Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Carter and Mrs. Floyce McCracken drove to Muleshoe Tuesday of this week to visit their brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Carter. Both of the Ray Carters are in poor health, it is reported.

Alternative For Storm Damaged Cotton

A large storm accompanied by heavy washing rains and hail hit portions of Briscoe County causing heavy damage to cotton.

County Extension Agent Dirk Aaron says farmers are now faced with a tough decision on whether to replant cotton or shift to an alternate crop.

"In some cases, farmers still have time to replant to cotton if they use faster maturing varieties and cultural practices that encourage earliness," he believes. "In some areas, however, growers are already looking for alternative crops."

Among alternate crops, farmers might consider for replanting are grain or forage sorghum, soybeans and sunflowers.

Cotton producers who incorporated Treflan or similar pre-plant herbicides have generally eliminated the possibility of growing sorghum on that land this year. Even if they used a pre-emerge herbicide, the agent said, they would be running a risk to plant sorghum.

The surface-applied chemicals are leached into the soil by rainfall, though the depth of penetration varies with the type of herbicide, texture of soil and amount of rain.

To circumvent the problem on the heavier textured soils, a buster planter set to display the top four to five inches of soil can establish a seed furrow in herbicide-free soil, the Extension Agent recommended.

Hybrid selection is also an important consideration. Medium-late maturing hybrids can still be planted throughout the area. However, the early maturing hybrids are usually a better choice for the dryland areas south of Lubbock. Producers are cautioned that late sorghum plantings will be susceptible to midge damage, and they should be prepared to check for damaging infestations to apply insecticides if needed.

Sunflower also constitutes a good alternative crop, Aaron suggested.

This crop is tolerant of the "yellow herbicide" and can be planted as late as 100 days prior to the first normal frost date and still mature a seed crop. June plantings have a yield potential of approximately 500 to 1,500 pounds per acre, depending on soil type, growing conditions, fertility and moisture availability. A publication outlining planting rates and other cultural practices may be obtained at the County Extension Agent's office.

Aaron noted that soybeans are frequently used as a replacement for hail-damaged cotton in irrigated areas. This crop is also tolerant to the preplant incorporated cotton herbicides and can be planted over a wide range of dates.

Pointing to results of a four-year study conducted by researchers at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center at Lubbock, he says that good yields may be obtained from late June to early July plantings.

"Since soybeans are sensitive to day length," he adds, "late plantings result in short stalk growth of all varieties and the combines miss a good portion of lowest seed pods. This problem can be partially circumvented by the use of varieties that fall into the late Group IV and Group V maturity groups.

Cultural practices which encourage stalk growth in late plantings include higher seeding rates (65 to 70 pounds of good quality seed per acre), planting a single row per bed and early irrigation.

"It is especially important to avoid periods of moisture stress in late planted beans," he emphasized.

"Selecting an alternate crop is always an unpleasant chore," Aaron observed. "Fortunately, there are crops such as grain sorghum, sunflower and soybeans which can be planted relatively late in the season to partially compensate for the loss of the primary crop."

June 19, 1925—Crop conditions in the Quitaque country were never better. Old settlers say that they have never seen better cotton at this time of the year. There is a slightly larger acreage and the cotton is as early as it is many miles south. The stalks in many fields are now six to eight inches high and squares are much in evidence... Immigration Law Being Rewritten

Senator Alan K. Simpson (R-WY) is back with what has now become a perennial shot at rewriting U. S. immigration law. Similar efforts by Simpson and Representative Romano L. Mazzoli (D-KY) fell victim to pressures from various interest groups, including the National Council of Agricultural Employers (NCAE) in 1982, 1983 and 1984. The newly introduced legislation, S-1200, contains revisions designed to improve its chances for passage by the 99th Congress. Representative Mazzoli's colleagues in the House are said to be sharply divided over the immigration reform issue and Mazzoli, who was conspicuously absent from a recent Simpson press conference, has not yet introduced a companion bill in the House. Passage of the Simpson bill in the Senate, which approved earlier versions of the measure by large margins in 1982 and 1983, appears likely. Simpson has

Immigration Law Being Rewritten

Senator Alan K. Simpson (R-WY) is back with what has now become a perennial shot at rewriting U. S. immigration law. Similar efforts by Simpson and Representative Romano L. Mazzoli (D-KY) fell victim to pressures from various interest groups, including the National Council of Agricultural Employers (NCAE) in 1982, 1983 and 1984. The newly introduced legislation, S-1200, contains revisions designed to improve its chances for passage by the 99th Congress.

Representative Mazzoli's colleagues in the House are said to be sharply divided over the immigration reform issue and Mazzoli, who was conspicuously absent from a recent Simpson press conference, has not yet introduced a companion bill in the House.

Passage of the Simpson bill in the Senate, which approved earlier versions of the measure by large margins in 1982 and 1983, appears likely. Simpson has said he would hold brief Judiciary Committee hearings this month before pressing for a Senate vote prior to the August congressional recess.

According to Ed Dean, a former NCAE board member and Field Service Director for charter-member Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. of Lubbock, S-1200 is only "slightly less onerous" to agriculture than previous bills, although some of the changes can be described as "improvements."

For one thing, Dean says, criminal sanctions against employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens have been dropped from the new bill. Civil penalties remain, however, ranging from $100 to $2,000 for first offenders to as much as $10,000 when a "pattern or practice" of violation can be shown.

Also, he continues, Simpson for the first time has made the employment verification and record-keeping provisions of his bill voluntary. This is an obvious concession to employers, Dean says, "but it's tarnished by the fact that employers failing to examine identity and work eligibility documents would forfeit an affirmative defense against a charge of unlawful hiring."

Referring to an illegal alien law recently signed into law by the governor of Tennessee, Dean says, "Maybe we should consider ourselves fortunate that Simpson isn't taking his cues from the Tennessee legislature."

Under the Tennessee law any person or firm convicted of knowingly hiring an illegal alien would be "forever barred from doing business in Tennessee" and subject to a one-year jail sentence and/or a $1,000 fine for each violation.

Many people have believed they could make rain by imitating thunder.

Acne Disease Can Be Severe, Disfiguring

Acne can be a severe and disfiguring disease. It is generally considered a disease of adolescents; however, persons can be affected into their 30s and 40s. Males tend to get more severe acne than females. Acne develops in the sebaceous glands around hair. Each hair contains one or more glands that produce an oily mixture called sebum which normally goes through the hair follicle to the skin surface. At adolescence, the sebaceous glands grow larger and produce more sebum, especially in the face, chest and back area. Acne occurs when the normal route of sebum to the skin surface is blocked. The sebum builds up in the gland, mixes with dead cells and finally ruptures to form an inflamed cyst under the skin. Scarring can result from these cysts.

Acne is not caused by a poor diet, dirt, or an oily complexion. It is the oil that remains in the follicles that determines the severity of the disease. Factors that aggravate acne include emotional stress, fatigue, cosmetics, drugs such as iodides or bromides and certain foods.

Acne has traditionally been treated with antibiotics and cleansing; however, a new drug, a vitamin A derivative called Accutane, is now available. The drug is taken orally for 4-5 months. Even severe lesions and those resistant to antibiotics in the past disappear. The patient continues to improve for another month after cessation of therapy.

Accutane works by decreasing oil output, but this will return to normal within 1-2 months after the drug's discontinuance, while the acne remains gone. The drug also decreases immunologic reactions and inflammatory processes affecting skin and mucus membranes and stabilizes cells.

The worst side effect of Accutane is its expense—about $100 a month, or $360 to $400 for the four-month course. If the acne remains better for years, this may, in the long run, be a cheap remedy.

Texas FU Members Involved In Wheat Board Expansion

The Northwest Texas and Panhandle area nine-man Texas Wheat Producers Board was expanded to a state-wide fifteen-man board including five Texas Farmers Union members across the state. The election was held in April.

Members of the canvassing committee for selecting six new board members from eight candidates and write-in names were Floyd L. Poole, Potter County Judge; Paul Gross, District I Extension Director, both of Amarillo; Delores Hibbs, Texas Department of Agriculture, Attorney, Austin, and C. L. Edwards, Texas Wheat Producers Board member, Panhandle.

Producer-elected Board members elected to represent the 220 county new area that now accounts for 45% of the state's wheat production include Ben

VACCINATIONS STILL NEEDED TO PREVENT INFECTIOUS DISEASE

Immunizations save U. S. citizens an estimated billion dollars a year in health care costs—more than any other preventive health care practice. These savings illustrate the remarkable effectiveness and good sense of immunizations, according to Dr. Robert Bernstein, Texas Commissioner of Health. "The widespread use of vaccines in the U. S. has had a tremendous impact on disease prevention. We have seen the number of diphtheria cases reduced from 206,939 cases in 1921 to only one case in 1984. Polio cases have decreased from 21,269 cases in 1952 to only four cases in 1984," Dr. Bernstein said.

He added that our past success in controlling these diseases does not mean that immunizations are unnecessary. "Quite the contrary, if children are not immunized, we risk new epidemics of infectious disease," he said.

In Texas, 1,006 cases of vaccine-preventable disease were reported in 1984. These included 642 cases of measles, 219 cases of mumps, 75 cases of rubella, 60 cases of pertussis resulting in three deaths, and 10 cases of tetanus.

To help prevent cases of vaccine-preventable disease, Dr. Bernstein advised parents to check family immunization records to be sure they are complete and up-to-date. "Parents whose children are not immunized should call a doctor or local health department to make arrangements to receive the vaccinations," he said.

In Texas, state law requires immunizations for polio, tetanus, measles, rubella, mumps and diphtheria before children may register in public schools. In addition, the Texas Department of Health and American Academy of Pediatrics recommend pertussis shots for children beginning at two months of age.
