MERCHANTS' TRADES DAYS — SEPTEMBER 5, 6, 7

You always are welcome in the Town of Friendly Living. And you will find bargains in every store this Thursday, Friday, Saturday.

First Time Around

Many years ago the Herald established the custom of picturing some first graders visiting the school a few days before classes were to start.

This year we got Principals John Sibley and Miss Ethyle Kidwell, Photographer Doc Estes, and a representative group of beginners together for the big picture taking event.

Naturally there were some children too young to go to school who accompanied the mothers and Big Sister or Big Brother, and they got into the act too!

It's interesting to note that the parents of most of the children in these pictures are former students in Iowa Park.

We also have to credit local clothing stores with the handsome appearance our first graders make. Verna's Apparel, Famous Department Store, Rowntree Men's and Boys' Wear, and other local stores are to be congratulated on the quality merchandise they have in stock for the small fry.

We wish all students the best of luck as they start a brand new school term.

WYNNE CHESTER SAYS:
Now You Can Have Your Own Shooting Preserve

Several weeks ago Joe's brother Bob, who's currently president of our local trap and skeet club, announced an unscheduled meeting. Joe wouldn't tell me what it was all about, but from his expectant grin I knew it had to be something special.

Well, it was. Bob proposed that we start our own shooting preserve! All of us immediately had visions of hard work, confusion and high expenses—but Bob dispelled those notions with the aid of a booklet called "How To Have More Pheasant Shooting".

Interested? Just send 25c for the booklet to SAAMI, Room 2449, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

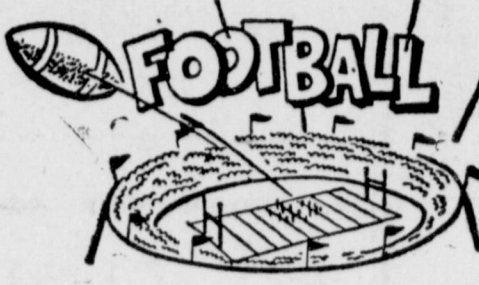

Written by SAAMI field representative Charley Dickey, with a fine assist from Dr. Ed Koziicky of Olin's Conservation Department, the booklet tells sportsmen how to get started, what to stock, what land is needed, what the law requires, how to plan a game pen and prepare for the first hunt.

Our bunch has much pleasanter visions now — visions of hunting close to home, extra long seasons, no bag limits, and all the plump birds we can eat, come next season!

METHODIST HOME HEAD HONORED FOR 30 YEARS SERVICE

Mr. Hubert Johnson, Superintendent of the Methodist Home, Waco, Texas, since August 1, 1933, was honored recently by the Home's Alumni Association for his thirty years of service to children. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, at right, received an avalanche of cards, letters and telegrams from former residents of the home. Mrs. Ethel Gregory Rodgers of Houston, Texas, President of the Alumni Association, is shown presenting the greetings to Mr. and Mrs. Johnson. Congratulations came from hundreds of former residents of the home now living around the world. Superintendent Johnson has guided the Methodist Home during its greatest period of growth. The home now cares for over 450 children, and in its 73 year history has cared for over 8,000 boys and girls. The Methodist Home serves Texas and New Mexico.

What They Wore... by PHYLLIS JOYCE

WHEN PROHIBITION WAS MAKING THE HEADLINES BACK IN THE TWENTIES, THE BOYISH SILHOUETTE AND THE DEBUTANTE SLOUCH WERE IN VOGUE. IT WAS THE AGE OF THE "FLAPPER" WITH LOWERED WAISTLINES, RAISED SKIRT-LINES, FRINGES AND BEADS.

TO PROTECT HER FROM THE WINTRY WINDS SHE OFTEN WORE A WRAP-AROUND COAT WITH A HUGE COLLAR OF FUR OR FABRIC.

ALTHOUGH MANY AMERICAN WOMEN ADOPTED THE UNCORSETED LOOK, OTHERS WORE SOFT BONELESS CORSETS TO ACHIEVE THE PROPER SILHOUETTE.

TODAY... WHEN BUYING WOMEN'S AND GIRLS' APPAREL LOOK FOR THIS LABEL... THE SYMBOL OF DECENCY, FAIR LABOR STANDARDS AND THE AMERICAN WAY OF LIFE.

Bouquets & Barbs

by Leonard Stevens Jr.

Bouquets

Bouquets to the air force personnel and families in our town.
Look around in the churches and civic organizations, and notice the conscientious active contributions
they are making.

They are treating Iowa Park as their hometown, even though next week or next month their tenure
may terminate.

This is as it should be, and this writer speaks for many when he states their arrival is our good fortune—their leaving our loss.
But we're grateful for their stay even though it is much too short.

Barbs

Barbs to those who endorse professional boxing. Granted, the amateur program is wonderful—well supervised, contestants adequately protected, purposeful training for the development of youngsters.

Apparently evil influences take over when pay enters the sport.
Evidence indicates the gangster element is predominant and is using the talents of boxers solely for their own gain.

Seems to me far too many serious injuries are being suffered by these pawns for us to tolerate this so-called sport.

Is there any other activity we support where the primary purpose is for one or the other contestant to render his opponent helplessly insensible?

Quotable Quotes

If parents cease to be active in the church and their children are allowed to by-pass moral instruction they should be getting in Sunday school, it becomes just that much harder to rear our young people in the ways of honesty and decency.—Dwight Eisenhower.

CARD OF THANKS

During the extended illness and death of our father we have realized anew that friends are among our choicest possessions. We are humbly grateful for every consideration shown our loved one during his life on earth.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me," Christ said.
We know that he was magnified
through the prayers, visits, food,
beautiful floral offerings, cards
and personal gifts to us when our father departed this earth.

May God bless each one who exemplified kindness and concern.
We pray that we will be worthy of our friends.

Q.

What makes home study easier?

Plenty of good light!

Homework is hard work for young eyes. Plenty of good light is needed for reading small type, seeing details in maps and charts and performing other close visual tasks. For easier seeing at the study table, a good table lamp with at least a 150 watt bulb or equivalent is recommended. The lamp should be tall enough to spread light evenly over the work surface and properly shaded to conceal the light source from the eyes. A diffusing bowl (or a bulb with its own built-in diffuser) is recommended to soften the light and prevent glare. Check your children's study light now. Make sure they have proper light for easy seeing when they do their homework.

Iowa Park Man Discusses Africa's Economic Parliament

By J. P. Sewell

Reprinted by special permission from Africa Report, Washington, D.C., July, 1963, published by the African-American Institute.

Sewell is son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Sewell of Iowa Park. He has been a visiting lecturer in the government department of University College of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia. In September he will become assistant professor in the political science department of Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

The youngest of the four United Nations regional economic commissions is the Economic Commission for Africa, established by an Economic and Social Council resolution in April 1958. Its task, as set forth by ECOSOC at that time, is to facilitate "concerted action for the economic development of Africa, including its social aspects" by means of investigation and study, advisory services, and the formulation of coordinated policies as a basis for practical action.

At each of the five annual meetings of representatives from member states thus far convened—the last held from Feb. 18 to March 2, 1963, at Leopoldville—the recurrent theme in every item of business has been the imperative need to accelerate the speed of African development. This sense of urgency has been tempered only by an almost equally strong will on the part of the African delegations to avoid decisions in the economic sphere calculated to create or deepen political cleavages between African states.

Three of the first four annual sessions were held in Addis Ababa's magnificent Africa Hall, a gift from His Imperial Majesty Haile Selassie I, where the ECA secretariat has its permanent headquarters. However, the 1963 meeting was held in Leopoldville—as an expression of continent-wide African support for Congolese unification, and as a means of ensuring the attendance of ECA's permanent Executive Secretary, Robert K. A. Gardiner of Ghana, who has been serving as head of the UN Operation in Congo since early 1962.

From ECA's inception, questions of membership and participation have generated heated debate at the annual meetings of the senior representatives of member states. This year was no exception. Four newly independent African states—Algeria, Burundi, Rwanda and Uganda—acceded routinely to full ECA membership by virtue of their admission to the United Nations. As usual, the touchy subject was the status of European members.

Under ECA's original terms of reference France, Portugal, Spain and the United Kingdom all came into ECA as full members, but with the proviso that they should become associate members when they "cease to have any territorial responsibilities in Africa." At its 1962 annual meeting, the commission voted to ask ECOSOC to amend ECA's terms of reference so that (1) France and the United Kingdom could be required to revert to associate membership and (2) Portugal and Spain could be dropped from the roster altogether. At its resumed 34th session in New York in December, the Economic and Social Council earned the ire of many African governments by referring the matter of the status of France, Spain and the United Kingdom back to ECA for further study, and rejecting outright a draft resolution that would have deprived Portugal of any association with ECA. A series of attacks on ECOSOC as an unrepresentative body resulted.

At Leopoldville, the African delegations renewed their demand that France and the United Kingdom be downgraded to associate membership and called anew for expulsion of Portugal and South Africa. The resolution on the UK and France also recommended that Spain be allowed to continue its ECA relationship as an associate, in response to that country's belated presentation of Fernando Poo and Rio Muni as new associate members.

Reports on African economic and social developments noted progress on some fronts, but chronicled no major breakthroughs, returning again and again to the conclusion that "the overall economic picture . . . is far from satisfactory." "Insufficient integration of national economies, the lack of diversification of production, low productivity and, consequently, low income levels and inadequate savings, together with malnutrition, poor health conditions and unsatisfactory educational level still remain the basic characteristics of Africa," the 1963 Commission report to ECOSOC concluded. On the other hand, the ECA secretariat's steady progress in collating meaningful statistical data on population growth, urbanization trends, and other vital subjects was again heralded as an essential preliminary to long-term economic planning.

Among the familiar problems for which the Commission members offer various conflicting explanations but no panaceas were the continuing deterioration in the terms of Africa's trade and the fluctuating world prices for Africa's primary products. Delegates' and observers' explanations of these phenomena ran the gamut from purely economic factors to a contention that trade was being stifled by the machinations of the "neo-colonialists." Similarly, consensus was easily reached on the vital importance of foreign aid, but there was prolonged debate on the need to relate such aid to overall economic planning in a given country.

African delegates complained that conditional aid often could not be freely utilized in meeting vital development needs; emphasized that aid programs should take into greater account the local costs as well as the international costs of development programs; urged more help in establishing "pre-integration" schemes as well as the larger-scale enterprises which tend to be the focus of project-oriented aid programs; and returned repeatedly to the argument that foreign assistance—whatever its form, its source and its auspices—must be increasingly related to African purposes.

Some delegates questioned the importance for Africa of worldwide international commodity agreements and stabilization scheme, referred to by UN Under Secretary for Economic and Social Affairs Philippe de Seynes in his keynote address. They expressed concern that the present commodity-by-commodity approach tends to favor "old established exporters to the detriment of the development of younger economies." African delegates, sensitive to any signs of a continuing colonial mentality, emphasized the necessity of more fundamental, long-term adjustments rather than stop-gap measures.

To many African spokesmen, diversification of African economies and expansion of intra-African trade must be priority goals if Africa is ever going to approach economic self-sufficiency. While recognizing that little economic complementarity now exists, delegates were optimistic about the possibilities of diversification and inter-African trade once transport, monetary, and administrative obstacles are removed or surmounted.

Toward this end, several ECA transportation studies have been undertaken, complementary to efforts in this field being undertaken by various African political groupings. A Ghanaian delegate expressed concern at Africa's "monetary balkanization," but the delegates were not inclined to take on this problem at the 1963 session.

A resolution called on the Secretariat to institute intensive studies on the major problems of establishing an African common market. Consideration of a second resolution dealing with the European Economic Community relationships brought members near an open break.

Delegates to "Africa's Economic Parliament," properly proud of the substantive ground they had covered and of the political pitfalls they had jointly agreed to steer around, went home convinced they had held a fitting prelude to the May conference of heads of state in Addis Ababa.
