EDITORIAL

CHOOSING AN OCCUPATION

The problem facing all high school students, especially seniors, is that of choosing a lifetime occupation. Now is not too early for the youngest to begin considering this problem. Like the Rotary Club's "Four Way Test" for everyday life, there are four points to bring into consideration in choosing an occupation. First, will you enjoy the work? If you cannot be happy in your work, you cannot have hopes of success. A person who forces himself to work at a job which he does not care for will find his days becoming increasingly dull; a life of boredom and discontent will be his lot. I place this as the first and most important of the four.

Many people who choose a life's work because the field pays a great amount of money find their working day monotonous. However, be sure your choice will produce a decently high degree of support for yourself and your dependents. One's life should not be filled with a constant struggle for more money in order to pay for necessities.

Has one lived in vain if he cannot give something to society which will live on after his death? Yes, I think so! Those who practice medicine and scientific research, those who uphold the law and work for better living and economic conditions, those devoted to the ministry—all those leave invaluable contributions to the world; but no less can be said for those millions of people who devote their lives to rearing a family.

Last, in closing, let me say this: Don't be content just to get by. In whatever field that you choose, be sure that you are willing to work to be among the best in that field.

CAT SCRATCHES

If any of you are wondering what became of my trip to the moon in Tabbynik, let me tell you all about it. When I settled myself in the space ship, I pulled the starting switch. First, there was a tremendous blast. Then I felt myself being forced into space, then I blacked out! When I woke up, I found myself lying on a hard silvery rock. It wasn't the moon, I knew, but another planet. As I regained my balance, I began my explorations of the strange planet. I found that it was not very large—only twenty feet from one side to the other. The planet was round like the earth, but I could not go to the other side without falling off. Another unusual thing about this planet was the color. It was a shiny silver color; it also seemed to have four spokes sticking out the bottom. Looking down, I could see the earth; it certainly was close! "No, it was impossible," I thought, "I thought I saw a car." As I leaned forward to make certain I was not seeing a mirage, I slipped on the slick, shiny, silver planet, anyone who is taking English will know that this sentence is called an alliteration, and fell completely off. Down I came—hurling into space. The earth came closer and closer. Would I be dashed to pieces? The blow came; I hit the earth with a bounce! When I woke up, I found myself staring up at the planet from which I had just fallen. It wasn't a planet at all; it was the Crowell water tower! Woe is me! From now on, I'll let the scientists be the ones to travel to the moon. So long, Tabby.

Home Demonstration Notes

MRS. MARY D. BROWN

Let's not forget the home nursing course scheduled for next Wednesday and Thursday at 2:30 p. m. in the Down Town Bible Classroom. Also next week is National Home Demonstration Week. I hope that each club has made some plan for observing this week.

Steam pressing is a fast growing trend, judging by the increasing number of questions on the selection, use and care of steam irons.

When it comes to selection, there are two main types; the flash or open water container type, which is usually filled through the front of the handle. Instructions say heat, then turn to steam. It's important to follow the instructions because the water runs through and doesn't turn to steam if not sufficiently heated.

The other kind has a boiler or sealed water container. To fill, the cap is unscrewed or removed. All the water is heated to the steaming point and continues steaming until the water is gone.

Prevent spitting and water spotting by following manufacturers instructions for filling and heating. These general precautions apply to most steam irons: don't overfill or handle roughly, or tilt excessively. This is especially important for irons with flash or open water containers. Be sure the iron is hot before turning on the steam. Set iron at correct temperature setting. Water is likely to boil over or the steam may be too dry if iron is overheated.

Use of tap water, unless it is naturally soft, will usually lead to a deposit of minerals that corrode the metal and close the steam passageway. Use of distilled (soft) water will prevent mineral deposits.

To open clogged vents, some manufacturers suggest the use of clear vinegar. This mild acid is effective in removing calcium, one of the minerals which collects in the iron. Fill the water container with half vinegar and steam 2 minutes. Let stand overnight, then rinse several times. Expect unpleasant odor.

National H. D. Week Set for May 4-10

Texas home demonstration club women—over 36,000 of them—will be among the 6 1/2 million homemakers throughout the nation who will observe National Home Demonstration Week May 4-10, according to Mrs. Mary D. Brown, CHDA. "Today's Homes Build Tomorrow's World" is again serving as the national theme of the week.

During the week, most of the 2,000 Texas home demonstration clubs plan special activities to highlight their programs. Special exhibits, community programs, feature stories, radio and television programs, and tours are planned to inform other homemakers and families of the purposes of home demonstration work and show its contribution to family and community life.

The home demonstration program is planned by homemakers and carried on cooperatively by the Extension Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the land grant colleges and county governments. New research information in all phases of homemaking is brought to women and families through specialists, home demonstration agents and local leaders. Programs and demonstrations in foods and nutrition, housing and home improvement, home management, health and safety, recreation, family life, clothing, consumer buying and public affairs are developed to fit local needs and interests. Home demonstration club members also conduct special programs in civil defense and encourage and assist with local 4-H Club programs.

Soil Improvement Proves Profitable for Foard Farmer

by James H. Herring

The conservation of soil and water is not a job that you can finish all at once; it is something that you must continue to do. It is a way of farming, and the experiences of several farmers in the Lower Pease River Soil Conservation District show that conservation farming is profitable.

If you get started right, conservation farming is not difficult. If you know what your land is capable of doing, have a good conservation plan, and start applying your conservation practices in the right way, you will find that conservation farming is just a good way of farming. It is a natural way; you work with nature, not against her. Of course, you will run into some problems while practicing conservation farming; but you will be able to solve most of them if you know your land, know your plan, and have built your conservation structures right. You can get technical help from your soil conservation district on any conservation problems that you are unable to solve yourself.

Grover Moore of the Riverside community is one of the many farmers in the Lower Pease River Soil Conservation District who has found that conservation farming is better for the land, and in the long run it is cheaper and more profitable for you.

Mr. Moore rents the farm on which he lives from Mrs. Lozelle Turnbough of Lubbock. This is a sandy land farm which consists of soils with few or no permanent limitations to severe permanent limitations or frequent hazards to the maintenance of the land. The planned treatment objectives on this farm with the district was to combat wind and water erosion by maintaining active organic matter supply throughout soil profile, maintain cover (living or dead) during critical erosion periods, and prevent run-off or reduce to non-erosive velocity.

First conservation practices installed on this farm were mechanical in nature. A windbreak was on this farm when Mr. Moore rented it. The windbreak provides protection from the hot southwest winds which always create a hazard for protection of the land and growing crops. Also it harbors helpful insects and birds to prey on harmful insects.

A diversion terrace was constructed to divert outside water from an active gully that was causing considerable erosion. To Mr. Moore, these practices were good, but they were limited in protection to the entire farm. These practices did not provide organic matter in the soil or provide a cover during critical erosion periods.

To accomplish this protection he planned a conservation cropping system. His cropping system consists of high residue producing crops such as rye and vetch on the land half of the time. Soil improving crops such as alfalfa every five to seven years. These conservation crops are grown in rotation with cotton, truck crops, and wheat. He also uses blue panic, sorghum, and alfalfa for hay and pasture.

Mr. Moore has two irrigation systems which provide a reasonable assurance of crop production. However, it is understood with irrigation it takes more from the soil with increased production of cash crops. Therefore, the fertility level will be decreased more rapidly and the intensity of cropping system must be increased.

This year, Mr. Moore has on his land other than acreage devoted to wheat; 27 acres of alfalfa, 93 acres of vetch and rye, and 13 acres of blue panic. This means that there is either a growing crop or crop residue on every acre of land.

You can also, by careful planning, have a conservation cropping system that will treat each acre on your farm to its needs and capabilities and will be more profitable to you.

THIS WEEK — In Washington

With Clinton Davidson

Washington this week is moving slowly toward a Summit Conference later this year with about as much enthusiasm as a small boy about to enter a haunted house.

"We know that the Russians are baiting a trap for us," a veteran diplomat told us, "but the lure of even the remotest possibility of an easing of the cold war is irresistible."

The trap that Nikita Khrushchev has so cleverly set for us is the most powerful in the world. The jaws of adverse public opinion can crush any nation. The bait is promises of peace.

The Russian objective is to convince as many nations as possible, as well as the Russian people, that the Communist Bloc wants peace, and that it is the capitalist nations that are the warmongers.

President Eisenhower interprets Russian demands for a Summit meeting as a trick to inflame world opinion against the U. S. Secretary Dulles sees it as another phase in the Communist plan for world domination. Both credit Khrushchev with being sincere in his desire to avoid a hydrogen-atomic bomb war, but only if he can achieve world conquest by other means.

Russia has a potent weapon which Washington fears far more than the hydrogen bomb or the ICBM. The communists did not invent propaganda, but they are the most skilled and ruthless users of the "big lie" in the world today. The Summit Conference demand is a master propaganda stroke.

What Khrushchev wants is something for nothing. He has the advantage of knowing that the West will bargain in good faith and that it will keep any promises made. Khrushchev is hampered by no such scruples.

"The American representatives at the conference," a former U. S. envoy to Moscow told us, "had better wear both a belt and suspenders. Either way, we still are likely to lose our shirt."

One of the things that bothers Washington most is the remarkable and ominous similarity between the tactics of Khrushchev and German dictator Adolf Hitler. The parallel is almost as if we were turning back the pages of history.

Hitler dreamed his mad dream of world domination, and so does Khrushchev. The record of both is bloody with the ruthless extermination or exile of all internal opposition. Khrushchev, as did Hitler, cloaks his intentions behind a professed desire for peace.

Hitler walked out of the League of Nations, and Khrushchev of the United Nations as a propaganda sounding board. The Russian have the same underlying cry of "do as we wish you to do else . . ."

Twenty years ago Hitler led Allied government heads to Munich with the promise of a mass settlement of their differences. While he talked of peace he armed furiously for war.

British Prime Minister Sir Neville Chamberlain came away from Munich with the conviction that he had secured a firm promise "peace in our time." Hitler bed Western Europe, and put the U. S. of the alertness to prevent World War II.

The question Washington is asking itself is: Is history again to repeat itself?

Five-point "Texas plan" involves (1) cooperation between all safety and enforcement officials, (2) formation of local traffic safety councils, (3) public education to the problem, (4) road improvements at hazardous spots and (5) more rigid enforcement and certainty of punishment for violations, especially drunken driving and speeding.

Last year 2,539 persons were killed in traffic and 122,000 were injured. Even so, 1957 ratio of fatalities to miles traveled was down —from 6.5 deaths per 100 million miles in 1956 to 6 deaths per 100 million miles in 1957.

Department of Public Safety Director Homer Garrison Jr. attributes the reduced rate to lower average speed. Texans saved 111 lives, he said, by slowing down average speed by 1.6 miles per hour.

Goal for 1958 is more ambitious —to save 254 lives or one for each Texas county.

It's up to every Texan, said the governor, to "accept traffic safety as a do-it-yourself project."

News About Your Social Security . . .

In processing any type claim for social security benefits, the law requires certain proofs be submitted to show that a required event has actually occurred. For example, in death cases, a death certificate must be a part of the claim. Because the law limits certain monthly payments to persons of certain ages such as 62 for women, 65 for men and up to 18 for children (unless disabled before that age) proof of date of birth must be furnished.

Since all benefits are based on wages or self-employment income credited to a working person's social security account, in most cases, proof of recent earnings is a necessity. The social security account of the person is normally already posted with reported income up to the last 6 to 12 months. It is for the recent months that a copy of the self-employed person's previous year's income tax and Schedule C or F is needed.

For wage earners, their W-2 record for last year would be helpful.

When a widow is claiming benefits, it must be proved she is the legal widow of the wage earner. This is done by showing her marriage certificate or some other proof of marriage.

Any time the law requires certain conditions to be entitled to benefits, proof that those conditions have been met must be submitted with a claim.

A good rule to follow is to bring any proofs you think may be needed, but not to delay filing your claim because you don't have those proofs. Your social security office will advise you of any additional proofs you may need and how to go about getting them.
