

"AS I SEE IT"

By Jack McCarty

The Creator smiled on this section again the past week and favored the Cross Plains section with another slow, ground soaking rain, for which everyone hereabouts from the youngest to the oldest, is duly thankful.

This department is in favor of tarring and feathering our departing school superintendent, Newell H. Odell! Our violent attitude toward him was brought about by the announcement that Pat McNallen had resigned his position as band director in the local school system to accept the band job with the Childress schools.

We consider his resignation a real loss to the local school and community and we wish for Pat and his bride-elect the very best life has to offer in their new home.

Never again will this column ever endeavor to dismiss one of the favorite local sons from their self-appointed positions of authority. If the citizens of this fine city are contented to put up with a lot of old-fashioned, horse and buggy boys in these high places, then so are we.

"Dear Editor: We are unable to figure out whether you have not been in Callahan County long enough or are just plain ignorant, but we are presuming it is the former and that you just need catching up on some local history.

"For half a century Hugh Breeding and Fos Bond have been the only ramparts between this community and the weather trust in New Orleans. Mr. Bond's special talent is rain, and that of Mr. Breeding is northers. By about the middle of September Mr. Breeding can positively predict within 72 hours of the first hard freeze in November.

"Being more erratic than northers and covering a greater period of time, rain is naturally more difficult to predict and for that reason it is not too difficult to understand why Fos predicts wrong occasionally, which the weather trust also may do any time, and they would die of apoplexy at the mere mention of an accurate prediction of the first freeze fifty or sixty days ahead of time.

"Why Editor, Fos was studying the signs and omens, and forecasting weather when you were a mere twinkle in your father's eye.

"P.S. Since writing the above we note that due to pressure from Tom Bryant and from within your own household, you have sort of retracted your stand on firing Fos, but we will let it stand as is because we believe it's good for an editor to get an occasional working over by (Continued on Back Page)

Pat McNallen Resigns As Band Director To Accept Childress Job

According to an announcement made by Supt. Newell H. Odell this week, Pat McNallen, band director for the local schools for the past two years has resigned his position here, effective at the end of the present school year.

The announcement stated he had signed a contract with the Childress school system, and will take up his duties there next September.

In speaking of his move, McNallen stated that he had made a large number of friends here and that he hated to leave, but felt that he could not afford to pass up the opportunity for advancement to a larger school system.

He asked the Review to express his sincere thanks to the citizens and students of the Cross Plains Independent School District for the many favors, courtesies and cooperation extended to him during his two years in the system. He said that he would always remember Cross Plains as one of the finest places he ever lived and worked in and that he would never forget his many friends here.

THE BAYOU PHILOSOPHER WANTS SCIENCE TO LET UP ON FLIES, AND WORK MORE ON FLIES, MOSQUITOES

Editor's note: The Bayou Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on the Bayou has a sound idea this week, whether he gets anywhere with it or not.

Dear editor: I read the other day where for four billion dollars scientists can establish a man-made satellite a thousand miles out in space, and while I hadn't realized there was a satellite shortage, I'm willing to go along with the idea, the same as I am with plans for makin a hydrogen bomb, newer type atom bombs, etc.

But it seems to me scientists scatter their fire. They're movin on to new jobs before they finish the old ones.

Take the common house fly. One of the worst afflictions man has, but there ain't a fly less today than there was 25 years ago. Or take ants. Or mosquitoes.

It seems to me there's ascrew loose somewhere when a deep-thinkin scientist about to unlock the secret of nuclear energy or figure out how to conquer space has to stop in the middle of a calculation that may be it to swat a fly.

If the brains of science was brought to bear on the fly problem with the same degree of white heat used on splittin atoms, the fly nuisance could be eliminated for all time.

Like it is now, science is just half-hearted about it. It perfects a sure death for flies, like DDT, and everybody buys a spray gun and cities lay down clouds of the stuff and it works for a while, until the fly catches on and develops an immunity to it.

I got confidence in scientists, they got the brains to outsmart the fly, if we could keep em on the problem long enough to finish it. As it is now, with the brainiest men, the best laboratories, and nearly all the money there is, the scientific mind today can figure out no really better way to kill a fly than to hit him with a fly swatter. With radar, interceptor planes, radioactive waves, etc. to throw against a human invader, all we've got against the fly is screen wire.

The same thing applies to mosquitoes, chiggers, greenbugs, potato bugs, bollweevils, corn borers, etc. I would like to see Congress appoint a commission to draw up a list of common every-day pests which ought to be eliminated before we go any deeper into nuclear energy or outward into space. Just draw up the list, hand it to the scientists, and tell em they can't play with atoms any more until they clean up these loose ends. There ain't nothin more ridiculous than a man about to fire a rocket load of explorers out into space havin to stop and scotch a chigger bite.

Yours faithfully, J. A.

LONE STAR Agriculture

Released by The Texas Department of Agriculture

By John C. White, Commissioner

The American housewife, long noted for her "fix-it" ingenuity with the common hairpin, has come up with another unique feature in the home scheme.

She has discovered that the ordinary cotton plant is an attractive addition to her flower garden.

This may come as a surprise to those who think of cotton only in terms of its importance in the Texas economic structure. It may also be hard to visualize by a person who remembers the drudgery of his youth spent in pulling a heavily loaded cotton sack down endless rows in the boll field.

But it is sometimes difficult to see the trees for the forest—and it is equally hard to recognize the individual beauty of a single cotton plant when it is swallowed up in the millions of acres of green fields that extend throughout the state of Texas annually.

Yes, cotton is a beautiful plant. Varieties with green lint, red leaves or long staple are ideally suited for garden and display purposes. Given ample space and moisture, the plant produces an abundant number of attractive blooms during the summer which are transformed into a snowy wonderland of open bolls in the early fall.

In recent years, the Texas housewife has discovered this fact and she has taken advantage of it. But there is another factor to be considered. She might be breaking the law! There are 189 cotton producing counties in Texas which are subject to Pink Bollworm quarantine regulations. Fifty-nine of these counties in South Texas and the Rio Grande Valley are limited to specific cotton growing periods during the year to combat the spread of the destructive Pink Bollworm insect. It is in these latter counties that the housewife risks running afoul of the Pink Bollworm law as administered by the Texas Department of Agriculture.

For example, a cotton fancier in Brownsville, where planting and plow-up dates are mandatory, may find she has to destroy her "flower bed" by August 31 this year if she is to comply with regulations. This might ruin the entire effect of summer garden, especially if she planted late in the season and the cotton did not have adequate time to bloom.

The Texas Department of Agriculture certainly has no intentions of pressing charges against housewives who innocently violate the cotton regulations. However, plants found growing in areas where their existence may constitute a breeding place for Pink Bollworm will have to be destroyed if they conflict with the legal growing season.

This word of advice, then, to the person who may contemplate adding cotton in the flower garden this year: Make sure of the law—then go ahead.

Burkett Womens Club Meets On Tuesday At Home of Mrs. Morgan

The club will hold its next meeting in the home of Mrs. Lou Burkett. Each member will bring a covered dish and supper will be served at 7:30 p.m. The group will quilt some quilts for the old folks home.

The program, "Electric Service With Safety," was given. Mrs. Merrel Burkett gave a talk on "Play Safe With Electricity" and Mrs. T. C. Strickland gave a talk on "Safety is no Accident." Several helpful hints on the use of electricity were given by Mrs. V. C. Adams.

A flower game was enjoyed, after which refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Hardy Harris were here from Big Spring Sunday for a visit with relatives and friends.

Soil Conservation District News

Bitterweed is spreading in this area and may become quite a pest, unless steps are taken to stop the spreading of the plant. Bitterweed is an annual plant that reproduces by seed. The plant is bushy with many branches and has yellow flowers in April and early May. The seeds are in the process of maturing at this time.

The plant is poisonous and has caused much financial losses to sheepmen in several counties southwest of this section.

Invasion of this plant can be prevented by properly grazing our rangelands so as to keep a good cover of native grasses. Bitterweed makes its first appearance on bare soils and never in places where good stands of perennial grasses are found.

The Lower Clear Fork Soil Conservation District Board of Supervisors met in Albany, Wednesday, May 21. N. M. George of Baird is chairman of the board. Cooperative arrangements were approved on

FROM BRUSH TO GRASS—In 1948 Garner had the brush dozed. Goats were run for two years to control sprouts. Fallen brush was left to protect grasses and now most of it has decayed. The native grasses, such as Little Bluestem, Sideoats grama, Indiangrass, and Texas Wintergrass have increased to make a good cover. Even with very little rainfall, Garner has wintered his sheep on this pasture without any supplemental feed. There is plenty of Texas Wintergrass, which is protected by the cover of this warm season grasses.

Native Grasses Very Important In Keeping A Cover Over Lands

Native grasses have won again in their eternal struggle to keep a cover over hills and valleys, dominate other vegetation, take everything our Texas climate can offer, and still produce a good amount of quality forage for livestock.

Leonard Garner, two and one-half miles southwest of Dublin, has 239 acres of native pasture that is now in good and excellent range condition. Twenty-five ewes and 15 yearling cattle were carried on this pasture all winter. The sheep were not fed anything and they were in good flesh all of the time. The cattle were only fed cake a few times during the winter.

Mr. Garner started cooperating with the Upper Leon Soil Conservation District in 1944. He made a thorough study of his land, vegetation and needed treatment and worked up a plan of operations to apply the soil and water conservation practices that were consistent with the capacity and needed treatment.

Improving this 239 acres of native pasture was part of this plan. In 1948 Garner dozed down the brush and ran goats (from 100 to 150 head) to control sprouts until 1950. Under the fallen brush the grasses were protected from grazing and able to make good seed crops. Grazing was deferred during the summer and fall season in 1950 and during the summer of 1951.

The principal native grasses that increased to make this good pasture were Little bluestem, Sideoats grama, Indiangrass and Texas wintergrass.

How About Your Plans for Cotton This Year?

Cotton planting time is just around the corner.

The wise farmer will be thinking about plans for the 1952 crop. Production of this important fiber will not be government-restricted, but labor will be scarce; fertilizer and insecticide supplies may be adequate, but prices will be higher. It would be well to order these materials well in advance of the time they will be needed.

The farmer who plans ahead is the farmer who will come out ahead financially.

Fitting cotton into a balanced farm program, practicing proper soil conservation methods, insect control and fertilizer applications is the answer to higher yields and higher income.

Talk over with your County Agent your cotton crop plans. Come in and talk it over with us.

A Soldier's View

By Pfc. Paul Greenwood

Today is May 14 and at mail call I just received my copy of the Cross Plains Review published April 24. In his editorial column, "As I See It", Jack McCarty turns from "the pleasant subject of rain to the unpleasant subject of 'World Conditions'." Here Mr. McCarty mentioned the dismal outlook on life of some of the younger men of this generation. This outlook is undoubtedly shared by a few elders too.

I think these voiced opinions that "U. S. A. (and that's a mighty good name) is on the road to ruin," are more talk than thought. We have rumors in the army amounting to the same thing. For instance, last week it was rumored that draftees would be extended to three years of service. This week the almost "positive report" was 21 months. It's still 24 months. The first rumor was what we feared, the second what we wanted.

These rumors start and continue through ignorance and weakness. Somewhere they must be blocked. Someone must be strong, willing and American.

No one person understands every path our government takes, nor her many fields of activity. Here in Germany I feel and see how strongly we, the Americans, have put one solid foot against Stalin's back and the other foot in his face. We mean business and it's showing.

Do you wonder about the millions of dollars designated each year for Europe? As far as I can see it's being spent effectively and necessarily. You hear about wastes? Did you ever spend a million dollars, every cent without waste?

Oh yes, Brother, we've got our troubles but according to the history Mrs. Dave Lee exposed, patiently, to me, nations and peoples have always had troubles. And I guess good ol' U. S. A. has broken records of overcoming "difficulties" in her short 200 years. Who was responsible? It wasn't man's best friend, but the people and of course their prayers. It's confidence and faith of the people that gives life to democracy. Once the individual gives way to false propaganda he has weakened the heartbeat of free people and has aided the very enemy he fears most.

I'm not being so brave and over-optimistic but just so very proud of the place I'm homesick for . . . and in ending here is a slogan, "Don't Doubt, Find out."
