> "The Crack of Doom" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Fate plays dirty tricks on some of us—and to others it gives all the breaks. George Keiser of Clinton, Iowa, must be one of Fate's favorites. George woke up one day out of a sound sleep to listen to the Crack of Doom-and he lived to tell the story.

George is a railroad man-and the lads who work on the railroad all seem to have an adventure yarn or two under their hats. George's adventure came to him in 1931, when he was working as head brakeman for the C. M. St. P. & P. railroad, on a run between Nahant and Green

It was the morning of April 5. The night before George had had a meal in a restaurant in Nahant, and some of the food he ate-well-George thinks it was tainted. Anyway, he woke up the next morning a very sick man, with a lot of the symptoms of ptomaine poisoning.

George felt pretty bad-but he thought the feeling would wear off if he pitched in and worked a bit. It was a freight run he was braking that day, and when the train started out George was aboard her. But that terrible feeling didn't wear off. Instead.

George Was Sick and Went to the Caboose.

He stuck to his job and managed to perform his duties until the train reached Le Claire, Iowa, and then he felt he couldn't take it standing up any longer. He went to the conductor and told him what was wrong. The conductor called in the rear-end brakeman and told him to take over George's work.

George went back to the caboose, thankful for a chance to lie down and rest. But he wouldn't have been so happy about it had he known that Fate had picked that train out for its especial attention that day, and that the caboose was due to be the most dangerous spot of all.

George lay down in a bunk and began to doze. Soon he dropped off into a sound sleep, and while he was sleeping, Fate began to set the put forth an invitation to the great stage. The train stopped at Comanche, to set out a car. The conductor wers other than Germany, Italy was given some new train orders. He looked over the orders-but and Japan to confer on joint action there was one he missed.

> And that order had to do with a certain train-on the same track his own train was using-which had left Davenport behind him and was coming along at a fast clip with no stops scheduled.

How It Feels to Be in a Collision.

George was asleep, so he didn't see anything of it. He had been told fled Czechoslovakia that they would about it later. But that second train-a C. B. & Q. freight, came up behind them, smashed right through the caboose in which George lay, smashing it to matchwood. Then it kept right on going until it had Germany. Great Britain, while not smashed up two freight cars up ahead of the caboose.

Figure George's chances out for yourself. A sleeping man in a caboose that had been ploughed right through by an engine. Anybody who would give a nickel for George's chances would just be throwing

'Since I was asleep at the time," he says, "I couldn't know what was happening. The first thing I was aware of was a terrible crashing that broke into my slumber. The crash was followed by an almost deafening roar of escaping steam. I felt as though I was being picked up bodily by some giant hand and thrown a great distance.

"I opened my eyes just then, and the sight I saw was appall-Everything about me seemed to be breaking. The bunks were tearing from the walls and bending at crazy angles. The sides of the car were splitting and breaking. The back end was crushed in. The floor was bucking and heaving. For just a small part of a second I watched the car falling to pieces-and then

George doesn't know how long he was out, but when he regained consciousness he was buried beneath a pile of wreckage. Was he hurt? He didn't know. His body was numbed by the pressure of the debris that held him down. He tried to wriggle around to take a look at himself and see if he was bleeding, but he was pinned fast.

Then He Heard the Deadly Steam.

Germany and Italy were sending "I was held down so tightly," he says, "that the only thing I could large reinforcements to Franco, move was my eyes. I lay still a minute, and then, suddenly, I heard the hiss of escaping steam. I began to scream for help then, but the noise ing rapidly on toward the east of the steam was so loud that my voice couldn't be heard.' coast. Madrid had sent word to Paris that the government could not Again George screamed-and again! The sound of the steam threw him into a panic. Hot steam from an engine boiler has scalded many a man to death, and every railroader knows what it means. But this steam wasn't close enough to George to harm him, and finally one of the trainmen from the C. B. & O. freight heard his cries.

Frantically, the whole crew began dragging for his body, prying up timbers and pushing the debris aside. They were only a few minutes at it, but it seemed hours to George as he lay there fighting the pressure of the stuff that was bearing down on his body.

At last they got him out. Not one of that crew of rescuers expected France from sending troops and to find anything but a man badly, if not fatally, injured. After all, when a locomotive crashes through a car, smashing it to matchwood, you don't expect the man inside to come out unhurt. But THAT'S EXACTLY WHAT GEORGE DID!

> When they got him out there was nothing showing on his body but few scratches. They took him to a hospital, and the doctors *couldn't find anything else wrong with him either, outside of a bad case of nerves. And if George isn't one of Fate's white-headed boys-well-I'd like woodworking did not exist. There was no need for it. Ancient peoples spent most time outdoors Merely eating and sleeping in the home, they used little furniture, usually preferred that to be made of metal. But about 400 years ago woodworking became an art; furniture making was highly profitable and its secrets handed down from generation to generation. But machinerymade furniture ended that.

Foods That Provide Motive Power For the Body Machinery

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THE human body might be compared to a framework filled with machinery. It takes food to build the framework, carbohydrates, fat retards the difood to run the machinery and food to keep it working efficiently and this food must be of the proper type.

Last week, I discussed the body building proteins and explained how to distinguish between those which build and repair body tissue, and those that are adequate for main- and do not utilize their potential energy tenance, but not for growth. It is equally important that you should learn something of the fuel foods which are necessary to fire the body engine and furnish motive power to fats are energy foods, one might propel the body machinery.

Fuel Foods Keep Us Alive

The body could not function in than a machine could run without power, or a car without gas. Every breath requires an expenditure of energy, and so does every movement - from the beating of the heart to the winking of an eye. Even in repose, the body machinery is kept functioning only by an ever-present supply of fuel. For, as long as life continueseven when you are lying perfectly still-you need fuel to carry on the internal work of the body.

Activity Demands Energy Foods

Every type of daily activity, including work and exercise, requires additional fuel. If you walk slowly, you expend twice as much energy as when you sit still. And when you walk fast, you may use up four, five or six times as much

The chief fuel, or energy producing foods, are the carbohy-drates—that is, the starches and sugars; and fats. Protein also has some fuel value, but its primary function is to build and repair tissue.

Carbohydrates are quick burning. They might be compared to the flare of a match in a dark room, which gives bright light for an instant, but is soon extinguished. Fat, on the other hand, burns slowly, like a lamp whose wick is turned low.

Danger of Inadequate Fuel Supply

Recently there has been a tendency to minimize the importance of the fats and carbohydrates, due the results of disregarding the absolute necessity for these foods are extreme irritability, and a greater susceptibility to fatigue, nervous diseases, tuberculosis and other infections.

Too Much Fuel Causes Overweight

It is true, however, that an excess of fuel foods will tend to produce overweight. For if we assimilate them,

Your Food Is Your Fate

THE third of the series of articles entitled "What to Eat and Why," written by C. ouston Goudiss, the eminent food authority, author and radio lecturer, appears in this issue.

In these articles Mr. Goudiss tells how you can be strong, beautiful, wise and rear healthy children by combining the right food materials in the diet. He points out the vast influence which food wields over one's in muscular effort, they will be stored -as fat-usually in most inconvenient locations! On the other hand, an excess of any food is a detriment. Therefore the goal should be enough, but not too much, of all necessary foods.

Since both carbohydrates and expect them to play an interchangeable role in the diet. To a certain extent, they do, although fat, being more concentrated, provides two and one-fourth times as the absence of fuel foods any more much fuel value as an equal weight of carbohydrate.

But because of the variation in the way these materials are handled by the body, it is generally considered that health is best age place beneath the skin. A fit served when 40 to 50 per cent of the total energy value of foods is provided in the form of carbohydrate and 30 to 35 per cent in the form of fats.

Carbohydrates Are Quickest Fuel

Carbohydrates, which originate chiefly in plant life, are readily converted into heat and muscle energy. Foods rich in carbohydrates include bread, potatoes, macaroni, rice, cooked and ready to-eat cereals, peanuts, dried and preserved fruits, sugars and Sugar furnishes heat more quickly and more abundantly than any other food. But it has a tendency to dull the appetite and is also apt to cause fermentation. Therefore, a large measure of our heat and energy is best secured from starchy foods such as bread, cereals, macaroni and potatoes.

Quick energy can also be obtained from the easily digested sugars of fresh and dried fruits, such as prunes, apricots, raisins and fully ripened bananas.

Here is an interesting and important point which is frequently overlooked in unscientific reducing diets. Fat re-quires carbohydrates for its proper utili-zation by the body. That is why women who try to reduce without following a scientifically planned diet frequently become seriously ill as a result of cutting down on carbohydrates while over-looking the fals contained in milk, butter, and other foods.

Relation of Fat To Health

Fats are so necessary to the geration to say that without fat,

Vegetable Pests

THERE are two major classifications of insect pests-sucking and chewing.

Chewing insects, such beetles, leave telltale holes in leaves. They are best controlled, according to Harold N. Coulter, vegetable expert of the Ferry Seed Institute, by dusting or spraying plants with arsenicals (poisons with arsenate of lead as

These arsenicals are known as stomach poisons, for they must be eaten by the insects. Plants attacked by chewing insects include cucumber, squash, other vine crops, mustard, tomato, pepper.

Sucking insects, such as aphids or plant lice, can be detected in small groups on the under surface of the leaves. Control by dusting or spraying nicotine sulphate or pyrethrum directly on the insects. Plants attacked by sucking insects include peas, pepper, cabbage, and crops grown for greens.

Make certain what type pest you are fighting. Buy properly prepared poisons; follow directions.

could exist satisfactorily on an all-meat diet, provided he ate liberally of fat. On a diet of all lean meat, he became violently ill within a week.

Besides furnishing concentrated energy values, fats help to create the fatty tissue which cushions the nerves and abdominal organs, and forms the pleasing contours of face and figure.

Because it leaves the stomach more slowly than proteins and gestion of these food groups somewhat, and thus gives staying power to a meal. At the same time it promotes the flow of pancreatic juice and bile, thus helping in the assimilation of other foods. Foods rich in fat include butter, cheese, egg yolk, cooking fats and oils, margarine, olives, pastry, peanut butter, most nuts except chestnuts and lichi nuts, various kinds of sausage and fried foods.

Anger Destroys Fat Reserves

Experiments have demonstrated why nervous, irritable individuals are usually thin, while those with a serene temperament often accumulate weight. It has been proven that anger and fright increase the amount of fat in the blood and remove a corresponding amount of fat from its usual storof anger may take off more fat than an hour's exercise, or two or three days of enforced diet. Thus the person who allows himself to become upset continually withdraws the fat reserve from his body. Such persons could profit, perhaps, by taking more of the fat-forming foods.

But whether the members of your family are good natured, or irritable, young or old, they need a constant supply of fuel foods-at every meal, every day. Fuel foods produce energy-and energy is the motive power of life and work and thought.

"Home-Wrecking" Qualities of Poor Furniture Polish

How often a houseful of fine furniture and handsome woodwork is spoiled by the use of a poor furniture polish! There are many polishes on the market today-some fair, some good, others excellent for luster and long life of the finish! The best is non-greasy, because made with a fine, light-oil base! In time, furniture and woodwork can be ruined by the persistent application of a cheap, poor polish! Such polish will contain kerosene, harsh abrasives and harmful acids—destructive elements, that are unseen and unsuspected! The housewife may use one of these polishes, feeling that she is economically keeping her furniture polished-but this is poorest economy, if she values her furniture (and what housewife does not?). The furniture in body economy that it is no exag- a home constitutes the largest part of the furnishings-and will show up like "sore thumbs" when dried out, cracked or checked. This is just what occurs, when other than a reputable oil polish is used! Too, a quality oil polish is less expensive! Less is used at one time-for it's undiluted. The resultant glow is deeper, richer, more lasting! Best of all, the finish of the furniture and woodwork is properly "fed" and kept in prime condition! So beware of harsh, "bargain" polishes—for through them, the furniture suf-

SYNOPSIS

In Spanish-governed California of 1783 a conflict between Church and State is represented by two friendly enemies, frail old Fray Junipero Serra, Franciscan missionary, and Don Pedro Fages, civil governor. After telling Serra he is sending to Mexico for his wife and son, whom he has not seen for eight years, he refuses his aid toward founding the Santa Barbara Mission. Dona Eulalia agrees to go to California, accompanied by her duenna, Angustias. Don Pedro sends for Serra, telling him that two priests are on their way from companied by her duenna, Angustias. Don Pedro sends for Serra, telling him that two priests are on their way from Mexico with Eulalia and young Pedro and that he is leaving to meet them. Fages engages a young Indian girl. Indizuela, as maid for Eulalia. Eulalia sails from San Blas. It is a desolate trip. From the port of Loreto, a large cavalcade loaded with Eulalia's party starts out for the long overland trip. Eulalia, accustomed to luxury and comfort, bitterly regrets having been persuaded to come. The two priests, Fray Mariano and Fray Bartolomeo, call on her and arouse her suspicions as to their genuineness. As the cavalcade stops at various missions, Eulalia hears rumors of the approach of her husband. While Don Pedro plans a great fiesta to welcome his wife, Eulalia plans her costume. Don Pedro welcomes his beautiful wife and young son. Eulalia is toasted as the Queen of the Californias. On the long journey to Monterey, the reunited couple are royally entertsined at the Presidio at San Diego. Eulalia disapproves of the democratic relations of Don Pedro and his people. Pleading weariness in the midst of the feast she goes to bed where Angustias tells her she knows Eulalia is again to become a mother. Don Pedro is disturbed by the developments in the character of the priests and dreads Serra's disappointment in them. priests and dreads Serra's disappoint-

As gallant Lieutenant Ortega rode beside La Gobernadora he told her of the Presidio of Santa Barbara, a walled fortress like San Diego, with little whitewashed dwellings for the soldiers and their families, a store, a blacksmith shop, a chapel, and quarters for himself. As they drew near, Eulalia could see the presidio like a little walled city, its whitewashed walls pink in the sunset, its tile roofs red. Again there were cannonades to greet her, the ringing of the chapel bells, and soldiers' women and children bringing her great armloads of wildflow-

That night she sat long at the lieutenant's lavish table, laughing and chatting with the company, complimenting the food, applauding the music.

CHAPTER XI

Along the King's Highway, where foot of king had never trod, nor royal hoof rung out. Fray Junipero limped slowly. He had been on a long journey, visiting each one of his beloved missions. Happy had found the Mission Santa Barbara. been the journey, pleasant the visiting with his brothers, and gratifying the reports he had heard. The missions were flourishing; converts, crops and cattle increasing.

He felt happy and satisfied. By his side trudged Pio, bearing a yellow umbrella, which shaded the father as well as himself. Pio's arms ached, for the umbrella seemed mysteriously to gain weight as the hours passed.

The father, beneath that moving spot of shade, was tracing in retrospection the first of all these many steps that had led him through life on his apostolic journeyings.

That had been over half a century ago in Mallorca, the jewel of the Balearic Isles in the Mediterranean

Seventeen years old, Miguel Jose Serra had walked from his native village, Petra, to the capital city, Palma. His pious parents, amid their tearful farewells, begged him to ride the family burro, but the youthful pflgrim, in his heart already dedicated to the holy San Francisco, shook his head. So he set his rope-soled sandals-his alpagartas-on the road that stretched across half a world. In Palma, doffing the dress of a Petran peasant for the Franciscan habit and cowl, he doffed at the same time the name the peasants had called him. Miguel Jose Serra was gone. Now there was Brother ahead of him, for half a century,

Juniper only. Fray Junipero Serra. San Francisco had a devoted follower, Junipero, who would steal from the altar itself, if by stealing he could feed a hungry mouth. No larder in Asis was safe from his plundering. The good saint called the little brother, Jester of the Lord, saying: "Had I but a whole forest of such Junipers!" So he who traveled from the Mediterranean to the Pacific called himself Junipero. Now his journey was nearly done. up, into the blue sky, where it terminated in a city of bright mansions.

Faint, sweet sounds of music drifted from an angelic choir. Fray Junipero fell in the dust and raised his arms as one came down the shining road, one in a brown frock like his own, with a cloud of singing birds about his head.

"Mi Padre San Francisco!" he breathed. "Father Francis!" He

"Little Brother Juniper, are you ready to come home? I am waiting for you-"Not yet, Father Francis; yet a little while! I have work-work. Another mission-for Santa Barbara!" "Good, little Brother. But soon. You are awearied!"

Fray Junipero felt the warm earth on hands, face. He stirred and lift-ed himself The vision was gone. Only a brown road stretched before him, while overhead a flock of birds circled and cried. Pio's dark face leaned over him in concern, and he heard the young Indian's voice as though from a great distance

"Little Father -- you are aweary! He pulled himself erect on trembling limbs and grasped his staff with its strong smooth shaft and little cross at the top.

"Yes, you are aweary, and hungry. Eat, Padre."

He pulled from his pouch some young green onions he had carried his own way." from the Mission San Antonio de Padua and held them out to the father, who crunched absently at the pungent, slightly withered roots.

"A vision-a miracle!" he exult-"Happy augury! Soon will come my friend, Don Pedro Fages, and two strong brothers of Saint Francis. Two men of God to help me God has heard me! My prayers have not been in vain. Santa Barbara shall have her mission at last. Praise God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Ghost!"

All along the flowery miles beside the sea, over mountains and through canons, Eulalia wondered about the famed missionary, Fray Junipero. What manner of man was he? According to the fathers at all the missions they had visited, he was a sainted miracle worker. With these opinions her husband concurred sincerely, and added other praises of his own. Not only was he a saint, but he was a man among men, strong, fearless, resourceful; uncomplaining in the midst of suffering. In short, the Governor gave him a soldier's merits in one phrase

-a good campaigner. In spite of all this, Eulalia felt that he withheld some opinion of the padre, and was puzzled to know what it might be. Now that they were approaching Monterey, and she would perhaps meet the Padre Presidente before night, she set herself to discover her husband's real opinion of him.

"Tell me, Pedro," she asked tentatively, "more about Padre Serra. I have heard much of him, even in Mexico City. He seems to be the most important person in California, apart from yourself, my dear. I shall have to associate with him, perhaps confess to him. What is he like?'

The Governor hesitated plucked reflectively at his beard.

"Stop doing that!" ordered the "When you do that I know you are thinking what you will say instead of saying it outright."

"Well," he said, but still caress ing his beard, "I usually think before I speak. And doing this helps me to think. You have heard all I can say about Padre Serra. I like good friends. And we are enemies."

"Enemies — hum," said Eulalia stroking an eyebrow with her little ful road stretched before him, up. I his horse's neck and caught her hand.

"Don't do that!" he laughed. "When you do that I know you are thinking what you are going to say, and-"

Eulalia laughed. "But it helps me think," she mocked.

The Governor still held her hand. How dear, how charming she could be, thought he.

"So you are enemies. Why?" "My dear, Church and State have ever been enemies. Their aims are too widely apart for them to work together sympathetically. That is especially true in California. The aim of the Crown-the State-in California is, frankly, the acquiring and holding of this country, and protecting it from other acquisitive nations-England, Russia. The aims of the Church are the conversion of the heathen."

He loosed her hand absently and pulled his beard.

"And-" prompted Eulalia.

"I, representing the State, must do my duty. I must see that the Church does nothing to jeopardize the Crown's holdings. Father Serra is the church in California. He would like to see all the soldiers sent out of the province, and be left here with the rest of the Franciscans, alone to work things out

Eulalia pricked up her ears. "He wishes the soldiery away from the province?"

"He does." "And you?"

"My dear, he would do anything to get me away from here. I believe he would stop at nothing under the sun to rid California of my pernicious influence."

"Ah," said Eulalia, deep in thought.

"He did rid himself of me once. you remember. Humph! The charges he made against me! And the terrible journey he made, sick and suffering as he was, to present them to the Viceroy. He nearly died, with his crippled leg. But his belief in what he was doing led him on, successfully, that time. I admire him. On my soul, I do."

The Governor laughed. "But I came back."

Eulalia's mind was working rapidly. So the Padre Presidente was that manner of man! One strong in belief in his duty-but one would stop at nothing, as the Governor had said, to gain his ends in regard to forwarding the Church in California. And he believed Pedro Fages stood in the way of complete triimph for the Church, therefore Pedro Fages must leave California: Serra had accomplished that onceit might-be-"A strange man," she said aloud. "But I have made up my mind that we are going to be friends. Yes, good friends. He should be a com-

again. "Splendid!" he cried heartily, squeezing her fingers. "Perhaps you can change his opinion of your husband. Then we can all live here happily, you and I, and all the children, in California for the rest of our lives!"

She withdrew her fingers. "Perhaps," she said softly, "per-

"Ai, my child, I almost wish for your sake we would meet some wild Indians. Where is this apparition?" Young Pedro jumped up in his stirrups, "See-down there at the Andale! We will overtake him." Fray Junipero, lost in unearthly dreams, was startled at the sound of hoof-beats so near him, and moved off the royal road hastily as the gay party of riders dashed toward him. The Governor reined in his mount, which reared upright on quivering failed. haunches, and faced the missionary.

"Hail, Father!" he cried, waving his hat. Then he dismounted hast-

Fray Junipero blinked, and said softly, "Ah, your Excellency!"

With an impulsive gesture Fages put both hands on the monk's shoulders. The face, though browned and weather-beaten, gave the impression of being pale and wan. The deep lines were deeper, the silver tonsure whiter. Beneath his hands he could feel the shoulders, in their hot coarse brown covering, so bent, so thin, trembling. But it was Junipero Serra's eyes that startled him. Fiery with strange inner fires, they burned in his bony skull, not meeting the Governor's intent look, but darting avidly among the company of riders on the camonio.

"My brothers . . my men of God . . ." he murmured, "O gracious Excellency, where are the answers to my prayer?"

Pedro Fages dropped his hands. He half turned from the missionary, avoiding his searching look. For a brief second he stood tense, still, his hand on the hilt of his sword. Then he flung his head up abruptly.

"Father Junipero . . ." he began bravely.

But Junipero Serra Interrupted

"Don Pedro!" he cried in a trembling voice, holding out his hands fearfully. "Don't tell me . . . but I had a vision . . . a promise! Ah, praise to God on high! There they are! Ai, ai, my Brothers! Come here, closer! Let me see you . touch you! You are holy men, an answer to prayer!" He stumbled toward Mariano Rubi and Bartolome

In his joy, the fervid missionary noticed none of these things. He looked about him for the Governor.

"Ah, forgive me, my son, for not greeting you!" he cried. "You and all your party have my blessing!" La Gobernadora was staring at him. Then she slipped carefully from her horse and walked to the priest. For a moment she measured him with a look, then her eyes dropped.

Here was a man, a little man, but he towered toward Heaven, and her eyes could not measure his stature. Her heart pounded. Her knees weakened, and almost against her will she found herself kneeling before

Why Not Fix Those Sagging Springs?

SPRINGS in furniture seldom orator? Forty-eight pages of stepthem does break and webbing wears out throwing the springs out of position.

To set the springs you will need a ball of twine and a needle such as used by the upholsterer, enough webbing to replace the old, tacks %-inch long with large heads, a block of wood for stretching the webbing, a tack hammer and a tack lifter. Remove the cover from the seat carefully so that it may either be used again or serve as a pattern. Most of the padding may also be used. Observe how each layer of material is fastened in place, so that you may put it back the same way.

Remove the springs and all old tacks. Tack the first strip of webbing to one edge of the bottom of the frame, letting the end extend 1/2 inch beyond the edge, then fold the end over the first tacks and tack again as at A. Draw the webbing across the frame using the block of wood as a lever to stretch webbing taut as at B. When all the strips have been stretched and tacked across the frame one way, stretch strips of webbing across the other way weaving these over and under the first ones as at C. Now, sew the bottem of each spring to the webbing with the upholsterer's twine and curved needle as shown in this diagram.

Next, turn the frame right side up, drive tacks part way in along the edges; then tie the springs across each way with upholsterer's twine as shown in diagram C. The twine is tied to the tacks and to each spring and regulates the height of the springs-the outside edges usually being lower than the center to make a rounded top. When the springs are regulated evenly, drive the tacks in: then replace burlap or muslin coverings and padding.

Baird F. F. A. Set Up New Project

Something new for this part of the Community is now being planned by two of the Baird Vocational agricultural students, John Alexander and Bill Yarborough. These boys are first year students in Vocational agriculture and have a good program of work setup. They plan to raise Capons and sell them on the market locally.

Billy has 50 young White Rocks which are doing five, and John has 100 that will soon be ready to caponize.

John is also carrying a calf as a project which he is fattening and intends to sell on the marke.t

Capons are excellent in flavor and tenderness and can be made to weigh 7 and 8 pounds. They do not loose their tenderness nor flavor with age. Caponizing is a process of removing the testicles from the cockerels when they are approaching maturity.

THE Gas REFRIGERATOR

8 Years' Service—Not 1 Cent Repairs!

"Eight years ago when I was looking for the best refrigerator to buy, a friend said: Buy a Servel Electrolux and your worries will be over for all time. There will be no noisy motor to disturb you; there will be only a slight difference in the amount of your gas bill; and not a cent for repairs. He was right. I call the Electrolux 'my household magician', so quietly, perfectly and inexpensively does it work-and with nothing to wear out. It has brought the luxury of perfect refrigeration into my home in a way anyone can afford."-MRS. F. M. BELL, 1527 Owasso St., Fort Worth,

WHY NOT OWN IT?

VOU can buy, own and operate a Servel Electrolux— I the Gas or Kerosene refrigerator—for what your refrigeration costs you now. In other words, you are paying for it now. Why do without it?

We can show you this, with actual figures. They will open your eyes.

Servel Electrolux actually pays for itself in your home-in cash, in dollars and cents-and then pays you a profit besides. What other home equipment does that?

Of course, Servel Electrolux is a different kind of refrigerator. Entirely different from all others. And the only one of its kind. Its freezing unit has no moving parts. Think what that means-no pistons, gears, wheels, belts, bearings. Not one single thing to wear. And no noise. It can't make a noise.

For a tiny gas (or kerosene) flame does all the work. And does it for just a few cents' worth of gas or kerosene a week. A small down payment puts it in your home. You're paying for it anyway-why not own it? Why not NOW?

2 Steps in Fighting Discomfort of COLDS

All it usually costs to relieve the misery of a cold today-is 3¢ to 5¢ relief for the period of your cold 15¢ to 25¢. Hence no family need neglect even minor head colds.

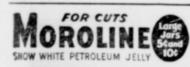

Here is what to do: Take two BAYER tablets when you feel a cold coming on - with a full glass of water. Then repeat, if necessary, according to directions in each package. Relief comes rapidly.

The Bayer method of relief is the way many doctors now approve. You take Bayer Aspirin for relief - then if you are not improved promptly, you call the

around the NATIONAL CAPITAL By Carter Field

Washington.-The Farley maxim that the Democrats should fight to the last ditch for every possible elective office, no matter how hopeless the fight might seem, and always with a view to building up the organization for the "next election" is being shamelessly abandoned, according to some very caustic critics inside the Democratic party.

Out in the country some Democratic leaders, sharing this view, are very much disturbed. They are telling their senators and representatives that all is not well, that the Republicans are likely to make big inroads this fall, and that there will be a terrific number of casualties among Democratic house members, if not among Democratic senators.

This impression that the Democratic machine is not functioning at top speed, that it is depending more on general propaganda and more on the strength of Roosevelt with the voters, is enhanced when such pessimists come to Washington and try to get something done about it.

"I told our problems to Charley Michelson," a Democratic worker from Missouri told some friends afterward, "and I was afraid he would go to sleep while I was talking.

What that worker did not know, of course, was that Charley might be excused for being bored at hearing the same tale for the thousandth time. On the other hand there is the old story of the boy who kept crying, "Wolf! Wolf!" when there was no wolf, and who regretted his false alarms very much when, after the real wolf came, no one paid any attention to his cries.

Call It Good Strategy

There are some influential members of the party, however, who believe that it is good strategy to let down for a while.

They don't think it would hurt very much if the Republicans should gain sixty or seventy seats in the house of representatives this fall. They do not expect that the Republicans will do anything like this well, but point out that there would be some advantages to such a change. For one thing the Democratic majority in the house would not be so unwieldy and topheavy. For another it would put, as they express it, the "fear of God" in the hearts of the surviving Democrats. So these survivors might be brought to heel much more easily on White House commands.

"But suppose the Republicans should actually get control of the house?" one of them was asked.

"That is almost impossible," retorted the Democrat." "But suppose they did? Wouldn't that put the country? What could they do except snipe at the President and the New Deal? I think actually it would be far from an unmixed evil. I think a house for the next two years controlled by the Republicans would do more to insure a sweeping Democratic victory in 1940 than anything I can imagine.'

Interest in the senate battles this fall is mostly personal. Nothing could shake the grip of the Democrats on the senate except a crop of upper house funerals far in excess of any reasonable probability.

Stumbling Block

Nothing would surprise anyone who has been watching the stalemate on the wage-hours regulation bill, but it is quite apparent that the magic formula which would open the door to its enactment has not been found.

Secretary Perkins remains the chief stumbling block. Not because of anything she has done about it, but because of where to put the administration of the act, and the discretion about tempering the wind to the shorn lambs-in this case the sections of the country and the particular industries which might be favored with differentials-is the chief problem on which agreement is not in sight.

If Miss Perkins were entirely satisfactory to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., and to congress, the bill would go through like greased light-To put it another way, if Miss Perkins were to resign tomorrow, and the President should appoint Edward F. McGrady in her place, passage of the bill would happen within 36 hours.

But-there is no likelihood of that. Lewis and Green are not willing to trust Miss Perkins. Congress is not willing to trust her. So the alternative would seem to be an independent board or commission to administer the law. This is where the power of Green in congress becomes important. Green sticks to the position he took two months ago that he would not trust such a board. His shins are still too much barked up by the national labor relations board, which he says, favors the C. I. O. as against the American Federation of Labor. The way around that, apparently, would be to permit no discretion at all in the administration of the act, to pass a law specifying that no workers could be made to labor more than a given number of hours a week, nor paid less than a given amount per hour or per week. Seek Magic Formula

This would be all right if it were not for the sections of the country and the particular industries which think they must have a differential. The only way to have a law and to permit such exceptions in its enforcement is to vest discretion in some administrative body.

Solution of this problem requires a magic formula. Administration experts have been busy trying to evolve this formula ever since, but it is still undiscovered. The President is not willing to humble Miss Perkins in order to get the law through. No other solution has been suggested which would come within a mile of success.

It might be found tomorrow. The President still hopes that it will be found before the end of the present session. But he is not as optimistic as he was. In fact, there are indications that he has become convinced the bill will not pass this session, though he is still insisting

The new committee appointed to study the situation, of course, is just a gesture. The same men appointed to that committee have been working on the problem as individuals for more than a year. Merely naming them to a committee is not going to clear up the fog. Nor will the fact that they meet as a committee help much. They have been conferring as individuals, and as members of the house labor committee, for these many months. There is no magic in the word "committee," and, short of Ed Mc-Grady, there is no magic in anything else that has been suggested.

Electric Industry

Every now and then something crops up to make the dispassionate observer wonder if Franklin D. Roosevelt really hates the electric industry as much as it believes. meat. Most recent among these developments is the letter which J. D. Ross, one time government ownership executive in Seattle and now big boss of Bonneville, wrote to a Mr. Neal in Knoxville. The sum and substance of this letter was that it was good policy to buy out the existing private companies, and to pay a fair price.

There has been considerable question as to whether this was not a bad slip on Mr. Ross' part, one calculated to get him into pretty serious trouble with the President.

cently Mr. Roosevelt, discussing ing public loans and grants to local tribution systems, said that he aslocal governments contemplating such projects would negotiate with the privately owned units now supplying them with a view to avoiding duplication.

The point seems to be that President Roosevelt does not go anything like so far as either George W. Norris, Nebraska senator and daddy of TVA, or Representative John E. Rankin, the Mississippi utility baiter. Rankin has said frankly, many

Roosevelt's "prudent investment degrees Fahrenheit for ten to twelve theory" applied to the price which minutes. should be paid for any utility is pretty tough, the utility men think, and their opinion is shared by most men who have ever been in business, but it is a lot better than Mr. Rankin's idea. In fact, it is not very far from correct to say that Roosevelt is about half way between John Rankin and J. D. Ross in his idea as to what would be a fair price for any privately owned

Check on Prices

There are plenty who think that Roosevelt is not really eager to have the entire electric industry of this country public-owned and operated -that all he wants is enough of it so operated to be a check on the prices charged by the privately owned companies. Roosevelt believes strongly in the social value of cheap electricity. Those who hold the view just stated believe that cheap current, and not public ownership, is his real objective. Tinctured a little, of course, by the enmities which gradually develop in such a long fight.

It must be remembered that this fight has not been going on only since he entered the White House. Most of the bitterness was engendered before that, when, as governor of New York, he did some things which irritated the utilities, and as a result of which many of their executives supported other candidates for the Democratic nomination in 1932. Which last, of course, is something that could not be overlooked.

There are a good many impartial observers, folks who think government ownership is always an economic crime, who wish devoutly that the privately owned utilities would test this theory out by marking down their rates. It might cost them some money, though even this is debatable, as evidenced by the records of the privately owned electric company in Washington.

Tasty Salt Pork With Cream Gravy

Old-Fashioned Dish Is Always Strong Favorite

By EDITH M. BARBER

THE other night at a supper party, conversation turned to food. We all declared our favorite dishes. Among them were many old-fashioned favorites. There were several votes for salt pork and cream gravy!

Really, there is nothing better than this simple dish, especially if you serve tender griddle cakes with it. In olden days this combination was often used for breakfast, but it is as good for lunch or for supper. Salt pork, of course, belongs with baked beans, and I agree with a critic who bewailed the fact that there is not always enough pork used in this dish. I suppose it is actually supposed to add flavor and fat, but most of us like to have a portion of pork with each service of beans. You may, of course, add a piece of pork to canned baked beans when you put them in a casserole for baking. If the pork is scalded and cut into small pieces, it will be done enough at the end of an hour.

As is usually the case, corned beef hash proved to be another favorite dish. All agreed that it must be well browned. Poached eggs are, of course, often served with corned

YOU can't beat the Dutch! With practically no ado at all, they've been quietly working away at a so lution of the housing problem that makes the plans of other nations look pretty incidental. And makes us think that Queen Wilhelmina must be quite a girl.

In the first place, the municipalities or government own 99 per cent of the residential land, even that which private buildings occupy. It is leased for long terms to builders. But strict supervision of structures and upkeep of buildings is maintained. And government loans are very easily available for building when adequate quarters are not otherwise obtainable. All rooms and houses for sale or rent must be listed with the government so that the supply and demand can be closely followed.

Working men's apartments are usually government built and owned. They are attractively laid out with modern improvements and pretty gardens while the better-off families can have nicer places or even estates, so there is plenty of incentive for individual enterprise.

The present housing program began in 1833 and the plan is worked out as far ahead as the year 2000. The results of the present housing laws have been drastic decrease of drunkenness, tuberculosis and

But maybe we can't blame all of Holland's good conditions on housing. Equal suffrage existed there before it did in the United States, and if you fail to vote you have to explain why to the judge. When a murder is committed, the name of the prisoner is not made public Prisoners have to serve their full terms without hope of pardon; but when they are released their prison record is a secret so that they have a real opportunity for rehabilitation.

We'd say that would be a pretty fine country to raise a family in. No wonder the Dutch have lots of children.

Bought and Paid For.

So many of us homemakers have brainstorms in buying every now and then that we may be heartened by this story of the lady who bought a pair of "problem" bedspreads. Oh, they were pretty enough with a bow-knot design in chenille-so before Mrs. Martin could say "better not" they were bought and paid for. It was their color, you see, that was the problem—natural background with chenille design in brown and rust.

When she put them on the twin low-poster maple beds in her room the result was nothing to brag about. The walls were cream color and, with the brown and natural tones of both spreads and furniture, the whole effect was along toward dull. But Mrs. Martin was not to be stumped, so that bedroom turned out to be unusual, sedate, and a little on the masculine side-which, she claims, is as it should be since it is her husband's room too. She chose a deep woodsy green for her rug, and painted the walls of the room a cool, light green as a complement.

At the four casement windows she placed draw-type curtains of brown linen edged with beige chenille. A slipper chair she covered with a slip cover made out of an old bedspread which was simply covered with bands of chenille in natural beige. A pillow for the chair was covered with a hooked slip she made herself, copying the lovely bow-knot designs of the bedspreads in natural, brown and rust yarns.

Accessories might have proved a problem if Mrs. Martin had not been audacious-for it occurred to her that there was no law that forbade her using brass in a bedroom -so her lamp bases are of brass. A little maple table beside the chair has a large brass tray for decoration and brass bowls on the window sills hold flowers and, in winter, small green plants.

The whole effect is as pleasing as can be and as this smart lady says-"All because I bought foolish.

STAR DUST Movie · Radio

IF YOU have read Damon A Runyon's short stories and roared over them, or even if you haven't, mark down "A Slight Case of Murder" as a picture that will make you laugh until you ache all over.

 By VIRGINIA VALE

You may think it improbable and incongruous that four corpses could rouse you to such hilarity, but these are characters that would be disposed of without tears in any picture. The inspired casting of the picture is what makes it such fun, for Edward G. Robinson plays a comic gangster. Instead of the domineering, swaggering, ruthless menace that he has played so often and so well, he plays here a blundering mugg who just isn't quite bright.

Richard Himber gave a party for Kay Thompson, Lou Holtz, and the rest of the co-workers on his radio program and ever since the CBS studios have looked like a meeting of the Society of Amateur Magicians. Himber did card tricks at his party. Not to be outdone, Lou Holtz learned to pick watches out of the air. Kay Thompson is specializing in those old scarf tricks where one small handkerchief torn to bits turns into yards and yards of vari-colored scarfs.

Robert Benchley, whose short film comedies have been such a success, will soon be launched on a radio program of his own. The Stroud twins will stay with the Bergen-McCarthy-Ameche program through June 19, and Frank Morgan has cancelled a vacation trip to Europe because fans wrote and urged that he be kept on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer "Good News" hour.

When you hear the Radio Rubes singing old ballads from all parts of the country, you can be sure the songs are authentic. Mountain music and old Southern ditties are the special hobby of Eddie Smith and Luke Davis of the quintet who come from North Carolina. Zeb Turney. who is the Rubes' announcer, was brought up on the Western plains. He knew a big repertoire of cowboy songs when he was just a young.

By the time Universal gets around to making their first picture starring Charlie McCarthy, Shirley Temple may be old enough to play the leading role. First Irene Dunne was supposed to play the lead. Then Margaret Sullavan was engaged. Now the latest word is that Andrea Leeds, the pretty heroine of "The Goldwyn Follies," is going to have the fun of making the picture.

Rudy Vallee, who from time to time gets into battles with news photographers, turned soft-hearted recently and helped them get some pictures of Bing Crosby. Bing flatly refuses to pose for news pictures before or after his broadcasts. He usually wears an old sweater or a shirt open at the neck and he is afraid that too much attention might be called to his informal attire. Bing's love for real Maine lobsters was his downfall. A friend had shipped some to Vallee and he offered to share them with Bing only if he would pose for pictures when the presentation took

Science Battles Infantile Paralysis

When Chicago's schools were closed by an infantile paralysis epidemic thousands of pupils were given zinc sulphate nasal sprays, one of science's most recent developments in the fight on a deadly plague. But still more important is the new vaccine developed by Dr. John A. Kolmer of Temple university (right) who claims it will produce immunity from infantile paralysis. Doctor Kolmer and his assistant were given injections and the doctor's two children came next. When the 1937 plague arrived hundreds of youngsters were injected with the vaccine. Below: Dr. Frances Glenn, Doctor Kolmer's assistant, at work with a small army of young patients.

The never-ending struggle of Christianity is to keep the simple gospel of the grace of God in Christ Jesus free to operate in all its glory and power, unencumbered by the traditions and formulas of men. It has been my privilege to read a recent book by a brilliant young man who, while serving as a professor of philosophy in a large university, is also versed in the related fields of theology, psychology, psychiatry, and psychotherapy. He has had first-hand experience in dealing with the problems of men and women. With this background of both study and experience he gives it as his absolute conviction that we must get "back to the original simplicity of the Christian gospel.' He suggests that we need to "dust off the additions and superstructures" that have been added since

Our lesson for today finds Jesus meeting that very issue with the traditionalists of His day. The Pharisees and a delegation of from Jerusalem to Capernaum to seek to ensnare him.

I. Washed Hands and Unwashed Hearts (vv. 1-6).

In the process of interpreting the law of Moses and applying it to the affairs of daily life the religious authorities of Israel had developed mass of intricate and onerous rules which had literally buried the law itself and had substituted ritualistic formalism for spiritual life. So fond had the scribes and the Pharisees become of these traditions that they became bold enough to declare that they were far superior to the law itself.

Their attack on Jesus because His and again. disciples ate with unwashed hands did not refer to the proper cleansing of one's hands before eating, but to the ceremonial washings which were said to be necessary if one had accidentally touched Gentile, or something that a Gentile had touched in the market place.

Jesus skillfully and finally disposes of that question by reminding the objectors that they were serving God with their lips only, but their hearts were far from Him. Washed demned, and Jesus says nothing about that point. When the washing of hands becomes of more importance than the cleansing of the heart, however, the soul is in real danger. We do not have the tradiwithin the church we have established rules, imposed restrictions, equired submissions which are not Tragedy Was Difficult scriptural, and hence which we may not honestly require of our neighbor. Before we rest back in the assurance that we are better than the scribes and Pharisees we will do well to "take stock" and determine whether we too have fallen into their

II. Traditions of Man Versus the Commandment of God (vv. 7-13).

Here is the heart of the entire matter, for while we may not always be aware of it the fact is that Naomi Royde-Smith. It says: our anxiety to maintain human full and true responsibility.

The Jew who was so avaricious sibility by declaring that his property was "Corban," dedicated to Thereafter no matter how great was the need of his parents they could receive nothing. The execution of this oath was carried out to such a fine point that a son who had declared his property to "Corban" could visit a sick father or mother for only a brief period lest he might stay long enough to perform some duties of a nurse and thus indirectly contribute to his parents by saving them some expense.

Thus do men even in our day make "the word of God of none effect" (v. 13), through their traditions. No right minded person objects to the worthy traditions of worship and service which are such a precious heritage of the Christian church. Rightfully apprehended and properly used they are both desirable and helpful. But we must never permit the grace and power of God in Jesus Christ "to be brought under the trammels of human teachers or the arrangements of human office-bearers. The first movement toward the mastery of the soul by tradition is the movement of that soul away from immediate, direct, first-hand fellowship with God' (Morgan).

The crying need of our day, as it was of the time when Jesus was or earth, is that we should clear away hindering encumbrances.

Until you actually use today's gas range you'll never know how easy and sure cooking can be, not to mention the hours one cuts from kitchen time.

There's an automatic temperature control that assures perfect baking and roasting whether you are in the kitchen or out of the house. Tight insulation holds oven heat constant . . . helps the oven to heat faster . . . saves gas . . . and keeps the kitchen cooler. Simmer burners provide a highly flexible heat that can be controlled to the exact temperature required for any boiling or frying job.

Of course, there are many other features to make your kitchen work easier and add hours of new leisure every day. And the best way to know these features is to get a first-hand look at the new ranges. They are as beautiful as they are efficient and are sold on the easiest kind of terms.
