Modern Ideas Used In Elimination of Fumes at City Plant

For a number of years sanitary engineers have been at work on methods by which objectionable fumes arising from sewage disposal plants could be eliminated, and acting upon suggestions made by the state department of health the city council of Munday some months ago sent City Secretary D. T. Mauldin to Austin, Cleburne and other points to visit plants where successful methods were in operation, and as a result of his investigations he has modified a system and installed it in the local municipal plant that is proving very successful in disposing of these fumes.

The method adopted in the local plant is unlike that used in any other plant, according to city officials, and is therefore not an infringement upon other methods used in disposing of the fumes. The large receptacle built for receiving the sewage is made practically air-tight and these fumes are pumped constantly by means of a pump operated by electric current into an arrangement perfected by Mr. Mauldin, where they are burned, and even in the room into which the fumes are pumped the fumes are barely noticeable, and it is believed that every objectionable feature of the disposal plant has been removed by the installation of this system.

A model irrigation system has also been installed at the disposal plant which will eliminate the accumulation of stagnant water in the vicinity of the plant and will enable the city to grow an abundant crop of whatever they may choose to plant.

We believe the sewage disposal plant, as it is now operated and cared for, is a model plant and the system installed by Mr. Mauldin should prove of untold value to other municipalities who have similar problems to solve.

W. H. Atkinson and son, Henry, have returned from Tennessee, where they visited relatives. Mr. Atkinson states that it rained most of the time he was in Tennessee and on his return home it was raining until he reached Little Rock, Arkansas.

A Close Race

The basket ball menu for this week end is by far the best that has been arranged this season. On Friday night the Moguls will take on the fast Spur team. Although this is Munday's first engagement with Spur, advance information indicates that it will be a thrilling battle. On Saturday night the Moguls will take the floor against the Wichita Falls High School Coyotes. The fans will be especially interested to see how Munday compares with such high-class opposition.

Mrs. O. G. Warbritton Dies at Her Home at Fayetteville, Arkansas

D. T. Mauldin and family and sister, Mrs. Homer Baker, of Hamlin, left on Tuesday last week for Fayetteville, Arkansas, in response to a message advising them of the critical illness of their sister, Mrs. O. G. Warbritton, who passed away on Saturday, following an illness of about six months.

Mrs. Warbritton was 46 years of age and is survived by her husband and three children, ages 9, 15 and 18 years. For a number of years the family resided in this city, where Mr. Warbritton was engaged in the barber business, and left here some eight years ago for Fayetteville, Arkansas, where they have made their home since.

The many friends of the family in this community will learn of her death with deep regret and will join with us in extending sincere sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Moguls to Play Spur and Wichita Falls This Week

The basket ball menu for this week end is by far the best that has been arranged this season. On Friday night the Moguls will take on the fast Spur team. Although this is Munday's first engagement with Spur, advance information indicates that it will be a thrilling battle. On Saturday night the Moguls will take the floor against the Wichita Falls High School Coyotes. The fans will be especially interested to see how Munday compares with such high-class opposition.

In securing these two games local school officials have gone to considerable expense. It is believed, however, that the public will appreciate their efforts in booking these games by turning out in large numbers to see them.

Other games including one between Spur and Rochester on Saturday night, will be arranged to complete the program.

Lowry Post American Legion Reorganized By Local Veterans

At a recent meeting of ex-service men here Lowry Post No. 44, American Legion was reorganized and the following officers were chosen: Dr. Joe Davis, post commander; J. C. Borden, post adjutant; Mart Hardin, sergeant at arms; P. G. Barton, finance officer; E. E. Chamberlain, post historian; Lee Haynes, post chaplain.

This post, which is one of the oldest in the state, has been inactive for the past few years, but the boys are determined that the organization be revived and kept active, and they urge that all ex-service men enroll as members and cooperate in making the organization a success. Members and other ex-service men whose names are available will be notified of future meeting dates and are urged to be present.

Quail Feast Is Given By Pastor To Official Board of the Church

Following a custom which he has followed since he has been pastor of the local church, the Rev. R. B. Freeman on last Thursday evening tendered the official board of the church, together with a few friends, a quail feast, and those who gathered around the festive board will agree with us that it was a feast indeed.

When the guests were ushered into the dining room at the pastor's home they were somewhat surprised, as really the Rev. Freeman had left the impression around that the guests would have to content themselves this time on backbone, intimating that the extreme shortage of quail this year had made the substitution necessary, but when they entered the dining room they immediately discovered that the impression was erroneous, for on each plate there were a couple of quail browned to a queen's taste, and after the invocation by the Rev. Freeman, in came Mrs. Freeman, assisted by Misses Bateman and Kay, with brown biscuit and cream gravy, and in addition to these good things the plates were laden with other good things, and just about the time the guests had made-away with the birds entered with large platters of quail stacked high, and it was then that those present were convinced that the Rev. Freeman, in this instance, as well as all others, doesn't believe in doing things by halves, and the guests expressed surprise that there were that many quail in the country, and, as one fortunate enough to be present on this occasion, we're frank to admit that we never saw as many quail and as many hot biscuits as were consumed by those present.

At the outset the Rev. Freeman announced that he had gone around the official board and extended invitations to Dr. Farrington in order that his professional services might be available to S. A. Bowden, who had walked eight miles during the day in preparation of the event, or to other members of the board, while the editor was extended an invitation in order that he might have first-hand information concerning any casualties that might result from the satisfying of the quail appetites of the various members, and, especially being present, we can say that any member of the official board, and especially M. P. Billingsley, was justifiable in not being able to function on the following day.

Those who enjoyed the feast and the social evening were M. F. Billingsley, S. A. Bowden, E. S. Boles, J. C. Campbell, F. O. Campbell, J. A. Caughran, E. Duval, G. R. Eiland, D. E. Hoiler, Lee Haynes, J. E. Rhodes, John Spann, P. V. Williams, Dr. W. P. Farrington and J. A. Kennedy.

Where did the quail come from? Perfectly natural question to ask, for there hasn't been that many quail on Knox Prairie in years. But over in Stonewall county there seems to be an abundance of them, and the Rev. Freeman, who is an enthusiastic quail hunter, in company with J. C. Campbell, went over there and brought them back, and as a consequence the menu was changed from backbone to quail—and backbone isn't bad.

Pioneer Seymour Cotton Man Dies In N. J. Hospital

SEYMOUR, Texas, Jan. 22.—J. L. Russell, 52, a widely known cotton dealer of this city, died in a hospital at Morristown, N. J. Monday morning, following an illness of more than a month. He had been taken to the Morristown, N. J. hospital about 10 days ago for treatment. Surviving the deceased are three brothers and two sisters, Paul Russell of Prescott, Ariz., Walter Russell and James Russell of Twin Falls, Idaho; Mrs. Jewell Heath of Flagstaff, Ariz., and Mrs. Goldie Durham of Kealahou, Hawaiian Islands.

Mr. Russell had lived in this locality for almost 40 years and had been closely identified with the development and growth of Seymour, at all times ready to assist in the best interests of the city and county. He had a wide acquaintance over West Texas and was a factor in cotton trading circles. He had been affiliated with both the York and Scottish rites of Masonry and was a Shriner.

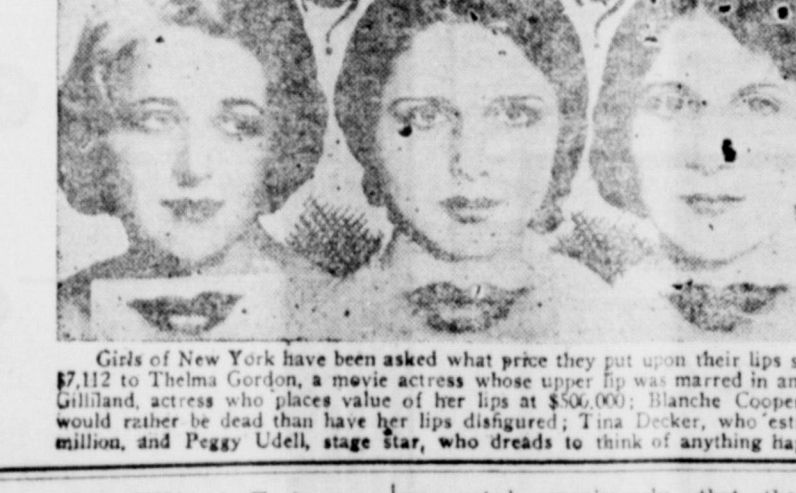

The body will be forwarded to Seymour for burial.

What Are A Shapely Pair of Lips Worth?

Girls of New York have been asked what price they put upon their lips since a Los Angeles judge awarded $7,112 to Thelma Gordon, a movie actress whose upper lip was marred in an accident. Left to right are Helen Gilliland, actress who places value of her lips at $50,000; Blanche Cooperman, business girl who said she would rather be dead than have her lips disfigured; Tina Decker, who estimated the worth of her lips at a million; and Peggy Udell, stage star, who dreams to think of anything happening to her lips.

Sheriff Elliott Gets Gife of Appreciation From Munday Friends

At the regular semi-monthly luncheon of the Munday Lion Club held at the Terry Coffee Shop on Thursday noon Sheriff C. R. Elliott was presented with a token of appreciation from his many friends in Munday in the form of an official badge which was engraved "C. R. Elliott, Sheriff, Knox County, Texas."

Denies Engagement

Miss Helen Willis, tennis champion, denies rumors which circulated in San Francisco that her engagement to Fred Moody, San Francisco business man, will be announced soon.

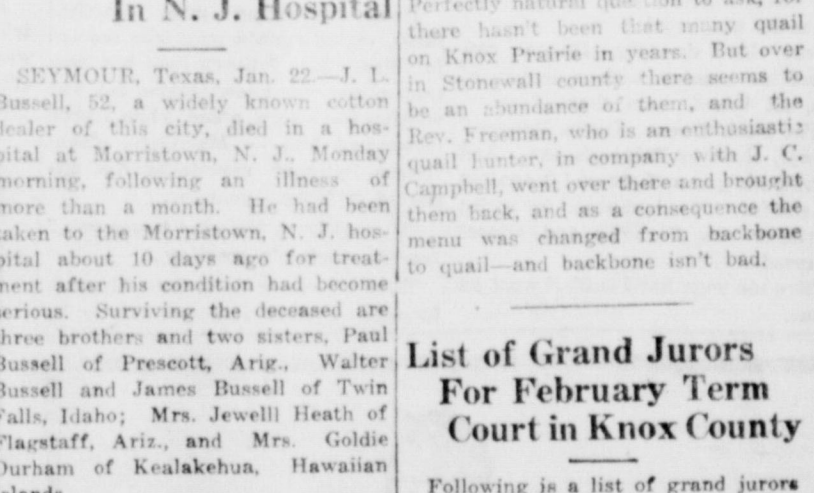

Local Maytag Shop Receives Carload of Washing Machines

J. C. Carter, district distributor for the Maytag washing machine, has received a full carload of washing machines this week, which is probably the first solid carload of washing machines ever shipped to this section of the state. Mr. Carter is district representative of the Maytag Company for six counties, Knox, Haskell, Throckmorton, Baylor, King, and Stonewall, and has a large corps of salesmen working throughout the territory.

In the carload of machines received by the local distributor there are 75 machines, a majority of which are equipped with gasoline motors, which make it possible for those residing in the rural districts to enjoy the conveniences in this respect that are enjoyed by those who reside where electric power is available.

Mr. Carter states that despite the fact that he has been unable to get machines from the factory to supply the demand for them that this will make the second carload of machines that he has sold from the Munday branch since he established headquarters here in September, and recently he was awarded a very substantial premium for being second in the state in the number of sales made within a thirty day period.

Sapelo Island Scene of Coolidge Vacation

Howard E. Collins, owner of Sapelo Island, off the coast of Georgia, invited President Coolidge to spend his vacation there. This picture gives a view of the Collins mansion. Sapelo Island has excellent fishing waters, abundant in tropical vegetation and is rich in history, as it was a rendezvous for the early Spanish explorers and settlers.

THE LAST OF THE DUANES

TENTH INSTALLMENT

WHAT HAPPENED BEFORE
Buck Duane, quick on the draw, kills Cal Blain in self-defense and becomes an outlaw. After adventures on the road he goes to Blain's camp. There he wounds a man named Bosomer and becomes a bosom friend of another named Euchre. He meets Mrs. Bland and also a girl Jennie, held prisoner by Blain, whom he rescues after a series of intrigues in which he is forced to deceive Mrs. Bland.

This leads to Duane's killing of Blain, the outlaw leader, and rushing off with Jennie, who is lost later. Duane roams the roads for years as an outlaw, finally going to meet Captain MacNelly of the Rangers, who had asked to see him. MacNelly is kind to him, and offers him a pardon if he will accept an offer to become a Ranger and go after Cheseldine's gang. MacNelly had become interested in Duane after a Miss Lee had spoken in his behalf. Duane promises MacNelly to do him any service. Meanwhile MacNelly gives Duane much welcome news.

Duane goes to visit the Miss Lee who had intervened for him with MacNelly, and finds here to be none but Jennie. They talk and tell each other of their lives, and when Duane tells Jennie he is commissioned to capture Cheseldine she breaks down and begs him to break his word to MacNelly.

Duane sets forth on the hunt for Cheseldine. At Ord he locates the band of outlaws. At Bradford, later, he gives the night operator, Buell, instructions, saying he is going to arrest a man.

Now Go On With the Story
This will probably happen after I take the train with my man. What I want you to do is to post the other operator. Then in case this does happen to either of you be cool and pretend to send the message given you. But send the wrong message—anything at random. Bluff the thing so these allies of my man will think they can stall operations east."

Buell promised with a heightened color and considerable show of pleasure to go at once and relieve the day operator, who, he said, wanted some time off duty, and to stay by his instrument as long as needed.

"Who're you after?" he asked excitedly.
"You'll know presently. Another thing—my horse is over at the inn. I'll have to leave him and I'd like you to take care of him till you hear from me. If you don't hear—he's yours."

The time passed. When he went out he saw several Mexicans, a cowboy, and two men, and they all watched him curiously. Next he ran into Sheriff Bridger.

He laid a heavy hand on Bridger. "I want Cheseldine. Is he coming?"

The sheriff gasped, and his swarthy face turned green. He looked sick. He could not speak.

Over his shoulder Duane saw Cheseldine coming with a group of men, all intent upon themselves.

"I'm Buck Duane, Texas Ranger," he said, close to Bridger's ear. And he drew his gun and pressed it against the sheriff. "Look down!" he added.

Bridger saw the gun and almost collapsed.

"Give me your hand-cuffs," went on Duane.

Bridger produced them and held them out with shaking fingers. Duane snatched them, and, with a look at Bridger that meant death, he shoved him back.

Then Duane with gun high leaped in front of the approaching men. "Cheseldine!" he yelled piercingly. All of them halted as if the word had petrified. One of them turned a ghastly stricken white.

"Hands out! Not up! In front of you! Quick!"

As Duane's look had meant death, so here did his voice. Then manacles clicked. Cheseldine was a prisoner. Duane turned to the paralyzed men. "Gentlemen, you look honest," he said. "But I can take no chances. You must be judged by your company. I'm Duane, Texas Ranger. I arrest this man Cheseldine. I advise you all to be careful with your hands."

He grasped Cheseldine and backing away led him up to the station, pushed him against the wall. Duane's eyes covered every point before him. Bridger had disappeared.

Cheseldine's friends, recovering from their stupefaction, broke into a frenzy of excitement. But they did not approach any closer. One by one the little crowd of astounded men was enlarged by others. Sight of Duane and his gun was enough, both to make them gape and hold them back.

Cheseldine remained white but calm. He had nerve. He seemed to want to hide his manacled hands.

"Duane, why did you make an exception of me?" he asked.

Duane did not reply. At the moment he heard the train whistle. Probably Cheseldine was wondering why he had not met the same fate as Blain, Alloway, Hardin. Duane wondered grimly the same thing.

The eastbound rolled into the station. Duane, waving the crowd back with his gun, made Cheseldine walk ahead of him, climb the steps of the car.

"Hurry this train!" called Duane, to the amazed conductor.

Then he got on, entered the car, put Cheseldine in a seat and sat facing him and all the passengers.

The train started up almost immediately, and left behind on the platform a yelling, gesticulating crowd. Duane had a glimpse of Buell waving his hand from the station window.

It was a fast train, yet the ride seemed slow. Duane, talking to face Cheseldine and the watching conjecturing passengers in the car, changed his seat to one behind his prisoner. They had not spoken.

Cheseldine sat with bowed head, deep in thought. Occasionally the train halted briefly at a station.

They got off the car at Val Verde. The station was a good deal larger than that at Bradford, and there was considerable action and bustle incident to the arrival of the train.

Duane's sweeping gaze searched faces, rested upon a man who seemed familiar. This fellow's look too, was that of one who knew Duane, but was waiting for a sign, a cue. Then Duane recognized him—MacNelly, clean-shaven, without moustache he appeared different—younger.

"Duane! Lord, I'm glad to see you," was the captain's greeting.

Then at closer look into Duane's face his warmth fled—something he saw there checked his enthusiasm, or at least its utterance.

"MacNelly, shake hands with Cheseldine," said Duane, low-voiced.

The ranger captain stood dumb, motionless. But he saw Cheseldine's instant action and awkwardly he reached for the outstretched hand.

"Any of your men down here?" queried Duane sharply.

"No. They're up town."

"Come. Cheseldine, walk between us, and look straight ahead. Don't see anybody."

They set off up town. Cheseldine walked as if he were with friends on the way to dinner, except that his lips were mute. MacNelly walked like a man in a trance. There was not a word spoken in four blocks.

Presently Duane espied a stone building on a corner of the broad street. There was a big sign: Rangers' Bank. Duane touched Cheseldine's elbow, pointed to the bank.

"Cheseldine, do you want to go in the bank and see if the shipment of gold has come—the big haul?" asked Duane sarcastically. He hated to taunt the man, but could not resist that much.

Cheseldine gave a violent start. Perhaps in that moment he understood. He made no reply.

"There's the hotel," said MacNelly. "Some of my men are in there. We're scattered around."

They crossed the street, went in through lobby, office, saloon, to a large room, like a hall, and here were two men reading and smoking. Duane knew them—rangers!

When he snapped the handcuffs back on Cheseldine it was with a strange air of finality. It was as if he renounced Cheseldine, all noted Duane's strange action and look.

"There, Cheseldine!"

And with a something almost of passion and violence he pushed the outlaw toward MacNelly. He was done with him. Did that action mean that, as a ranger, he was turning Cheseldine over to the law, when as Buck Duane he wanted to meet him, to face him, to make him draw, to kill him?

MacNelly beckoned to his men. "Boys, here he is. Cheseldine! Russell, you and Mills take him in the small room and guard him. Don't take your eyes off him till we decide what to do."

The rangers led Cheseldine away. "Duane, what had we better do with him for the present?" queried MacNelly. "There's a jail here. We can put him away till we're through. But would that be best? We've been lying low."

"No. How many men have you?" "Fifteen."

"Keep two men here guarding Cheseldine."

MacNelly left to go into the other room, and returned closing the door. Then he almost embraced Duane, would probably have done so but for the dark grimness that seemed to be coming over the man.

Instead he glowed, he sputtered, he tried to talk, to wave his hands. He was beside himself. And his rangers crowded closer, eager like hounds ready to run. They all talked at once, and the word most significant and frequent in their speech was Cheseldine. MacNelly capped his hat in his hand.

"This'll make the adjutant sick with joy. Maybe he won't have it on the Governor? We'll show them about the ranger service. Cheseldine! How'd you ever do it? Oh, I knew you were a wonder. But I was sure you'd kill him."

"He didn't give me a chance," replied Duane. "Now, captain, not the half, nor the quarter of this job's done. The gang's coming down the road. I saw them from the train. They'll ride into town on the dot—two-thirty."

"How many?" asked MacNelly.

"Poggin, Blossom, Kane, Pan Handle Smith, Boldt, Jim Fletcher and another man I don't know. These are the picked men of Cheseldine's gang. I'll bet they'll be the fastest, hardest bunch you rangers ever faced."

"Poggin! that's the hard nut to crack! I've heard their records since I've been in Val Verde. Where's Knell? They say he's a boy, but hell and blazes!"

"Knell's dead."

"Ah!" exclaimed MacNelly softly. Then he grew businesslike, cool, and of harder aspect. "Duane, it's your game today. I'm only a ranger under orders. We've absolute faith in you. Make your plan, quick, so I can go around and post the boys who're not here."

"Put one man at each end of this street just at the edge of town. Let him hide there with a rifle to block the escape of any outlaw that we might fail to get. I had a good look at the bank building. It's well situated for our purpose."

"Put four men up in that room over the bank—four men, two at each open window. Let them hide till the game begins. They want to be there so in case these foxy outlaws get wise before they're down on the ground, or inside the bank. The rest of your men put inside behind the counters where they'll hide."

"Now go over to the bank, spring the thing on the bank officials and don't let them shut up the bank. You want their aid. Let them make sure of their gold. But the clerks and cashier ought to be at their desks or window when Poggin rides up."

"He'll glance in before he gets down. They make no mistakes, these fellows. We must be slicker than they are, or lose. When you get the bank people wise, send over your men one by one. No hurry—no excitement—no unusual thing to attract notice in the bank."

"All right. That's great. Tell me, where do you intend to wait?"

"I'll wait in front—just inside the door," replied Duane with an effort.

"Why?" demanded the captain.

"Well," began Duane slowly. "Poggin will get down first and start in. But the others won't be far behind. They'll not get swift till inside. The thing is—they mustn't get clear in—they'll pull guns. That means death to somebody. If we can we want to stop them just at the door."

"But will you hide?" asked MacNelly.

"Hide!" The idea had not occurred to Duane.

"There's a wide-open doorway. A sort of round hall, a vestibule, with steps leading up to the bank. There's a door in the vestibule, too. It leads somewhere. We can put men in there. You can be there."

Duane was silent.

"See here, Duane," began MacNelly nervously. "You shan't take any undue risk here. You'll hide with the rest of us?"

"No!" The word was wrenched from Duane.

MacNelly stared, and then a strange comprehending light seemed to flit over his face.

"Duane, I can give you no orders today," he said distinctly. "I'm only offering advice. Need you take any more risks? You've done a grand job for the service—already. You've paid me a thousand times for that pardon. You've redeemed yourself."

"The Governor, the adjutant-general—the whole State will rise up and honor you. The game's almost up. We'll kill these outlaws or enough of them to break forever their power. I say, as a ranger, need you take more risk than your captain?"

Still Duane remained silent. He was locked between two forces. And one, a tide that was bursting at its bounds, seemed about to overwhelm him. Finally that side of him, the retreating self, the weaker found a voice.

"Captain, you want this job to be sure?" he asked.

"Certainly."

"I've told you the way. I alone know the kind of men to be met. Just what I'll do or where I'll be I can't say yet. In meeting like this the moment decides. He'll be there!"

MacNelly spread wide his hands, looked helplessly at his curious and astounded rangers, and shook his head.

"Now you've done your work—laid the trap—is this strange move of yours going to be fair to Jennie Lee?" asked MacNelly in deliberate, low voice.

Like a great tree chopped at the roots Duane vibrated to that. He looked up as if he had seen a ghost.

Merely the ranger captain went on:

"Jennie Lee came to me in Austin. She was heartbroken. She reproached me. She begged me. She told me of your mother. She did all she could to get me to fetch you back, and if I hadn't been powerless I would have done so."

Thomas J. Rusk—1846-1856

(Copyright 1928 by Alva O. Hearne)

Thomas J. Rusk was born of John and Mary Rusk, at Camden, South Carolina, on August 8, 1802. His father, an immigrant from Ireland, was an honest and industrious stonemason, but was poor and unable to give him the advantages of a college education.

At an early age Mr. Rusk developed a love for books which was greatly increased under the influence and encouragement of his mother, a pious woman of good sense, to whom he habitually read, especially from the Holy Bible. Mr. Calhoun, himself in the commencement of a great career, took an interest in the boy, encouraged him with timely advice and assisted him with the loan of books.

At a suitable age Mr. Rusk commenced reading law under Wm. Graham, for many years Clerk of the Pendleton District Court, earning his livelihood at the same time as clerk in a merchants' store. In 1825 or 1826 he moved to Habersham County, Georgia. In 1827, he married Mary F., the daughter of Colonel Cleveland, a leading citizen of that section. He was admitted to the practice of law, but engaged in merchandising until 1833, when he entered the active law practice and soon acquired a high standing among eminent members of the bar.

Mr. Rusk became largely interested in the stock of a mining company in the "Gold Region of Georgia," the managers of which afterwards abandoned to Texas with the property of the company, leaving him and others in poverty and debt. Pursuing them to Texas in the winter of 1834-35, he overtook them only to find that the property had been squandered.

When Mr. Rusk went to Texas he did not intend to reside there permanently, but saw in that rising country a field in which he might repair his fortunes. The progress with which Mexican usurpation and oppression was being extended to Texas was alarming, and obviously war would be the only remedy by which the Texans could save themselves from destruction. Viewing the situation with grave concern, Mr. Rusk determined to remain and offer his services and his life to the coming struggle.

The Mexican authorities, in disregard of the provisions of the Constitution of 1842, evinced a determination to overthrow the federal form of government and create a central despotism. Repeated acts of oppression and usurpation had almost completely subjugated every portion of the Republic of Mexico except Texas. Early in September, 1835 Texas was declared by the National Executive to be in armed rebellion. Mexican troops were sent into Texas territory under various pretences, and there was no alternative for the Texans but to resort to arms. The Mexican Commandant of San Antonio demanded from the town of Gonzales a piece of artillery and calvary was sent to enforce the demand. This was resisted and, on October 1, 1835, the first battle was fought by Texas and the first victory gained in the cause of liberty and State sovereignty.

General Rusk had in the meantime raised a company at Nacogdoches which he had drilled into a state of efficiency and, on the first news of the attempt at disarming, rushed his company to the Army in the West, then under command of General Stephen F. Austin. Here, it is said, General Rusk and General Austin first became acquainted, and General Rusk, though a stranger, was placed upon General Austin's staff.

On December 10, 1835, having returned to the Seat of Government at San Felipe, General Rusk was appointed by the Council to proceed East of the Trinity to procure reinforcements and supplies to aid in the reduction of the City of San Antonio, and, though that city surrendered on the day the appointment was made, yet the men and munitions collected were of great assistance in future operations.

General Rusk, with others, was elected from Nacogdoches as a delegate to the Convention to assemble at Washington on the Brazos River on March 1, 1836 for the purpose of determining whether Texas should declare her entire national independence or adhere to the republican principles of the Constitution of 1824. The Constitution had been abolished. The war on the part of Mexico was not for or against any particular form of government, but was national—to chastise or exterminate the Texans, who had been denounced as "foreign robbers." The war on the part of Texas was no longer to sustain a party of form of Mexican government, but for self-preservation—for Independence. Accordingly, on March 2, 1836 the Convention unanimously declared Texas to be a free, sovereign and independent republic, and that its political connection with the Mexican nation had forever ended.

Santa Anna, with his immense hosts, had taken the Alamo and put its brave defenders to the sword. Upon rumors of the approach of the enemy the Constitution was hastily thrown together and, on March 16, 1836, the Convention adjourned. General Rusk was unanimously elected Secretary of War of the government, and immediately entered upon the exacting duties of that office.

On April 21, 1836, General Rusk distinguished himself in the victorious Battle of San Jacinto, in the language of the General himself, saved the country from the yoke of bondage, and "at the close of which the sun of liberty and independence arose in Texas, never, (it was hoped), to be obscured by the clouds of despotism." The sound of General Houston having disabled him, General Rusk, then Colonel, was appointed Commander-in-Chief, with the rank of Brigadier-General, and took command of the forces. There being no further active operations, General Rusk resigned his position in October, 1836, and resumed his duties as Secretary of War. He declined the office of Secretary of State, tendered him by President Houston.

In December, 1838, General Rusk was elected Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Texas. He presided at Austin in 1840, at the first term of court at which a quorum attended. After serving a few years he resigned and resumed the practice of law. In 1843, he was elected Major General of the Militia, but soon resigned.

General Rusk was President of the Convention that confirmed the annexation of Texas to the United States. On the annexation of Texas, he and General Houston were unanimously elected as the first two representatives of the State in the United States Senate. General Rusk was twice re-elected. During the eleven years of his service in the United States Senate he was rarely absent from his post. With integrity, purity and single-minded purpose, he unselfishly devoted his great talents to his country.

Senator Rusk died on July 29, 1856 at Nacogdoches, Texas.

DR. FRANK CRANE SAYS—

THE OTHER WORLD

When you sail out across the sea you wonder what all that waste of water is for. It stretches away for miles and miles. Days at a time you cannot even see another ship. Water, water everywhere, clear to the horizon.

And they say that three-fourth of the earth's surface is ocean.

We think we people who live on land and those that sail across the sea in boats, are the whole thing.

Man thinks that the universe is made for him, but Mr. Crane says that the goose thinks the same thing. It is stated that there are more living things under the water than in the air. It is not unreasonable to suppose that whoever made this earth thought the denizens of the sea were more important than the inhabitants of the land. Else He wouldn't have made so many of them.

Curious about that other world? People drown when they are submerged in the water, and those things that inhabit the water generally drown when they come up into the air.

No man can go down into the home of the fishes and live very long. When Mr. Fish comes up into the air we all live but he dies shortly. Perhaps that other world of spirits, of which much is imagined, is like that. No spirit has been proved to mingle with men. This atmosphere of ours may be as fatal to it as to a fish. At any rate we know his atmosphere is fatal to us. No man has gone into it and returned to tell the tale.

We eat the fish when they are cooked, but the fish goes up one better and eats us when we are not cooked.

We have strange stories of mythical beings who inhabit the depths of the sea. Few believe them. We have equally strange stories of witches and mediums who call spirits out of the upper world. Some believe them.

But as far as we know our activities and acquaintances must be confined to this narrow stratum of the earth's atmosphere. We go below it into the sea, or above it, through the portals of death, at our own peril.

Then, hadst thou an excellent head of hair.—Shakespeare.

To begin with, the average woman requires a shampoo once every ten days. Should your hair become either too oily or too dry before this time has elapsed, I suggest that you begin corrective measures to restore your scalp condition to normal.

In shampooing the first need is a good stream of hot water. A spray is really an essential to the success of a shampoo for I know of no other way to insure complete and thorough rinsing. Now as to the selection of your shampoo. You may purchase heral shampoos designed especially for either oily, normal or dry hair. Should you need a corrective shampoo by all means select the one suited to your condition. It will prove the quickest and most effective way of neutralizing your scalp trouble.

An egg shampoo is excellent for the hair and may be used as follows: Break the yolk of one or two eggs into a glass. Beat thoroughly; then add about two ounces of the herbal shampoo fluid and an equal quantity of warm water. Rub thoroughly into the scalp, using half of the mixture at each application. Finish by rinsing thoroughly with a steady stream of very warm water.

An olive or balsam oil shampoo is a variation which will do wonders toward improving the growth of your hair. Warm about two ounces of balsam or olive oil in a small aluminum sauce pan. When quite hot either rub it well into the scalp with your finger-tips or use a small, stiff brushed toothbrush for the purpose. Separate the hair into parts so that the entire scalp receives its portion of the oil.

Bind up your head in a towel wrung out of hot water and cover with another dry towel. In half an hour shampoo with your herbal preparation—soaping the head two or three times. Rinse thoroughly.

If you are blonde, the juice of a lemon squeezed into the last rinsing water is very effective. If your hair is dark you may obtain that lovely glowing lustre, by dissolving one or two tablespoonfuls of powdered Egyptian Henna in warm water and using this in a last basin of rinsing water.

Next week I shall tell you a little about special treatments for the hair.

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of investigation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. DR, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

HINTS FOR THE HOME

The background of architecture and furniture may endure for a long time—for generations, perhaps—but the accessories of the home change style with amazing frequency.

Pictures wrongly framed or hung too high, with peaked wires; bric-a-brac that is passe, or arranged in a way no longer considered "good"—such small decorative errors as these brand the home as out of date far quicker than do its furniture or rugs.

The sofa cushions, reading lamps, and erstwhile library scarf; the decorative screen fittings for the dining room—look to them carefully, for subtle changes have been at work among them, refining, simplifying, making them to the home what her accessories are to the French woman's toilette—seals that stamp the ensemble as up to date, or frankly "out."

Safety, silence and simplicity are features of the new Ford six-brake system

ONE of the first things you will notice when you drive the new Ford is the quick, effective, silent action of its six-brake system.

This system gives you the highest degree of safety and reliability because the four-wheel service brakes and the separate emergency or parking brakes are all of the mechanical, internal expanding type, with braking surfaces fully enclosed for protection against mud, water, sand, etc.

The many advantages of this type of braking system have long been recognized. They are brought to you in the new Ford through a series of mechanical improvements embodying much that is new in design and manufacture. A particularly unique feature is the simple way by which a special drum has been constructed to permit the use of two sets of internal brakes on the rear wheels.

A further improvement in braking performance is effected by the self-centering feature of the four-wheel brakes—an exclusive Ford development. Through this construction, the entire surface of the shoe is brought in steady, uniform contact with the drum the instant you press your foot on the brake pedal. This prevents screeching and howling and makes the Ford brakes unusually silent in operation.

Another feature of the Ford brakes is the ease of adjustment.

The four-wheel brakes are adjusted by turning a screw conveniently located on the outside of each brake plate. This screw is so notched that all four brakes can be set alike simply by listening to the "clicks."

The emergency or parking brakes on the new Ford require little attention. However, should they need adjustment at any time, consult your Ford dealer for prompt, courteous, and economical service. He works under close factory supervision and he has been specially trained and equipped to help you get the greatest possible use from your car over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

For the Back-to-School Suit Remember that the one exception to the feminine-fashion vogue obtains in the realm of the jacket suit, where one may go back to the boyish theme and have smartly tailored lines and tuck-in blouse, scarf tie or four-in-hand and a quite mannish buckled belt. These trim little ensembles are particularly fortunate for the school girl's clothes collection.

HAMLIN-EDWARDS

On January 4th Miss Selma Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Edwards of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. Edgar J. Hamlin, of Winfield, Kansas, according to an announcement received by this paper from Mrs. J. P. Morrison, Kelley Field, San Antonio, Texas.

The bride was one of the most popular members of the younger set during her high school days, and prior to her graduation from an important part in both the athletic and social life of the school. Following her graduation here she went to hold another year, for which we are Athlete and took a course in Dranch.

Mrs. Earl Owens and little son of Vernon, Texas, are guests this week in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Davy.

Mrs. W. A. Burroughs, of Winnebago, Texas, sends in her check to keep the Munday Times coming for another year. Mrs. Burroughs owns an excellent farm near Munday and likes to keep in touch with conditions in the Munday country and therefore never allows her Times to stop.

Milady's Beauty Secrets By Helena Rubinstein

Since Cynthia neglects her looking glass And threw her sun-expelling mask away. The air hath starved the roses in her cheeks And pitched the lily tincture of her face. —Shakespeare.

The health of your skin may be considered an accurate barometer of its beauty. If it is lazy, inactive, improperly cared for, your complexion will show it. If, on the other hand, it is vibrant, healthy, your color will be good, the general tone clear and lovely, and the tissues firm and elastic.

It is really remarkable to realize how few women recognize the signs of skin health—or rather, of ill health, since, being human, women only begin to treasure the beauty of a good complexion when the mirror warns them they are losing it! Lines and wrinkles, as I have told you before, are not the penalties of age. To the contrary—there are

The melancholy days have come, The saddest of the year. Our pocketbook is empty, Tapping time is here.

We have received a letter from M. Bruce Oates, agricultural agent for the Wichita Valley and Ft. Worth and Denver railways, in which he commends us for the stand we took with reference to the discontinuation of the county agent and home demonstration agent. "It would have been a great blow to Knox county to have had extension work removed and I want to commend you for having taken the stand you did in your editorial," said Mr. Oates.

No man is more vitally interested in the agricultural welfare of this section of Texas than is M. Bruce Oates. As agricultural agent for the railroads he represents, he has for a number of years devoted much of his time and efforts in promoting the poultry and dairying interests, and has striven to interest every farmer along their lines in these industries and get them away from the one-crop idea. No man is better informed on agricultural problems than is Mr. Oates and the farmers of this section will do well to read and weigh the various articles written by him and published in these columns from time to time. His interest in these matters is simply one of self-interest, for if the farmers served by the railroads which he serves are prosperous just to that extent the railroads will prosper, and it is therefore a certainty that he is not going to recommend something that is not one hundred per cent practical and that has not been proven out.

Attala County Miss. In the Midst of Big Dairying Program

By M. B. Oates
Continuing our dairy tour of Mississippi and Tennessee, we visited Kosciusko, Attala County, which is in Central Mississippi. At this place we found further evidence of the adaptability of dairying to a cotton country. Also we found that another large milk concern has recognized the South as a coming dairy section.

The Pet Milk Company had just completed at $400,000, a condensery six weeks before our arrival. When we were there the plant was receiving 20,000 pounds of milk per day and had acquired 600 patrons. Their pay check for the first thirty days was $20,000. This was the first condensery built by the Pet Company in Mississippi.

Kosciusko also has a small creamery which has been in operation for a number of years. To our surprise we learned that the creamery was not hurt by the big condensery. On the contrary we found that the creamery's business has increased 100 percent since the condensery started. We found this same condition at one or two other places. The fact that small creameries were helped rather than hurt was explained by the fact that the building of a new plant greatly stimulated interest and production with the result that part of the new customers wanted to market cream while others preferred to sell whole milk thus the creameries were helped and the new plant grew satisfactorily.

Discussing a bit, the writer wishes to state that a similar thing happened about three years ago at Childress, Texas, when the Gate City Creamery had five cream buying stations. They all feared a slump in business and one of the men went out of business. Later this man learned that the other cream stations were not hurt and he opened up his cream station again. All of these stations are doing more business than they did before the creamery was established and in the meantime the creamery has acquired over 600 patrons and has enlarged its place of business on two different occasions. It appears that different sorts of markets are an inducement for more farmers to enter the dairy business because of the local opportunity afforded for selling either milk or cream at different local markets.

We will now return to our discussion of Kosciusko and her growing dairy business. We found again that the secret of her success was due to a united effort and lots of work. We had a long talk with County Agent, J. C. Barrett and C. H. Williams, field man for the Condensery, who told us that the Pet Co. has two field men on the job in that county and the County Board of Development has a full time man employed and paid by that organization. The County Agent and these three other field men are all devoting full time to the dairy program. The two men above named gave the County Board of Development most of the credit for securing the Pet Condensery. Furthermore, the County Agent said they had splendid cooperation among the business men of the town. It appears that these four field men are now engaged in an educational program to develop the dairy industry and backed by the business men of Kosciusko and the County Board of Development will succeed.

At the time we were there the County Agent had 25 meetings scheduled; the purpose of which was pasture improvement. He had a full page paid advertisement in the local paper on hairy vetch for pasture. In fact, Mississippi was in the midst of a pasture improvement campaign while we were there. Nearly all the dairy counties had on a pasture improvement campaign. This properly goes with dairying and every Texas farmer who is milking cows should improve his pastures to the highest carrying capacity reasonably possible. Dairy herds are also being improved by placing forty pure bred bulls in the county.

The effect on town business was not so marked here as at some other places visited because the creamery had not previously had many patrons and the condensery had not been in business long enough to effect the farmers' prosperity. However, we learned that the bankers have learned from their experience with the creamery patrons that the farmer who has been milking for five years or more has good ratings at the bank, while those who are not milking have poor ratings. Bankers there now ask how many cows a farmer is milking before they extend a loan. Previously the question was "How many acres of cotton are you going to plant?" and I fear that too many of our Texas bankers are still asking the latter question too often.

COWS AND MEN. WHAT NAME FOR HOOVER? THE DUKE BROTHERS. FARMERS IN JAPAN.

Moosejaw, Saskatchewan, gave a dinner to Ben H. Thomson in honor of his Holstein-Friesian cow, Canary Cordyle. They both deserved. The Saskatchewan Government bought the cow for $10,000.

Canary is world's champion in butter fat and gives enough milk in a day to feed the average family a month. In 205 days, this wonder cow produced 1,680 pounds of butter and 26,370 pounds of milk.

Too bad there is no way of improving men's brains, as we improve cows' udders. Only time can do that, and time is slow. The average intelligence in the British House of Commons today, according to Lecky, is lower than the average of all the free men in Athens, 3,000 years ago. Science goes ahead, man stays about where he was, a little less brutal, a little less selfish.

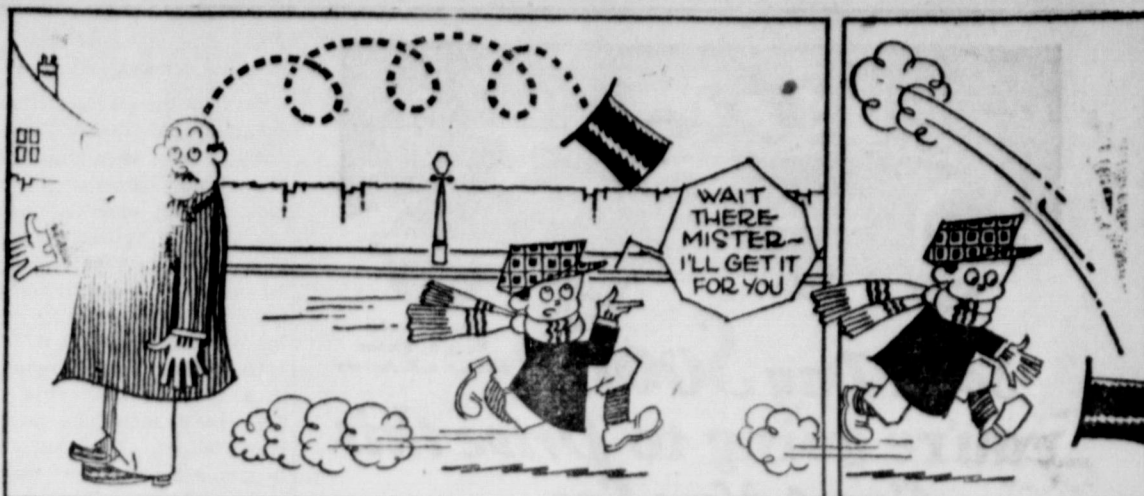

If Americans call President Coolidge "the silent President," what will they call Mr. Hoover? He has been elected President of the United States, will begin his work in less than two months, has been in Washington several days at work. How much has he talked? Not at all.

Eight years more of business without conversation will suit this country very well. We have had, at various times, considerable periods of conversation without business.

Sometimes farmers succeed, but usually they must leave the farm to do it. Benjamin N. Duke, who died yesterday morning in his Fifth Avenue house in New York, began as a farmer, working with his brother, James Duke, on their father's farm. They grew tobacco, started a saw factory, then a cigar cigarette making machinery, and made hundreds of millions. And, farmers note this, they bought the middle man instead of being bought by him. Ask Mr. Hill of the American Tobacco Company or Mr. Belt of Lorillard's how that is done.

American farmers have their troubles. Farmers in Japan have worse ones. When our farmers complain Government at least MAKES PROMISES. When thousands of Japanese peasants marched to express dissatisfaction, forty were shot dead and many wounded.

THE FUMBLE FAMILY by Dunkel A "SWEET" THOUGHT

An intoxicated lady told the judge her trouble was due to an alcohol rub. She had swallowed nothing. Doctors said it was just possible, the judge excused her.

A gentleman, very drunk, led in by the policeman, told the judge, "My mistake was eating raisins while drinking ice cream soda." They let him go.

Prohibition develops new excuses.

THE TOM-TOM
The Tom-Tom "Force" is busy this week and will not be able to give you the school news. We are very sorry that we have to take these exams when we could be writing something for the paper, but these exams have to come, paper or no paper. We will assure you that each student is having a "big time" talking these exams. Everyone is sure that they can pass the exams and here is hoping that we all do.

We are glad to say that "Icky" Pruitt and J. C. Nelson are passing each exam with ease. We can not vouch for "Pretty" and Frank.

A. E. Ford of route 3 apologized for being a little late when he handed us his renewal the other day, but we lost no sleep over subscribers like Mr. Ford, for we know they will remember the home paper in due time, and we just keep the paper going.

TO CREAM PRODUCERS

We have made arrangements whereby we will be enabled to give our patrons a better price for their cream during the year. The Western Produce Company is putting in its own butter manufacturing machinery and will manufacture its own butter. We have a complete new testing outfit and want your cream business and will pay you the top of the market for your cream and issue check in payment for same at the time it is brought in.

"MAN OR ANIMAL" By Rev. R. B. Freeman

Under the above caption I wish to think out loud. First, for my own amusement and benefit that I might clarify my own mind.

How much better are we than the lower animals? The beast of the field, the horse, cow, hog, dog. You say a great deal. We are humans, God made us.

same can be and is done in man. All bird dog owners and trainers know its harder to train for birds, an Irish setter than an English setter or pointer.

What is the difference between man and the lower animal? Man was made in the image of God and in His image or likeness did He create him.

above the lower animals? Shall he live and act as do other animals?

It is a known fact, that in every community there are humans who do not live on a very much higher plane than lower animals. They are selfish, selfish, show no desire to cooperate for the betterment of their own life or anyone else.

Deep down in the soul of every human being God has stamped His image. It is therefore left to us to develop and bring that image out and make it shine forth like God intended it should.

you? Or do you live to do... heat that... for the... before you, or do you dishonor God by breaking the Sabbath and ignoring the church and refuse the Pledge a place in your reading and all this before your children. What about your influence over your children and your children's children? No man liveth to himself.

Attention FARMERS

Many farmers are learning the economy of feeding cottonseed meal and hulls to horses and mules, especially during the season when the teams are idle.

At a time like this when feeds of all kinds are scarce it should be the aim of every farmer to reduce their feed expense to a minimum, and we believe that meal and hulls offer the cheapest ration for livestock to be had.

NEW NATIONAL ANTHEM?

Freedom, we children all,
Hear your mother-call
In land of mine,
Not after best we came,
From your goddess name,
By your sordid shame,
A new world's claim.

It is bold, martial and defiant—it makes one feel proud of one's country. It is in three-four time, so that it cannot be marched to; hence, it will never be played for a parade. It always will be used in the most dignified way, to be heard while persons are in assemblage. It is hard to sing, therefore is generally played by band, and so is usually competitively rendered.

A DISTURBING ELEMENT

William H. Taft, Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, had to point out the most disturbing element in our national life, said "the materialistic philosophy which places wealth and worldly success ahead of every other consideration of life."
This materialistic philosophy holds that the secret of the crime problem lies in it can be controlled, it will be the future. It is a menace to civilization.
Asks Justice Taft, "What can it do to a man to have accumulated millions if he has not at the same time maintained a clear conscience and acquired the good-will and esteem of his fellow citizens?"
The Chief Justice believes that the American people will find a way to solve the perplexing problems before them.
We share his optimism. After all, the disturbing element of materialism is present, but also there is a strong literary and scientific trend among Americans. The recent extraordinary discoveries and inventions and artistic achievements give proof that we are not to be drowned in a sea of materialism.
True enough, the crime situation, growing out of this materialism, is acute. But the majority are not criminals. It is only the minority who see no need of maintaining a clear conscience and acquiring the good-will and esteem of their fellow citizens!

TRAINING IN HONESTY

This little story is taken from the Sherman Democrat of a recent date: "Who in the world threw that paper through the window pane?" shouted two or three voices in unison in the Democrat office the other afternoon. "Get his number," suggested the circulation manager, seeing a score of Democrat carrier boys assembled on the sidewalk. "You'll never find out which one is to blame," someone suggested. But before the investigation was ever started, a bright-faced youth stepped into the front door. "I'm sorry, sir, I did not mean to break the window glass," the lad said, adding, "I'll be glad to sweep up the pieces and replace the glass." And he did. "That acts like a Boy Scout," someone suggested and the check was made. "Yes, I'm a Scout," the boy replied. He was complimented for his action in the manner and his example was good for other boys and grown-up boys as well.

The training that is given Boy Scouts as they go along from month to month in their regular program is practical. The Scouts are taught that it is wrong to lie, to steal or to take an unfair advantage of another person. Not all of them, but most of them, are able to apply these teachings to their every day lives.

Here is another example: A Brownwood merchant not long ago employed several boys, none of whom were Scouts, to distribute three or four thousand circulars. The boys reported that they had done the work, and were paid; but the merchant soon discovered that his circulars had been hidden in trash cans, under coverts and elsewhere, and that only a few had actually been delivered according to his instructions. Soon he had other circulars to distribute, and this time employed Boy Scouts. A careful check of their work revealed that they had followed his instructions to the letter, and had given him honest and efficient service.

There isn't much difference in boys, as a rule. One boy is about as good as another, if given an opportunity to be as good. Scouting does not propose to reform bad boys, but to help good boys remain good. It gives the boys worthy ideals, and seeks to place around them such influences as will make it comparatively easy for the boys to maintain their ideals and carry them on with them into the period of manhood. "I find good music can keep people in good humor, better than any other device," he declares. "I think if our bands never stopped playing in war time, there never would be any fighting. I have had peoples from dozens of countries come up and tell me that they can now understand why America is such a happy prosperous country."

Show Interest
"The questions foreigners have asked and the interest shown in American music is amazing. Everyone here wants to know how we write our music. Last night I was playing one of my favorite numbers, 'Say 'Yes' Today,' and an Indian rajah came over after I had finished, and wanted to

Local Drug Firm Awarded Valuable Agency for Sargon

Never before in the history of the world has the progress of Medical Science been so rapid. One important discovery after another has been made which will have a far-reaching effect upon the health and well-being of mankind. Some of these discoveries are startling in the extreme and absolutely disprove many of the beliefs, practices and theories we have known for a life-time.

As scientific investigators learn more and more about the human anatomy, the practice of medicine changes—the old is discarded for the new. As a result of this world-wide medical research, Science has discovered that good health is largely governed and maintained by three vital organs and fluids of the body. These are the liver, the blood and the endocrine glands.

What is more important, we have learned that these organs and fluids can be stimulated and invigorated by certain basic elements.

Having knowledge of these important discoveries, one of America's leading bio-chemists, succeeded, after two and one-half years of laboratory research, in combining these basic elements in one formula—which may well be considered one of the greatest health-giving remedies of the age.

It is called Sargon. This formula and the formula for Sargon Soft Mass Pills, which are an essential and integral part of the treatment, are the property of the Sargon Laboratories and can be obtained by no other firm or individual in the world.

This new scientific treatment, which represents much of our latest knowledge on modern therapy, has been acclaimed by druggists throughout America as a triumph in the field of medicine.

With the needs of their customers uppermost in their minds, leading druggists everywhere have been eager to be among the first to supply it to their trade.

Although introduced in the Southwest only a few weeks ago, Sargon has already become a household word. In Dallas and Ft. Worth alone, over 40,000 bottles of Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills have been sold and distributed by local firms. Nothing like it has ever been before.

The agency for Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills for this city and section has been awarded to The Rexall Store. In anticipation of the enormous demand, this well-known firm has just received a large shipment of these celebrated medicines.

"Mother, dear—"
"Yes, darling."
"I feel lonesome." It was Bobbie Bunny speaking.
"How can you be lonesome when I am here with you?"
"I don't know, Mother, but I am terribly lonesome and—"
"Just where are you lonesome? In your head, or your feet? I never was lonesome and so I don't know how it feels."

"Well, Mother dear, it's terrible. It feels like I had the wibble wobbles in my stomach."
Mrs. Rabbit took off her glasses and looked at her Bobbie in surprise. "What are the wibble wobbles?" she asked.
"I don't know what they are, Mother, but they are ten times worse than the piegetises and—"
"Have the piegetises got anything to do with pie?" asked Mrs. Rabbit.
"I wasn't thinking of that, but now that you speak of it, that was lovely cabbage pie we had the other day. It makes my lonesomeness almost gone just to think of that pie," said Bobbie.

"I don't think I have anything to eat in the house, but—"
"Oh, dear, oh dear! I can feel that lonesomeness coming on again," cried Bobbie.
"Shall I send for the doctor, or will you take a dose of castor oil?" asked his mother.

"I feel better now—you needn't send for anybody, but are you sure there is nothing to eat in this house?"
"Positively, I mean, positively."
Bobbie Bunny was thoughtful for a moment and then said: "Well, if there is nothing to eat in this house, I guess I'll go out and play—perhaps that will make my lonesomeness better. Then, too, Bobbie may be home by that time and my dear, good father might happen in with something good to eat."

"I think if you are sick with lonesomeness you might go to bed—that's the best place for you," said Mrs. Rabbit.
"Horror!" exclaimed Bobbie. "I don't want to go to bed. I want something to eat."
"Why didn't you say so? Here you have been all this time worrying me and making a lot of conversation just because you are hungry. Is that lonesomeness?"

"It's pretty bad what ever it is," sighed Bobbie. "Good bye, I'll go out and play. Perhaps I'll starve to death and you'll find me—"
"Come on, dear, I'll see if I can't find some carrot pie for you."
"I feel ever so much better, Mother," said Bobbie, as he trotted off behind his mother to the kitchen, where she found some pie for him.

WASTED VALUES. CHURCHES SHOULD BE BIG LIONS AND SHEEP. SWEARING OFF.

The greatest of all waste goes on inside the human brain, of which one-hundredths remain idle and unused, even in well-managed brains. Millions of brains do not work at all, only remember and repeat, never create.

But that will change. Consider what ants and other insects accomplish, having been here many million years ahead of us. We are only 12,000 years from the late Stone Age, which is the most encouraging fact in history. Give men ten to fifty million more years, with deepening convolutions and inherited knowledge, and see what they will do.

A mud wasp, as Faber shows, is born knowing how to perform a most delicate surgical operation, difficult for a skilled man. New born human babies, 50,000,000 years hence, will know more of mathematics than Newton knew when he died, more of music than Beethoven and Bach combined.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who understands human nature, encourages the building of Dr. Reiser's skyscraper church in New York, says "churches must be big enough to dominate skyscrapers. Material as well as spiritual dominance is needed."

That sound idea inspired builders of the old cathedrals. When the Pope Peter's in Rome, dominance was the idea as it was in the building of the cathedrals of Cologne, Milan, Notre Dame and to believe in Dante.

To control men you must control their IMAGINATION
Mussolini has old-fashioned ideas and good ones. The new twenty-lira piece, worth $1, bears an inscription worth many dollars.
"Maggio essere un giorno da Leone, che cento anni da pecora," meaning, "It is better to live one day like a lion than one hundred years like a sheep."
It's hard to make a sheep believe it.

Like a man half-heartedly swearing off in the morning, the world is trying to give up war. And this country, which never started a war against Europe, is expected to do most of the reforming. It's like asking Moody and Sankey to sign the pledge first, or entreating the Rev. Dr. Stratton not to believe in Dante.

The individual must solve his own problems, with the use of will power. The heart knoweth his own bitterness. Each of us knows what is wrong with him, and what he ought to do. Few of us do it. Nations know what they ought to do. None of them does it. Europe ought to stop fighting, and can't. We ought to mind our own business, and can't.

For American prosperity the outlook is good. Prosperity demands action and the spending of money, less of money. This present prosperity is based on the pouring out of a hundred billions in the war.

No Trace Found Of Benjamin Man Missing In Mexico

BENJAMIN, Texas, Jan. 22.—No trace has been found of Van Phillips, who disappeared from a ranch in Mexico about two weeks ago, according to word received by relatives here.

D. A. Phillips, Benjamin hotel proprietor, is father of the missing man, and Miss Bertha Phillips and Mrs. Iva Coady, also of Benjamin, are his sisters. Two brothers, O. A. Phillips of Amarillo, and Clay Phillips of near Denning, N. M., are in Mexico now aiding in the search for their brother.

Phillips had been missing six days before his relatives were notified of his disappearance.

The story as told by his ranching partner, who lives at Hacht, N. M., 15 miles from the border, is that on Jan. 5 Phillips rode off to get a hog. When he did not return by the next day his friends became alarmed and sent out a searching party of 50 or 60 men. The only things they found to report were hog tracks and the tracks of two horses leading down into a seep in a canyon.

Members of his family here are clinging to the hope that he may have fallen in with and joined the party led by Francisco Fimbres against the band of Apache Indians who had killed Fimbres' wife and kidnapped his son. This party, which started from Agua Prieta on January 3, would probably have passed that way by January 5, it was believed.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Tillinghast of Haskell are this week moving back to Munday, Mr. Tillinghast having sold his interest in the Chevrolet business in that city some weeks ago, and will be associated with the Moore Chevrolet in this city. Both Mr. and Mrs. Tillinghast have a large host of friends here who will be glad to know that they are again to be residents of Munday.

BEEF CANNING DEMONSTRATION GIVEN AT THE BRUGGEMAN HOME

By Julia A. Kennedy

To secure a sufficient variety of meats, to keep menus appetizing, and different, has been one of the big problems of the rural housewife. She has had to depend almost entirely on pork, cured with salt and smoke or on poultry of which the family quickly tires.

Since the perfection of a method of canning in tin which can be successfully used on the farm, it has become possible to can the meat from a whole animal, thus saving the large amount of which cannot be used fresh until it is needed, and at the same time providing a large variety of meat dishes which can be easily and quickly prepared for the table. This is not difficult, nor is it so in fact, that the killing and curing of pork, and is completed in a much shorter time. If the work is carefully planned and everything is prepared, it is possible to finish even an entire beef in six or seven hours.

Having previously expressed a desire to Miss Grace Nelson, county home demonstrator, to accompany her upon a beef canning demonstration, we were delighted last Thursday morning when she drove by and extended us an invitation to accompany her to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Bruggerman of Rhineland, where she was to give a canning demonstration.

Upon arriving at the Bruggerman home we found everything in readiness. Word had gone out that Miss Nelson would be there on that day and there was quite a little crowd gathered to learn the process of beef canning. The beef had been killed, dressed and quartered the previous day, therefore it was thoroughly chilled before time for canning. Three pressure cookers were used and soon were filled with the roasts, while these were cooking the steaks were prepared and fried as though they were to be served at once. During this time the sealer was set up, the cans washed and stacked ready for filling. After the meat had been removed from the bones they were placed in a large kettle out doors, covered with water and allowed to boil for several hours. This makes clear soup and contains a large amount of gelatine.

The cookers containing the roasts were brought to a fifteen pound pressure and made to hold that pressure for 15 minutes, then the meat was placed in the canners, which had been washed after removing the meat, and again brought to the 15 pound pressure and this time processed for 55 minutes. The steaks were canned in a like manner, as were the soup stock, etc.

From hints let out by Mr. Bruggerman it became evident he was very anxious that some chili be made, so some 14 number 3 cans were filled with this appetizing Mexican dish.

At the noon hour Miss Nelson and the writer were invited into the dining room where a very delicious lunch was served.

About Your Health

Common Skin Affections

Winter is a signal for the spread of skin diseases. This is because many people neglect proper bathing, and are exposed to radical changes of temperature on the surface of the body.

To rush out into a zero atmosphere while perspiring even the least bit, will aggravate skin troubles, or bring them about, if not worse. To working men in shops, or the indoor-set in farm houses, this article will be timely.

Eczema is by far the most common winter skin disease. It may develop on any part of the human being, whether protected by clothing or not. It is not contagious—and may become a chronic disease, if neglected. Its chief symptom is itching or burning. Excessive "scratching" which seems imperative, may arouse moisture, even bleeding. Rarely does eczema scale or peel off. Of course you should consult your physician, if you get a persistent skin trouble that you don't understand.

My advice must be general, though correct. Remove every source of irritation, if you have eczema—you will not recover with the best medicines if you do not. I once compelled a lady to cease wearing a fur neck-piece, much against her will, but she recovered from a fierce eczema of the neck and shoulders. Even very soft garments may irritate; change to less irritating. Use nothing on the skin that irritates. A "famous" patent medicine that I know of, does nothing more than relieves the itching—it never cures. Even that is fine—for the charlatan who sells the nostrum.

If, unfortunately, your eczema is all over or "universal," you should consult a nerve specialist as well. The cause may be found in a deep-seated nerve affection. Local medicines could be soothing in the highest degree.

Shiriff C. R. Elliott gave us a check the other day for his removal and requested that we change his address to Benjamin, where he has moved, and when we saw him later he requested us to announce that he had not caught the jail breakers yet. In fact, he told us confidentially that the only inhabitant of the jail at this time was Mrs. Elliott, and he had grave fears of being able to hold her.

Mrs. C. R. Haymes came in the other day while on a visit here from Tule and had her figures showed up a notch and also had us all the news of B. M. (Mack) Haymes, O'Donnell, Texas, to our list, and we know that the Haymes family at O'Donnell will enjoy reading the old home town newspaper.

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1927-28 by Wynne Ferguson
Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright 1927, by Hovik, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 34
"What is the squeeze play?" is one of the questions that seems to bother most auction players, so a little discussion of this play should be interesting and instructive.

The squeeze play comes up very frequently in hands where a player is able to force discards. If out or more opponents are obliged to discard winning cards, such a play is called a squeeze. That is, the winning card or cards are forced or squeezed from the opponent's hands. The best way to study the squeeze play, however, is by examples.

There are no trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y-Z play the hand so that they can win all of the tricks against any defense? Z should lead the seven of spades. A is forced to discard. If he discards a club, Y wins the trick with the ace of spades, leads the ace of hearts and then a club, thus winning all of the tricks. If A discards a heart, Y wins the trick with the ace of spades.

Spades are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y-Z play the hand so that they can win all of the tricks against any defense? Z should lead the seven of spades, winning the trick in Y's hand with the king. He should then lead the four of spades from Y's hand, winning the trick in Z's hand with the queen. A and B follow suit on both of these tricks. Z should now lead the ace of spades and A is forced to discard. He cannot discard the queen of diamonds or Y's ten of diamonds will be good, so he is forced to discard the ten of clubs. Y should now discard the ten of diamonds. B is now forced to discard. He cannot discard the ten of hearts or Z's

There are no trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y-Z win five of the nine tricks against any defense? Z should lead the five of diamonds. A should play the three of diamonds (not the ten). Y should discard the three of clubs (the four would be correct) and B should win the trick with the seven of diamonds. B must not play the two of diamonds. Y's best lead is the five of hearts. Z should play the three of hearts and A must discard.

First: Suppose at trick two, A discards the five of clubs. Y wins the trick with the seven of hearts. Y should then lead the five of spades which A should win with the seven, Z discarding the four of hearts. Now whatever A leads, Y-Z must win four more tricks.

Second: Suppose at trick two, A discards the four of diamonds. Y wins the Scalped!

Titmore Reed, 25, Hingham, is member of the San Carlos Indian Reservation, Arizona, was partly scalped and had his throat slashed by an Apache as she was returning home from the trading post. Recovering in a hospital at Globe, Ariz., Miss Reed will not return to San Carlos. The only theory advanced is that an Apache laborer objected to "white man's religion."
