and W. E. Gilliland for Legislature. The failure of the first convention and the slim attendance of the second are signs, which every good and true citizen regrets to see. It signifies an indifferance of which every sovereign voter ought to be ashamed. Even if some people don't like conventions and primaries it becomes their duty not to stay away from them as soon as the majority has decided in favor of them. Generally just these same fellows who do not care and do not patronize the conventions are afterward the loudest grumblers against the public officers. It is entirely their own fault and prejudice, if they deprive themselveses of their constitutional right to have their say in the nomination of officers. Therefore let me suggest that anyhow for the primaries the voters may turn out in full force. The primaries offer us the best chance to show our full stregth and a full poll at these boxes may crush some latent schemes of the opposing party.

Maj. Sam Cutbirth left Monday for the Territory and Sam C. Jr. will follow him soon.

It affords me especial pleasure to notice the hearty endorsement with which the candidacy of W. E. (Editor) Gilliland for the legislature is greeted from all sides. Saturday were marked by quite lively discussions, the main point at issue being the time, alleged by Mr. Vest, to be consumed by the Republicans. Although the senate was operating under the five-minute rule, the Re publicans did not find it difficult to discuss each paragraph and each amendment as long as they desired, and the debate which followed the first paragraph taken up was condemned by the Democrats in severe terms. It was asserted that the Republicans were abusing the good faith of the agreement. However, during the day considerable progress was made on the bill. The agricultural schedule, which has been hanging fire for several days, was disposed of and schedule H. spirits, wines and liquors, was entered upor The feature of the consideration of the bill was the withdrawal in many instances of the Jones "compromise" amendments allowing the committee amendments of the original house provision to stand. BILL DALTON IS DEAD ton is dead. He died as he always swore he would, with his boots on and a six-shooter in his hands. The en-counter occurred three miles southwest of Elk, I. T., yesterday morning between 7 and 8 o'clock. About four weeks ago word was brought to the marshals that a band of desperadoes had come into the country near Elk and were making headquarters with a man named Houston Wallace. When the Longview bank robbery occurred it was learned that the horses ridden by the men were stolen near Elk; also the last heard of their trail on their return from the raid, they were going in the direction of this place. Thursday morning Houston Wallace came to town accompanied by two women. He had an unusual amount of money and bought a wagon load of provisions suitable for traveling, with a complete camp outfit. He visited the hardware stores and laid in an enormous quantity of ammunition. Deputy Marshal T. Lindsey was suspicious that something was wrong, as Wallace was a man of small means. After loading his wagon Wallace had a large box put on from the express office. Deputy Lindsey resolved to search the outfit and he did so, finding three gallons of whisky. The large amount of ammunition and the various purchases further aroused his suspicion and he resolved to go to Wallace's home, thinking the bank robbers were there. The man and the two women were held under arrest by Commissioner Gibbons on the whisky charge, while Deputy Lindsey secured a posse, to raid Wallace's place. They left Ardmore Thursday night, riding by a circuitous route and reaching Wallace's place about daylight yesterday morning. The house was quickly surrounded, but a woman had seen the deputies and gave the alarm. Dalton rushed to a rear window and leaped out, but was ordered to halt by Deputy Hart, who commanded him to stop times. Dalton refused and three pulled his pistol, when Hart fired, striking Dalton in the left side. Dalton fell and expired in a few moments. Another one of the band was seen at a window, but during the fight with Dalton he escaped into a thicket near the house, where pursuit was useless. There is not the possibility of a doubt as to the identity of Dalton, as letters were found in his trunk. Mrs. Dalton seems very much affected over the death of her husband, but says she always expected him to meet his death as he did. The officers reached town with the body of Dalton about o'clock yesterday afternoon. The streets leading to the undertaker's are thronged with an eager crowd trying to get a glimpse of the most noted outlaw in this country since the time of the James boys. The body will be embalmed to await officials from Longview, who have been wired to come. A sum of money was found in Dalton's trunk. along with a coin sack, such as is usually used by banks. The officers refuse to talk until two others are caught, who are well known. The marshals expect to effect their capture. The dead robber is a fine type physical manhood, being about 5 feet 81 inches tall and weighing 185 pounds. He wore a dark mustache and light goatee of beard, with dark, wavy hair and unusually small hands feet. Jennie Dalton, his wife, has telegraphed friends in San Fran cisco of his death and has requested them to arrange for his burial.

Erastus Wiman's Trial.

NEW YORK, June 11 .-- The trial of Erastus Wiman on two indictments for forgery will begin before Justice Barrett in over and terminer to-day. Col. Fellows and Assistant District Attorney Wellman will do the prosecuting and Gen. B. F. Tracey, assisted by J. H. Greensh'elds, Canadian queen's counsel. will appear for the defense. It is probable that the case will occupy Justice Barrett's at-tention for the remainder of the June term, being an important one. The charges of forgery are made by R. G. Dun, by whom Mr. Wiman was engaged at a high salary for over twenty-five years. It is said the defense will try to show that Mr. Wiman's offense was merely a technical one, if that, and that his arrest and trial are persecutions.

Killed His Father-in-Law.

READING, Pa., June 12 .- William Weber, aged 26 years, shot and killed Justice Clemmer, his father-in-law, an old man of 61, last night in a quarrel arising out of Weber's domestic affairs. Weber and his wife had agreed to separate and had met at the house of Wallace Miller, a neighbor, to divide their furniture. Clemmer and he were in the cellar when Webe drew a revolver and fired three shots into Clemmer's body, killing him in-stantly. Weber then fired at his wife and Miller, but missed them. He then fod, but later gave himself up, He and is in jail.

Children's Rights.

Have they ever been considered, ever classified and arranged? have conventions ever discussed them and brainy men and women ever fought for them? and what besides a punishment (generally over-severe for some great fault and not in one case out of hundred properly adapted to the child's temperament) is the result of any attempt on the part of the small sufferer to secure them?

Children have a right to the utmost erre, attention and consideration, even when it involves serious discomfort and trouble on the part of the parent. The children did not insist upon being born, they had no voice in the matter. To please ourselves we bring a little soul and body into this world, endow it with strong feelings and tastes, and daily hurt the one and more the other to suit our own conrenience, because "they are only shildren and will not know any bet-Never was there such a fallacy They may forget quickly, but while they last their small woes are as deep as ours, and the little heart which is burt by thoughtlessness aches as orely as it will in the years to come. Instead of laughing at the quick consolation we should thank God for it. Children have a right to justice, and they almost never get it.

There was once a little girl who always had to choose between butter and molasses on her griddle cakes, while her parents had both. A triffe -yes, of course, but not to that child; it rankled all her life long; the injusce of it struck her afresh every day that came, and no love nor attention which her parents lavished on her in other ways ever wiped out that mem-

They are expected to show self control that would honor a mature person. They sit at a table loaded with lainties, and must eat uninviting plain food, seldom varied and served in a not very tempting manner. They are called greedy if they beg for what every one around them is eating: and if they do not finish all on their plates, in many cases the cold, unappetizing moss is served them again "for disinline and to teach them not to be greedy." Just try that once on a rown person.

They have a right to their own lita nersons and are they not con stantly taken up, kissed and tossed around by people whom they intensedislike and whose touch is hateful o them? These are only a few of the wrongs children suffer every day and all day, and how any child grows up sweet-natured is a question not easily answered. The greater rights, such as the right to a healthy body, a clear mind, and a proper start in life, are abjects for a deeper discussion than I dare trust myself to enter upon: but certainly a child has a right to the same consideration a grown person would demand, and certainly no duty child can owe a parent is equal to that the parent owes a child which was brought into this world not of its wn volition, forced to grow up, flung into the battle of life, and handiapped with the results of the mistakes and misdeeds of two or three reperations.-Donahoe's Magazine.

ily note-papes. The family crest is The more pretentious, but carries some weight. The best paper for ordinary use is pluin white, whether rough or smooth, thick or thin, depending on the taste of the writer, and depending also on the sort of a pen she habitually uses. Few fountain-pens glide easily over a rough surface, and if these convenient implements are used, then the lady should select smooth paper to suit them. Nothing is more confusing than a pen which catches on the paper and refuses to make a mark. Ink should invariably be black. Pale writing is never in good taste; it is too trying to the eyesight of those who receive it, and seems to be lack ing in dignity. Tinted papers, ragged edges and eccentricities of every kind are not admissible.—Harper's Bazar.

How to Cook Vegetables.

There is one positive rule for cook ing all vegetables-they should be put in boiling water when set on the stove to cook. The stronger flavored varieties, such as carrots, cabbages, onions and dandelions; should be well covered with a generous quantity of boiling water, but the more delicate species. as, for instance, peas, asparagus and potatoes, need only to be covered with the water. All green vegetables should be cooked with the cover partially off the stewpan, as it gives them a better flavor and better color.

The actual time necessary to cook even a potato properly is as much an item to be learned as any other de tail in the great system of food preparation. Potatoes should cook well and thoroughly in thirty minutes, provided they are covered with boiling water and placed on an even fire. They should be kept boiling after they begin, but not furiously, as that is apt to break the surface before the center is done. The time of cooking must be calculated from the moment the boiling water is poured over them. When the potatoes are done the water should be poured off and the steam allowed to escape. Baked potatoes take about forty-five minutes to cook.

Turnips if sliced will take about thirty minutes, if put in whole forty minutes' time will be needed to cook them thoroughly. Peas and asparagus, if fresh, require from twenty to wirty-five minutes. Onions should be covered with plenty of boiling water and cooked for one hour. Beets, when young and fresh, will cook in forty minutes, but as they grow larger they require longer cooking.

Cauliflewer should be put head down into a stewpan tilled with about three quarts of boiling water. Cover and cook gently for thirty minutes. String beans require two hours. At the end of the first hour a teaspoonful of salt to each quart of beans should be added. After they are done all the water should be poured off and to the beans should be added one tablespoonful of butter and four tablespoonfuls of boiling water. Return to the fire for three minutes and serve. Fresh lima beans need one hour's cooking. Dried ones must be put to soak over night in one quart of cold water and cooked in a quart of boiling water for an hour and fifty minutes, the cold water of course. having been drained off. These are the commonest vegetables and the commonest ways of cooking them. but unless attention is given to even these small details the ordinary meal will be robbe i of much of its flavor, for the vegetable standbys are unpala table and indigestible unless cooked as long sed in the manner that they

Suggestions for the Cook

During the spring months the house keeper finds more difficulty in getting up varied and appetizing meals than at any other season.

Fortunate is she who has a supply of parsnips ready to be dug as soon as the frost is out of the ground, an asparagus bed and a patch of pieplant.

The parsnips may be simply boiled and mashed, or after boiling cut in thin slices and fried in butter.

To make parsnip stew cut equal quantities of parsnips and potatoes into small pieces and boil with several slices of salt pork; season with salt and pepper.

We cook asparagus in the following ways: First, cut into half-inch pieces and boil in salted water twenty minutes: season with cream or butter, or both, and eat with bread or oyster crackers

2. Cut into half-inch pieces, rejecting the tough ends, boil 10 minutes in just enough water so that none need be poured off. Beat one cr two eggs, add three tablespoonfuls of cream, sweet or sour, and one of vinegar, salt. When the asparagus is done pour this mixture over it and let it come to the boiling point.

3. Tie the asparagus in small bundles and boil in just enough salted water to cover it. Toast some slices of bread and butter them, lay the asparagus on and butter that and pour over all the water in which the asparagus was boiled.

We think pieplant sauce is best cooked without any water. Peel, cut in small pieces, put in the sugar and that will draw out the juice; cook it in a pail set in a kettle of boiling water or in the oven.

If pieplant is scalded in boiling

Porterhouse steaks are cut from the small-end sirloin steak, and one carcass contains but a few of them. Ingenious butchers understand the knack of cutting the small-end sirloin so as to include other portions of the beef, thus enabling them to sell both at porterhouse prices. Good beef has a juicy or sappy appearance, with a fine smooth grain, which is easily noticed. The fat, both outside and through the muscles, presents a clean, straw-colored appearance. The flesh should be charry red. When meat rises quickly after being pressed it may be considered prime. When the dent made by pressing rises slowly or not at all, depend upon it the beef is poor.

A .CLEANSING AGENT.-For washing mirrors and windows ammonia is very desirable; put a few drops of ammonia on a piece of paper, and it will readily take off every spot or finger mark on the glass. It will take out grease spots. Put on the ammonia nearly clear, lay blotting paper over the place and press a hot flat-iron on it for a few moments. A few drops in water will clean laces and whiten them as well; also muslins. Then it is a most refreshing agent at the toilet table; a few drops in a basin of water will make a better bath than pure water; ard if the skin is oily, it will remove all glossiness and disagreeable odors. Added to a foot bath, it entirely absorbs all noxious smells so often arising from the feet in warm weather, and nothing is better for cleaning the hair from dandruff and dust. For cleaning hair and nail-brushes it is equally good.

Or for coloring pink, currant jelly or the juice of pre served strawberries may be used. Whip to a stiff froth another pint and a half of sweetened cream, and flavor it with a glass of mixed wine and brandy; pour round the cake in the dish the colored, unfrothed cream, and pile the whipped white cream all over the cake, highest on the top.

A CHEAP RUG .- A cheap and pretty rug is made of pieces of carpet, such as may be purchased at slight cost at almost any carpet factory. In the center of a piece of canvas one and one-half yards long and three-fourths of a yard wide place a ten-inch square of the carpet, sewing it on firmly. It the corners of the square put small half squares, having the opposite corners match. The rest may be filled braid.-Ex.

THE MAN IN A HURRY.

Public Dining Room stout and determined-looking man with white chin-whiskers, grav hair brushed severely back from his forehead, and gold spectacles on his prominent nose entered a restaurant in Fourteenth street at the "rush" hour and strode rapidly to one of the tables at which there was a vacant seat. He hung a stout cane on the hatrack far up on the wall near the end of the table, says the New York Tribune, and was divesting himself of his overcoat when he happened to notice that the waiter was about leaving the table with orders for the other men.

"hold on a minute, young feller, and take my order, too. he shouted. "Bring me some hash, with poached aigs on it, and a couple of sinkers and some coffee in a hurry."

Then he finished taking off his overcoat and tried to hang it on what he probably thought was a peg of his hat rack, but he hit on the end of his cane instead and the coat flopped down on the floor, while the cane. after knocking several hats off the rack, fell on the head of a man near the wall and then bounded on the table with force enough to break several dishes and scatter coffee and gravy about promiscuously. The men at the table picked up their hats and began to say unpleasant things, but they were quickly awed to silence by the stout man, who declared with a fog-horn voice:

"It's an infernal outrage for a man to keep such a rack as that about his place. If I was running this house I'd see that there'd be different arrangements for folks who patronized Then he slammed his cane back on the rack, hung his overcoat on a peg and sat down to glare at the waiter. who cleared away the broken dishes and wiped up the spilled coffee and gravy with fresh napkins. Two minutes after the waiter had left the table the stout man began to grumble.

"I guess," he said, "he has gone down town to buy the meat to make that hash with. He must have been born late in the day. I said I was in a hurry and now I suppose he will take all day. If I don't get what I ordered right away I'm going to leave. Then the waiter came with the hash, sinkers and coffee and the stout man made them disappear in a way that showed he was a hustler. When his jaws had ceased to work he yelled for his check and made a grab at his overcoat and cane. There was another shower of hats from the rack. but the man in a hurry did not stop to pick them up. When the apple has become back country regions in Europe quite cold, whip the egg into it and where the match is comparatively keep it in a cold place until time for unknown, even now. Then again the white man with his usual ultrasensitiveness does not see any harm in shipping tinder boxes, and even the oldest kinds of gun flints, to the savages of Africa, who derive sincere delight from using them, especially as the traders are careful to explain that the one is an improvement on the match and the other a great stride toward perfection in firearms.

At a sale of old vessels of the Spanish navy held at Barcelona the other day the Corvette Tornado passed out of the hands of the government. This is the vessel which, in 1873, captured the American filibustering steamer Virginius and carried her into Santiago de Cuba. The Tornado herself was a prize. She was first known as a Chilian pirate many years ago and was captured in the waters of Funchal by the Spanish frigate Gerona.

"Notes and Letters."

The writing desk is a very important part of the furniture of a woman's own room. There are people who eramble along contentedly and somewhat clumsily with a small portfolio. part of a bureau drawer, or an old stlas, in which to keep their corespondence, their paper, and pens. Everyone has been in houses where the request for writing material oc masioned a search all over the house for the family inkstand and the family supply of paper. Such houses. however, do not in these days exist in cities, where very much of the commerce of life must needs be carried on by means of notes. A society woman's day begins with the reading of and replying to her many correspondents' missives.

A wel'-furnished writing-desic, with paper of different sizes, envelopes to match, sealing-wax, stamps and ali the dainty accessories of the writingtable, is something no woman can a lord to do without. When possible, the residence, street and number, perhaps the town, or the name of the house, if it possesses a pretty individual name) should be stamped at the top of the page. Useful for the Home.

An Englishman has invented a "fire screen and plate warmer," which is really useful. It secures the room from sparks and keeps children and dresses from the fire, while at the same time it is mounted with a roller blind that shields persons from heat at pleasure. When this blind is drawn partially down, anyone sitting near the fire can warm the feet while the head is cool. The blind looks well made of hand-wrought needle-work; asbestos cloth is preferable to any other, being fireproof. The screen is fitted with shelves facing the room which can be raised, lowered, or removed at pleasure. These are shelves to be used for anything to be kept warm or hot.

An Iron Age for Decuration.

Iron is now considered more esthetic for lamp stands, candlesticks and teakettle standards than brass. It is wrought into all sorts of arabesque designs, and is something of a relief after the hammered brass period, when houses, especially where there were daughters, glittered with brass plaques and ornaments of every kind that could be hammered out by their hands.

Contagion Easily Carried.

Some contagious diseases may be acquired with appalling case. In one instance it is surmised that scarlet fever was taken thus: A young woman who had been nursing her sister through an attack, now safely over, called on a friend and threw her wraps beside those of another visitor. In the course of time this visitor

Pieplant can be cauned for winter use without cooking by cutting the peeled stalks into small pieces and filling the cans and pouring over them cold water. Seal at once. We always put up gooseterries for pies in that way and they keep nicely. We are just using the last of those we put up last summer.

When used pour off the water, wash them in another water, cook in just a little water until soft, sweeten, thicken the syrup with flour and fill your pies. A quart can makes two round pies.

Raisins are so cheap now, 20 or 25 pounds for a dollar, that we have used them freely. They have three of the most desirable qualities of food. They are very nutritious, inexpensive and palatable. Simply boiled and sweetened (and they need but little sugar) they make nice sauce. Soaked over night and cooked a little in the morning they are good for pies, while a handful added to bread or rice pudding or boiled with hominy is a great addition.

Bananas, also, may be recommended for the same reasons. Eat out of the skin or slice and eat with sugar and cream.

Oranges are not as nutritious, but they are healthful, and though more expensive probably do not cost as much as pies or cakes while needing no time to prepare, an item of importance in the house-cleaning days so soon to be upon us .- Helena Maynard in Farmers' Review.

Porterhouse and Tenderioin.

The Washington Post says: A carcass of beef is cut into nineteen pieces. All of the pieces and the names are in the dictionary. Look at the list and you will not find the names "tender-loin" and "porterhouse"-two names that the inexperienced buyer has always on his lips. The porterhouse is a delusion and a snare in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred. The ten-derioin is the thick part of the sirioin after a few round bone steaks have en cut off, and it is called fillet de been cut of, and it is called fillet de boeuf. When to Aerate Milk

By aerating milk, odors can be complstely driven out that have been aborbed by the milk after being drawn from the cow. Odors that were derived by the milk through the system of the cow are not so easily taken out. They will be somewhat lessened, but can never be wholly removed. Milk should be aerated as soon as possible after it is drawn, and it should, at the same time, be cooled. Aerating alone is an advantage, but its good effects on the keeping of milk are much increased by bringing the milk down to 55 de-grees or lower. Milk should keep at least twelve hours longer for the aerating. By using a cooler and aerator faithfully, it is possible to dispense with ice in selling milk under the ordinary conditions as they occur in the smaller cities; but where the milk is to be brought by train, and is twenty four to thirty-six hours old before it is put on the milk cart, it would be necessary to use ice even with aerated milk. The question as to whether, by the use of the aerator, ice can be dispensed with in buttermaking would seem to imply that the aerator could be used to advantage in buitermaking, which is not the fact. The man who is raising his cream by shallow setting or cold, deep setting, or any form of gravity creaming, has no use for a milk-aerator or a milk-cooler. Either would be a pos itive detriment, occasioning the loss of a large amount of butter in the skim The man who is running his milk. milk through a separator has little need of an aerator for the whole milk, since, of course, the milk is serated in passing through the machine. "One snowy morning we started from camp each in a different direction. I took my dog along. He and I were always together. His name was Lion, not because he looked like a lion, but because he was brave and had lots of sense. Why, sir, that dog could talk, indeed he could, stranger, not in words, of course, but with his eyes, ears and tail. Even the hair on his back had tongues. If I said, "Guard him!" he would waltz around a bear or panther in Jim Corbett style. If I said, 'Sieze him!' he would come he Fitzsimmons racket to perfection. If I said. 'Watch him!' he would rouch in threatening silence like one of Napoleon's old guards. If I said, "Take him!' he would wade in like John L. Sullivan and fight to the death. The old dog and I had many a battle in these parts, some sad ones. The day I speak of it turned cold, and all game went under cover. Lion and I tramped and tramped and found nothing. It, looked as if we would have to come into camp empty.

"But late in the afternoon we blundered onto a panther's track. It was a big one and a hot one, going toward, the camp. Lion examined it, then looked up and asked: 'Master, what had we better do about it?' I replied: "The cat is going our way, old boy, so let's jog along." Lion took the trail and moved on but cautiously for panthers are treacherous and cunning brutes and often get in their finest work where it is least expected, Lion knew this and acted accordingly. We followed the cat, eyes and ears open, soon came to the mouth of my left side, and shouted, 'Take him Lion!' With a scream and a bound the panther was on me. At the same time Lion was on the panther. Then it was give and take between panther, man and dog. It was soon over. Jack and Tom crawled in and dragged us out. Lion and I looked as if we had been fed through a threshing machine. The cat wasn't much but blood and holes.

"Next morning Jack and Tom carried me home. Nel-she was my wife -had heart trouble. When she saw me, she threw up her hands, wailed, 'My husband!' and dropped dead. * * * Freddie and Lion and I were gazing into the mountains and alone. Freddie, he was our little boy. We buried him along side of Nel. Freddie grew to be a man.

"The war came. Freddie enlisted. He was killed in the Wilderness." The old man could tell no more. Tears chased each other down his cheeks in big drops. Recovering himself, he asked: "Stranger, do you think dogs have souls? If they have, Lion is up there with Nel and Freddie waiting for Panther Jim."

I pressed his hand and left him, feeling ashamed of myself for having intruded upon his sorrow, but I had learned his secret. It was Freddie and Nel and Lion the old man's soul was looking for in the purple and gold above the setting sun.

EASILY WORTH A DOLLAR.

A Simple Plan for Preventing Yourself From Losing an Umbrella.

Years ago it was common to tie a knot in one's handkerchief as a reminder of anything, and this plan has been improved upon from time to time. I have a friend who always hangs his hat on one peg in his office and has a small brass file just below the peg. By hanging loose memos. on this file he can scarcely leave the office without being reminded of important duties or engagements. Another man, who has no clock in his

STRANCE CAVERN FOUND IN THE SIERRA NEVADA.

Two Prospectors Chance on the Site of Some Old Tragedy Which May Have Been Prehistoric-Figures Perfectly Proportioned, Coated With Stone.

Mr. Traver has been in the vicinity of Mount Darwin on several previous occasions, and had been told of the existence of the cave by Indians. but was unable to induce any of them to go with him to the spot. Mount Darwin is an isolated peak of the Sierra Nevada range, about ten miles south of Owens lake and thirty miles west of the hills that border Death valley. Between the two is a plateau of stones and desert. The sides of Mount Darwin are very rugged and wild, but the canyons are filled with stones that are quite heavy in wire gold. It was while hunting for these stones that Mr. Traver and a companion named Clark made their remarkable discovery. They have named the place the "Cave of Death."

For several days they had been working in a canyon on the south side of the mountain and were fairly successful; so much so, in fact, that they kept working up until they were a long distance from a spring. One of them, consequently, had to be on the road nearly all the time carrying water, which was very necbecause the days were inessary found and both crawled in cautiously. It was quite dark, but they could tell when they reached a large cavern and stood up. A match was struck. and both men nearly fell over as a result of the shock they received when they saw what was cround them.

It looked at first as if the cave was filled with live people, but as the match burned brighter they could see that the objects were not com posed of flesh and blood. With proper light it was found that there were seven forms in the cave. One was standing against the wall and the others were in sitting postures around. All were resting against the walls of the cave or bent over. It was a most uncanny sight, and the

"Inside it was so hot that even the muzhiks, who are fond of roasting themselves, gave signs of discomfort. The heat came from a large iron stove, which the attendants kept feeding with birch firewood. As for myself, I was melted; The perspiration poured out of every pore of my skin. "My unfortunate fellow travelers gave vent to their feelings in groans or ejaculations. "Now and then the door was opened by a new arrival and instantly the carriage would be filled with an intensely cold air. "Hi, you, there?" the muzhiks would call out; shut the door! You are a-freezing us to death."

"A curious phenomenon sometimes occurred on such occasions. The cold guests which forced themselves in when the door was opened immediately condensed and crystallized the vapor so that we had a miniature shower of snow in the carriage. "A few of the passengers appeared really to enjoy this alternate freezing and roasting. They crowded about the stove. One, a tall, sturdy soldier carrying a sword of tremen dous size crept so close to the stove that the escaping gases made him fall down in an unconscious state, from which he was aroused with difficulty. He was wearing his military overcoat. "At the first stoppage I bought a new ticket, and went into a secondclass carriage.

Ash Wednesday.

Ash Wednesday is so called from the curious custom of strewing ashes on the head as a sign of penitence. It was probably instituted by Gregory the Great, who was pope from 590 to 604. Originally the ashes were consecrated on the altar before mass, sprinkled with holy water, and signed three times with the cross. During the ceremony the priest recited these words: Memento quod cinis es. et in cinerem reverteris. (Remember that thou art dust. and must return to dust.) ashes thus consecrated were strewn on the heads of the officiating priests and the assembled people. ashes were usually obtained by burning the palms consecrated on the preceding (Palm) Sunday.

An Estimate Only. It has been estimated by competent civil engineers that the Mississippi river annually discharges 19,500,000, 000,000 cubic feet of water into the Gulf of Mexico. Of this prodigious quantity the 1-2900th part is sediment. Thus it will be seen that the Missis sippi annually deposits enough mud in the gulf to cover a square mile of surface to a depth of 240 feet.

Below me was an opening and through it I could see a fringe of the cat's hair. Sticking the barred of my gun into this opening I blazed away three times as fast as I could. I did not expect to hit the beast but thought that perhaps the noise and the gunpowder might drive him from his lair. But this panther wasn't built that way. He scratched and spit, and jumped around a little, and staid where he was waiting for developments. I was puzzling what to do next when I saw Jack and Tom running up puffing and blowing like quarter horses. 'What is up?' asks Jack. 'Nothing is up,' I said, 'a cat's In that den'.
