About People and Things

The Man Winter is here again. It is here again, it has come out of hibernation Wednesday to blast forth with a "junior partner" that was cool enough to make most people to fire up their stoves and bring out their winter wearing apparel. When we stop and think about the sweltering days we have in the winter time and remember the winter we have had "sure he glad winter gets here." Now that winter is really here we're still satisfied, and wish that good summer time was here again. Sometimes we meditate over the subject as to whether or not Americans are fickle-minded. The Englishman says that Americans never say what they want, therefore they are never satisfied. For example: he will put sugar in his tea; he will put salt in his coffee; he will put soap in his washing machine. He will put soap in his washing machine. He will put soap in his washing machine. He will put soap in his washing machine.

Aerial Gunner

Cpl. Boyce Strong

Presenting Cpl. Boyce Strong, son of Mr. and Mrs. Houston Strong of this city. Boyce has recently graduated with a class of aerial combat crew trainees at Davis-Monthan Field, Tucson, Ariz., and is qualified for immediate combat duty. He will soon go overseas to a combat theater as an armor-gunner on a B-24 Liberator. Teamwork, the all-essential factor that makes bomber crews click, has been stressed in this course.

Former Physician Dies At Ranger On November 12th

Dr. I. M. Howard, former physician for this community for some 35 years, died at his home in Ranger, Sunday, November 12, at 8:30 p. m. from a heart ailment. Doctor Howard was born April 1, 1871, being 73 years 8 months and 12 days old at the time of his death. He, with his wife, moved to this community from Palo Pinto county some 35 years ago, settling first in Cross Cut. He later moved to Burkett and then to Cross Plains where he lived until three years ago.

BUFFALOES HONORED WITH SUPPER FRIDAY AT ORAN BARR HOME

Mr. Oran Barr and Mrs. Howard Coburn honored the Cross Plains Buffaloes with a supper last Friday evening, November 10th, after their game with the Baird Bears. The supper was given in the home of Mrs. Barr.

General Rainfall Over Trade Area

A general rain has fallen on the trade area this week. First rainfall was received Tuesday morning just before daybreak. Rain again threatened Tuesday night. Wednesday morning a cool wind was blowing from the north, and about mid-morning started raining and sleet fell for a few minutes but soon stopped. Rain started falling again in the afternoon and kept falling on into the night.

General Chennault Writes Details Of D. L. Lancaster Death

Some two weeks ago a notice of the death of Cpl. D. L. Lancaster, who was killed in action September 23, 1944, in the China-Burma Theater of war, was carried in this paper. Since that time further details concerning his life and death have been received and are being published.

Local Stores Agree To Close On Thursday, November 30th Instead Of 23rd.

In the last two issues of the Review it was stated that Cross Plains would observe Thursday, November 23rd, as Thanksgiving. This has been changed to November 30th. Due to the fact that business firms closed on November 11th, and would again close on the 23rd, as designated in the petition, it was decided that holidays were coming too close together, and, too, November 30th has been officially designated as Thanksgiving Day in Texas by Governor Stevenson.

It has been our tradition to observe the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day. A few years ago the president saw fit to change Thanksgiving from the last Thursday to the 4th Thursday. The reason for this change has never been fully grasped by everyone.

Anyways, the majority of the merchants favor the changing of Thanksgiving from the 23rd to the 30th. Everyone is asked to take note of this change of date and attend to their business accordingly.

Local stores will be open, as usual, for business on Friday morning, December 1st.

Government "Go-To-School" Drive Over Nation Continues

(By MRS. JOHN D. ROBERTS)

In August 1944 the United States Office of Education and the Commission of the United States Department of Labor began a "Go-to-school" drive aiming to interest high school and college students in securing an education. During the first two years of the war, high school enrollment decreased alarmingly, not altogether because boys and girls were going into the armed forces but because they were going into high-salaried war jobs. The result, according to educators, would be felt more during the peace to come than during the crisis of war.

It became apparent at once that, unless students returned to school, the responsibility of government would fall upon unprepared citizens. These boys and girls who were forsaking the school room for the high war salaries were the government leaders and law makers of the future.

What would be the fate of democracy if future leaders did not appreciate the principles of democracy which had been handed down to them? Where, if not in school, would young people be given instruction which would enable them to understand the economic, political, social, scientific and ideological forces which mold events of our time? Where, if not in the school, would young people become informed concerning social and economic means for protecting individual rights and freedom? Where, if not in school, does a young man learn the value of self-government? These were vital questions which faced educators, government and military leaders. They could be answered only by education in high schools and colleges.

This, then, is the reason for the "Go-to-school" drive. This is the reason behind the government's provision for veterans' education. But while urging students to attend school these agencies also recognized the fact that in some areas students were needed in war industries. In these areas the school officials and employers have been asked to arrange schedules of hours for student work which will not conflict with school work. Financial obligations sometimes necessitate a student's working. Here again schedules permitting a student to work and continue his education have been worked out.

Another answer to the "Go-to-school" drive is the cooperative college which provides facilities for

CAUSES OF PELLAGRA DISCUSSED BY DR. COX, HEALTH OFFICER

AUSTIN—Pellagra, even though not a communicable disease, is a concern to public health officials in Texas since many people die of the disease in this state every year. The disease is caused by the lack of certain essential foods and it comes on slowly but is not recognized until the victim begins to have the more serious symptoms such as sore mouth, stomach troubles and reddening and scaling of the skin.

"When these symptoms appear the disease has been present a long time," says Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer. "The longer a person has pellagra the harder it is to cure. Consequently it is well to watch for the early symptoms such as nervousness, indigestion and burning of the hands and feet. In its advanced stages pellagra may become so severe as to seriously affect the mind."

Pellagra is not contagious, Dr. Cox pointed out, and he emphasized that it can be prevented entirely by including the right kinds of foods in the daily diet. These essential foods include milk, meat, wheat, whole wheat products, brewer's yeast, salmon, tomatoes and other fresh fruits and vegetables. By including these foods in the daily diet, any individual can rest assured that pellagra will not constitute a menace to his health.
