New School Named for Bradford

Iowa Park school board met Monday for a business session in Metz Coffee Shop with John Clapp jr. presiding. Important item was naming of the elementary school in the southeast part of town that is under construction. By unanimous vote the school was named after one of the most loved and admired school men in the Iowa Park area—W. R. Bradford, longtime superintendent of local schools. Five board members called on Mr. Bradford that night and told him of their decision. Bradford resigned as superintendent here May 1953 after 33 years of service here. He and his late wife Chester came to Iowa Park in July 1920. He was with the school all that time except the years 1927 to 1930, when he was superintendent at Panhandle and traveled for Wichita School Supply Co. More than 1000 pupils were graduated from high school under his guidance. They have become doctors, lawyers, professional people, high ranking officers in the armed forces, successful businesspeople, good husbands and wives. Bradford was born near Springtown in Parker county. He quit school in the fifth grade to help with the family farm. At the age of 19 he re-entered school in the 5th grade at a rural school. He later attended Boyd high school and was graduated in 1912 from North Texas State Teachers college. His first teaching was done at Bridgeport. He was principal there for two years, then superintendent at Byers for three years, then came to Iowa Park. In 1927 Bradford received the BA degree from the University of Denver, Colo. He attended summer sessions at Texas Tech in Lubbock from 1937 to 1941 and received the master's degree. He found time to serve this town and community in many civic activities, and always stood ready to help any former student find a job or get enrolled in college or special school. After resigning here, Bradford taught three years in Randlett, Okla. He became associated with Jacks Insurance Agency here and presently with R. W. Hill Insurance Agency here. With the death of B. M. Dinsmore, longtime county superintendent, Bradford was appointed to the position. In 1960 he was elected for another term. The position will be consolidated with the county judge's office Jan. 1, 1963, and Bradford says he plans really to retire from school business at that time. W. R. Bradford has a daughter Mrs. John Guthrie and two grandchildren Jimmie and Margaret Ann, all of Denver.

SOIL CONSERVATION DISTRICT NEWS

Average costs for applying conservation practices through the Great Plains Conservation Program for 1963 have been determined, according to Elvy Sargent, Iowa Park soil conservationist.

County committee working on cost determinations were Lester E. Brooks, Bob Crocker, Ralph Swinford, Albert Brockriede and Vivian Andrews. Others on the committee but unable to attend the meeting were Rufus King, Emile Flusche, Howard Henderson and Joe Gope.

Cost-share practices in the program for 1963 are range seeding, brush control, farm ponds, terraces, diversion terraces, land leveling, waterways, erosion control structures, pasture planting, and fencing. Participants also plan all needed recurring practices.

Farms and ranches approved for planning by placing them in medium priority are operated by James R. Stewart, Tom Swanson, James Ludeke, Steve Gose, Dr. Ted Alexander, J. F. and James F. Foster.

A waterway was designed and staked for C. Birk estate farm, operated by Arnold Kiesling of Clara, by Soil Conservation Service.

We have responsibility of directing the minds and habits of our children while they are young. Encourage them to join worthwhile organizations, give them jobs to do, and spend more time with them. Work is the best therapy for juvenile delinquency. If there were no delinquent parents there would be no delinquent children.

Mrs. Gordon G. Clark brought the devotional, scripture reading from I Corinthians, followed with prayer.

Others taking part in the lesson were Mmes. Herman Mahler, C. J. Thurber, Carl Sullivan, Elgin Denny, Wayne Dunson, W. C. Albright.

The study offering will be used for local youth program. Thirty-eight members were dismissed with prayer.

Bonnie Denny circle met Tuesday morning in the home of Mrs. W. F. George with Mrs. W. C. Albright as co-hostess.

Program leader was Mrs. L. C. Perry. The program was entitled "Unesco." On the program were Mmes. W. E. Stockton, C. J. Simpson and W. C. Albright.

The members were asked to bring gifts and wrappings to take to the State Hospital for Christmas gifts.

Mrs. Stockton closed the meeting with prayer. Others present were Mmes. Gene Lowrey, James Sewell, J. D. Boucher, Clyde Winfrey, Walter Willard, Clarence Nolte, Elgin Denny, Otis Scobee, Fred Sledge, Lydia Hudson, Eldon Thompson, Wayne Dunson.

Royal Ambassador recognition service was held Monday evening, Nov. 5 in First Baptist church.

Boys reaching the rank of Lad were Gary Don Williams, Mike Leath, Jerry Williams, Dell Giliam, Randy Johnston. They were given the RA shirt and pin.

Boys attaining the rank of Pathfinder under the Pioneer program were Wendell Patterson, James Holm, Mike Dodd, Robert Watson. They received shirts.

James Holm was awarded a Ranger pin and a Hiker badge. Mike Dodd became a Trailblazer and received a pin.

Memories of hot summers in southeastern Persia (Iran) and wet disagreeable winters are offset by memories of the tremendous contrast between utter desolation and breath-taking scenery which people enjoy for about two weeks in the spring and fall, according to Mrs. J. T. Coleman, Iowa Park Road.

She and her husband, a petroleum engineer for Mobil Oil Co., and their three children — Billy 10, Becky 9 and Britton 7—recently returned from five years in Persia. They lived in the province of Khuzistan in the town of Masjid-Suliaman (MIS for short). The town is about 50 years old and grew up with the oil industry. It derived its name from Solomon's fire temple.

The area is at the foothills of the big Zagros mountain chain, which runs from Russian almost to the Persian Gulf, and is considered a wasteland. Mrs. Coleman said that something almost like a miracle takes place with the advent of spring and fall.

Almost overnight the barren hillsides are carpeted with grass, poppies and tulips in the spring, and wheat in the fall. She thinks the beauty of the landscape exceeds expression with pen or brush.

The Coleman family lived in a company housing unit which was not segregated from the Persians. They had modern conveniences, including an air-conditioner. During the summer months the air-conditioner would stop running because of the intense heat. This necessitated spraying it with the water hose to cool it.

The Coleman children attended the Overseas School for children of oil personnel. English was used in the school, even though English, American, Dutch and some French children attended.

"Food is something of a problem in Persia," said Mrs. Coleman. It is imported from America, Brazil, Australia, France and England. The family especially enjoyed unleavened bread made with whole-wheat flour and water at a commercial bakery in the Bazaar. The dough is worked into flat thin cakes about 2 feet long and 10 inches wide. The baker slips the cakes against the sides and top of a dome-shaped mud or brick oven which has a charcoal fire underneath. When done, the bread is removed from the oven with tongs.

The village people in Khuzistan are farmers and herdsmen. A man's wealth is measured in sheep or goats. Wheat is the principal crop in southern Iran, and rice is the main crop in the northern area. Every arable spot, regardless of size, is utilized. Wheat is cut with hand scythes, the bundles are placed on donkeys and taken to the threshing floor where the grain is threshed by donkeys and cows.

Villagers live in one- or two-room mud or brick houses with one door and small light-holes. They eat rice and mast, similar to yogurt. They are fond of mutton, lamb and chicken but do not care for beef. According to Mrs. Coleman, Persian food is delicious; it is highly seasoned with turmeric, garlic and onions.

The gabah or carpet is everything to the Persians. Many sleep on it, eat on it and entertain guests on it. They roll it up and put it in a niche and consider their housecleaning done.

Among the souvenirs the Colemans brought back are bubble pipes—one used by the poor and the other by the wealthier class. The former is about two feet high and made of clay and wood. The long flexible stem is arranged so the smoke is cooled and purified by passing through water. Men of the villages squat around drinking tea and smoking one pipe. For the sake of sanitation they place their hands around the mouthpiece so their mouths never touch it.

Other souvenirs with special significance are two hand-blown glass tear vases reputed to be over 400 years old. Tradition says that when an Armenian knew he was going to war he bought his wife a tear vase. When she cried of loneliness for him she caught the tears in her vase. When her man returned, he could measure her love for him by the water in the vase. In case he did not return, the tears were good advertising for another husband.

An old brass tea set consisting of tray, an ornate samovar and a bowl to catch the hot water in to weaken the tea, is one of the Colemans' prized possessions. The samovar originally came from Russia and was quite plain, but when it fell into the hands of the Persians they carved intricate designs on it.

In the Coleman living room is a large copper tray almost four feet wide which serves as a coffee table. The Persians use such a table when they entertain guests, filling it with rice and kabob. Guests squat around the table to eat. They have a tin-washed copper tray hanging in the dining room, a tin-washed water ewer and large bucket sometimes used by the tribesmen to carry fire. Carvings on all these pieces are beautiful and intricate.

Interesting pieces of Persian wearing apparel brought here by the Colemans are a shoghar coat worn by shepherd men and boys, and a black sugarloaf hat for men. They also have three rugs, several hassocks acquired in Lebanon and two camel saddles from Egypt.

Persian cities are quite modern. Tehran, the capital city, Ahwaz, Shiraz and Isfahan are beautiful and up to date. Isfahan is so stunning the Persians refer to it as "half of the world."

Most beautiful spot in Iran according to Mrs. Coleman is a little village in the eastern part called Eghlid. It nestles in the mountains between huge groves of English walnut and poplar trees. Here the famous Persian melon is grown; it is crisp, crunchy, sweet, white-meated, with a subtle flavor. Watermelons, cantaloupes, peaches and grapes are grown here.

Isfahan has been the center of culture and industry for many years. It is known for its mosques built 600 years ago and the cathedral of Jolfa.

Mrs. Coleman is the former Miss Betty Griffin of Dallas. She was graduated from Highland Park high school, attended North Texas State and the University of Tulsa.

Coleman is a native of Hillsboro. He was graduated from Allen Academy and University of Tulsa. He is equipment engineer for Mobil Oil company with offices in the Staley building.
