Lions Club Will Show Film on Uranium

There will be a movie shown at the First Methodist Church on Monday, January 9, by the Quitaque Lions Club. The picture will be about the first Uranium mine to be found in Moab, Utah. Charles Steen, the first man to strike it rich with uranium, is furnishing the film for the Lions. This picture will show the beginning of the operations following the discovery and processing the uranium.

This is the movie of the fabulous Mi-Vida mine in Moab, Utah which Steen first discovered and later went on to become the first 'uraniumaire', and is today said to be worth upwards of one hundred million dollars.

Anyone interested in seeing the movie may contact one of the Lions members as the Lions feel it will be interesting to this locality, particularly since rich uranium ore has been found in the range of hills five miles west of Quitaque.

Farm Groups Held Meeting at Silverton

A gathering of agricultural leaders, representatives from Extension Service, S.C.S., A.S.C. and F.H.A. was held in Silverton. This meeting was in the form of a clinic, and was arranged by Ralph E. Griffiths, County Supervisor, Farmers Home Administration and Carman Rhode, Work Unit Conservation, Soil Conservation Service.

This meeting was an outgrowth of the interest of farmers in "soil building" through "soil and water conservation." Following the meeting, the group visited the farm of Robert F. Spilman. Mr. Spilman is a Soil Conservation District Cooperator, with a number of soil conservation practices planned but not yet completed.

Farmers Home Administration is authorized to make loans to farmers for soil and water improvement practices. The practices for which soil and water loans are made must be in line with Soil Conservation Service and Extension Service recommendations. A part of the cost of facilities, improvements and practices planned may be earned by the farmer through participation in the ACP program under the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Soil and Water Conservation loans were made possible by legislation passed by the 83rd Congress. Loans may be made for such purposes as building terraces, developing and sodding waterways and digging ponds in connection with handling water run-off. Farmers are becoming more conscious of the value of water and controlling it on the ground Moore says. In some areas, sub-soiling is necessary in order to enable better water penetration of the soil. Loans are being made for this purpose. Loans may also be used for brush removal, the establishment and improvement of permanent pastures, well drilling, land leveling, and for the purchase of pumps and irrigation equipment.

Loans are made by the Farmers Home Administration, primarily out of funds advanced by private lending institutions. The government insures the repayment of the loan. The repayment period on loans individuals can be up to 20 years, and can be secured by liens on chattels or real estate depending on the amount and length of the loan.

Information about Soil and Water Conservation loans can be obtained from the local County Agent, representatives of the Soil Conservation Service and the local Farmers Home Administration office. Applications for loans are to be made at the county office of the Farmers Home Administration. The 3-member County Committee of the Farmers Home Administration will certify as to the eligibility of applicants for Soil and Water Conservation loans.

Editor's Speak

FREEDOM IS AN ABSOLUTE

Undersecretary of State Hoover recently said: "There are few dramatic demonstrations of the vitality and resourcefulness of the private incentive system in the world today than that which taken place in the petroleum field." He went on to point out that those nations which have nationalized oil "have been constantly technical, financial, and management difficulties." On the other hand, the economies of the countries where private enterprise has been allowed to operate the oil industry "have developed to an unprecedented degree."

Another government official, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, quoted Mr Hoover's views in a speech of his own. He said that it all comes down to this: Those political systems which allow freedom for the individual to do his own planning, rather than to have his government do it for him, provide the greatest happiness to the people and the greatest progress. All history bears this out.

Then Mr Wornser added a warning, saying: "But economic and political freedom is easily lost. Once it is difficult to regain." That warning should be remembered by all of us. There are groups within the oil industry, as within other industries, which sometimes advocate "a little government control" in the belief that it would solve some problems of other which is troubling them. That is a dangerous and misguided attitude. For one thing it is sure to lead to taxes and controls, once they start, and on no matter how anyone gets caught.

Freedom—any kind of freedom—is an absolute. You can't divide it and still keep it.

TWO KINDS OF CAPITALISTIC SOCIETY

"Only men produce capital," says The Freeman. "Only men save and trade. Other species do not have capital. And they do not form societies; they form herds, flocks and schools. Capitalistic society therefore a redundancy; there is no other kind of society."

There are, however, very different and opposed methods by which capital is produced and invested. In a free system this is accomplished voluntarily. Men save and put their money where they choose in the securities of corporations or government, in land in some other business. The choice is up to the individual. No one tells him what he can or cannot do with his money, so long as the investment is lawful.

In a totalitarian society there must also be a steady investment of capital. The enormous difference is that the state is the only investor. In one way or another the money is siphoned off from the people and the state decides where it shall go. And it decides what shall be produced, what shall be sold, and at what price. The individual is helpless, and entirely without the power of decision.

In other words, there are two kinds of capitalism—democratic capitalism and totalitarian capitalism. One protects and enhances individual freedom; the other breeds of prison and human slavery.

HOLDING HIM DOWN!

WHY YOUR MILK BILL IS SO HIGH

In many places milk prices are set artificially high by law or by monopolies sanctioned by law. Say the editors of Changing Times, The Kipling Magazine. Practically every innovation that would make milk cheaper and more convenient to buy has been fought by big dairies, farm and union groups and hampered by obsolete sanitary regulations.

Ten states fix consumes prices and over 50 states scattered through the center of the country still regulate the supply and the price paid to farmers in adjacent farm areas known as milk sheds. Milk produced in low-cost dairy areas is deliberately prevented from flowing into high cost areas where there is a potential demand. And new and more efficient methods of packaging and distribution are everywhere hampered by entrenched interests.

High prices to local farmers naturally encourage them to produce more. In a free market this increased production would bring lower prices and eventually cause a cutback in production. But since the market is not free, high prices tend to cause overproduction and the federal government obligingly buys the excess and stores it or gives it away.

Artificially high prices in local milk sheds might be expected to draw cheaper, more efficiently produced milk from big dairy states, but this is prevented by several schemes. One is known as compensatory payments. If a handler in a large city on the East Coast wants to buy a tankload of cheaper milk from the Midwest, he may do so but must pay his local farmers the difference between the price of the imported milk and his city's price.

Another way of keeping milk from reaching its best markets consists of a maze of sanitary regulations that in many cases are really economic barriers in disguise. It is essential that health departments in every city and state check milk for purity and inspect dairy farms and bottling plants. But in many places the regulations are used, not only to insure wholesome milk, but to protect the interests of local farmers, big dairies and unions.

The commonest complaint is that health departments won't accept milk from outside areas even though it is produced under comparable sanitary regulations. Some cities establish geographic limits beyond which they will not go to inspect farms or handling plants.

There are restrictions on packaging and selling too. Big dairies with home-delivery routes and also milk drivers' unions naturally want the price of store milk kept high. They also oppose paper cartons, half-gallon and gallon containers, vending machines and milk dispensers. Thus despite the fact that the cost of delivering milk to a store is 3 or 4 cents less than that of delivering to a home, prices are the same for both in many cities. In others, the differential is only a cent or two while in a few cities, the law of economics is completely flouted, and paper cartons bought in stores cost more than bottles delivered to homes. But in big cities where free competition has won out, store milk is 2 to 5 cents a quart cheaper.

What the Consumer Can Do It's up to the consumer to make a change. Support the U.S. Public Health Service's modern set of health regulations for milk which gives citizens of any city or country protection, and its system facilitating the free flow of milk everywhere. Attend public hearings to protect price fixing. Take advantage of price savings when and wherever possible. Lastly, encourage those few enterprising businessmen who are trying to break through the network of monopolies fixing milk prices.

END OF THE '78"

The phonograph record familiar to more than a generation of listeners is on the way to oblivion. Early next year at least one major company will stop cutting '78's those records which revolve around a turn table 78 times per minute. But watch the progress of the record making only 16 revolutions. It is used mostly for "talking books" now, but it is about to catch on for other types of material, too. A new record player installed in automobiles uses the 16 exclusively. — CHANGING TIMES.

The continent of Antarctica is the last unexplored frontier. Although discovered in 1820, no country has successfully attempted to colonize it.

In February 1947, during flight operations of Operation HIGHJUMP, U.S. Navy flight crews discovered warm lakes in the Antarctic in an area where the ice is known to be hundreds of feet deep.

During the International Geophysical Year, 1957-58, twelve nations, including the United States and Soviet Russia, will inhabit the Antarctic for a short period to study the various phenomena of the southernmost sector of the earth.

Agricultural Fillers

With winter coming on, it is time to consider management practices which will keep forage production and livestock numbers in balance.

Poultry infested with lice grow at a slower rate, are unthrifty and produce fewer eggs. One percent lindane in an oil solution makes an effective roost paint. A repeat application should be made in 10 days to two weeks.

Winter pastures should be grazed down rapidly and evenly. Pasture grazing will permit the plants to make their regrowth and give top production.

If small grains are to be harvested for grain, grazing should be stopped between February 15 and March 1 depending upon the area of the state but regardless of the location before the plants begin to joint. Continued grazing will cut grain yields.

The Texas upland cotton acreage allotment for 1956 is 7,410,893 acres. A reduction of 201,886 acres from the 1955 allotment. County and individual farm allotments will be announced in the near future.

Agricultural exports from the United States for the July-August-September quarter of the current fiscal year were 20 percent higher than for the same period last year. The value of cotton exports, however, was only 35 percent of the total for the same period of

THE NEW BEL AIR SPORT COUPE

Who wouldn't mistake this new Chevrolet for a high-priced car!

It looks strictly "upper bracket" with its bold new Motoramic styling . . . its longer, lower hood . . . its proud new full-width grille.

But, even beyond the costly appearance of its beautiful Body by Fisher, Chevy gives the high-priced cars a run for their money. It brings you lightning acceleration for safer passing. Horsepower ranges up to 205! All engines now have hydraulic-hushed valve lifters.

Besides, you get safety door latches in all models. You can also have seat belts, with or without shoulder harness, and instrument panel padding at extra cost.

ACROSS THE DESK

From the Cedar Rapids Tribune, Cedar Rapids, Iowa: The sudden agreement by Soviet Russia to withdraw its troops from Austria has made an unmistakable impression in Italy, France and several other countries included in the NATO alliance. Dispatches from these countries reveal this trend, without a doubt, and the United States might as well face the developing issue.

This issue may not come to a head for several months and it may either be circumvented or brought to the forefront even more quickly by the Big Four meeting. Nevertheless, the belief that Russia's new rulers are actually in favor of peace is lessening the sense of need for NATO in several European countries.

This is reflected in the recent election of Giovanni Gronchi to the Presidency in Italy. Gronchi is a neutralist and has never been much in favor of Italy's commitments to NATO.

Debate in the Chamber of Deputies in Paris recently has shown that Moscow's agreement to evacuate Austria has increased sentiment in France opposing the rearmament of Germany, which is another NATO matter.

In addition, some of the U. S. military officials in Italy say the apparent willingness of the Christian Democratic Party in Italy to accept Left-Wing Socialists as working partners means that Italy's adherence to the principles of NATO are endangered. The Left-Wing Socialists have opposed Italy's ties with NATO.

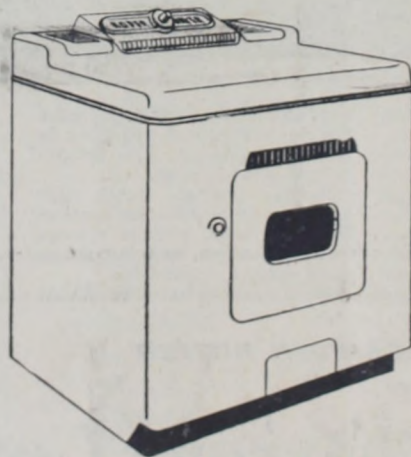

Since 1945, the United States has contributed more than $3,000,000,000 in grants, loans and other forms, to assist in the reconstruction of Italy. This expenditure has been made in order to strengthen Italy so that she can be a strong member of the anti-Communist bloc of nations. The fact that the Christian Democrats seem to be moderating their views, concerning loyalty to Nato, and opposition to those opposed to it, might constitute an undermining of the anti-Communist orientation of Italy.

From the Tempe Daily News, Tempe, Arizona: The United States of America were visualized as so many republics, determined on handling their own affairs and looking to the Federal government only for international policy and guidance in matters of a strictly national character. We have moved so far away from that original principle that we have reached a point where all powers begin and end in a Federal government . . . It's a sorry come-down for the American heritage; and if it isn't to sink any lower people had better begin getting up on their hind legs and speaking up for it."
