Farmers Have Vital Interest In NRA Program

The farmers and the resident of our rural communities have a vital stake in the National Recovery Program. Success of the program means a better, brighter day for them and proportionately more than for the industrial worker and the city dweller in general.

While there has been overproduction of certain farm products, underconsumption caused by business and industrial paralysis and widespread unemployment, resulting in a huge loss of purchasing power, has contributed principally to the farmer's distress.

Farm prices have been low largely because the drop in the income of the people has sharply curtailed demand and the farmer must take what he can get for his products, not what they are worth.

The farmer has rightly been called the backbone of the Nation. At no time in our history has his whole-hearted help been needed more than now. He can work the more earnestly in contributing to the success of the recovery drive because he knows that when the big turn comes he will share in the prosperity that follows:

President Roosevelt, whose far-sighted and dynamic leadership has already initiated comprehensive measures designed to aid the farmer directly in solving his own problems, is depending upon the rural dweller to put a shoulder to the wheel and help get the country back on its feet.

Fighting The Reckless Driver

This year the month of September has been dedicated to the most intensive campaign in the interest of automobile accidents prevention ever carried on in this country.

The governors of 34 states and the commissioners of the District of Columbia have issued proclamations and messages. More than 90,000,000 persons—74 per cent of our total population—live in their areas. Seventy-five per cent of all automobiles in the country are registered within them, and last year about 76 per cent of the 29,000 deaths occurred in the participating territory.

In 1932 there was a decrease in automobile accidents and fatalities, as compared with 1931. This year the trend has been reversed, and the toll is again on the upgrade. The reckless, the discourteous and the incompetent still rule the highways. The public streets and roads are still shambles both for persons and for property.

Only the individual motorist can conquer this organized destruction. There are few such things as unavoidable accidents. And it has been proved that raising the safety factors of roads and vehicles does no good—the driver simply trusts to the engineers, and operates his car even more recklessly.

During the September campaign, facts and figures detailing the havoc wrecked by excessive speeds, by violations of right-of-way laws, by passing on curves and hills, by that most common of all motoring ills, discourtesy, will be brought to our attention. And all of us should consider it both a duty and a privilege to cooperate.

Cooperation Is The Answer

"All recognized agencies, whether they be governmental, private or educational, all agencies that have investigated the agricultural problems of the United States . . . have agreed without exception that cooperatives marketing is the only answer," said Senator Royal S. Copeland in a recent address.

Mr. Copeland's speech was principally concerned with the strike troubles in the New York Milk Shed. He pointed out the fallacy of attempting to bring about a given end by illegal force of arms, under the leadership of professional agitators, and compared that with methods of the cooperatives which are working to better the farmers' position by the use of economic weapons. The first can bring agriculture nothing but distress and disillusionment; the second is making definite progress and is on the threshold of its period of most decisive achievement.

During the last few years we have seen a good many experiments in relieving the farmer. The most far-reaching have been conducted by the government. All the resources of the land have been behind them—and they have, in the long view, done infinitely less than was hoped. The benefits they have brought have been temporary—they have aided a number of farmers for a short time, and then have become more or less inoperative. Government has made its most definite farm progress when it has sought to advance the interests of the cooperatives—when it has used its influence in helping organizations of which the average farmer rally feels he is a part.

The farm disturbances in New York and the Middle West have brought out by contrast the stability and soundness of the cooperative movement. The co-ops are on the side of good government, of ordered change. They deserve the support of every citizen who wishes a prosperous and happy national future.

Did You Ever Stop To Think

Frank E. Gannett, President and Founder of the Gannett (Newspapers, Says:

"Newspapers are read more intensively today than at any time since the World War. Probably never before have newspapers played such an important part in the lives of people in all classes.

"There is so much going on, so many startling things happening in our political, economic and social life that the desire for news is increasing steadily.

"It is noteworthy that such economies as have been necessary in the average family in the past four years have affected newspapers probably least of all industries—people must have their newspaper.

"Therefore the newspaper is, and should be, recognized as the most powerful advertising sales medium. Being friend, counselor, guide and entertainer to every member of the family makes it not only the logical, but the most effective advertising medium for manufacturers and retail stores everywhere.

"The newspaper's unquestioned stability as an institution in the period of stress, from which I hope we are now emerging, is of itself a demonstration of its undoubted value to the advertiser. This is the best shown by the fact that newspapers advertising by manufacturers and retailers all over the country has shown a marked and healthy increase during recent months."

We read of a man and wife who at the time of their marriage agreed that the husband should decide all major questions which might arise, while the wife should have her way about minor ones. Asked, a year or two later how the plan had worked, the wife said it had worked fine, because she had not allowed any major questions to come up.

Sunset Musings

By J. Marvin Nichols
Dallas, Texas

That day has long since passed when a man can hide under the shelter of the family tree.

Times is nothing until it records the tremendous impact of human thought and action.

The difference between the depravity of one social leech and thousands of others is the plainness and the lavishness of the den.

The things we can carry beyond the grave are all that's worth our while in the struggle that manes for destiny.

That was a wise man who set a rat trap in his pocket—and caught his wife by the finger.

The man who would go with the majority only borrows strength. He is a leach—nothing more.

The extremes of society are the dreaded elements. The millionaire and the tramp—each the complement of the other.

Many a fellow has found out that when a girl's love settled upon him it was already a shop-worn article.

Many a man ought to be taken into a dry dock and have the barnacles scraped off.

After all this talk, we believe in the heart's affinity. Somewhere, wandering in the wide, wide world, there is a spirit—the complement of our own. We are born possessed of a distant ideal for whose perfect correspondence we spend our days in relentless search. And in some sweet hour, and from out our silent depths, there shall come a voice for which we have listened all those years. Out of the shadows some sweet hour they'll steal upon us—the form and fashion of all we've ever dreamed.

Like shadowy phantoms, dreading that they shall fade like mist, we cling fondly to our ideal. Our affinities always approach with a footfall soft as an angel's tread. To hold them is to be happy; to ignore them is to weep forever. It were better to wait an age for one hour of perfect bliss than never to have the joy at all.

Spending Is Saving Now

True economy is that which obtains the largest possible return for a dollar spent. Truer economy is to spend that dollar at a time when it will bring the most.

We have had a number of years of extreme depression. Prices have dropped to unimaginably low levels. Buying power has been close to non-existent. There was money in the country—but persons who had surpluses were afraid to spend. They went with out needs articles in order to keep their savings intact. They permitted property to fall into costly disrepair. If they pursue that timid policy any longer to be literally out of luck. That hoarded money is going down in value now. The worth of the dollar depends entirely on what it will buy. Six months from now it will buy much less than it will buy today. In other words, if you keep money in a non-productive state at present it amounts to throwing a certain percentage of it away.

You can get maximum value from your money only by putting it to use. There was never a better time to install a new heating plant, to repair or replace a roof, to build or rebuild, to paint or to do a thousand similar things. Every dollar so spent will appreciate in value—what it buys will, in a very short time, have a market value much in excess of what you paid.

Think it over! True saving now is through wise spending.

Bishop Arundale of the Liberal Catholic Church of Australia is in this country for a lecture tour. Strangely enough, his wife is a Hindu whom he married 13 years ago when she was 15, and she still adheres to her native religion. The bishop is English, but was an educator in India many years.

Man-tailored with bold square buttons and buckle of wood . . . but Nelly Don has seen to it that you'll look adorably feminine in it nevertheless! Hence the soft web knit wool . . . the touches of white pique . . . the tiny tucks between yoke and pockets. It DOES seem inconceivable to get such smartness, such careful finishing for $8.95, doesn't it? Of course the reason is "It's a Nelly Don!"

OUR PART

The Flag Goes Up....

This company has subscribed to the National Recovery Act, and accepts the moral and financial responsibilities that are involved.

The Price of Electricity Comes Down!

Beginning September 1st, the 3 per cent Federal tax on domestic and commercial electric bills will no longer be paid by our customers. Hereafter the tax will be paid by the company.

THIS IS A REDUCTION IN YOUR COST FOR ELECTRICITY!

. . . But it decreases our earnings from commercial and domestic use by 3 per cent. . . The National Recovery Act also subjects this company to additional operating expenses . . . Under the code for the industry which now governs this company, we are re-arranging personnel and working schedules which will result in increased payrolls.

These conditions create new, difficult and costly problems for us, but we approach them willingly, glad to contribute what we can to help the nation to better times.

YOUR PART

USE MORE ELECTRICITY In your business and in your home. Your business will be stimulated, your home will become more livable. . . .and you will be playing the game.

As always, the real interests of the company and its customers are identical. That community of interest is the foundation of the policy of the NRA. That spirit will insure its success

Time recently contained an interesting personal item regarding General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, to the effect that he originally spelled his name Johnston, but 'dropped the 't' years ago. His son, however, retains the original family name and signs himself Kilbourne Johnston

“Proud and glad to do our part”

WITH President Roosevelt's acceptance of the NRA Automobile Code, Chevrolet, the world's largest builder of motor cars, officially begins operations in accordance with the administration's recovery program.

Although the official code was signed only a few days ago, it will be of interest to Chevrolet's many friends to learn that the Chevrolet Motor Company started to carry out the spirit of today's recovery program over three years ago!

At that time, we put into operation a "share-the-work" plan, whereby our workmen cooperated in spreading the work to give more men jobs. By means of this plan, as well as by regulating hours of work per week to meet retail demand, and by building up parts stocks in lean seasons, it was possible to carry 33,000 men on our payroll through the depression. For eleven months of each year since 1929, we have kept our employment within 10 per cent of this average. We are justly proud of that record. We are also proud to say that Chevrolet workmen did not, at any time during the depression, become a burden on public welfare departments.

On August 1st of this year, Chevrolet announced a blanket wage increase as well as the adoption of a 7½-hour, 5-day week and the employment of 12,000 additional men. This wage increase was the second in the last 4 months, Chevrolet having been among the first to put a blanket wage increase into effect.

We feel that the President's recovery program deserves the whole-hearted support of every citizen and manufacturer in America. It is a bold, swift, courageous plan to start the ball rolling toward economic recovery. Its sincerity is unquestioned. Its objectives are admirable. And the direct, forceful steps the President and his associates are taking to make it a success, should stir the pride and admiration of every American.

We are proud and glad to do our part. And we are deeply grateful to the American people for the patronage that has enabled us to anticipate the present recovery program and to play our part today. After all, the immense number of men employed by Chevrolet is a direct result of the continued preference America has shown for Chevrolet.

COTTON BURS

The cotton season is getting in full swing and soon pulled cotton will be coming to the gins. This gives me reason to discuss the value of the cotton burs that are usually let fall out on the ground and become trash that the ginners must clean up.

Many persons have asked how much value these cotton burs have as a cow feed and from that inquiry it has been learned that they have a fine feeding value.

To take the extract from a letter from Dr. G. S. Fraps of Texas A. & M. College it says: "Cotton burs as they come from the gin vary in amount of composition, largely on account of the variations in the amount of seed present. They contain about 9 percent protein, 3 percent crude fiber, and 38 percent nitrogen-free-extract. The cotton burs have a feeding value of less than prairie hay but more than cotton seed hulls. They have approximately 25 to 40 percent more value than hulls, if clean and of good quality. Some gins put the dirt with the burs, which reduces their feeding value. If dirt is present in large quantities, the burs are not well suited for feeding."

This letter is almost self explanatory. It tells us that burs are better than hulls, which has been our contention to all who have discussed cow feeds with us this summer. Hulls are only claimed to be a filler and they do not contain enough energy in them selves to care for digestion. In other words some protein supplement must be fed with hulls to furnish digestive energy to digest them which leaves the cow in worse shape than had she been fed only cotton seed meal or what ever supplement was used.

At this time when feed is so scarce it is a very good thing for the farmer to watch closely the things that will make a good feed for the coming winter.

Mr. Reynolds of the Baird Gin Co. said he would be glad to help his farmers get their burs and take them home. He will help to keep them as free from sand as possible if the farmers will co-operate with him and take them away. Since they are more valuable than hulls and about the value of Johnson grass hay then it is an economic item for the farmers and looks like well worth remembering. It is most likely all gin men will take the same attitude as Mr. Reynolds if the farmers will but ask them.

The formula that can well be fed using cotton burs is:

- 300 pounds ground milo heads
- 100 pounds wheat bran
- 100 pounds cotton seed meal

Mix this feed and feed and feed it on a water bucket of burs.

It would be better of course, to grind the burs. With this feed there should be fed 1 percent salt with a salt block always out for the cow to lick. Always put one pound of salt in every hundred pounds of feed given a cow. If you are not giving the cow salt you are neglecting her health and lowering the quality of her milk. Feed at least a tablespoon of salt to the feeding for sows giving milk. Also do not fail to feed her something that she can make bone from. Bone meal is the better feed but lime flour is mighty good and a bit cheaper. We often make the statement that milk is a perfect diet. That is so if it is good milk. Good milk is made only from good feeds. Balanced diets are made from balanced feed. A cow is really a factory that turns out that which you put into it and no more. Any formula or feed combination will be gladly given to any one addressing my office here in Baird.

Come in and investigate these modern ENCLOSED heating units. They give you healthful, circulating heat. Higher prices predicted for the next factory shipments. Ask about the small down payment and convenient terms.

Your family will enjoy these units, in the enclosed and VENTED fire boxes, like the Floor Furnace, for instance. It is easily installed, and makes a luxurious and low-cost heat.

HEATROLA Console Heater

This is another VENTED unit for a wide-spread circulating heat. Fine for homes, stores, and offices.
