Did you ever see a pear tree bloom in September? Well we have. Just three days ago large juicy pears were picked from this tree and today blooms appeared.
Small, yes, but blooms.
If one cares to resolve his doubt of the truth of this bit of news,
check the tree just behind Koonce Lawn Mower Service.

Nanci Allen, daughter of Rev.
and Mrs. H. E. Allen, left last weekend for Waxahachie to enter

Community Fund Canceled

Iowa Park Community Board met recently in the lobby of State National Bank to hear representatives of various organizations the fund sponsors, to submit their budgets for the year.
C. A. Nipper, president, and Rollins Woodall, chairman of the budget committee, presided during the meeting.
Representatives of Boy Scouts,
Camp Fire, Red Cross, Little League baseball and football, and local welfare told of their work and needs.
After carefully considering the needs of participants in the Iowa Park Community Fund, the board concluded it would not be able to raise funds needed, so it voted to dissolve and let each of these causes conduct its own fund raising drive.
Past two years the Community Fund has not reached its goal and

Hawks Lose at Crowell

Hawks and fans journeyed to Crowell last Friday to play the Wildcats. Iowa Park dropped the opener 6 to 26.
In the first quarter the Hawks lost their fullback Terry May, who was sidelined by an injury. He is expected to play this Friday.
From the second quarter on, it was Crowell's game.
Coach Tommy Watkins said
there was no outstanding Hawk player last week. Each week he plans to present one of the team members a Hawk decal, that is,
if there is an outstanding player.
Coaches were pleased with the support fans gave the Hawks.
This being the first game of the season, most of the boys are inexperienced; all the coaches are new; and there are lots of problems to work out.
This Friday, Iowa Park plays
at Anson.

Crop Survey

Postmaster T. E. Gilbreath announced this week that rural mail carriers R. J. Butts and E. E. Wallis will begin distributing 1963
Acreage Survey Cards to patrons on their routes Sept. 12.
Post offices assist USDA in making the survey each year. Reports from farmers are the basis for official estimates for Texas acreage of all crops harvested in 1963.
To be sure this community is represented in the survey, Gilbreath urges each patron receiving a card to fill it out and return it to his mailbox.
Mr. and Mrs. Rex Wells and Mrs. Jerry Don Padgett spent last weekend in Oklahoma City.

Bouquets & Barbs

Bouquets
Bouquets to all who worked so diligently in the Little League program. We are saying this in the past tense, but do you know several will be toiling without fanfare all winter to see that the summer ahead will be even bigger and better? The value of this to the youth of our community is inestimable.
The program resembles a cake.
It consumes much too fast, yet the quality is determined by the quiet, unnoticed, meticulous mixing of the ingredients. Your personal satisfaction in doing a job to the best of your abilities should be most gratifying.
Barbs
Barbs to you who are endorsing policies and programs because "Mr. Doe says they are doing it this way other places." So what?
Anything of this nature should stand on its merits; the fact it is being utilized "other places" should merely provide points of study. Is it fair? Is it democratic?
Is it feasible?
And a multitude of other questions should be answered to your own satisfaction before you relinquish your stamp of approval.
If you don't, how do you know you are not compounding another's mistake?
Quotable Quotes
"Citizenship is for all of us and no one except the government has the right to deprive us of the privilege of citizenship! And in the high school, one of the rights of the school citizen is the right to run for office!"—Gerald M.
Van Pool, National Association of Secondary School Principals.

A View from Russia: the People

by Boyd Schlenker

This article wings its way from Moscow where we find ourselves coming to the last few leaves in our Russian "travel book," which has been a three-week trip, with nearly two of the weeks in the country of the Red Star. This will be the first in a series of three articles viewing Russia: today "The People." To follow — "The Government" and "Christ in the USSR."

In the past five years travel to the Soviet Union has become more and more frequent. This makes possible some quite noticeable dents in the Iron Curtain because people from the West can meet, to a limited extent of course, these people whose country is the largest in area on earth and whose population is 40,000,000 larger than that of our country. It is this contact we have sought.

Private travel in the USSR for the foreigner is restricted and expensive, whereas a tour gives the advantage of inexpensive travel and the rather odd position of having more freedom than if one were traveling separately. There is some "cover-up" in numbers, I suppose! Amazingly, our suitcases have never been opened.

From London our ship (a Russian liner) traveled to Leningrad in five days, stopping on the way at three Scandanavian ports-of-call. The dock at Leningrad, a city of over 3,000,000 persons, was crowded as we approached, but apparently most of these people were not waiting for anyone to arrive. The large part of them were just there, standing for two or three hours, simply to see us! — simply to see the people who emerged from the ship.

This first view of the Russian people (aside from the ship's crew) was to be our experience time and again. In great crowds you are suddenly caught-up in the startling realization that everyone is looking at you; never with any feeling of animosity—hardly!—but with a look of extreme interest and curiosity.

If Moscow is the political center of Russia, Leningrad is the cultural—over 40 museums and art galleries, containing some of the masterpieces of world art and historic treasure.

There is more of a relaxed feeling in Leningrad; it would be a less hectic place to live than Moscow. I met here in Russia a Presbyterian minister from Philadelphia who is producing a television program for the CBS in that city, comparing Leningrad and Philadelphia.

There are some interesting comparisons: both about the same size, both quite historic centers of their respective countries; both one-time national capitals. But it was obvious he was expecting trouble in getting his films and tapes out of the Soviet Union. Just the week before NBC had been banned in Russia because of the recent, now-famous, program on the Kremlin.

We have been struck with the poor quality of clothing. A pair of poorly made shoes costs about $30. Hardly any women wear nylon hose; they are too expensive. A private car is as hard to find in Russia as is a parking place in America. The cheapest auto costs nearly $4000. Anything that could be called a luxury is far beyond the reach of the great majority of Russians.

But some things are very expensive: Housing—everyone in recently-built apartment houses which are thrown together at an amazing pace—and look it! Books and L.P. records are mouth-wateringly cheap. Since public transportation must be the thing, buses and trolley-buses and trolley-cars and the Metro (subway) are very inexpensive—and jam-packed. If you want to get "close to the Russian people" there's no better place than a Moscow trolley-bus!

Most Russian city-dwellers earn about 100 roubles ($90) a month. Scientists, artists, ballet dancers, actors, and most party-members earn more. A young engineer I spoke with earns 100 and says the top engineer in his department earns 160 roubles. There is no farther to go.

There has been an almost frantic desire on the part of some to know more of what the Western countries are really like. (As the American racial scene grows darker I feel there are some things I would just as soon keep secret!)

Many of the young people listen to the Voice of America, which is seldom jammed by the Communists any more, since most of their jamming efforts are directed toward the Chinese radio these days! Without exception the Russians I have spoken with feel a great friendliness toward America and a bitterness toward China.

This is real and sincere, and while it, in itself, does not dissolve any basic political problems, it is the grassroots of a feeling of co-operation with the West which would have been out of the question during the particularly dark days of Stalinism.

Jazz, button-down collar shirts, ivy-league suits—all these are fantastically popular with Russian young people. I have been stopped half-a-dozen times on the streets of Leningrad and Moscow by young men wanting to buy the clothes off my back. There is an active black market in anything American. This activity the government actively attempts to stamp out. But you still are stopped.

There can be no question the people are in a better condition (as poor as it is in comparison with most of the Western nations) than before the 1917 Revolution. And the Russian people have had some terribly hard days to face since then. Leningrad was besieged by German troops for 900 consecutive days during World War Two. During that time 600,000 citizens of Leningrad died! But the city was never taken. Such things are foreign to our minds. We can say that we understand, but we never can.

While Russian society has made long strides, it has had a long way to go. In the West a more or less awakened social conscience made for gradual modification of a system where the rich got richer and the poor got poorer; but Russia was completely out of step with such historical development.

October 1917 Revolution was a bitter drastic break with an out-moded Czar-serfdom society which was doomed to destruction, since it is impossible to keep a people impoverished and without their basic God-given right as human beings. Yet, while they are better-off materially, there are many ways in which the Russian people are still in bondage—a serfdom of the mind and will.

It would appear that the Russian society cannot go much further without some radical changes, because Communism carries within its own destruction. When I talked with one young couple on the street, they said, "Come, let us walk." There is the fear that someone may hear, may see, may tell.

But with all this there is a new hope. The hope is present in the very fact that I can write about these experiences in the Soviet Union, that there has been freedom to speak with people, that it is obvious these people want to know about the rest of the world.

Next step is that more and more Russians will travel abroad, perhaps even have that travel sponsored by their own government. No intelligent person could help but rejoice in this exchange of ideas, this exchange of human lives. Certainly no Christian could conscientiously reject it.

Last night I sat at a cafe table eating dinner. Across from me was a Russian. When I stumblyingly communicated to him that I was an American his face lighted-up, his hand went out. Holding up the index finger of both hands he named one "America," the other "Russia." Then he brought the two together. "America; Russia—good."

And that was my prayer too.

Girl Scouts

A new program for Girl Scouts is being launched this week with sale of new Handbooks for Girls and Leaders.

The new program is due to the fact that girls grow up faster in this changing world than they did 51 years ago when Girl Scouting was first started in the USA.

It's simply a modern version of what Juliette Low first started in Savannah, Ga., in 1912. Her interest in the movement grew after a visit in England with Lord Baden-Powell and his sister Agnes. He is founder of all scouting.

While the age range for members remains 7 through 17, the troops are operating in four age levels instead of three. Now the Brownies are 7 and 8; juniors, 9-11; cadets 12-14; and seniors, 15-17.

Iowa Park is organizing its first Girl Scout troop this week. It will be for girls 9 to 14 years of age. Leaders are Mrs. Jack Lightsey, a trained and experienced leader, and Miss Marjorie Barth, who started as a Brownie and is former leader of Troop 77 at City View school.

All girls and their mothers are invited to tea at Mrs. Lightsey's home. The first house on your right after you pass W. F. George ball park on Johnson Road. The tea will be from 4:00 to 5:00 next Monday. Many important decisions for the troop will be made at this time, so all are urged to attend and get acquainted with the leaders.

If you are interested but cannot attend, you can discuss scouting with Mrs. Lightsey at 592-4034.

A Brownie troop will be organized soon.

Mrs. Gracie Lee and family and Mrs. Mary Allen had as guests this week Mrs. Bobby Frazier and children Kathy and Sandra of Rockford, Ill.
