Study Plan for Crop Insurance

Idea Is to Try It on Wheat in 1938; How It Will Work on Individual Farm

By EARL GODWIN

ASHINGTON-The government is preparing to embark on the plan to insure the wheat crop of the country, beginning in 1938; and a bill to provide for the Federal Crop Insurance corporation, introduced by Senator Pope of .daho is being studied. It follows the suggestion made by President Roosevelt in a recent message and incorporates the views of an agricultural department committee which has given long and serious thought to the matter.

It is certainly not a new idea. Crop insurance has been longed for and proposed and tried out here and elsewhere. The thing runs back a long way, but the first mention of it here was a Japanese trial made under the auspices of a German economist back in the eighties. Private insurance companies have tried it out disastrously in this country, fexcept as to hail insurance), failing because they bit off more than they could chew when they tried to insure crop prices in addition to crop yields.

In this new government crop insurance ideal the premiums will be paid in wheat or a cash equivalent, a lien on the crop, or some other security. But one definite proposal is to use the premiums thus collected to build up a vast storage of wheat against the day when a national shortage requires going to the bins and distributing the stored - up wheat.

The immediate query from individuals is "How it will work on an individual farm?" It works like insurance on anything else-business enterprise or human life. The amount of insurance on any farm is to be determined by the average yield on that particular farm; the farmer to be insured a percentage on the average yield of his farm over a period of years. This insures the crop and not the price The examples given to congress by the President are based upon a six years' average. This provides for low premiums on farms with low average yields, but it does not prevent a good coverage on farms that produce good yields. Wherever possible both the premium and the indemnity are to be in bushels of wheat.

On one farm where figures were used for the purpose of a simple explanation, the average yield per acre for six years was eight bushels. To insure a wheat crop on that farm the experts conclude that a premium of one and one third bushels of wheat would be charged. This is one single farm, in a section near Washington, D. C. The principle would be the same elsewhere, but the figures might be different.

Although the insurance corporation which would be set up under the present plan will be able eventually to insure other crops, wheat is chosen as the first to be insured for two reasons: One, the wheat farmers appear to be more strongly united behind the idea; two, because the program is experimental and it seems wiser to start with a single commodity. In addition, there is a further limitation; the insurance plan will probably be open only to farmers participating in the present soil erosion program, because this crop insurance plan will be made a part and parcel of the whole extensive agricultural program. Parenthetically it should be said that the administration's agricultural experts believe the best crop insur ance program was the A. A. A. program which has been killer by the Supreme court's idea that agriculture is a local and not an interstate aflair.

Statistical sharks working on the possibilities of insured wheat crops say that had there been widespread wheat-crop insurance during the past six years, wheat farmers actually would have received some of the benefit of increased prices-a blessing generally saved for the speculators instead of the producers. This would come about by means of the storage of wheat from premiums in good years and the reduction of such reserves in the poor years. They base this on the returns from the great plains area. Payments of premiums with wheat in that area from 1930-1932 inclusive would have piled up a 75,000,000 bushel wheat reserve. In the next three years the drouths would have wiped out the reserves, for they would have been paid back to drouth stricken insured wheat farmers. Paying that insurance back in wheat would net the farmers a profit. The wheat paid in premiums was worth about $60,000,000; the wheat paid back as insurance would have been worth $100,000,000-a profit of $40,000,000 to the wheat farmers of the great plains. It looks good. Whether or not this specula tive feature is authentic, the best view here is that crop insurance will reduce to some extent the necessity for seed loans, feed loans, drouth relief and similar emergency aids. Because of this reduction in relief the government would be justified in contributing toward the administration and storage expenses of a crop insurance corporation. The federal expenditures in agricultural relief total about $615,000,000 for the past ten years; and this does not include the A. A. A. benefit payments.

Government experience in insurance includes the famous war risk insurance, insuring ships under the American flag. The insurance placed was $2,250,000,000, the premiums collected $46,000,000; the losses paid $29,000,000-profit! $17. 000,000. The cost of administering this enormous business for four years was only $165,000, which is proof that government can run ? business.

A large section of the power trust has decided it is cheaper to obey the holding company act and register with the Securities and Excange commission than fight it. So the two tremendous holding companies known as the North American company, ($1,250,000,000) and the American Water Works and Electric company, ($500,000,000) have placed their names on the register in the office of Jim Landis, keen and tireless chairman of the S. E. C. That means 67 out of 265 Power Trust Holding companies submit' voluntarily to government regulations. The rest are still holding out, possibly waiting for the final settlement of the law suit brought by one of the granddaddies in the Power Holding company field -the huge Electric Bond and Share corporation which has so far refused to sign on the dotted line, refuses to register, and declares that if a holding company registers as a holding company with the SEC., it loses or rather waives all its constitutional rights in any other matter between the power trust and

This sounds as if they were scared to register, but already a federal court in New York (Judge Mack) rules that they must do so under the law, and although that case may be taken to the Supreme court, the two big shots of the power world mentioned above concluded that they had enough of the fight and voluntarily threw up their hands.

The power trust need not be credited with a change of heart on any count except that it is cheaper to comply with the law than not. You skull. see these huge companies need to issue stock and sell bonds constantly. They could refinance themselves -all of them-right now, at a great saving because interest rates are lower than they have been for years. These corporations could easily call in hundreds of millions of dollars worth of their existing securities and issue new securities in their place at much lower interest rates and save millions a year. BUT under this securities and exchange law (SEC) they are not permitted to ssue any securities at all unless they come in and register. Those companies which have registered have had the benefit of this new low interest rate; some of the others may drag on too long-and sink of their own weight with all this old fashioned high interest rates on their books.

The necessity to register is a part of the holding company act which contains the famous "death sentence," which is the section empowering the SEC to order the dissolution or separation of large, useless, or corrupt holding companies. Many of these large concerns will be taken apart. That will not affect the operation of electric light and power companies, but it will prevent too pow- stand silent in worship and in erful a control over billions of dol- praise. This government, trying to juggle battleships and world peace all at once, finds it necessary to authorize the building of two new tremendous battleships that will cost $50,000,000 apiece-and thus serve notice on the rest of the world that while we regret it-we are not going to stand by and take a dare from anyone.

JESUS PRAYING FOR HIS DIS-

LESSON TEXT - John 16:5-7; 17:14-GOLDEN TEXT — That they may be one, even as we are one. John 17:22.

PRIMARY TOPIC - When Jesus Prayed for His Friends. JUNIOR TOPIC - Did Jesus Pray

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-- Jecus Praying for Us. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP - Unity with God and One Another

The assurance that someone is praying for us is an anchor in a time of storm. Many a man or woman has been on the point of giving up in despair, of yielding to temptation, and has been carried through to victory by the intercession of a godly mother or father. Just to know that someone prays for us is to find strength for the k. ees that have weakened and for the heart that has all but failed.

Infinitely more precious is the truth of our lesson, that the Lord Jesus himself prayed for each one of his followers. John 17:20 makes clear that while he prayed for those who were with him at the time, he also included in his petition all who since that da, have come to believe on him because of their testimony.

Before entering upon his inexpressibly precious and beautiful prayer, the Lord gave to his followers a promise which was of vital importance.

i. A Promise (16:5-7).

Persecution is coming, and Jesus will not be with them to meet the trying hour. He is about to enter upon that final scene in his earthly life, which will bring it to its end in "a place called the place of a

How then can he say to them that it is expedient for them that he go away? Because he will send the Comforter, the Holy Spirit. Students of the Scriptures recognize in the Holy Trinity an inscrutable mystery, but receive the teaching of the Bible concerning the ministries of the three persons in the one Godhead with glad and thankful hearts. It is a subject which cannot be entered into here, but which richly rewards careful study. Suffice it to say that while the Holy Spirit has always been active in the earth, he did enter upon a ministry of a special nature when Jesus had gone to be with the Father. The essence of the work of the Holy Spirit is to glorify Christ (16: 14), and in so doing he convicts the unbeliever of sin and guides the believer into all truth. The mark of a Spirit-filled Christian is that he permits the Spirit to glorify Christ in him and in his service for God.

II. A Prayer (17: 14-26). When one enters the sacred precincts of John 17 he feels that he has come into the holy of holies, and that he would not only loose the shoes from his feet, but also

1. Consecration (vv. 14-16). No one is Christ's child without regeneration, but, sad to say, there are many children in his blessed household who are not obedient, not spiritually well and strong. They are in the world, they must be here, but alas too many of them want to be as much like the world as possible. He prayed that we might be kept from evil, separate from the world, kept by God even in a world that hates him and his truth.

2. Sanctification (vv. 17-21). This means to be set apart and cleansed for God's service. How is it accomplished? Through the truth. His Word is the instrument of sanctification. Little wonder in there is so little holiness of living when the Word has so little opportunity to touch and cleanse the life.

This separated life brings God's people into that unity of love-all in Christ, and he in the Father-all bound up in that "one great bundle

3. Glorification (vv. 22-26). When Jesus came into the world in the flesh he voluntarily laid aside the glory which was his, and which still is his, and which he prays that we may behold. "But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image" (II Cor. 3:18). Thus in beholding his glory we also may enter into his likeness.

'Why," asked Vance, blowing ribbon of smoke toward the ceiling. 'didn't you place Swift's bet on Equanimity?

Oil Mill Feed of Unusual Value

Manufactured in the Baird Trade Territory by the West Texas Cottonoil Co., Abilene, Cotton Seed cake or meal is the nations outstanding source of concentrated proteins for stock or dairy feeds and can be used either singly or as a supplement to farm grains with excellent results.

Prior to the Civil War, cotton was grown only for its lint value and the seed was considered a waste product-its disposal being an annoying problem of the ginning industry. However, the development of the cotton oil industry gave the cotton farmer an outlet for his cotton seed and this crop once worthless and a nuisance, now brings to southern farmers an annual income. America's first cotton oil mill was built at Columbia, S. C. in 1826 and in 1834 a second one was built at Nachez, Miss.; however, as late as 1867, there were only 4 cotton oil mills in active operation in the United States and for numerous reasons, cotton seed continued to be regarded as a waste product until about 1880. From that time during which the average amount of seed crushed was 200,000 tons the development of the cotton oil industry has been rapid. The nation's cotton mills of which the West Texas Cottonoil Co, is an important unit, now numbers about 500 and the average annual tonnage now expected is about 5,000,-000 tons.

Coincident with the growth of the cotton oil industry, study and experiment on the part of agricultural colleges and feed manufacturers has revealed that farm grains are splendid when used as a base for dairy and stock rations but they should be supplemented with protein concentrate to obtain the maximum in profit. The result is that cotton seed cake or meal is now the greatest single feed for beef cattle on our western ranges and in the nation's feed lots and dairy barns, it is the most dependable source of protein for supplementing grains

The West Texas Cottonoil Co. not onl yprovides the farmers of this section with a convenient market for their cotton seed but through manufacturing a complete line of Paymaster Cotton seed products, including a mixed dairy feed, they give the farmers and stockmen a wonderful opportunity to exchange their cottonseed for cottonseed pro-

"Monday, July 30, 1877"

"Be it remembered that on the 30th day of July A. D. 1877 and in the town of Callahan and in the county of Callahan and state of Texas, was begun and held in and for said county according to law in a small wooden building belonging to Messers Merchant, McCoy and Co., and known heretofore as the voting place of prec. No. 1 of said county-a term of the county commissioners court of said county."

So reads the minutes of the first commissioners court held in Callahan county. The writing is very legible, written in longhand in black ink. The volume is dusty, but well preserved.

As the succeeding clerks added the minutes of latter courts of course the style of handwriting changed. Some clerks wrote a flourishing type, others shaded the letters and some wrote backhand. All of them wrote well.

The Eastland county court had a hand in the county's establishment sixty years ago. It was the Eastland county judge's first signature on the certificates of election the County clerk, Isaac Shaw; first sheriff Thomas J. Norrell, inspector of hides and animals, H. B. Eubanks, presented at this commissioners' court presided over by J. R. Brown, first judge. The oath of office was administered to them also.

Our county was named for James H. Callahan who was born in 1812 and came to Texas in 1835. He was captured by the Spaniards and permitted to live because he was so valuable to them as a mechanic. He escaped them and joined the ranger force. He died in a personal fight in 1856. He was honored by having this county named for him, and there is a large native stone monument to him and the county on the courthouse lawn.

Formed from Bexar Territory created February 1, 1858, recreated August 21, 1876, organized July 3, 1877. Named in honor of James H. Callahan, 1812-1856. Soldier in the Texas Revolution, Captain of the Texas Rangers.

County seat: Callahan City 1877, Belle Plain, 1877-1883; Baird since. Two early military roads, the Chisholm Trail and the first government telegraph line traverse this region.

The highway department erected a granite marker on highway 1, west of Baird with the foregoing information.

Today the court records and officials are housed in a spacious four-story stone structure. This modern courthouse is fire safe and was completed in

The courthouse rests in the center of a large lawn, at the north end of Market street. The paved main thoroughfare of Baird. The red brick of the

T. & P. depot is at the south end of the street, three city blocks away. Baird, county seat of Callahan county, is a modern city of some 2,000 persons. It is on the U. S. 80, State No. 1, paved highway and T. & P. Ry.

There is a fine water system, excellent school system, nice homes, thriving businesses. Baird is surrounded by shallow oil fields, big ranches and stock farms, cotton and feed, fruit and vegetables. Baird has a strong bank, as such industries indicate it should.

There are 6 church buildings with large membership.

Clyde is 7 miles west on T. & P. Ry and highway. There are 4 churches fine water, nice school plant and good businesses.

Clyde has been building considerably, many people using native stone to build their homes. The Methodist people have recently completed a rock veneer church building consisting of auditorium and class rooms. The rocks are very practical, both enduring and beautiful. Just now the study club is beautifying the cemetery by rock entrance columns and fences.

Poultry, fruit, vegetable, cotton and feed farms provide an occupation for any type of farming. Sheep and cattle ranches abound. Oil is an industry here also.

Putnam is 14 miles east of Baird-also on highway and T. & P. Ry. Putnam has the newest school building in the entire county, a newly dedicated and opened brick, erected at a cost of $45,000 it is a fine looking example of what must be going on in the way of teaching.

There is plenty of fine water and pretty locations for new homes. There is oil, farming and ranching to engage in with friendly neighbors and health ly atmosphere.

Cross Plains is in the extreme southeastern portion of Callahan county and does seem "away to itself." Of course, there are times when court and such matters bring residents to Baird. But for the most part they are very selfsufficient.

The M.K. T. Ry serves this city as do highways in many directions. There is a bank to do business for the prospering business concerns.

Oil activity has been very lively lately and lumber houses and oil field equipment houses are in evidence.

Pathfinder of the Seas

HE NEVER took part in a battle but his name deserves rank with those other American naval heroes - Jones, Decatur, Lawrence, Bake twenty to thirty Perry, Farragut and Dewey. His career was a perfect example of the saying that "peace hath its victories no less renowned than war." For Matthew Fontaine Maury was one of the greatest benefactors of all those who sailed the seas in his day and mariners still honor his name today.

Born in Virginia in 1806, Maury joined the navy as a midshipman at the age of nineteen. During his long voyages he became impressed with the scanty information that was available about prevailing winds and ocean currents. Strangely enough, an accident on land gave him his opportunity to do something doesn't mean a prayer of ten min- about it. He was in a stagecoach smash-up in Ohio which made him a cripple for life.

As a result, he was placed in instruments in Washington out of which developed the hydrographic office and the naval observatory. Here he started collecting all available information on the meteorology of the ocean which he compiled from a great number of old log books of naval vessels. The result was his first Wind and Current Chart, issued in 1847.

About 5,000 of these charts were istributed to shipmasters, who found them amazingly useful, shortning voyages by days and weeks. 'It was as if a friendly wizard in seven-league boots had suddenly risen out of the waves to lead merchant vessels by the shortest and juickest paths." So they were glad to heed Maury's request to send him the results of their observations of winds and weather and he began issuing more charts. Within a few years 200,000 copies of the charts were being used by mariners of all nations and it was estimated that of Maxwell and was indicted by a the annual saving to the shipping of one nation alone was $10,000.

The outbreak of the War Between the States was a tragedy for Maury in more ways than one. Loyalty to his native state forced him to resign when Virginia seceded but, due mainly to the jealousy of a superior officer, his usefulness to the Confederacy was hampered and his career in its service was not a distinguished one. After living for a this "Pathfinder of the Seas.

"President for a Day"

A CITY in Kansas, a county in Missouri and part of the name of a great railway system bear his name, but David R. Atchison is best known in American history as the man who, it has often been asserted, was "President for a day." A native of Kentucky who emigrated #to Missouri in 1830, A chison was serving as a senator from that state in 1848 when Zachary Taylor was elected President to succeed James K. Polk.

On March 3, 1849, Vice President George M. Dallas, presiding officer of the senate, announced "the close of my official term being near at hand, I conform to an established and convenient practice by withdrawing from the deliberations of this body." On the motion of Sen-Atchison was then appointed president pro tem of the senate for the remainder of that session of the national congress. March 4, the traditional Inaugura-President-elect not only had religious scruples about being inaugurated on the Sabbath but doubted the legality of such a proceeding. So the inauguration ceremonies were set for Monday, March 5. Friends of Atchison claimed that, since President Polk's term ended on March 3 and Taylor's did not begin until March 5, there was an interim of one day in which the senate was the only continuing governing body. Since Atchison was president pro tem of the senate and hereby acting vice president (Dalas having resigned) he was also cting President between the administrations of Polk and Taylor, e. "President for a day."

Atchison himself never made any such claim and declared that the office of President was vacant from goon Saturday to noon Monday. Asked once how he enjoyed his short term in office he replied that he really did not know because he exhausting last day session of the vacancy existing in the office of the President on March 4, 1849, but one edition of the biographical congressional directory credits Atchison with being "President for a day" and that legend still persists.

MYSTERIES THE WORLD HAS NEVER SOLVED

JOHN PAUL JONES Why the "Jones"? By MADOC OWENS

E CHANGED his name for reasons unknown." So says history of John Paul Jones, the "wizard of the sea." He was a man of mystery from first to last. He was born with the surname of Paul. John Paul and no more he had been as a Scotch laddie, when his bare feet had scampered over the heather; and his father, an honest Scotch gardener, had been John Paul, pure and simple.

Indeed, it is a well-known fact that John Paul had been a good enough name for our hero until he arrived at the age of twenty-six or twenty-seven, when he must needs don the extra surname which scores of men have gone into court to doff that they might have surer identity.

This precocious youth when twenty-four was captain of a Scotch brig, which he took upon two trips to the West Indies. During one of these cruises occurred an incident which was held by some to account for his changing his name. Becoming involved in a quarrel with his ship's carpenter. Maxwell, by name, he is said to have flogged that insubordinate. One account says he shot him. Charges of cruelty were thereupon preferred against the Scotch skipper, but were dismissed as frivolous.

When in a few weeks, however, his alleged victim died, the charges were revived. Some say that John Paul was charged with the murder grand jury at his old home in Scotland. In any event he was not arrested, but the incident preyed upon his mind, and to prove his innocence he sent affidavits to his family in Scotland. It was to escape the possibility of identification in the event of his capture that he added Jones to his name, according to this theory.

Varied Accounts.

Other accounts give quite a different motive. His brother, Wilwhile in England, he returned to liam Paul, had come to America in America and to a professorship at 1760, had bought a large plantation the Virginia Military institute where in Virginia and had entered at Charhe wrote a geography series which lotte, N. His of the finest monuments in Rich-store was in the same building in mond today perpetuates the fame of which George Washington was initiated as a Mason. John Paul came to Virginia in 1773 to admin-Ister his brother's estate. According to one tradition, his deceased brother William, on coming to America, had been adopted by a rich, but childless, relative of the name of Jones, and William had taken this name of his foster parents, who had provided that in case William Paul Jones died intestate, his younger brother, John Paul, might inherit the property if he should take the name of Jones. which he did.

According to a third theory, the little mariner went from Virginia to North Carolina to settle the estate in that State and there met two brothers. Allen and Willie (pronounced Wylie) Jones, men of a wealthy and distinguished family, who had been educated at Eton and who were very influential in politiator Benton of Missouri, Senator cal life. Being out of funds and unable to realize upon his inheritance until after many trying delays. John Paul became the beneficiary of these brothers' Southern hospitali-Col. Willie Jones became his bondsman for $2,500 when he filed bation of the will. Although a rough diamond compared with his distinguished hosts, the friendless little Scotchman's picturesqueness won their admiration and he gratefully accepted their invitation to remain in their family until his inheritance might be forth coming. Charmed by his new surroundings, John Paul determined to retain his Southern plantation and become a resident of the New World. So, as an evidence of his gratitude, he assumed the surname of his benefactors and became John Paul Jones, a Virginia planter, possessed of several thousand acres of arable land and several hundred negro slaves.

Received Commission Soon came the uprising of the Colonie, and the War of the Revolution and John Paul Jones again followed the call of the deep. Offerslept through most of it after an ing his services to Washington, he obtained, through the influence of senate. The assistant secretary of state, F. B. Loomis, commissioned his brother, Kent J. Loomis, as his confidential representative to bear the treaty to the dusky monarch at his capital, Addis Ababa. The mission was one entailing little responsibility and much interesting travel, and Kent Loomis, being the editor of a newspaper at Parkersburg, W. Va., had the mental equipment to both enjoy and fulfill it. After delivering the treaty he expected to hunt big game in Abyssinia.

Stating that he would be gone two ionths, he bade his wife and child good-by in their southern home, and on June 14 sailed for Cherbourg on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. You can readily Dr. Barton understand then that if an overweight decides to take violent exercise with heart and blood vessels "soft" from lack of use and accumulation of fat in and about the normal tissues, serious results may follow.

Dr. E. V. McCollum and J. Ernestine Becker in their book "Food, Nutrition and Health," tell us that "violent tennis playing, hill climbing or extreme effort in the gymnasium are as unwise as they are unnecessary in weight reduction. Far more harm than good may be done if the condition of the heart and blood vessels does not warrant strenuous exercise."

Since badminton has become popular many physicians are reporting cases of overweight men and women who, having watched a few games of badminton, have said to themselves, "Badminton looks like a nice game, it shouldn't be hard to play, not much work to it." As a matter of fact, badminton is practically tennis, and next to basketball, tennis is the most strenuous game known.

The thought then is that just as a reducing diet needs expert direction of supervision, so also should the exercise taken by overweights be directed and supervised one-preferably a physicianwho not only knows the body but the effect of exercise on each particular body.

Of course to the overweight the thought of doing violent exercise or work with the perspiration pouring out and off the body is fascinating as it looks as if pounds and pounds Investigation showed that Loomis of fat were being lost. #### WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK... By Lemuel F. Parton

TEW YORK .- Field Marshal Werner Von Blom berg is Germany's buried ace. Astute foreign observers find cumulative evidence of this in his tightening hold on the army and in the new goodwill facade which Germany is trying to erect with his reassuring and now more frequently repeated speeches.

'Other nations should not take it lightly that we stretch out our hands in conciliation," says the war minister in an address quite patently intended for foreign ears.

Dispatches hint that before long Der Fuehrer will be transported to a mystic valhalla in a chariot of fire, there to remain as a symbol while some less febrile citizen takes care of mundane affairs. That will be the intellectual, cultured, but not monocled, General von Blomberg, according to news from the watch towers over seas.

In the endlessly repeated story of the practorian aftermath of war and revolution, he and his allies have the army. Furthermore, he is more capable of rationalizing Germany and her needs in foreign relationships than the Gilbert and Sullivan Goering, the inept von Ribbentrop or the intellectual rubberman Rosenberg.

This writer has a friend, a former American journalist once stationed at Berlin and now engaged in commercial enterprise in Europe, who sees in the German junkers, to which class General von Blomberg belongs, the only hope Germany has for rehabilitation without war. He does not wish his name used as he passes in and out of Germany. In a letter mailed at Prague, he writes, in part:

"Hitler still has a tight hold on Germany, but the real power is easmeans von Blomberg. Strangely enough, I have found more brains and more realism among the bullet-headed officers and imperialists of the World war days than among the nazi fanatics. I have talked to von Blomberg several times and I don't think he believes a word of this racial nonsense.

"He is an educated man who knows that Germany will have to make peace with the democratic powers to get what she needs. He is a diligent, and I believe openminded student of history, and I know he reads books which an ordinary German citizen would have to read secretly.

"I have an idea that if you read the papers closely, you will see before long more and more stories about Hitler's throat affliction and the necessity of his retiring to Berchtesgaden for rest and meditation. I have no idea that he will be overthrown. He will be merely enshrined, while the old-line indusat least, but in my view the ultihas rested-in the army and the money bags.

"Germany is not ready for war. Her 'ersatz' campaign has been successful only to a very limited degree. She cannot redress her trade balance because her productive energies go into armament. She must either fight or bargain her way out. I have found the disinclination to war and the hope of new credit and trade concessions much stronger among the army groups and imperialists than I have among the nazi politicians. The former know more about the actualities of war than

"Von Blomberg is going to do a lot of 'fronting' for Germany in the next year. Unless I am greatly mistaken, he will bear many olive branches. I do not consider him a France, England and the United must have, and he is going after it.

"As you know, I was caught in Germany when the World war started and I have no love for the junkers, but they have lucid mothis is one of them. Of course Germany will do a lot of growling and woofing as she starts bargaining for loans and raw materials, but that will be merely in the hope of scaring concessions out of the other side. Anyway-and this a strange choice to have to make-I am glad to see power slipping into the hands of the army leaders."

By NEIL STAFFORD

REMEMBER quite well that as a youthful member of the human race, I held to a great number of strong, ing over to the army, and that definite opinions concerning this and that, many of which have long since gone overboard and are now far astern. I was always astonished by the irritability of elderly persons, amazed by the suddenness with which they flew off the handle over mere trifles and I well remember saying: "So, that's the way old folks act, is it? Well, I will take good care never to be like that, fussing about nothing at all, growling and swearing at everyone."

That's what I said and I meant it, and to my astonishment, I realized the other day that I am now as cranky and fussy as those old gentlemen ever were, and I go about wishing people had a little more sense. Take the simple habit of smoking.

I smoke cigarettes and I like to trialists and junkers pick up where light my own eigarette, using my they left off and get Germany back own match and my own fingers, on the track, if they can. The nazis and when I am alone, this is possihave been highly useful in solidify- ble, but it is different in a hotel instances, the bell boys are given mate power rests where it always bonuses for beating a customer to the light.

> There was one hotel with a marble floor, uniformed boys all over the place and the lad who lighted the most cigarettes per week received a cash award. Whenever I reached for a pack of cigarettes, four boys came sliding across the marble, four matches were stuck under my nose and the honor of the hotel was apparently saved again.

Now with me, part of the pleasure of smoking is to light the tobacco, using the Australian crawl or overhand lighting stroke and any outside interference simply destroys the latter, and they have a clearer the job. If you have ever observed understanding of the imperative an old pipe smoker in the peaceful need for raw materials and credit. act of lighting up, you realize his loving solicitude and the comfort he gets out of it. Each man has his own manner of lighting a cigar, excepting those uncouth souls who do not understand tobacco and care liberal in our sense of the word, nothing about the finer things. In but he has brains enough to see that this hotel, it was so bad I had to use telephone booths or side rooms, States have what he needs, and where I could sneak a cigarette and light it myself.

These helpful ones, of course, are animated by a desire to be courteous and therefore a person cannot be openly resentful or annoyed. In ments and I am inclined to think my favorite restaurant, there is a waiter who for years has never understood and I don't like to hurt his feelings, so the way I do, I wait till his back is turned and by bending over and working fast, I manage to light the cigarette before he sees me.

I Want to Pour It.

That's only one item-smoking. Take the matter of pouring beer into a tall glass, or even a short one. I am fond of a cold bottle of beer, with the little moisture beads on the outside and I long to pour it myself in my own way. There ensues always a little race between me and the waiter, for he wants to pour, and only one waiter in eight hundred knows anything about

The accepted and universal waiter custom is to tip the glass at a sharp angle and the bottle at another sharp angle until their noses meet and then slide the beer softly along the inside of the glass, leaving no foam. This, of course, is all wrong and barbarous. The right way to pour beer, you slam the beer bottle into the glass roughly, making as much foam as possible and watching it rise to the top and spill over. That's my way, but if I am reading a paper or preoccupied, the waiter pours and when I glance up, there is my beer, all poured out and looking like stale cider that has been standing on the table a week. Consider the super - courteous young gentlemen in the filling stations of an ambulant nation, who certainly are not to blame for their kindly energies, as the gasoline companies require them to do certain things. When I am in an occasional hurry, I do not wish my tank filled. I want ten gallons of gas and that's all and nothing else

So what happens? A bright-eyed and rosy-cheeked youth bobs up with three chamois skins and two bottles of something and begins cleaning me up before I can shoo him off. He is the glass boy or shiner-upper and he goes at it feverishly, no the hood on both sides to see how my oil is. A third young gent redrive to the air pumps and have my tires checked and at any instant, I expect to be given a shine, hair cut, shave, shampoo and brush-off.

Telephone Trouble.

There is excuse for persons who are trying to be courteous and helpful, no matter how mistaken they may be at the moment. But what can be said for those other people. who are not trying to be courteous. such as the perfect stranger who rings your telephone and asks in a cold. clear voice: "What number is this?"

That is the individual I definitely usually, a female, and her ambition apparently is to waste an afternoon in idle persiflage. The proper way to use a telephone is to get your number and state quietly: This is Mr. Higgins speaking. Is Mr. Jones there?"

It so happens I have no office in a tall building, no secretary or outer line of defense and I work in my home, when I work. I have long since arrived at the point where I don't want to talk to anyone on the telephone about anything. Years and years ago, it became apparent soned. Let stand in ice box two to me that nine out of ten telephone calls were bad news and would be better unanswered.

The nine out of ten referred to something I didn't wish to do, didn't wish to talk about or consider in any form-such as, would I be interested in buying a boat, joining a beach club, buying a sedan or seeing the insurance man.

And so, as time wore on, I became a natural enemy of the telephone, but am often forced to answer, and, therefore, I come into contact with those idle souls who wish to know what number is this? The lady on the other end doesn't want to speak to anyone. She will give no information whatever and continues to chatter about numbers until I hang up and go sadly back to work. If it's a salesman, he simply wants to make certain of your number, so he can call you tomorrow and I often give him the number of a friend down the road and let him handle the trade.

FATS' RELATION TO DAILY DIET

They Supply Fuel Needed for Our Body Activities.

By EDITH M. BARBER

MONG the foods which supply us with fuel for our body activities are fats which are known as concentrated foods. Although fats contain the same elements, carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, that are found in starches and sugars, the proportion of the first two is much larger. When they are burned by the body they produce two and a quarter times as much heat as do the other so-called fuel foods.

Fats differ in degrees of hardness. Liquid fats, such as olive, cottonseed, coconut and corn, are known as vegetable oils. From animal sources are produced fats from the livers such as cod and haliver oil. Besides these we have milk fat which is known as cream and which in its solidified form is called butter. From the adipose tissue of animals hard fats are obtained. The one most used in cooking and which is obtained from hogs is known as lard. Vegetable oils are often solidified by being treated with hydrogen in order to produce products which are known as hardened shortenings under various commercial trade names.

All of these fats and oils supply the same food value. Their digestibility, however, varies. The lower the melting point the less loss there is in digestion. Fats play an important part in the well-rounded diet, as they seem to act as regulators for the passage of food through the stomach. Contrary to the general opinion, there is no advantage in having food pass too quickly through the stomach. It should stay there long enough to be acted upon by the digestive juices in this portion of the alimentary canal. When, however, other foods are fried in fat, especially to the saturation point, digestion may be delayed too long on account of the coating of fat. For this reason fried foods should not have too large a place in the diet.

If fats are allowed to take too large a place in the diet a condition of overweight will result, as the body stores in the tissues what is not needed for immediate use. There should, however, be storage in the interest of body

The new furniture is a walnut and very nice. Of course, Jean has been in a breathless state deciding on the wall paper and the chintzes and selecting new lamps. The room finished up not exactly according to her mother's notions, but Jean thinks it's absolutely perfect, which is all that really counts

The wall paper is pink with a tiny white flower in it and the curtains are cream net with seven inch ruffles. The draperies are lavendar rayon taffeta with more wide ruffles, but pleated this time like ar old-time taffeta petticoat flounce. The bed-spread is a flowered chintz on a cream ground with lovely very Frenchy bouquets for the design. It is finished with pleated taffeta ruffles to match the draperies. There is a chair in this same chintz, and the rug is a tranquil light gray.

Naturally, Jean feels her importance in a room like this! And her responsibilities too. At first her mother thought that it was much too fussy for a girl Jean's age, but even she's getting sold on the idea now that she's seen how much pride and pains Jean takes with the room. She's gotten as neat as a pin and more careful of those taffeta ruffles than of her best party dress. If a room can teach those qualities to a fourteen year old, it's success, decoratively speaking, Jean's mother confided to us.

Naturally they do make a room less bright and sunny looking. But in the average house where there are plenty of other rooms to be bright and sunny, it's interesting to have one that has the contrasting effect of tranquility and repose and that aloofness you feel as you step out of a glare into a serene shadowy glen or into a quiet library at dusk. That same mood can be achieved in a room with dark walls. But in order to keep it from seeming sombre and depressing, be sure to have other things in the room of lighter

Sherman's march to sea, and Sheridan's desolation of the Valey, both approved by Lincoln, vere a disgrace to humanity.

Gen. R. E. Lee's chief artillery was an Episcopal Clergyman, and graduate of West Point.

Up to the time of the Civil War. the people of the South loved, reverenced and respected the constitution of the United States. They fought for it, bled for it and died for it, while people of the North cared little for it when it stood in their way. Their present howl for States' rights comes with poor grace from a people who destroyed States' rights. Up to the Civil War the govern ment of the United States rested upon the consent of the governed, not upon force. Each state, when it entered the union, understood could withdraw if it became dissatisfied. Several of the states expressly reserved the right in their own records. Property in slaves was fully recognized by all and indeed title to slaves, among the civilized races of the earth is older than that in land, and made the civilization which we have inherited possible. Under the doctrine of necessity, the tyrant's plea in all ages, Lincoln violated every principle of the constitution. He helped to precipitate the war by denouncing the Dred Scott decision as corrupt, when he must have known it was the law then as it is now. As a matter of fact, Lincoln was never President of the United States, military power could not make him such. At the time the States were wholly disunited, and held together by force of arms.

The civilazation of the North and South was distinct and the two sections might have been peaceably saparated, after the manner of Sweden and Norway to the advantage of both. As it is now, it is a nasty mixture. Otis Bowyer
