High-Speed Computers Plan Future Cities

The City of the Future will have all forms of transportation underground, all goods and purchases will be sent to the home via high-speed shipping tubes into special receiver cupboards, and green parks will be within walking distance of every urban dwelling.

These are some of the changes envisioned in 21st Century cities by L. Constantinos A. Doxiadis of Athens, one of the world's foremost city planners and regional developers.

Currently, using the advantages of high speed Sperry Rand UNIVAC computers, Dr. Doxiadis and his international Company of Doxiadis Associates are engaged in redevelopment of some of the most congested cities and regional areas of the world and in planning the orderly development of new centers of population.

Dr. Doxiadis' specialty is EKISTICS—the science of human settlements—derived from an old Greek word to describe the problems of the interrelationship of man with his environment. Ekistics encompasses the analysis and evaluation of human settlements and the influence upon them of economic, social, political, administrative, technical, and artistic and cultural factors.

One of the largest projects underway today by the Doxiadis group is a regional study starting from the urban Detroit Area and extending to embrace the Great Lakes Megalopolis, the urban corridor running from Milwaukee through Chicago, Detroit, Toledo, and Cleveland to Pittsburgh. By the year 2000, Dr. Doxiadis believes this area will be a greater population cluster than the Eastern Megalopolis running from Boston to Washington.

To cope with the enormous mass of figures and other data involved in such planning, the Greek concern has found the electronic computer to be an Replanning of cities and the orderly development of new centers of population are one of the newest and most dramatic applications for computers today.

Indispensable ally in the solution of complex problems. Programs developed at the Doxiadis Associates Computer Center in Athens are transmitted for processing to a large scale UNIVAC 1107 Computer at the University of Stuttgart, West Germany.

In a typical city planning project, the computer receives a mass of data concerning the population of the area with considerable detail on its various characteristics. To this is added information on the physical environment and the systems network—transportation facilities, highways, railroads, etc. and essential utility services such as electric power, gas and water supply.

From this information—which represents an inventory of the existing situation—the computer performs initially a "mapping service," providing graphs for the visual interpretation of the data. The data is further subjected to statistical analysis and the underlying characteristics of the existing situation are determined. In planning for the future, use is made of mathematical models providing the future characteristics of the population, predicting its movements, composition and accompanying economic phenomena.

Modeling enables a multiplicity of assumptions to be tried out and the respective solutions to be placed under the scrutiny of a broad range of experts. Planners are thus pioneering a way of penetrating systematically into the darkness of the future through interdisciplinary thinking.

Shirttail Sermon

Text: I Corinthians 13

The "good old days" are gone. Nostalgia is pleasant and happy memories are a great thing. But the swift seasons pass and a new world is at hand.

Once glance backward before we look forward to a new year: we ask ourselves a straight question—what made life worth living in the year that is now closing? There are all sorts of subquestions: What gave us happiness? What enabled us to pull through sorrow or misfortune? What kept up our courage?

This is the answer to our questions: "faith, hope, and love." Is that not true? These three carried us through, gave us a measure of happiness, made life worth living. They will also make the new year alive with promise.

Faith gives a man a strong and steadfast stance. Faith, as with Abraham, makes a man venture some. Faith quickens a man's vision so that he sees the promises of a better day from afar. Faith lays hold of your life. Faith in God lays hold of life eternal. By our faith the new year becomes alive with promise.

The farmer who has faith in his seed, in the sun, in the soil, has hope of a harvest. Faith in the purposes and power of God kindles the hope which makes the new year alive with promise.

And there is love, the greatest of the three. Think upon Corinthians 13 and find assurance that involvement in love works love's wonderful changing power in all the areas of life. Love, powerful and permanent, will make the new year alive with promise.

COUPLE ESTABLISHES HOME IN PLAINVIEW FOLLOWING THEIR RECENT WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Ray Payne are residing at 1009 Travis in Plainview following their recent marriage and wedding trip to New Mexico. Mrs. Payne is the former Sammie Sue Johnson, daughter of Mrs. Lorene Johnson, 1208 Smythe in Plainview, and Clayton Johnson of Quitaque. Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Payne of Lockney are the bridegroom's parents.

Branch president, James A. Measles, of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, performed the double ring ceremony in the Plainview Branch Chapel. The altar was decorated with red and white poinsettias.

Presided in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white silk crepe dress styled with long tapered sleeves. Her tiara headdress of Alencon lace secured the tulle net veil. On a white Bible, given to the bride by the groom's mother, she carried a white orchid encircled with pikie carnations. For something borrowed she wore a cameo pin belonging to her grandmother. It has been worn at weddings by three generations.

Bride's attendants were her sisters, Miss Tommie Lou Johnson, Quitaque and Miss Janis Kay Johnson of Lubbock. Their dresses were fashioned of red crepe styled with bell shaped sleeves. They wore matching footwear and red pillbox headpieces completed with white tulle net. Bouquets were of white carnations.

Joe David Payne of Quitaque, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Selected music was presented by Mrs. J. D. Christian, organist and Mrs. L. E. Rhoderick, soloist.

Colors of red and white were used in table decorations and refreshments. The table was covered with white net over a white linen cloth. Red punch was served from a cutlass bowl and the tiered wedding cake was topped with confection bells. The reception was held at 1208 Smythe with Misses Tommie Lou and Janis Kay Johnson presiding at the table.

For travel the bride selected a pink and black dacron suit and black patent accessories. She graduated at Quitaque High School in 1967 and finished a course in Court Reporting at Southwest Business College in Plainview.

Payne is a graduate of Lockney High and employed as hair stylist and barber at 1513 W. 5th.
