New Crops To Play Vital Role

New crops have played a vital role in boosting our nation's agriculture. Some 200 years ago, for example, soybeans and wheat were new crops. Now they are staples of the industry.

It's important that we encourage the development of additional new non-traditional crops and that we remove barriers that might stand in the way of producing them.

One of today's new crops is kenaf, a woody fiber plant and a cousin of cotton. Kenaf stands about 10 to 14 feet tall, looks like bamboo and can easily be grown close to established paper mills with dwindling wood supplies. It offers an affordable alternative to increasingly costly newsprint and other paper products.

Kenaf pulp, can be substituted for wood in making high quality newsprint with a few if any changes needed to existing manufacturing equipment. It can be grown where cotton is grown and harvested with equipment similar to sugar cane harvesters.

The need for a good domestic source of newsprint is underscored by the fact that foreign manufacturers have moved in to capture almost 60 percent of our newsprint market.

For years, the U.S. Department of Agriculture knew about the potential for kenaf, but until recent years there was little incentive to develop it.

Three years ago, I joined forces with Senator Dennis DeConcini of Arizona to push an

Computer Training Offered For Farmers

Although financial planning has always been an important tool for farmers and ranchers, as conditions in agriculture have declined, financial planning has become increasingly emphasized by lenders, said Dr. Jackie G. Smith, agricultural economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Lubbock.

The Extension service has developed the TAMWFARM (Texas A&M Whole Farm Analysis and Record Management) spreadsheet program which makes it possible for individuals to financially plan for their farm or ranch operation.

On August 23-25, the Extension service will hold a short course for producers, training them to do whole farm/ranch planning and financial management using the computer.

The course will begin at 1 p.m. August 23 and end at 3 p.m. August 25. It will be taught by Extension economists and be held on the Texas State Technical Institute campus west of Sweetwater.

There will be a $125 charge for each participant. This will cover four meals, refreshments and educational materials. In order to insure hands-on computer use and a high staff/participant ratio, there is a limit on the number of participants.

Financial statements which can be used in annual production planning, loan applications and other management decisions can be compiled for a farm or ranch using systems such as TAMWFARM. "The spreadsheet makes it possible to run several different plans for comparison," said Smith.

TAMWFARM calculates cash flow, net worth, income statements and financial ratio analysis on a 12-month projected basis. The projected financial plan is constructed from crop and livestock budgets which can be changed to reflect each farm's situation.

More information can be obtained by contacting your county Extension agent, or from Smith at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center at Lubbock, telephone (806) 746-6101.

by Thelma Gafford

There is a new addition to the grounds at Valley -- a nice one, I might add. A new V-A-L-L-E-Y entrance sign is being completed to add to the beautiful grounds. Drive out and take a look.
 Another addition is the boys working out for football. The Summer has ended for them and the coaches. It's work, work, work for them, before it's all over, they'll be glad for school to start. But those guys wouldn't have it any other way. Just ask them. We wouldn't either, though. I can't wait until Sept. 2nd, that's when those kids of ours turn into nail-chewing, fire-spitting, bolt-action, lighting force gridirons. I'm talking mean here! No-nonsense head-banging football players. Patriot Power, that's what I'm saying. The boys are ready, the coaches are ready, we, the fans are ready, for the season to get underway.
 I wish them a good season, but more than that, I wish them to come out better boys and men for having each other to learn from, to respect, to rely on.
 During workout days, the team gets to cool off at the swimming pool. You'd think though that after a vigorous drill session they'd be too tired to do anything, but not these guys. If anything, a workout gets their spirits rollin'. All in all, we have got a great bunch of boys (and girls) and we're proud of them. So even though we're sorry your summer is cut short, you guys get out there and get tough, football tough, and know we're behind you 100%.

Tips from the Electronic Industries Association

A Plug for Electronic Devices

Q. How can I use cables, plugs, jacks and connectors to expand my VCR and audio system, or install a telephone system?

A. You can install most electronic products; expand your uses with headphones or amplifiers, hook up several TV sets to one antenna, or put a telephone in every room; convert your TV to stereophonic sound or create a multiple speaker system; and replace worn out cables and connectors.

Q. How do I know if I can do these things myself?

A. Read all the information that came with your product and perhaps ask your electronics dealer for advice. Don't try to do the job yourself if it involves opening up the works or you're warned off by product instructions. ALWAYS unplug the product before you work on it.

New Endorsement Standards

The Federal Reserve Board has adopted endorsement standards for all financial institutions effective September 1, 1988. This will enable these institutions to more readily identify the depository institution (the institution where the item is deposited by the customer) to which the returned check or notice must be sent.

The area from the trailing edge of the check to 1.5 inches from the trailing edge is reserved for the depository institution's customer signature or endorsement stamp. (See illustration.) Does your endorsement stamp comply with these standards? The remainder of the check is reserved for the endorsement of the depository institution and subsequent collecting financial institutions. You should benefit from the faster return of checks if you protect the legibility of the depository institution's endorsement. Failure to follow these endorsement standards could result in your incurring a financial loss. Should you have any questions, please contact your bank or financial institution.

Time for things to get going again with the start of School here on September 1, and two days until the first Holiday weekend. . . . Pro football underway and time for the non-football fan to get on with the work while the rest of us watch TV. . . . How You Can Adopt A Wild Horse

Question: Is it true anyone can adopt a wild horse or burro from out West?

Answer: Yes! The U.S. Department of the Interior Bureau of Land Management puts up wild horses and burros for adoption at all times of the year. These horses and burros are from herds on public lands in the West. If the herd becomes too large for the area on which it grazes, the Bureau takes the excess animals and puts them up for "adoption." That way, the entire wild herd has enough food and space to roam.

Here's what the cowboys of today can expect when they adopt a wild horse or burro:

- The animals roam on public lands in the West, so they aren't accustomed to people. You can share in the excitement of taming a wild horse much in the same way the cowboys did in the days of the Wild West. However, you shouldn't think of yourself as a bronco buster. With kindness, patience and gentleness, these horses can be tamed and trained just as their domestic counterparts.

- An individual must be at least 18 years of age and have adequate facilities and means of transportation to provide humane treatment for a wild horse or burro.

- Parents or legal guardians may adopt a wild horse or burro and allow children to assist in caring and training the animal. Many young people use these animals for 4-H projects.

- An adoption fee of $125 per horse or $75 per burro is charged at the adoption center. You will be responsible for the cost of transporting the animal and for all costs involved in its upkeep, including veterinarian charges.

- Every excess wild horse or burro offered for adoption has been examined to insure its soundness and good health. The horses vary in size and color. The animals may be descendants of the horses and burros that belonged to the pioneers, cavalry, prospectors or even Spanish Conquistadors. Taking one of these animals into your care is a wonderful way to share in the spirit of America's rich history.

For a free brochure with more information on how you can adopt one of these living symbols of the American pioneer spirit, write: Department of the Interior, Bureau of Land Management, Adopt-A-Horse-Or-Burro, Dept. A, 18th and C St., NW, Washington, D.C. 20240 or call: 202-343-5717.

IN THE HOSPITAL BUILDING

When you send forth your spirit, they are created, and you renew the face of the earth.

— Psalm 104

It's that time of year when many of us travel to distant places or take off for a favorite local spot. We all need a vacation from the daily routine, a chance to refresh ourselves and just "be" rather than "do." Going to church is kind of like that — a mini-vacation from the concerns that pressure us each day, a time to reflect on the past week and on our relationship with the Creator. We invite you to come and be renewed this Sunday at the church of your choice.

SOCIAL SECURITY NEWS

The Social Security Administration encourages blind and disabled people receiving benefits to work despite their impairments. There are various work incentive provisions to help them become self-supporting. This column describes one of the supplemental security income (SSI) incentives. We call it a PASS - short for 'plan for achieving self-support.'

Under a PASS, a disabled or blind person can set aside income and/or resources over a specified period of time for a work goal such as vocational training, education, purchasing work-related equipment, or starting a business. The income and/or resources set aside do not count in determining the person's eligibility or payment amount. Working blind or disabled people who otherwise would not be eligible for SSI may be able to receive payments if they have a PASS.

A vocational counselor, social worker, employer, or Social Security representative, among others may help a person develop a plan for achieving self-support. The plan must include a feasible work goal, a specific savings or spending plan, and the intended time frame for carrying out the goal. It also must provide for a clearly identifiable accounting of the funds that are set aside.

We will evaluate the plan and determine if it is acceptable. We'll also help put the plan in writing. The person must then follow the plan but can negotiate revisions as needed.

For you are my rock, my stronghold for the sake of your name, guide me and lead me!

— Psalm 31

How comforting it is to know that God is indeed our stronghold, that we can always turn to him when we feel we are in danger. That is the key — to turn to Him in time of trouble. So many of us try to do it all ourselves and become overwhelmed by the obstacles in front of us. If we can just remember that He is always there — upholding us every moment we take breath. Come and learn about this loving and eternal God at the church of your choice this Sunday.

amendment through Congress requiring USDA to set up four small-scale demonstration projects, including one near a pulp mill in Southeast Texas, for making newsprint kenaf. Another kenaf mill is now planned for the Rio Grande Valley.

The time is ripe for moving ahead on kenaf - but also for encouraging farmers to consider planting other new industrial use crops with names like guayule, a domestic source of rubber; meadowfoam, which produces a high quality oil with numerous applications; and crambe and high erucic rapeseed, annual crops that produce oil used to manufacture nylon, plastics and lubricants.

But there is a stumbling block.

While technology is moving ahead, certain farm program crops because it is uneconomical to plant anything else. A corn farmer, for example, would be reluctant to plant crambe, an oil seed crop, because it would reduce the crop acreage base, used in calculating such federal programs as deficiency payments.

I am cosponsoring legislation that would encourage farmers to plant new crops. It would direct the Secretary of Agriculture to protect farmers' acreage bases if they decide to grow these crops, allowing them to experiment with these crops and -if they don't work out return without penalty to traditional crops.

This type of approach will encourage farmers to diversify, to keep an eye on future trends without risking the present. And it will ultimately pay dividends for all of us who depend on the U.S. agriculture industry.
