Victor Gilbert Accepts Appointment With Railroad Commission

Hon. Victor B. Gilbert of Cisco, floratorial representative from Callahan and Eastland counties for the past six years has accepted the position as assistant director of the motor division of the railroad commission, tendered him by Chairman C. V. Terrell and Commissioner Lon Smith, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Walter Gates of San Antonio, and has assumed his new duties. This appointment is a distinct recognition of Mr. Gilbert's ability and he is well worthy of the honor shown him and his friends in Baird and Callahan county where "Vic" Gilbert has spent most of his life and which county he ably served as county judge congratulating him and share with him this honor.

Mr. Gilbert who had announced as a candidate for re-election as representative of this district, announces his withdrawal.

The following letter is addressed to the people of Callahan county:

To the People of Callahan County: Circumstances have demanded and good fortune has presented a change for me and in accepting a position with the Railroad Commission I do so with only one regret, and that is leaving my friends. Of course I will not offer for re-election to the Legislature, but I will not abandon my fight there for the principles I have heretofore advocated, nor will I abandon my interest in the welfare of my district and my services are yours at any time to command. My citizenship and residence are still in Cisco, and my partnership and interests still remain with Judge Scott and business entrusted to us will always have our most careful attention.

I would be most happy to take each of my many friends by the hand and thank you—thank you for the confidence and honor you have conferred on me—the errors I have committed have been of the "brain and not of the heart", which is a sweet consolation to me and satisfying.

Yours very truly,
VICTOR B. GILBERT

John R. Kennard, Prominent Ranch- man Succumbs To Heart Attack

John R. Kennard, 52, prominent Callahan county ranchman, died at 10 o'clock Wednesday in an Abilene sanitarium, from a heart attack that struck him Monday afternoon while he was in Abilene attending business.

Mr. Kennard became ill while talking with friends on a downtown street. He was taken to a hotel, and from there a few minutes later to a hospital. His wife went to Abilene Monday afternoon and from that time until his death was a constant attendant at the bedside. The illness was unexpected, Mr. Kennard having suffered only one mild heart attack previously.

Funeral rites were held at 3:30 Thursday afternoon at the Clyde Baptist church, with the Rev. Geo. W. Parks of Roscoe, Baptist pastor there, officiating. Burial was made in the Clyde cemetery besides the graves of Mr. Kennard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Kennard, early settlers in the Clyde area.

Mr. Kennard was a native Texan. He was born in Hill county and at the age of six years moved with his parents, and an only brother, Homer to large ranch properties, of Clyde where he lived for 46 years. Both he and his brother, who survives, had homes on the ranch and continued its operation after the death of their father.

Mr. Kennard was married to Miss Mable Welch, of Clyde, in 1903. In 1914 and 1915 they went to Midland to operate ranch interests there, but never changed their Clyde residence.

John Kennard was a good man, in the true meaning of the word and was loved and honored by all who knew him. He was especially kind and thoughtful of little children and elderly people. He has been identified with the development of this county for years; He was broad-minded and progressive, a valuable citizen and his sudden death brings sorrow to his family and friends, who were many as was attested by the large crowd who attended the funeral at Clyde, yesterday afternoon. There were many friends from Baird, Abilene, as well as from all parts of the county, also a number of friends from Breckenridge, Ft. Worth and other distant places.

Active pall bearers were: E. G. Hampton, C. M. Peek, Burt Tabor, Earl Hays, E. E. Cooke, and C. Q. Armstrong. Many friends were named as honorary pall bearers.

God bless the girl who works! She is not too proud to earn her own living, not ashamed to be caught at her daily task. She smiles at you from behind the desk or counter or printer's case. There is a sweet memory of her in everything she touches. She is like a brave mountaineer already far up the precipice—climbing, struggling, rejoicing. The very sight of her is an inspiration. It is an honor to know this girl and to be worthy of her esteem.

Lift your hat to her, young man, as she passes by. She is a queen in the realm of womanhood. She's a princess among the toilers. Her hand may be stained by dishwashing, sweeping, factory grease, or printer's ink. But it is an honest hand. It stays misfortune from the home; it supports the invalid loved one, maybe; it is the moving, potent shield that protects many a family from the wolf that sniffs at the door. All honor to the

The Logical Solution

Rural communities with road building problems on their hands should think twice before constructing single lane pavements which can take care of only an extremely limited amount of traffic. Any saving in first cost on such a road is more than offset by extra cost for widening as traffic grows.

A still greater objection to the single-lane highway is its tendency to increase accidents. It is said that the average driver on such a road will be on the pavement most of the time. But it is when he is getting off or on the pavement, or "in the rough" that accidents happen. As the amount of traffic increases, the single-lane highway is extremely dangerous.

By using the modern, inexpensive, waterproof surfaces, rural communities can build weatherproof, year-round roads, of full width, for $5,000 a mile or less. Maintenance cost is low and such roads are as satisfactory as the most expensive type of highway save when there is an excessive amount of traffic. This is the logical solution to the country road problem.

Roosevelt Defeats Smith in New Hampshire Primaries— Billion Dollar Tax Bill Under Debate in the House.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

FIRST blood in the contest between Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alfred M. Smith for the Democratic nomination for President goes to the governor of New York. The opening round of the battle was provided by the New Hampshire preferential primaries, and Mr. Roosevelt captured the Granite State's eight delegates for his forces in the national convention.

Unofficial returns showed the Roosevelt pledged candidates were elected by a margin of approximately 4,500. Since the candidates were voted for separately, the individual totals varied slightly. Four district delegates were elected, two from each congressional district, and each of these delegates will have a full vote.

A lighter vote than was expected in the cities to which the Smith forces looked for their greatest strength, together with a rural vote generally favorable to Roosevelt, combined to make the result. The vote of the state's eleven cities was divided almost evenly between the Smith and Roosevelt slates and the 224 towns furnished the majority by which the governor's ticket carried the state.

The Smith candidates for delegates at large carried only three cities, Keene, Berlin and Manchester. An unopposed Republican ticket, pledged to President Hoover, was elected. It consisted of seven delegates at large and four district delegates.

The Roosevelt victory was expected to have an important bearing on the Massachusetts primary on April 26. Smith has given consent to the use of his name there and a ticket of candidates for delegates has been prepared. Roosevelt supporters predicted a Roosevelt ticket would be entered against the Smith slate in Massachusetts.

Next came the Minnesota Democratic state convention to choose delegates to the national gathering. Smith and Roosevelt supporters quarreled fiercely and the former, finding themselves in the minority, bolted and held a convention of their own which picked a delegation that will vote for Smith in Chicago though uninstruced. The regular delegation was instructed to support Roosevelt.

COLONEL LINDBERGH'S baby has not been returned, at this writing, nor has the identity of the kidnapers been made known. This despite the efforts of all agencies in the land, from the federal government down to leaders of the underworld. Negotiations for contact with the criminals are reported to have been put in the hands of Morris Rosner, a mysterious figure of New York, and current stories say the restoration of the child and payment of the ransom have been delayed by fear of the abductors that they would be trapped. Officials in charge of the case declared they were "still making progress," and privately some of them said they were sure the baby was safe and well and would be returned to his parents after the excitement had subsided.

IN THE opinion of the war policies commission, congress should have authority in time of war to fix prices in order to prevent profiteering. This was a vital part of the report made to the President by the commission and a constitutional amendment to that effect was introduced in the senate by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, a member of the commission. It was referred to the judiciary committee.

Senator Vandenberg

The proposed amendment calls for an addition to the existing fifth amendment, providing that "in time of war congress may regulate or provide for the regulation of the prices, rent, or compensation to be exacted or paid by any person in respect of the sale, rent, or use of any real or personal property, tangible or intangible, without regard to any limitation contained in this article or any other article of the Constitution."

Should corporations or persons succeed in evading such a price fixing regulation, the commission suggests a further check on profits by recommending a 95 per cent tax on all income in time of war in excess of the average income of the preceding three years.

WHEN the new tax bill designed to raise $1,000,000,000 in increased revenues had been presented to the house, several complications arose that promised considerable debate. Three Democratic members of the ways and means committee submitted a minority report urging that about one-third of the sum be obtained by legalizing and taxing 2.75 per cent beer. These congressmen were T. H. Cullen and C. D. Sullivan of New York, and J. W. McCormack of Massachusetts. They said they failed to understand a point of view which complacently accepts the taxation of illegal brewing and wine making through the levies proposed in the present bill on malt sirup, wort, and grape concentrate, yet refuses to agree with a legal tax on legally made beer. Restoration of the brewing industry, they argued further, would put thousands of jobless back to work.

Representative J. W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, a Republican, presented strong objections to the proposed import levy on gasoline and oil, and he indicated that his opposition to this feature was shared by many representatives from states along the Atlantic seaboard.

WITH only thirteen opposing votes the house passed the La Guardia anti-injunction bill after seven hours of debate in which but two men spoke against the measure. The La Guardia bill differed in minor particulars from the Norris bill passed by the senate, so the legislation went to conference.

When it becomes law the "yellow dog" contracts which bind workers not to organize will no longer be recognized and federal judges will be limited stringently in their powers to quiet labor disputes by injunction. Above these mandates the act declares the policy of the nation is to favor labor's right to organize and bargain collectively.

PUSHED off the front page by the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, the Sino-Japanese embroglio still held first place among international affairs. The truce at Shanghai did not last more than a few hours, and though Gen. Tsai Ting-kai and his army had been pushed back further than the Japanese originally demanded, the invaders, strengthened by fresh troops and more guns, insisted on further Chinese withdrawal. They extended their line day by day, and some of their officers declared it was their intention to move toward Nanking at least as far as Changchow, which is 120 miles northwest of Shanghai. Meanwhile, it was reported, large numbers of Chinese soldiers were being added to General Tsai's forces, and in consequence General Shirakawa, Japanese commander, issued a warning that he would reopen hostilities if the Chinese attempted to enter the 40-mile line held by the Japanese.

As was foreseen, the smaller powers in the League of Nations assembly tried to force the league to take drastic action against Japan, and were blocked by the great powers, which would be the ones directly affected by such a course. For them Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, proposed the league should again remind Japan of her treaty and covenant obligations, restating Secretary Stimson's declaration that advantages gained by force cannot be recognized; should take the stand that Shanghai will be cared for by the great powers, and that the Manchurian problem should be shelved for the present. The debate was rather warm, but finally a committee was appointed to draft a resolution expressing the league's attitude and intentions.

PRESIDENT HOOVER, recognizing the popular demand for economies in government expenditures, announced that the entire administrative staff was co-operating with congress in trying to cut down federal costs by reorganization, but the house Democrats working on the economy plans were not satisfied. Chairman Byrns of the special economy committee called for more specific suggestions from the President. He said the only administrative official who had volunteered assistance was Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the veterans' administration, who proposed "reductions in payments the bureau is now making to certain classes of disabled veterans."

"Surely the President," said Mr. Byrns, "has had this information for some time and the question naturally arises why he did not take the responsibility in his message last December of recommending this legislation which he would now have the country understand he approves without stating just what it is."

FAMON DE VALERA is now the president of the Irish Free State. He was elected to succeed William T. Cosgrave by the dail eireann and took office at once. Of the seats in the assembly De Valera's Fianna Fall party holds 72. The Cosgrave party has 56, the Laborites 7 and the Independents, who usually vote with Cosgrave, 17. So De Valera governs only with the help of the Labor party, which demands that economic and social

W. T. Cosgrave legislation be given the precedence. Cosgrave retired from power gracefully, stating that he and his party would go into opposition but would not unduly hamper the new president. It appeared that De Valera was still determined to try to expunge the oath of allegiance to the British king. Whether the Cosgrave following would vote against this or merely refrain from voting was uncertain.

MAHATMA GANDHI'S civil disobedience movement has received strong reinforcements, having been joined by the Jamist ul Ulema, an organization that embraces the entire Moslem priesthood of India. The priests decreed a country-wide picketing of liquor shops to deprive the British government of revenue, and decided to close all Moslem higher institutions of learning so the students can join in the anti-British movement.

INSTIGATED, it was alleged, by William Z. Foster and other Communists, more than three thousand jobless men and women tried to storm the Rouge River plant of the Ford Motor company in Detroit. With rocks and clubs they fought fiercely with the police and firemen called out to restrain them, and tear gas bombs did not avail to stop them because a high wind carried off the fumes. Forced back to the gates of the plant, the police finally fired three volleys from riot guns, and the mob took to flight. It was found that four persons had been killed and more than fifty injured. Among the latter was Harry Bennett, chief of the Ford service department, who was severely beaten. Foster and the other Communist leaders took no part in the riot and afterward could not be found by the authorities. Prosecutor Harry S. Toy of Detroit said he was considering placing criminal syndicalism charges before the grand jury, and would bring murder charges if any of the injured police officers should die.

FRANCE and the world lost a great figure in the death of Aristide Briand, foremost European apostle of international amity. Worn out by his long years of arduous labor, he succumbed to uremic poisoning. He was accorded a state funeral but in accordance with his last wish he was quietly buried at Cocherel, his country place. M. Briand, who was nearly seventy years old, had been premier 12 times, and over and over again had held the post of foreign minister. He was for long a brilliant and active figure in French and international affairs, and his efforts to establish friendly relations between his country and Germany were untiring. He led in the forging of the Locarno pact in 1925 and co-operated with Frank B. Kellogg in creating the anti-war treaty that bears their names. Being an idealist, he proposed the "United States of Europe," which is still a matter of discussion among the nations of the Old world. Germany recognized that in Briand's passing her best friend in other lands had gone.

The United States mourns the death of John Philip Sousa, its most famous band master and "march king," whose music has been an inspiration and a delight to several generations of Americans. For twelve years he was leader of the Marine Corps band, and then he organized his own noted band with which he toured the world. During the war he was in the naval service, being musical director at Great Lakes.

CONSIDERABLE interest was aroused by the marriage, in Colorado Springs, Colo., of Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, former congresswoman-at-large from Illinois, and Albert G. Simms of Albuquerque, N. M., former member of congress. After the ceremony the couple left for Albuquerque, where they will reside. The marriage was not a surprise, for their friends had for several years suspected it would come about.

FINLAND'S rebellion came to a sudden end with the surrender of the leaders of the Lapua movement. The would-be revolutionists evacuated Mantala, marched to the garrison town of Tusby and laid down their arms. Their chieftains were put in prison and probably will be tried for high treason. As is so often the case, it is suspected that the rebellion was financed by the Communist International.

REPORTS from all parts of the country tell of the success attending the efforts of the Citizens' Reconstruction organization, headed by Frank Knox of Chicago, in getting hoarded money back into trade channels and thus helping to restore public confidence.

How One Woman Lost 10 Lbs. in a Week

Mrs. Betty Luedke of Dayton writes: "I am using Kruschen to reduce weight—I lost 10 pounds in one week and cannot say too much to recommend it." To take off fat easily, SAFELY and HARMLESSLY—take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it is the safe way to lose unsightly fat and one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle. Get it at any drugstore in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the safest way to lose fat—money back. But be sure and get Kruschen Salts—imitations are numerous and you must safeguard your health.

Cleve Callaway, Candidate For Representative To The Legislature

Cross Plains, March 11, 1932

To the citizens of the 107th Legislative District of Texas, comprising Callahan and Eastland counties:—

Having been solicited by a number of representative citizens—and actuated by the belief that we need new blood in the legislative halls of this State, I have decided to enter the race for representative to the legislature.

It is my sincere belief that the people of this country, being sorely oppressed and harassed by the top-heavy government and extortionate taxes, are sufficiently aroused from the dry rot of indifference, to take a deep interest in, and make a searching investigation of the men whom they send to the legislature this time.

Being a native product of the very soil of this immediate country, reared in a staunch Democratic family, educated in the University of Texas and envied by students of government, I think, qualifies me for this position.

In this my platform, I have no new and fantastical ideas to put forward for the purpose of currying favor with any organization or group of people, but it is my idea to represent all of the people fairly and justly, which is the kind of representation every patriotic and freedom-loving individual desires.

I am in favor of sweeping reduction in taxes and know no sound and permanent way in which to do that except through the reduction of government by simplifying and abolishing the unnecessary boards and commissions whose duties overlap thereby complicating and rendering unenforceable the laws of this country.

Sincerely,

CLEVE CALLAWAY

Your electric rate schedule is so arranged that the average cost per kilowatt-hour becomes less as your use increases. Thus, the more you take advantage of the comforts and conveniences of electric service, the cheaper your average unit becomes.

Customers reaping the benefits of complete electric service employ many time, money and labor-saving Electrical Servants at unbelievably low rates—and profit by many unusual savings and economies.

Your actions, in putting electricity to work for you, govern the cost of your service. Electricity is your cheapest servant—why not let it assume your tiresome and arduous household tasks? A trained employe will be happy to explain the many benefits of complete electric service—and show you how you can save money and control your own electric rate. Don't you think it would be wise to investigate?

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule... and adds only a small amount to your total bill?

Man Made The Town

By RUBY M. AYRES

Second Installment

At twenty-two the only thing Diana really desired was another woman's husband. A nervous wreck from the excitement and strain of London's gay life, she is taken by her aunt, Mrs. Gladwyn, to a famous specialist's office. The physician orders her to the country for a long rest. She rebels, but the doctor is handsome and sympathetic. She learns that he is not the great man himself but an assistant, Dr. Rathbone. "God made the country and man made the town," he tells her, and she agrees to a rural retreat.

Now to go on with the story.

"And where does he suggest sending you?"

"On Dartmoor, to a cottage where I can go about without shoes and stockings and get sunburnt."

"Well, are you going to take his advice?"

Diana giggled. "He told me to go to-morrow—or to-night, if possible, and take you with me."

Mrs. Gladwyn sat bolt upright. "The man's mad," she declared indignantly.

Diana reflected, thinking of Rathbone a little wistfully.

He had seemed such a particularly sane person, in spite of his blunt manner, and yet she knew she had no intention of following his advice.

"You look more fit for bed," was she said. "I'm going out to dinner."

"I'm not going to-night, anyway," her aunt's retort, but she felt relieved; the mention of dinner made her more hopeful.

She did not want to go out—at least half of her did not want to go, that miserable sickly physical part of her that seemed to cry out only for rest and sleep; but the other part of her, her heart and brain, was on fire for the moment, when she would be again with the only person in all the world who mattered to her.

Two days since she had seen him—eternal days, year long.

It was for him she had stayed in town—in order to be near him while his wife was away, and in spite of all her eager anticipation she had got very little happiness out of their days together.

He was difficult and exacting, and in her nervous state of health she felt unable to cope with a situation that was rapidly growing out of hand.

To-night they were going to dine at his flat . . .

CHAPTER II

Driving away in the car with Dennis Waterman, Diana was once again angrily conscious of her weakness and lassitude.

An only son of extravagant people who had died leaving him with nothing but a crop of debts, he had married Linda Dawson, a rich girl who had been blinded by her love for him to his selfishness and uselessness.

But she was no fool, and once she had recovered from the shock of disillusionment she had set herself to smile and remain friends with a husband whom she still loved.

She never questioned him about his mode of living, or objected to his friendships, and the nearest approach they had ever had to a quarrel had been over money matters, when she had calmly told him that her banking account was no longer at his disposal.

He would receive an allowance, she said with a friendly smile; her solicitors would attend to it, but he must keep within its limits, and no further debts would be settled for him.

Dennis had tried anger, wounded dignity, and finally cajolery, but Linda had been immune to them all.

"I am not quarreling with you," she said calmly. "I don't think I'm even angry with you, because I know you can't help the way you've been brought up. You ought to be able to now, I suppose, but I can see it's impossible, so I have made this arrangement for both our sakes, and you will be quite free to go your way, and I shall go mine."

Diana was difficult; she loved him, and she wanted to be his wife—a most unreasonable desire.

Other fellows had their love affairs without the knowledge of their wives, but there Diana was absurdly difficult. It must be all or nothing; she had said that scores of times, and they had quarreled over it and said goodbye forever, only to find they could not live without one another.

And now here they were again, back on the old ground, with nothing decided. The car stopped, and Diana roused herself with a little laugh of apology.

They went through the big door and were whirled upstairs in the lift.

It was as she entered the room with its shaded lights and dainty appointments that Diana suddenly remembered that this flat belonged to Linda.

There were a hundred signs of her everywhere; it almost seemed as if her shadow sat in a corner of the big cushioned divan, laughing at them in her inimitable way.

When Dennis tried to take her wrap she resisted.

"I wish I hadn't come."

"What nonsense." He kissed her hands and her soft throat. "You're tired. I'll mix you a cocktail. You'll feel better directly."

He bent and kissed her. "Now, drink this and see it it doesn't put new life into you."

She sipped it and put the glass down on the table at her elbow.

"I suppose you think I'm horribly cheap," she said slowly.

"I think you're adorable."

She considered that. "But adorable

She felt his arms around her, drawing her close to him, and with a return of the passion he always seemed to awake in her, she turned and clung to him.

things can be cheap," she said painfully after a moment.

There was a discreet tap at the door, and Dennis sprang up and went over to the cocktail table again.

"Come in."

"Dinner is served, sir."

They went into the dining room, Linda's dining room, Diana thought with a little quiver, and when they were served Dennis sent the maids away.

"Do you mind?" he asked. "We can't talk if they stay."

Diana had made a pretense of eating, but now that the servants' watchful eyes were no longer there she gave it up and leaned back in her chair.

"What's going to become of us, Dennis?" she asked.

He did not answer for a moment, and when at last he spoke he carefully avoided looking at her.

"I brought you here to talk about that."

"Oh!" A little shaft of hope struck her heart again. "Do you mean—will Linda . . ."

"Linda will never divorce me."

She stood up, holding the back of her chair for a moment with an overwhelming sense of weakness; then she went before him back to the room with its shaded lights and curtains undrawn against the summer night.

She felt his arms round her, drawing her close to him, and with a return of the passion he always seemed to awake in her she turned and clung to him.

"Don't let them send me away from you, Dennis. Don't let them send away. I love you so much—so much!"

"And I love you too, my dear, you know that."

"Then let me take you away. Isn't this our moment? With Linda abroad—"

"Oh . . . Linda—" she said with a little shiver.

He took no notice, he went on rapidly, taking advantage of her momentary softening.

"We can go this week—why not to-morrow? I can meet you somewhere outside London. Thing of the joy it will be, my dear. Just you and I together."

"And when we come back?" she asked hopefully. "We shall have to come back of course."

He kissed her hair.

"Why look ahead, my dear? Isn't the present enough? And it won't be the last, the only time. We shall often be able to go away together again. Won't it be better than this, anyway? We seem to spend our lives now saying goodbye." He turned her face up to his and kissed her lips.

"Say yes, my darling."

She closed her eyes before the passion in his; she seemed to have no will, no power of resistance; she was tired of fighting. What did anything matter as long as she did not utterly lose him?

"Yes . . . yes . . . yes," she whispered.

"The matter?" Dennis raised his

"You shall never regret it. All my life—" He broke off, his arms falling from her.

There were voices in the hallway outside, a woman's voice, laughing and amused, and one of the maids, concerned, flushed.

Dennis stood motionless his head turned towards the door, his face white.

CHAPTER III.

"It's Linda," he said hoarsely.

Linda came into the room smiling and cheery. She looked the picture of health and was charmingly dressed in a cool summer frock of black and white with a shady hat.

She pulled the curtains back and flung the casement wide, then she turned to look at her husband.

"I hope you've been entertaining doesn't look as fit as you do, certainly, but then she goes the pace too much. You can't keep her still; she's a mass of nerves."

"And is that your fault?" his wife asked quietly.

"My fault? My dear Linda—what on earth do you mean?"

Don't let's pretend, Dennis. You know quite well what I mean. You've been making love to her for months. I'm not blaming you any more than I am her—any woman is a fool who lets a married man make love to her; but I'm sorry for her because she's not so experienced as you are. It's not playing fair. I suppose she wants you to marry her, is that it?"

Henry Ford Starts The Industrial Revival

By CALEB JOHNSON

It is too soon to predict how the business and industrial world will respond to Henry Ford's declaration that he is about to risk everything he has in the effort to put as many men as possible back to useful work at once, but unless I am wrong, the effect of the starting up of the Ford plant on full-time maximum production basis is likely to be the turning point in the industrial situation.

I am not interested in advertising Mr. Ford's cars, but I am greatly interested in the man himself. That is partly because he has proved himself right in practically everything he has undertaken and largely because he has quite a different conception of wealth than most rich men have.

"We have nothing the public did not give us," he said the other day; and he has said the same thing to me more than once. I asked him once why he bought out the other stockholders in his company. "Because stockholders demand dividends," he said. "They think the earnings of the company belong to them. I wanted to use them to put back into the business, to improve the quality and reduce the price of cars. The money we get above the cost of making a car belongs to the people who paid it, and I can only give it back by making a better and cheaper car."

So I was not a bit surprised when, a few days ago, he said: "No surplus exists for private benefit; every surplus is provided for future use. The future is here and we are going to do our utmost—risk everything is necessary—to use this surplus which the public, through its dealings with us, has provided, to see if we cannot make what the country needs most—work, jobs!"

"We are going to risk everything we've got to create useful work for just as many people as possible!"

Mr. Ford realizes that his own industries alone will not end the depression, but he believes that if he can operate to capacity, or nearly so, thousands of other industries will take heart and resume production and the depression will slowly disappear.

"You know, faith is catching!" he says.

To set the Ford Motor Company operating at capacity is a task so huge widespread and complex that there are no words to convey its full meaning in one phrase. A slump as at some angles may help.

First, after more than two years' depression, with 7,000,000 out of work in the United States alone, how many prospective buyers of low-priced cars are there in the world?

Price, terms, volume of hoarded money, prospective employment for the masses—definite knowledge of these and many other unfathomable factors are essential to a correct answer. The best minds can only speculate.

To get the retail price so low the masses can buy it, raw materials and supplies going into the car must be bought at the lowest figure. To get them at this figure they must be bought in tremendous volume. So mammoth an intake of goods requires colossal production to consume. Such huge purchasing and production demand staggering sums.

Mr. Ford's schedules are elastic and capable of large expansion. If a strong market develops, and men supposed to know say Mr. Ford's potential selling field was never before so great, the volume of production will be increased to meet it.

Based on an anticipated production of 1,500,000 cars a year, gross purchases of raw materials and supplies will average more than $52,000,000 a month. During peak production in previous years purchases have exceeded $80,000,000 a month. On this basis Mr. Ford will spend more than $300,000,000 in Detroit and Michigan for raw materials, manufactured supplies, freight and labor in the rest of 1932. In the Detroit district alone he will employ more than 100,000 men at the standard minimum wage of $6 a day and upward. The average monthly payroll in the Detroit district will run more than $18,000,000 a month. Now it approximates $10,000,000.

To feed the Ford plants with raw and manufactured materials and goods more than 5,500 direct and indirect suppliers, scattered over the United States, will employ approximately 300,000 men. Of course these supplies about 1,200 are in Detroit and 300 in Michigan outside Detroit.

To keep the plants going it is estimated there will be a freight movement of 236,000 inbound and 228,000 outbound cars, with a freight bill, paid directly by Mr. Ford to the railroads and shipping companies of the United States, of more than $86,000,000. Suppliers shipping to Mr. Ford will pay the railroad upward of $10,000,000 more. Handling the railroad cars will require larger railroad working forces.

Add to such items things like steel, tires, copper, lead, paint, glass, lumber and all the other items that go into the making of a motor car and it is easy to see that industry will be stimulated in literally thousands of plants, scattered all over the world, by the initiation of this new Ford program. A hundred thousand men put back to work in his own plants will mean at least that many more given jobs elsewhere.

Not every industry can start up like that on one man's say-so. Boards of directors and bankers have to be consulted before any chances are taken. But nobody but Henry Ford himself has to be consulted in this case, and I believe he has given himself good advice.

CHAPTER LXV

As the conference between Marshal Foch and the German delegates proceeded, and in anticipation of advices regarding the armistice, telephone lines were kept constantly open between my headquarters and those of the First and Second armies.

When word came to me at 6 a. m., November 11, that hostilities would cease at 11 a. m., directions to that effect were sent to our armies immediately. Our troops had been advancing rapidly during the preceding two days, and although every effort was made to reach them promptly a few could not be overtaken before the prescribed hour.

A brief account of the conference with the German delegates was given to me a few days later by General Weygand. He said the Germans came across the line by automobile the afternoon of November 7 and boarded a special railway coach sent by the French to meet them. During the night this car and the marshal's were placed side by side in the forest between Compiègne and Soissons.

The emissaries were ushered into the marshal's presence, and after producing their credentials were asked the object of their visit. They replied that they had come to discuss the terms of an armistice. The marshal then made it clear that he himself was not requesting an armistice and did not care to have one.

When asked if they wished an armistice they replied that they did. The marshal said that if that was the case, here were the terms, a copy of which he handed them. The severity of the demands seemed to surprise them and they appeared very much depressed. They had no power to sign an armistice they said, without the consent of the chancellor, and after some little discussion they started an officer to the German capital with the terms.

They did not seem to object to turning over 5,000 cannon, but deplored the condition which required them to surrender 30,000 machine guns. They finally succeeded in having this reduced to 25,000 machine guns on the ground that they might have some left for riot duty. In speaking of the danger of riots, the delegates were asked why they did not send some of their reserve divisions to maintain order in the interior.

Their reply was that they had no divisions in reserve, as every division that they had was actually in line. Then they complained about the short time allowed for evacuation, stating that the German army was in no condition to move, either forward or backward.

What America Had Done. Between September 26 and November 11, twenty-two American and six French divisions, with an approximate fighting strength of 500,000 men, on a front extending from southeast of Verdun to the Argonne forest, had engaged and decisively beaten forty-three different German divisions, with an estimated fighting strength of 470,000. Of the twenty-two American divisions, four had at different times during this period been in action on fronts other than our own.

The enemy suffered an estimated loss of over 100,000 casualties in this battle, and our First Army lost about 117,000. The total strength of the First Army, including 125,000 French troops, reached 1,031,000 men. It captured 26,000 prisoners, 874 cannon, 3,000 machine guns and large quantities of material.

The transportation and supply of divisions to and from our front during this battle was a gigantic task. There were 23 American and seven French divisions, besides hundreds of thousands of corps and army troops, moved in and out of the American zone. A total of 173,000 men were evacuated to the rear and more than 100,000 replacements were received.

The experience of the World War only confirmed the lessons of the past. The divisions with little training, while aggressive and courageous, were lacking in the ready skill of habit. They were capable of powerful blows, but their blows were apt to be awkward—teamwork was often not well understood. Flexible and resourceful divisions cannot be created by a few maneuvers or by a few months' association of their elements. On the other hand, without the keen intelligence, the endurance, the willingness, and the enthusiasm displayed in the training areas and on the battlefields, the decisive results obtained would have been impossible.

There is little to add in praise of the spirit of determination that stimulated each individual soldier to overcome the hardships and difficulties that fell to his lot. With fortune and perseverance he gave his every energy to the accomplishment of his task, whether it required him to charge the enemy's guns or play the less conspicuous role of forwarding supplies. In their devotion, their valor and the loyal fulfillment of their obligations, the officers and men of the American expeditionary forces have left a heritage of which those who follow after may ever be proud.

Texas and Texans

Meeting New Conditions

The railroads have been losing money steadily in recent years, and will lose more unless they can adapt their business to changing conditions. As yet they do not seem to have found a way to meet the competition of newer and faster methods of transportation. Perhaps they have depended too much on the government and the commissions under which they have operated. There are indications that they are beginning to see that, if they would continue in business, they must face existing conditions and meet competition, instead of appealing for public help and sympathy—that the problems are theirs and not the government's. Regulation of public utilities does not necessarily carry with it their protection against more satisfactory methods of public service. None of us can complain that the fittest survive, but all can demand equal rights and privileges, and the railroads should have these. This country needs the railroads and should give them every opportunity to prove their continued usefulness as public carriers.

New Ways in Business

Problems of business are much like those of the railroads. The business that doesn't keep up with new methods is being forced to quit. There isn't a successful grocery in the country of the old type except in the small towns that are themselves dead. A few years ago few groceries were advertised and most of them were dirty poorly arranged stores in debt to the jobbers and barely existing. These have given away to the highly advertised cash stores, where goods are attractively displayed. The same change is fast coming over the drug store business. Small towns are losing their trade, not because they are small, but because their merchants cling to the old methods of business and have allowed their stores to become dingy and unattractive and have failed to advertise. These are days when a merchant—and a town, as well—has to merit business to hold it.

Texas Mohair Mill

In competition with San Marcos, New Braunfels, its neighbor, has won the location of the proposed Texas mohair mill. The project is to get started in 90 days, and New Braunfels is to finance it. As that town has had some costly experience in industrial enterprises, doubtless it will steer clear of everything that smacks of exploitation and proceed cautiously along successful lines. There is no reason, though, why San Marcos, with its unused cotton mill plant and its 35 acres of ground, should not start another mohair mill or some other industry equally needed. There is plenty room in Texas for numbers of factories that consume Texas-grown products.

Some Industries Needed

The industrial department of the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce has listed a number of kinds of products that should be manufactured in or near that city, but that are not made there. Here are a few: Aircraft bathroom and toilet fixtures, tin cans, fire brick, hotel and restaurant china-ware, crackers, furniture on large scale, window glass, hard rubber products, work shirts, peanut butter, hosiery, men's suits by wholesale, farm tools and implements, under garments, towelings. Almost any Texas town with power, water, shipping facilities and the natural products that are required close at hand, would be as favorable location for these and other enterprises as San Antonio.

Texas Loses Wealth

An investigator for the department of the attorney general reports that Texas Panhandle gas that is sold at the wells in Texas at 2 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, is being resold in Chicago at $1.50. Of course Texas gets a revenue on only 2 cents, when it should be getting taxes on a much higher valuation. Texas resources are without fair returns to either the producing or the enriching corporations due to the State.

More Farms Needed

Overproduction of farm products— if there is any—is because of the large-scale farming of thousands of acres in cotton, wheat and other farm products, rather than because of the large number of small farmers. E. B. Neiswanger of the Central Power and Light Company, San Antonio, spends much of his time studying and talking farm problems. He says that the country's great need is more 30 acre farms on which the farmer and his family grow most of the things for home consumption. The big-farm projects soon exhaust the soil and leave it largely worthless. Diversified small-farming enriches the land and supports not only the rural population, but the commerce and industries of the towns and cities. Western Canada and many Western States of this country are now suffering from the bad consequences resulting from large-scale, one-crop farming. No country ever had too many small farms, tilled by owners of the land.

Texas Loses On Cotton

Texas prison losses for last year of $894,502 are attributed to the low price of cotton. If the State, producing 11,424 bales of cotton on State-owned, tax-free land, farmed with convict labor, and sold at 6.96 cents a pound, loses money to the extent of about $80.00 a bale, how can the farmer who pays taxes and hires labor expect to make money producing cotton at 5 or 6 cents a pound?

Pecan Trees As Memorials

The Seguin Chamber of Commerce is planting pecan trees along highways in Guadalupe county as a War Veterans Memorial. Five hundred paper shell pecan trees have been planted at distances of 100 feet apart between Seguin and Luling, and when the highway to San Antonio is completed to the county line, pecan trees will be placed along it. The San Antonio Chamber of Commerce has agreed to continue the planting into San Antonio from the Bexar county line. Some 5,000 trees will be required. The State Highway Department has agreed to have the trees cultivated and watered during the period they will require careful attention. The War Veterans Memorial Association hopes to extend the planting of pecan trees along highways in other sections of Texas and make the State noted for its pecan lined roads.

County Has Balance

Val Verde County, Del Rio the county site, has a cash balance of more than $100,000 in the treasury, increased from $87,000 the year before. County taxes have been reduced from 90 cents in 1929 to 35 cents in 1931. During 1931, in addition to current expenses, the county placed $25,000 in improvements on the courthouse and jail, spent $10,000 on a loop road across the Rio Grande and $15,000 for paving another road. The only indebtedness of the county is a road bond issue of $250,000 made in 1920. County commissioners elsewhere may profitably study how county finances are handled in Val Verde.

Furs Bring Money

Dealers at Kerrville have paid $55,000 for furs during the past season. The firm handled 74,798 pelts, all of which were shipped to large fur houses to be made into fur wearing apparel. Many of them will be shipped back as fur coats. Why doesn't Kerrville start a fur coat factory? The supply of furs varies but little from year to year.

Solving Unemployment

The city of Brownwood has had 15 acres of land plowed for a city garden. The Federated Clubs will furnish the garden seed, The Employment Bureau will have the garden worked by those seeking work or charity in return for provisions supplied, expecting later to be able to provide vegetables for work to pay for them. A helpful kind of endless chain, if only the charity seekers will do the work.

Curing Sweet Potatoes

Thirty Bowie county farmers cooperate to build potato curing houses on their farms last fall at a cost from $6.40 to $30.00 each. They stored 19,600 bushels of potatoes worth, then, 35 cents a bushel. They sold them in January for 75 cents a bushel, the curing houses earning $7,840 the first season. The houses were daubed with mud, have brick or metal flues, are kept dry with stove fires and have openings in the ceilings to let out heat

Since 1920 the per capita use of electricity has more than doubled, or increased from 391 to 800 kilowatt hours per person.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

Castoria is sold in every drugstore; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

Good morning to The Star force and all who read The Star. We always welcome The Star, one of the best weekly papers we ever read.

Well, we have had real winter the past week. I think the fruit is most all gone. We may have some apples I was talking with Mr. Wilson of Clyde and he tells me he thinks all pear trees are killed. I think all small grain that was not jointing will be safe.

We had a warm winter up to March, but March has been a wolf about the place.

Farmers need to do some plowing. We have plenty of time for row crops yet.

We have a good season, but these cold winds will dry the ground awful fast.

I think most everybody is well in and around Eula.
