formula?"

"Certainly, if what he says is true, that the plates are a simple alloy, and there is no further secret. It will only be necessary to analyze them, measure their exact proportions, determine their specific gravity, and observe carefully any peculiarities of their shape and position."

"Remember, their distance from each other is important."

"That, of course. I see your idea. We are to steal the battery."

"It must weigh 40 pounds," objected Gardiner. "Do we hide it somewhere?"

"No, you'll drive it out. The roads will now carry you; I've been watching them. Put the battery back in that rattletrap of his and drive it out."

Gardiner pondered.

"When we stop that self-starter it will be noticed," he objected "and there'll be a lot of noise getting away. Simmins sleeps right next door. What do I do with him?"

"Simmins is already taken care of," said the pirate chief calmly.

"He will continue to sleep. That drink I gave him will fix that."

"Doped?" surmised Gardiner.

"Just that. Morphine from the medicine case. And we'll feed Davenport a little of the same."

"Chief, you're a wonder! You think of everything!" cried Gardiner admiringly. "I'd suggest you tie him up after he goes under or he'll likely raise hell when he comes to."

"I expect to," said Grimstead. "Look out; here they come! You understand your job and remember, it's the biggest stake in the world!"

CHAPTER XXI Punketty-Snivvel's Revenge

Events ran smoothly along the plant laid out for them by the pirate chief. Burton and Davenport returned shortly to the campfire. At a suitable time a night-cap was proposed and drunk. Soon after, with Burton in her darkened tent and Davenport deep in stupor, the conspirators had the place to themselves.

Silence rushed in upon the dying clatter as into vacuum. Gardiner paused long enough to look in on Simmins. That worthy had not stirred.

It was the work of but a few moments more to reinstall Davenport's strange storage battery in the other car.

Gardiner found the engine much more flexible than any gasoline car he had ever driven. For a few minutes he amused himself by bringing it almost to a stop and then picking up smoothly and positively by merely opening the throttle. He then started out and settled down to the sheer pleasure of driving as fast as his skill would permit.

He was a good driver, and he understood well how to pick up on the straightaways and just how much to check at the curves. And he was a safe driver, as genuine skill is usually safe.

But Gardiner was not alone in the car. No less a personage than Punketty-Snivvels occupied the seat next him, but the little dog's protective coloration had concealed him from Gardiner's notice.

Gardiner flashed around a last corner to see ahead of him a straight bridge. The lights showed him its approach on a slight rise, and that it was built on a high trestle. Then the nose of the car touched the slight rise and the lights lifted.

At the same instant Punketty-Snivvels, whose hate had worked up to a point of action, reached out and bit Gardiner in the wrist!

Gardiner, who had not known of the dog's presence, jumped in surprise and alarm. The car swerved, but he was too cool a driver to permit it to leave the road. However, for three seconds his attention was deflected and that time was sufficient to shoot the car on to the planking of the bridge.

Gardiner saw all this with the corner of his eye and steered and true, while at the same time his direct vision was occupied in identifying the covering little dog. Then he looked back to the front.

Before him yawned an abyss. The bridge had been carried away by the flood!

Even while he reached for the brake his brain photographed clearly the jagged edges of the lights, and dimly far below a white and phosphorescent tumble of waters hastening to the sea.

The brakes checked the momentum almost but not quite enough. The car slowed, ran off the edge, seemed for an instant to hover right side up like a bird.

Then down it plunged and the foaming, turbulent waters seized it and bore it shouting away.

CHAPTER XXII And Rapsallion Does His Stuff

By the campfire Grimstead strained his ears to catch the last sounds of Gardiner's departure. Things were going very well. They always did go well, he had found, when directed masterfully.

Burton, as he had foreseen, did not stir in her tent. She was young and slept soundly, especially in the first part of the night.

After awhile he threw away his cigar, stretched and arose. First he leaned over Davenport for a moment, listening to his ratchet stertorous breathing. Then he sauntered to the big redwood at whose base the kitchen had been made.

Here he deliberately unknotted a short piece of line that had been used to suspend a shading bit of canvas, and with it returned toward the sleeper. He was thoroughly satisfied, and was humming a little tune.

In his brief absence another had added himself to the scene. Rapsallion had shared the tent with Burton. Now, however, urged by some vague restlessness, some telepathic uneasiness some trickle from the current searching out a channel of his doggy mind, he had deserted the warm and grateful nest and had come forth to sit by his master.

Grimstead paid him no attention; but, cord in hand, advanced upon the sleeper. Now the queer thing happened.

Rapsallion was the most friendly of dogs, ever polite and eager, whose experiences with humans had always been courteous. Also he was, of course, thoroughly familiar with Grimstead.

Now, however, he arose to stiff legs, his eyes blazing, the coarse hair of his back and neck erect, his lips snarled back. Grimstead paused.

"Here, Rap, you old fool!" he admonished in a low voice. "What ails you?"

And again stepped forward. Instantly Rapsallion uttered two sharp and challenging barks.

The sleeper did not stir; no sound came from the tent. Grimstead stepped forward again.

Now Rapsallion did not know what it was all about. Only his simple dog mind had received the impression that, unexplainedly and for the first time, the proximity of this large human meant trouble to Master; and his simple dog code told him to stick tight, say as much as he could about it, and, in extremity to do his utmost.

If he had a private thought apart, which is improbable, it was a reflecting on of despair at relative sizes and powers; but it did not affect his course of conduct. He began again to bark rapidly and warningly.

As Grimstead continued to advance he bobbed forward and back a few inches as though propelled by a spring.

These things impressed Grimstead just so far as to cause him to pick up a heavy, club-shaped billet of wood, a weapon that plainly outgunned the armament of a little red-dog who fought at 15 pounds.

At this moment Burton appeared from the tent.

"Dad!" she cried, "what are you doing with that club and that rope? I'll keep him quiet."

Her first sleepy thought was that the dog's barking had awakened Grimstead and exasperated him to the point of canicide.

As her mind cleared and focused, however, her eyes widened with terror. Davenport's immobility amid all this noise, Grimstead's day attire; what did it mean?

She dashed forward to Larry, and, undeterred by Rapsallion, fell on her knees at his side.

"What have you done?" "What have you done?" she cried, terror-stricken.

"Nothing, nothing at all—he's perfectly all right!" cried Grimstead, whose one idea was to reassure her before she lost control of her self. "He's not hurt. He'll be as well as ever in the morning."

But by this time Burton had assured herself that Larry was living and un hurt, and rose slowly to her feet. Her brow was puckered in thought. "You've drugged him!" she decided at last. She pondered for a moment more, then raised her head.

"The engine has stopped—you have stolen the car!" she cried in sudden enlightenment. A deep scorn rose to the surface of her eyes. "And now you were going to tie him! You're afraid of what he might do!"

On the passing of the danger of hysterics Grimstead became himself again. This was too big a matter to permit of sentiment. He spoke brusquely.

"This is not woman's business, Burton," said he, "and you must not interfere. No harm is intended to your young man. Indeed, I am saving him from himself, and in the future he will thank me for making him a rich man instead of permitting him to ruin himself by foolishness."

"He will never thank you; and I will never forgive you!" she cried passionately.

PERFECTED WHIPPET MARKED BY UNUSUAL LINES OF BEAUTY

NOTABLE REFINEMENTS ADD TO DISTINCTIVENESS OF CAR; KEEN INTEREST IS SHOWN IN PERFECTED MODELS

Unusual lines of beauty and design are characteristic features of the perfected Whippet which is being presented at the lowest prices in the entire history of the Willys-Overland Company. The recent price reduction in the Whippet places this modern car in direct price competition with the lowest priced models in the light car field.

Although the basic principles of Whippet design are retained in the perfected models, certain refinements have been made which add materially to the beauty and grace of the car. Each model is distinctive for its rich exterior color combination while the interior appointments have a distinct luxury tone.

The perfect Whippet retains the low swung body, a type of design that has since been adopted by many other manufacturers, not only in the light car field but in cars that sell in the higher price ranges.

The long sweeping lines of the Whippet from the nickle-plated radiator to the rear are accentuated through the employment of full crowned fenders. In place of old type sun visor, which was formed by a continuation of the roof line, a cadet type sun visor is used on the perfected Whippet. This imparts a smart military effect to the cowl section and also provides a wider range of vision.

Interior improvements likewise carry out the aim of the manufacturer to even increase the quality and equipment of the Whippet despite the new low prices. Remote door controls have replaced the type of locks, this providing an additional convenience for driver and passengers. An automatic windshield wiper is now standard equipment in place of the hand operated wiper on the original Whippets.

The rich upholstery blends perfectly with the exterior color schemes in each of the various models. The metal trimmings also are in keeping with the noticeable stamp of luxury. Not only are these interiors marked by luxury but utmost roominess is provided for driver and passengers.

The unusual reception being accorded the perfected Whippet in every city, town and hamlet of the nation since the price reduction was announced, indicates that this modern light car has quickly reached a position of quality leadership in the light car field.
