Success--

As banks prosper only in proportion that their customers succeed, it is only logical that they should be interested in every method or plan that is vital to the conduct of the business of each depositor.

With this thought of mutual prosperity in mind, we invite our depositors to talk over every business problem with us. If we can assist with our experience, we shall be most happy to have rendered a worth-while service.

SAFE BURGLARS OPERATE AT DEPOT TUESDAY NIGHT

Tuesday night burglars entered the depot here and opened one safe and wrecked the combination lock on another in an attempt to open it. The money was in the safe they failed to open. Twenty domestic money orders were all that was missing of any importance when a check up was made early Wednesday morning.

W. C. Wilkinson, agent, opened up at four o'clock Wednesday morning, and upon discovering the robbery, notified City Marshal, Jim McMillian, at once, and he went to work immediately, wiring officers in nearby counties to be on look out for men. It is stated that a car was seen to leave the depot at 10:30 of the night of the robbery, long after business hours, which is thought to have been the car used by the men who did the work.

There were two suspicious characters in town the afternoon preceding the robbery. Recently safes have been burglarized in Brown and Coleman counties, and officers think probably it is all the work of the same party or parties.

Eunie Marsh of Carbon, has accepted position with the Cross Plains Motor Co. He is a brother to Tom Marsh, who has been with the company for some time.

GOOD WELL AT CROSS. CUT EXTENDS FIELD

Moore and Wilson's well on the A. B. Teston tract, came in since last report, with an estimated production of 50 barrels. This well was brought in on new territory and extends the field about a mile east, which will in all probability cause increased activity. On their Williams No. 1, they are setting 5 inch casing and will probably drill in today.

M. E. Wakefield is rigging up on the Elsberry west of Cross Cut two miles. Stone & Co. are spudding in on their Gun No. 2.

T. B. Slick's Chambers No. 1, reported underreaming at 1600 feet, preparing to drill deep test.

Mahlstedt Mook Oil Co have deepened their Newton No. 1 5 feet and increased production from 75 to 250 barrels.

Conway & Curry have also deepened their Chambers No. 1, and increased production from 30 to 75 barrels.

Williams, et al, are rigging up on H. A. Newton tract one mile south of the Cross Cut field, in new territory.

The Pennant Oil & Gas and Pope and Wilson, are still fishing for tools on their west Bryson No. 4 east of town.

Mrs. Glen Adams, who has been visiting in Marshall for several weeks, returned home, Saturday.

C. OF C. HAS IMPORTANT MEETING; MUCH INTEREST

At the C. of C. meeting Tuesday night, several important matters were brought under consideration.

A committee from the C of C was appointed to meet with the City Council Monday night to take up the water problem.

A second committee was appointed to raise balance of budget for this year from delinquent members.

The body voted unanimously to retain Bruce MacQuaide as band director and continue to support the C. of C. Band.

It was also decided to change the C of C fiscal year from Feb. 20 to Jan. 1.

A third committee was then appointed to confer with Shackelford county officials relative to designation of highway north. It was then decided to have poultry show in the near future and a committee was appointed to make plans and arrangements, which will be announced later.

At the next regular meeting, a banquet will be spread for the membership. At this meeting officials for the coming year will be elected. A nominating committee was appointed Tuesday night.

OVER 4,000 BALES HAVE BEEN WEIGHED HERE TODAY

J. W. Payne, public weigher, has weighed 4,050 bales, he states. And many bales have been hauled home, waiting for higher market. In addition to this number, several hundred Farm Bureau bales have been shipped out and probably 1,200 round bales, all of which have not been weighed here. Figure up the totals and you will find that the grand total of bales produced here will reach somewhere between 5,000 and 6,000 bales, with some cotton to pick yet.

Both gins are still running, and cotton continues to come in—from some where, but it will soon be gathered. Farmers have been fortunate in having an exceptionally good fall for gathering their cotton.

Notice

The Review is requested to announce that the Parent-Teachers will have a call meeting at the school house Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Each member urged to be present.

The Lyceum

The second number of the White & Brown Lyceum course, was given here Monday night, under the auspices of the C. of C. Band, featuring Miss Guila Adams, with duets, and quartets by local young ladies, and special music by the orchestra. A packed house enjoyed the program. The next number "Cappy Ricks" will be given on Dec. 12. This will probably be the best number of the entire course.

Pounding

The Methodist Ladies, representing the entire membership, gave their pastor, Rev. Brabham, and family, a pounding, last Thursday evening. It was a surprise—and a very agreeable one.

CROSS PLAINS GOING FORWARD; BUILDING BOOM ON

The new home of the Morgan-Gray Motor Co. has just been completed. And this week work was started on the service station for Little & Bachus, while the new Methodist church will be under construction in few days.

The Baptist expect to start their new church building in the very near future, while other buildings are being considered. Let the good work go on. Come to Cross Plains—The small city with a big future—a good place to make your home.

Interesting Wrestling Match

Last Thursday night Abe Caplan, Coleman's undefeated mat artist, met Ray Zimmer, noted grappler of Kansas City, in a hard fought match here. Zimmer won the first fall in eleven minutes with the Japanese arm lock, and Caplan took the second fall in 35 minutes with his famous "flying mare". Zimmer was not in condition to return for the third fall, so Caplan was conceded the victor. A large crowd was out to see the match.

This Thursday night these men will meet again here for a finish match, with no time limit, it is stated. It is advertised that Caplan and Zimmer tip the scales at 180 each. This is expected to be one of the best bouts ever staged in this section.

Ray Zimmer and Kalil Pasha wrestled to a draw at Brownwood last Friday night.

Babe Wood has resigned his position with the Cross Plains Motor Co. and will join his mother at Carbon. His father just recently died, and he is going to take charge of his mother's property, for her. Babe is a splendid young business man. We will regret to lose him and his splendid wife, but wish them well where they go.

Deer Plains News

Our school opened Nov. 3, with Mr. Price as principal and Miss Rae V. Grubb of Eastland, as assistant. We are hoping for a good school this term. The trustees have a large pile of ready wood on the school ground. They have erected a nice little house over the well.

Most of the farmers have some cotton to pick yet.

Mr. Price and wife, Miss Ethel Pierce and Miss Alice Flowers attended church at Sabanno Sunday night.

Miss Gladys Erwin of Sabanno spent Saturday night and Sunday with Miss Loma Irvin.

Mr. Elbert Pierce and family visited in Cross Plains Sunday afternoon.

Tuesday morning about 3:30 or 4 o'clock some hounds ran up to Burris Irvin's barn where they were turned back by some yard dogs, and after the hounds were gone the barn was searched and the wolf was found parked in the north shed under a double disc, cultivators and other implements. The gate-way was barred, and a small white Bull dog that tries to be a sport, was set over in the shed. He went back and measured himself with the wolf. Double Disc, wheels, single trees, cultivators, beams, hens nests, Turkey feathers and smoke was so thick you could hardly see what was taking place by lantern light, but I don't think any of the implements were damaged so they can't be repaired and used next year.

Note: This news received too late for publication last week.

ANOTHER BUILDING GOES UP; PROSPERITY EVIDENT

Little & Bachus have torn down their old frame garage building on South Main Street, and have started work on an up-to-date filling station, to be constructed at an estimated cost of $3000. The building will be a stucco veneer and will cover two lots on corner where they have been operating garage. This new structure will materially improve the appearance of South Main. There are several other good business locations on main street—wonder who will be next to build.

Banquet

The Morgan-Gray Motor Co. opened their new Chevrolet headquarters Wednesday evening with big banquet. Some fifty guests enjoyed the occasion. A number of special musical selections were rendered by Bruce MacQuaid, Mrs. Brabham and Maxine Gwin. A very sumptuous repast was followed by a number of after dinner talks. Ed Morgan of the firm, as toastmaster made the opening address, followed by V. V. Hart, F. M. Gwin and Rev. Brabham, city; Rev. Stutts of Abilene, and Mr. Gray of Rising Star, a member of the firm.

FOOT BALL DOUBLE HEADER HERE ON LAST FRIDAY

Last Friday afternoon Cross Plains high school foot ball eleven played both Baird and Carbon on the local grounds. They took Baird on first and defeated them by score of 13 to 3. The Carbon huskies then came on the field and took off the honors by score of 37 to 7, proving that two games in one afternoon was too much sugar for a dime.

However Carbon must be given credit for having a strong well organized eleven. Baird also put up a stiff fight but failed to make much headway against the stubborn resistance of the Cross Plains boys. Had Carbon entered the contest first, instead of Baird, while the local eleven were fresh, the score would have been different.

Cross Plains boys who made touch downs, were: Geo. Swan, Dave Lee and Bailey Wilson.

Gold Winners

Those who won the gold prizes in the big drawing here Saturday, were:

W. E. Lusk, $25.00.
Dave Lee, $15.00.
Volley McDonough, $10.00.

These prizes will be given away here each Saturday, until January 3rd, at which time $200.00 in gold will be given away, it is stated.

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D.D., Dean of the Evening School, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for November 23 THE TRANSFIGURATION

LESSON TEXT—Luke 9:28-36. GOLDEN TEXT—This is my beloved Son; hear Him.—Luke 9:35. PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Shows His Glory. JUNIOR TOPIC—Beholding Christ's Glory. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Glory of Jesus Christ. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Transfiguration a Preparation for the Cross.

While it is true that in this lesson the disciples are witnesses of Christ's glory, the full truth is that the manifestation of Christ in glory was to give to the discouraged disciples a foregleam of the Messianic Kingdom. The hopes of the disciples were crushed when Christ announced His death on the cross. They were unable to see how victory could issue from death.

Jesus took with Him Peter, James and John and went into the mountain to pray. His chief aim in retirement was to get the disciples apart and into a state of receptivity so that He might show them the method of the kingdom. Before going to the mountain He declared that there were some standing in His presence who would not taste of death till they should see the Son of Man coming in His kingdom (Luke 9:27; Matt. 16:28). That their drooping spirits might be revived and their confidence restored, He is transfigured before them. Two men from the upper world are sent to converse with Him about his approaching death in Jerusalem (v. 31)—the very thing about which the disciples refused to talk. Then, too, God's own voice was heard in words of approval of Christ's course, directing them to hear the Master. Surely they cannot doubt His ability now to carry into execution His kingdom plans. The purpose, then, of the transfiguration is to give the disciples a foregleam of the coming kingdom, to enable them to see the kingdom in embryo. That this is true is not only shown by the context and circumstances, but by the inspired interpretation of one who was with Him and knew all that transpired (II Peter 1:16-19 R. V.). Note the outstanding features of the kingdom as displayed in the transfiguration:

I. Jesus Christ the Glorified King on Mt. Zion (v. 29).

The glorified king on this mount was intended to symbolize the Messianic kingdom when Christ returns to the Mount of Olives in Jerusalem (Zech. 14:4-17). This is still in the future, and will be literally fulfilled.

II. The Glorified Saints With Christ (vv. 30-31).

(1) Moses, who was once denied an entrance into Palestine, appears now in glory, representing the redeemed of the Lord who shall pass through death into the kingdom. Many thousands of the redeemed have fallen asleep and at the coming of the Lord shall be awakened to pass into the kingdom.

(2) Elijah, now glorified, represents the redeemed who shall pass into the kingdom through translation. Many shall be living upon the earth when the Lord shall come, and shall without dying be changed, and thus pass into the kingdom (I Cor. 15:50-53; I Theses. 4:14-18).

(3) They talk of the very thing which the disciples refused to believe, namely, the death of Christ.

III. Israel, in the Flesh, in Connection With the Kingdom, Represented by Peter, James and John (v. 28).

Israel shall be called from their hiding place among all nations of the earth and shall be gathered to Jesus Christ the King, as the central people in the kingdom (Ezek. 37:21-27).

(1) Peter proposes to build three tabernacles (v. 33). The Feast of Tabernacles looked forward to the glorious reign of Christ. Peter caught a glimpse of the significance of the transfiguration. His proposition showed that he thought of the Feast of Tabernacles, and therefore of the Millennium.

(2) The divine voice (v. 35). At this time God Himself uttered His words, assuring them that this One in glory was His Son Jesus Christ.

IV. The Multitude at the Foot of the Mountain (vv. 37-43).

This is representative of the nations which shall be brought into the kingdom which shall be established over Israel. See Isaiah 11:10-12. The people here were grievously oppressed by the devil. About the time of Christ's first coming he did his best to harass men. Just before Christ's coming again he will be especially active, for he knows that his time is short.

TAILORED AND COAT FROCKS; CROWNS REACH NEW HEIGHTS

SO FAR as the modes are concerned the business girl of today finds herself in a satisfying position. It happens that the sort of frocks which are appropriate for her everyday use are just the type that is most fashionable for daytime wear.

This simplicity would become monotonous if it were not for two things—the great variety of fabrics and the ingenuity of designers who vary the straight-line models by an infinity of small details in construction and trimmings. Fabrics include silks as well as cotton goods, fibre silks also, all in many different patterns. The family of flannels boasts many beautiful cross-bar, plaid and striped patterns, fibre silks include the knitted weaves, and silks many crepe materials and crepe satin. Twills, kasha cloth and other woolsens play their usual important roles in the tailored mode.

Frock of Dark Blue Twill.

Striped, plaid and cross-bar patterns are made up in the simplest manner on the lines of the frock pictured. The gilet and front panels of silk, in contrasting color, enliven the plain materials, or a little vivid pompon. If such great names were not behind them they might be called grotesque and they will be much modified before other than Parisiennes will adopt them. No representation is given these eccentric hats in the group of beautiful models pictured. It includes two smart tailored hats at the top—one of felt with a band of plaited ribbon about the crown and a pretty feather fancy at the front. The felt hat is an all-the-year-round item in millinery which is good style at any season and the shape pictured is above reproach. A tall-crowned hat with graceful brim displays one of the new metallic ornaments as its outstanding feature. The hat may be in velvet, satin, visca or faille and is adaptable to any daytime wear. The lovely wide brimmed model at the left is of gold lace with rich brown fur as a trimming and is suitable for afternoon or dinner wear. It is rivaled for these uses by the soft velvet hat next to it; fuchsia velvet with huge ostrich fancy in orchid and fuchsia tones for trimming.

Group of Paris Hats.

The fascinating story of winter millinery has reached its climax in brilliant headwear, designed for wear during the strenuous hours of the social season. It is a story of luxurious fabrics and trimmings. Velvet, batters' plush, metallic cloths and laces, felts and satins, supplemented by malines and chiffons, make the foundations for the adornments approved for the different types of hats. These adornments in tailored millinery are simple—but often intricately made—of feathers, ribbon, metal or composition. Paris caps the climax of winter millinery with very high crowns—going to extremes that may or may not be followed in America. Certain of the great designers appear to have become a little reckless and they have presented hats of ombre felts having high, conical crowns topped by a big silk

Nice Things for Christmas Gifts

Rich Chenille Bag

A gift that is sure to be cherished is shown in the rich shopping bag pictured. It is crocheted of brown chenille with gay flowers introduced on one side. The band and handles at the top are of brown suede leather, and the bag is lined with brown silk. Silk cords slip through slashes in the suede band, to close the bag, and the handle ends are concealed under little triangles of leather.

Painted Tally Cards

Among the delightful gifts that even an amateur artist can make are tally and score cards. Every hostess who receives them will be twice pleased, for no gifts are so cherished as those made by the donor. A graceful decorative design is shown in the illustration, simply as a suggestion—for there is no end to the ways in which the characters on playing cards are introduced in decorations.

Dainty Gift Lingerie

This dainty lingerie set is going to make some lucky lady happy at Christmas time—if a hint to the wise is enough. A step-in and chemise are made of fine, light-colored voile and decorated with disks of voile, the size of a silver dollar, in three pretty colors. They are set on with hem-stitching in colored threads.

Christmas Lampshades

Happy is the home-maker who receives pretty lamp or candle shades at Christmas time—nothing helps more to deck out the house and make it cheerful. Here is a new shade made of thin silk, or fine crepe paper, in two colors, rose and light blue. A wire frame is first covered with the rose color, put in plain, and over this the light blue is plaited. Gold lace, silk or paper roses and four tassels finish off this novelty in shades.

Permanent roads are a good investment—not an expense

Road Building Far Behind the Automobile

Millions now recognize the automobile as a necessity. It is no longer a luxury for the few. Sixty per cent of its use is for business.

Because of this the modern paved highway has become an economic necessity.

Yet although the mileage of Concrete Roads and Streets has been steadily increasing, our highway system today lags far behind the automobile. The great majority of our highways are as out of date as the single-track, narrow gauge railway of fifty years ago.

Such a condition not only seriously handicaps the progress of the automobile as a comfortable, profitable means of transportation, but also holds back commercial, industrial and agricultural advancement in practically every section of the country. It is costing taxpayers millions of dollars annually.

Highway building should be continued and enlarged upon.

Your highway authorities are ready to carry on their share of this great public work. But they must have your support. Tell them you are ready to invest in more and wider Concrete Highways now.

Thanksgiving

Suddenly over the border
 That shelters night from day
 The sun had dropped and as quietly
 Sped on its ceaseless way.
 But in the west there lingered
 In dapper hues and fair,
 A twilight which awakened
 The watcher's heart to prayer.

God, for beauties shown me,
 The mauve, the crimson and gray,
 That herald the advent of evening
 And tell of departing day;
 For clouds tinged with gold and silver,
 For heaven's lanterns fair,
 For all of earth and its wonders,
 I offer this, my prayer.

I thank thee for friends who are loyal,
 For dear ones, for love that is true,
 For home and the comfort it brings me
 When day and my labors are through;
 For victories won o'er the tempter,
 For strength of my body of clay,
 For peace in our land of freedom,
 And hope—for the coming day.

—Chicago Tribune.

Thanksgiving Reveries and Queries

Thanksgiving is the first of America's own holidays. As the earliest to be set apart its observance runs through the whole history of the nation. Like most other distinctive features of our American order of life it sprang up out of the local soil. It was at first and for many years colonial. It became national only as its observance spread from town to town, from colony to colony, from state to state.

While it has a historical interest all its own, Thanksgiving is identified with no single event, no special occasion, no definite date in our history. It recalls no single act, as does "Independence day." It commemorates the name and service of no man, as do the birthdays of Washington and Lincoln. It is not shared with other people as are Christmas and New Years.

Day Identified With All.
 The American Thanksgiving day is identified with the soil we till, for whose harvest we give thanks. It is, therefore, identified with the toil and the toilers whose tillage and productive labor, inventive skill, constructive and distributive enterprise feed, clothe, shelter and develop our own people and many of their kith and kin in the old fatherlands across the seas. "Thanksgiving" is another and greater Labor day. It recalls and calls forth all kinds of effort by all classes of people. It merges the common product of the common toil, for the national possession of which the President and governors of the whole people call upon them to thank their Father-Creator and the good providence of the Great Provider. In thus reminding us that our harvests are the joint product of Mother Nature, the children of men and Father God, Thanksgiving is first of all the American people's expression of grateful appreciation for their "country"—its land and waters, its fertility and beauty; for our great out-of-doors nature, its response to human effort, to man's discovery and his working with natural law. Thanksgiving is, therefore, nature's harvest-home holiday.

Celebrates Entire Year.
 And yet it celebrates the full round year. While held after harvest, Thanksgiving does not let us forget the seed and sowing of the springtime, the plowing and weeding of the summer as vital to the all-inclusive process of reaping. Moreover, and above all, in this linking soil and skies, earth and the heavens, it is the Day of Remembrance of the Father of us all, as the great giver not only but as the greatest worker, with whom we may work and who works with all for the common good. "My father worketh hitherto and I work," said the greatest of the sons of God and the children of men. These reveries awaken queries, also. Graham Taylor declares in the Chicago Daily News. They spring from the sincerest recognition and most appreciative acknowledgment that the American people are and always have been, a composite race, and that adopted citizens from many lands have done very much to make America what it is. The early history of the United States interweaves fine, strong strands of English, Scotch, Celtic, French, Spanish and Jewish life, with not few or feeble negro traits, and toils, and some relics of Indian and old Mexican civilization. The human conquest and amazing development of this new continent cannot be accounted for without crediting much to the toil and many other enrichments of the Latin, Slavic and southeastern European immigrants. Contributions to our culture in art and philosophy and to our cultivation of the land and our commerce of the sea come from the older civilizations of China, India and Japan.

Founders of Country's Faith.
 Foundations of America's faith were laid by pilgrims and cavaliers, Catholics and Protestants, each in its own way, yet all to the same great end.

They are merely listed here as queries raised by our Thanksgiving reveries, their discussion being reserved for timely opportunity. Their mere statement, however, makes bold the undoubting faith and hope that these, and all other problems of American life, can all and only be solved and settled by the spirit inspiring Katherine Lee Bates' great patriotic hymn that breathes the soul of our American Thanksgiving:

O, beautiful for spacious skies,
 For amber waves of grain,
 For purple mountain majesties
 Above the fruited plain.
 America, America,
 God send His grace on thee,
 And crown thy good with brotherhood
 From sea to shining sea.

O, beautiful for heroes proved
 In liberating strife,
 Who more than self their country loved
 And mercy more than life.
 America, America,
 May God thy gold refine,
 Till all success be nobleness
 And every grain divine.

Holiday of the Home.
 Thanksgiving is a day sacred to the home. More of it is spent at home

OCCASIONS FOR THANKSGIVING

THAT we have bread enough and to spare for the hungry of the earth.

That our ancient order of obedience and orderly change stands fast.

For the hope of better social understanding and just dealings.

That our great opportunities of world-wide helpfulness remain.

That the idea of brotherhood among the nations has taken root.

For the true men and women who are giving lives of service.

For leaders raised up and the opportunity of following them.

For the open door of knowledge and the desire for truth awake in men.

For joys of simple living and the unnoticed saints.

For work and rest, the patience that continues, the ideals that soar.

For the love of home in all of us, and its satisfaction when it comes.

That the world is bigger than we, and the joy of adventure which it brings.

—Congregationalist and Advance

than at church, in family reunions than in public assemblies, in serving the needy, the lonely, and the homeless than in formal services of worship. Its sanctuary is the thoughtful, thankful heart more than the house of worship. Who that has lived in any of our oldest colonial states, especially in New England, can ever forget, or fail to have a glow of heart at every remembrance of the real home Thanksgiving day as observed on the soil from which it sprang? At the very mention of it, what visions reappear, of the long preceding preparations for it at the old family homestead; of the letters flying forth and back between the old folks at home and the scattered young folks in their new homes, or transient abodes; of the railway station platforms and cars thronged by merry home-bound children-of-an-older-growth, and children's children; of greetings at the threshold of the old farm house or village home, mingling the smiles and laughter of the living with tears or silent, sorrowing, undying yearning for "the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still"; of the bountifully laden, beautifully decorated family table, with America's fatted turkey as a "welcome home," instead of the "fatted calf" of ancient days.

National Development.

In the truest American homes the Thanksgiving family reunion is all that Robert Burns sang of "The Cotter's Saturday Night," and still more for being more joyous, though no less religious for all that. And there are Americans, not a few, who feel deep down in their hearts for their own country what the Scotch singer sang of his: "From scenes like these old Scotia's grandeur springs."

Out of this population more wonderfully composite than constitutes the citizenship of any other nation, a very distinctive national development has evolved. It is recognized by ourselves and other peoples as distinctively our own. As such, and as a distinct contribution to the world's possessions and to the heritage of mankind, it is here and now being considered, without any comparison with the characteristics of other nations, as better or worse.

This life-spirit of the American people is a fact, and a fact that raises these two queries at least: Is this American life or spirit distinct and valuable enough to be conserved, developed and perpetuated? If so, how can it maintain its distinct identity and value, enriched by the accessions from abroad which are appreciated and welcomed, without being transformed, diluted, or deteriorated? These are not only fair questions, but are queries that are forcing themselves upon the more or less strained attention of our people.

Thankfulness and Hope

Thanksgiving is not, at its best, what anybody says or does, but rather what he feels. And so it is, that all of us, equal members in a free democracy, are privileged to draw our inventories together, to total up the credit side of our ledger of life as one united people, and to join together in a festival of good cheer and hearty thanks for what the past has yielded; to face the future with a mutual hopefulness in what it holds in store—Farm and Ranch.

Swamp-Root a Fine Medicine

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition they may cause the other organs to become diseased. You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition. Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so. But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by parcel post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

Rub on Good Old Musterole
 That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippé or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once. Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief. Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold. As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, does the work without blister. Just rub it on with your finger-tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

To Mothers: Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

H EADACHES, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are Nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If this is allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

SAYS LABOR FARED WELL IN ELECTION

GOMPERS SAYS HE IS PLEASED WITH RESULTS OF NOV. 4 BALLOTING.

WILL DO THEIR VERY BEST

Reaction, Drunk With Victory, May Soon Find Itself Intoxicated Upon Imaginary Wine.

El Paso, Texas.—Labor fared "almost phenomenally well" in the general elections, Samuel Gompers, president of the Federation of Labor, said in a public statement, commenting on the results of the Nov. 4 balloting.

"In the face of the tremendous Coolidge landslide there were elected to the new House of Representatives more members having labor's endorsement than are to be found in the present House," Mr. Gompers asserted.

"The new Congress is not likely to pass any measure greatly detrimental to the interests of the workers and our people generally," the statement continued.

The election comment was combined with an outline of the forty-fourth annual convention of the federation.

"The delegates," he said, "will do their best to act wisely for the good of the workers and for the common good of our Republic."

"While I have no desire to discuss specific questions in advance of the action of the convention, there is one important fact to which I may call attention, because it is already achieved, and can not be changed. It has been said by many writers in many publications that labor fared badly in the recent election. That is not true. Labor fared well—almost phenomenally well.

"In the face of the tremendous Coolidge landslide, there were elected to the new House of Representatives more members having labor's endorsement than are to be found in the present House. In the present House there are 170 such members. I have not the exact figures as to the new House, but the number of members elected with labor's endorsement will exceed that figure. Among these are Republicans, Democrats, and Farmer-Labor party members.

"The new Congress is not likely to pass any measure greatly detrimental to the interests of the workers and our people generally. This is one of the most hopeful facts of the day and one which to us is encouraging and reassuring. Reaction, seemingly drunk with victory, may soon find itself intoxicated upon imaginary wine."

TEACHERS SHOULD BE ENCOURAGED TO MARRY

State Secretary Opposes Rule—Board Sustains Marris in Dismissal.

Austin, Texas.—Opposition to the rule or custom followed by the trustees of certain public schools of Texas that when a female teacher marries during the term she automatically forfeits her contract and ceases to be a teacher was voiced by one member of the Board of Education, but the board as a whole did not pass upon the rule.

Secretary of State J. J. Strickland, is the member who would not have restrictions placed against marriage of female school teachers. Such a rule, he said, is against the public policy. He would encourage marriage rather than discourage it.

This developed at the hearing before the Board of Education of the appeal of Mrs. O. L. Smith, former Yoakum public school teacher, who had been dismissed by the trustees because of her marriage during the Christmas holidays last year. The trustees, in dismissing Mrs. Smith, asserted that she was cognizant of the rule because she had succeeded a teacher who had stopped teaching because of her marriage before expiration of her contract.

Mrs. Smith lost in the appeal, but the decision was not made on the particular point of violation of the anti-marriage rule. When State Superintendent Marrs some time ago sustained the order of dismissal it was on the grounds that Mrs. Smith had no claim on the trustees for payment of her full salary which she contended for. In the opinion of the State Superintendent, Mrs. Smith waived her rights when she abandoned her contract and entered into a new one to teach from the date of her dismissal until the close of the examination period. She later attacked the validity of the anti-marriage restriction.

Morris Sheppard Spent No Money. Austin, Texas.—United States Senator Morris Sheppard spent no money to be elected to the United States Senate, according to his sworn statement filed with the Secretary of State. He avers that he spent $3,720 to win the Democratic nomination in the first primary, but nothing after that. T. M. Kennerly of Houston, his Republican opponent, also avers that he had spent nothing. D. S. Davenport of San Antonio Democratic nominee for Congress, totaled only $260.

TO SURVEY FOR BIG IRRIGATION PROJECT

Will Consider Proposal Tarrant County Reservoir for Flood Control.

Austin, Texas.—The State Board of Water Engineers has announced that within three weeks engineering forces will be sent to the Pecos River to make the surveys of topographic maps for the large irrigation project near Red Bluff, which contemplates watering 200,000 acres.

A. H. Dunlap, member of the water board, said the dam will be built in Texas some twenty-two miles by the meanderings of the river below the New Mexico line and about fifteen miles by air line from the boundary, and that some of the backwater will fill the channel in New Mexico, but not for any great distance. The exact dam site will be determined following the completion of the surveys.

A small part of the 200,000 acres is now under irrigation in several districts. All of these are to be combined into one large reclamation district.

Another announcement made by the water board was that parties sent to the Upper Brazos are running levels or engaged in control work in the Aspermont territory. One party is on the Salt Fork of the Brazos near Aspermont and the other in the Double Mountain Fork between Aspermont and Rotan.

John A. Norris, chairman of the water board, is in Fort Worth for a conference regarding the organization of Tarrant County into one reclamation district, which contemplates three large storage reservoirs for flood control, these to be on the Trinity. In this manner it is proposed to end disastrous flood in that county.

The consolidated whole county district is said to be a certainty.

FERGUSON WRIT IS DISMISSED IN COURT

Appellate Tribunal Passes on Suit Based on Supreme Court Decision.

Austin, Texas.—The final court chapter in the case involving Mrs. Ferguson's eligibility to serve as Governor was written when the Third Court of Civil Appeals affirmed the proceedings brought by Charles M. Dickson against Secretary of State Strickland and others and then dismissed the cause. This action was in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court when it answered certified questions in the case, as tendered by the appellate court, which were all decided in favor of Mrs. Ferguson and held her eligible without reservation.

The Travis County District Court had refused Dickson's plea for an injunction to prevent Mrs. Ferguson's name going on the ticket and when Dickson's plea reached the appellate court that tribunal related the issues to Supreme Court in a certificate. The answers sustained the trial court and now the appellate court makes that decision final and ends the litigation by affirming the judgment refusing the injunction and then dismissing the cause.

Pro Agent Captures Rum Runners.

New York.—Armed only with a small monkey wrench, a prohibition agent recently pursued and captured, single-handed, three rum runners and the $15,000 cargo of whiskey which they had attempted to smuggle up the North River. Just a few minutes before, the agent, inspector Michael Sweeney, with two coast guards, had captured a companion speed boat with a crew of three and a similar cargo valued also at $15,000.

"Old Stuff," Says Volstead.

Granite Falls, Minn.—The opinion of Judge Morris A. Soper of Baltimore that fruit juices may be made for home consumption regardless of the alcoholic content is "old stuff," Andrew J. Volstead, father of the prohibition act, declared. Judge Hand held the same opinion in New York a long time ago, according to Mr. Volstead.

To Consider Mexico.

London.—One of the first acts of the new Conservative administration of the British Government is expected to be the re-opening of a complete investigation of the relations between Great Britain and Mexico.

CARRYING LIQUOR IN ANY QUANTITY VIOLATES LAW

Defendant's Claim He Had Right to Liquor for Medicinal Purposes Overruled.

Austin, Texas.—Carrying on the person of any quantity of intoxicating liquor less than one quart and even as small amount as a drink, an ounce, half a pint or pint, which is to be used as a beverage, constitutes transporting of liquor and therefore a violation of law, the Court of Criminal Appeals held in a divided opinion rendered in affirming the case of A. Gandy, on appeal from Milam County, where he had been convicted of transportation of liquor and sentenced to two years.

Gandy, when arrested, had a half-pint of whiskey in his pocket. He said it was given to him by a negro in the town of Milano and he had carried it home, traveling along a public road for a distance of about twelve miles. He contended that the Legislature having given him the right to possess intoxicating liquor for purposes other than for sale, he would have the right to accept the bottle, which he said was given him by a bootlegger and to carry it about his person. Gandy claimed that he had gotten the liquor for medicinal purposes and not for sale or to be used as a beverage. He claimed to have had the right to possess and transport it under amendments to the Dean prohibition law enacted by the Thirty-Seventh and Thirty-Eighth Legislatures, the former permitting possession of liquor except for the purpose of sale, and the latter providing that in all cases where the possession of intoxicating liquor for the purpose of sale is made unlawful, proof of the possession of more than one quart of such liquor shall be prima facie evidence of guilt, which may be rebutted by evidence showing that the possession was not prohibited.

In majority opinion written by Judge O. S. Lattimore and concurred in by Judge H. L. Hawkins, who also wrote an opinion, it was held that the contention set up by Gandy is not the law. Presiding Judge W. C. Morrow took a different view and dissented from the majority opinion.

He also wrote an opinion, declaring that "the mere act of possessing less than a quart of intoxicating liquor may be identical with that of carrying such quantities of liquor upon the person and there is no express language in the statute declaring that it shall not be carried on the person when not illegally possessed, where the law expressly states that there is no unlawful intent coming from the possession of less than a quart of liquor, the inference should be, in the absence of proof to the contrary, in favor of innocence rather than guilt. Under such circumstances, the implication would be one of lawful possession rather than unlawful transportation."

The Legislature, according to the opinion of the majority of the court, is without power to enact laws in derogation of or opposition to the purposes of the eighteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution, "and we take it," says the opinion, "that any law whose construction would make its operation a hindrance to or in opposition to the prevention of manufacture, sale or transportation of such liquor for beverage purposes, should be held unconstitutional and as violative of the prohibitions of both State and Federal Constitutions."

The transportation of the half-pint of whiskey, admitted by Gandy to have been carried by him twelve miles along a public road and found on his person by arresting officers, makes him amenable to the law forbidding transportation of intoxicating liquors.

Japan's Evolution

Setting Rice in Japan.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

There is a marked background of American influence in the rise of Japan—one of the most rapid and striking national developments recorded in history.

In half a century Japan's population has more than doubled, her wealth has increased twenty-fold, and she has been transformed from an almost forgotten hermit nation into a world power, a leader in industry and commerce, with an ambition to be second to none in capturing the markets of the world.

For Japan's development, there are reasons both internal and external. First and greatest of all was the new mind created long ago by the Oyomei philosophy, which threw the reactionary Confucian cult into comparative shadow.

In this mental discipline it should be noted that every one, without exception, of "the fifty-five creators" of the New Japan was trained, and some proved to be past masters. Without this element, the Japan we now know would not, could not, have been. Introduced from China, in the Seventeenth century, the philosophy of Wang Yang-ming (Oyomei in Japanese) was developed and taught by books and expounders in fifty different centers.

Two hundred and fifty years of peace sufficed for the accumulation of the nation's potencies in preparation for emergence, when the opportunity should come.

During all this period there was unbroken contact with Europe through the Dutch at Nagasaki. Even the Portuguese and Spanish contacts of seventy years, with merchants, military men, and engineers, had left their mark on the Japanese language, architecture, music, military science, and dietetics. Then, from the Dutch, with their mechanics, physicians, language, books, apparatus, and hospitals, such wonderful results were wrought in art, science, invention and trade, in ideas and commodities, that Swift, through his knowledge of Holland, was able to pen his extravaganza, "Gulliver's Travels." Dutch culture had been like seed sown everywhere.

A thousand spots of light foretold the coming dawn of a long bright day. Hundreds of native physicians read the noble Dutch language and in a measure practiced European medicine. At Nagasaki, Dr. Pompe van Merdervoort had established a hospital and trained physicians, while Dutch mechanics, with the aid of Japanese workmen, had built a steam yacht.

"Black Ships" From America

In a word, Japan was as a rich clover field already pollinated from the Occident. Like a steady line of bees, the Dutch ships had been bringing the vitalizing influences for more than two centuries. Yet to the Japanese, the modern revelations, on a large scale, were the "black ships" of the American whalers that gathered in their waters. What the islanders learned both from honestly shipwrecked sailors and from the voluntary waifs (chiefly mutineers) quickened the national temperament.

President Fillmore's fleet, which was ordered to sail for the East in 1852, on the same day that Japan's greatest emperor, Mutsuhito, was born, consisted largely of store ships, which were loaded with American inventions and products.

After Commodore Perry had completed his treaty-making, there was held in 1854 on the strand at Yokohama, Japan's first industrial exposition. In 1872 the more ornamental presents were in a storehouse at Shizuoka, the place of the last shogun's banishment. The things of use, in agriculture and the arts, had already been widely distributed and copied, especially in that new part of the empire called the Hokkaido (Yezo), which throughout bears a very American aspect; and the reason of this is clear. A commission of scientific and practical men, sent out from Washington, was active in the island between 1870 and 1880.

Even more impressive to the student of Japan's evolution were the personnel and equipment of at least five of the first American missionaries. Three, besides being mature in experience, had been long before in China, or were men of science and technical ability. Dr. J. C. Hepburn opened a hospital and dispensary and trained the first surgeons and physicians, and he and S. R. Brown built the bridges spanning the gulf between the two languages, with their grammars and dictionaries. They also trained the intellectuals, and introduced likewise photography and the finer arts.

The third, G. F. Verbeck, was a marine engineer and master of seven or eight languages. For years, when the Gospel was still unpalatable, he taught the Japanese everything they wished to know. Then he organized their university, taught them the spirit of occidental law and custom, explained the freedom of the press and how church trustees held property. He also proposed the great embassy of 1872-4 around the world to study the details of Western civilization, half the personnel being chosen from his pupils.

Quick to Follow Their Guides.

Back of all was the nation's youth, with its vigor, its innate capacity to select, adopt, adapt, and become adepts. Both geologically and in human history, Japan is the youngest country in Asia.

From 1859 to 1868 not a few foreign helpers on the soil gave their time and talents to aid Japan; but after 1870 and until 1900 and later, Argonauts from the West came in fleets to cover Japan with a golden fleece. No fewer than 5,000 yatoi (salaried foreigners), experts in every line and field of human endeavor, were called out and employed. These men started the first railways, telegraphs, lighthouses, navy yards, foundries, mercantile projects, mechanical inventions, appliances, and agencies.

Yet the Japanese already had the capacity and ambition. The aliens were only the guides, helpers, and servants. An American missionary, Jonathan Goble, invented the jinrikisha, that has rolled round the world. Nevertheless the yatoi did not teach the rudiments and point the way. It was the Japanese who made the New Japan.

When feudalism had been abolished, in 1871, and the once-despised merchant was given honor and opportunity, he unfolded the pinions of a towering ambition and looked abroad to capture the markets of Asia. It was "like giving wings to a tiger." As early as 1860 young men had been sent to Holland for naval education; but it was under British officers that the Imperial navy was reconstructed, while French first, and then Germans, recreated the military system. (Admiral Togo was for 12 years under British naval instruction). To Americans was given the task of national education, methods of finance being borrowed from Belgium.

Only the learned Japanese, in 1870, could by ear or eye read anything higher than shop accounts or fiction. All erudition was in the hieroglyphics of China. It was said by aliens first tacking the Japanese script and style of speech that there were seven distinct languages in one. At times Japanese gentlemen in conversation seemed to have graduated from an old-time school for the deaf, for they used their fingers and the palms of their hands most industriously to show just what ideographs they were using or the meaning they wished to convey.

Their New Education.

A reform in this direction meant the uplift of humanity and the manifold increase of the nation's resources through productive individual ability. These facts seem to explain the national renaissance better than official statistics, imposing as these figures of millions are, or even the present-day reports of trained alien journalists. The new education uplifted a whole nation. Almost every village and hamlet pulses with new life. The victories, both over China and Russia and in the world's markets, were won first in Japan's public schools. In 1920 these numbered 25,644, with 178,450 teachers and 8,362,992 pupils—an almost unparalleled record, even in the Occident.

In all this there is a living parable. In Old Japan man was too much like a beast, while the beast was too much like a man. Herein are the parent facts. For ages, and even until today, Japan has suffered from too much hand labor. She needs more live animals at the plow and in the fields, the streets and the mills, while she needs to uplift her men and women.

What has really made the New Japan is this emergence in social life of the new spirit of personality and of individuality. The old civilization was communal. The new national life is based, in the main, on the assertion of the inherent powers of the individual, yet in unity of purpose with the commonwealth.

Judith of Blue Lake Ranch

DAVID BURRILL LEE

SYNOPSIS.—Bud Lee, horse foreman of the Blue Lake ranch, convinced Bayne Trevors, manager, is deliberately wrecking the property owned by Judith Sanford, a young woman; her cousin, Pollock Hampton, and Timothy Gray, decides to throw up his job. Judith arrives and announces she has bought Gray's share in the ranch and will run it. She discharges Trevors, after shooting him twice in self-defense. The men on the ranch dislike taking orders from a girl, but by subduing a vicious horse and proving her thorough knowledge of ranch life, Judith wins the best of them over. Lee decides to stay, for a while at least. Judith becomes convinced that her veterinarian, Bill Crowley, is treacherous. She discharges him and gets back Doc Tripp, her dead father's man. Pollock Hampton, part owner, comes to stay "for good." Trevors accepts Hampton's invitation to visit the ranch. Judith's messenger is held up and robbed of the monthly pay roll. Bud Lee goes to the city for more money, getting back safely with it, though his horse is killed under him. Both he and Judith see Trevors' hand in the crime.

In the clump of brush, close to the outer fringe, behind a low, broad boulder, a man had lain on his belly no longer ago than yesterday. Broken twigs showed it, a small brush crushed down told of it, the marks of his toes in some of the softer soil proclaimed it eloquently. And, had other signs been required, there they were: two empty brass cartridges where the automatic ejector had thrown them several feet away.

While Judith visualized just what had occurred, saw the tall man—she must have been tall for his boot toes to scratch the earth yonder while his rifle-barrel lay for support across the boulder in front—resting his gun and firing down into the canyon—Lee was back at her side, saying shortly: "What do you think? There's a plain trail up here, old as the hills, but tip-top for speedy going."

"Ara," said Judith without looking up. "It runs down into the next saddle, to the north of that ridge, curves up again and with monuments all along the way, runs straight to the Upper End and comes down to the northeast to the lake. It's the old Indian trail. If the man we want turned east, then he went right on to the lake before he stopped putting one foot in front of the other. Unless he hid out all night, which I don't believe."

"What makes you think he went that far?"

"There's no other trail up here that gets anywhere. Now," and she rose swiftly, confronting him, "the thing for you to do, Bud Lee, is to get back to your horse, take the road, make time getting to the Upper End and see what you can see there."

Hurrying back to their horses, they rode to the ranch-house where Judith, with no word of adieu, left Lee to go to the house. Lee made a late lunch, saddled another horse, and when the bunk-house clock stood at a quarter of four, started for the Upper End.

"That girl's got the savvy," was his one remark to himself.

CHAPTER VI

Under Fire

Lee, coming to the water's edge sought to guess where the old Indian trail come down. And here again, startling him for a second time, Judith rode up.

She, too, had a fresh horse; she too now carried a rifle across her arm. Bud Lee frowned.

"One of us," he said calmly, looking her straight in the eyes, "is going back. Which one?"

"Neither!" she retorted promptly. She even smiled confidently at him. "For I won't. And you won't."

"Do you need to be told," he asked her coolly, "that this is no sort of job for a girl? You'd only be in the way." "If you want glittering generalities," she jeered at him, "then listen to this: A man's job, first, last, and all time, is to be chivalrous to a woman! And not a bumptious boor!"

With that she spurred by him, taking the trail which led off to the right and so under the cliffs and to the mouth of a great, ragged chasm. In spite of him, Bud Lee grinned after her. And, seeing that she was not to be turned back, he followed.

They left their horses and followed the old footpath, made their way into the chasm deeper and deeper and little by little climbed upward. The climb was less difficult than it looked, and fifteen minutes brought them to the upward plateau and to the door of an old cabin, made of logs, set back in a tiny grove of cedars.

"I haven't been here for a year," cried the girl, forgetful of the constraint which had held them until now. "It's like getting back home for the first time! I love it."

"So do I," Lee said within himself.

"Look!" exclaimed Judith. "Some one has been repairing the old cabin! He's made a bench yonder under the big tree, too. And he has walled in the spring with rocks, and . . . Who in the world can it be? There's even a little garden of wild flowers!"

Bud Lee, for no reason clear to himself, flushed. He offered no explanation at first. Here he spent many an hour when the time was his for idling; here upon many a Sunday, when work was slack, did he come to smoke alone, loaf alone, read from the few books on the cabin's shelves.

"Maybe," he suggested at last, when it was clear that Judith was going straight to the door, "this is where our stick-up guys hang out. Choice place for a cutthroat to hibernate, huh?"

"I don't believe it," answered Judith positively. "The man who made his hermitage here has a soul! I'd rather own this cabin and live here, than have a palace on Fifth avenue!"

She knocked at the door, knowing that silence would answer her, but hoping to have a man, calm-eyed, gentle-voiced a romantic hermit in all of his picturesqueness, come to the door.

"Going in?" asked Lee in well-simulated carelessness.

"No," she told him freezingly. "Why should I? Would you want people poking about into our home just because it was in the heart of a wilderness and you weren't there to drive them out?"

"No," answered Bud gravely. "Now that you ask me, I wouldn't! Let's go find that trail."

"But," continued Judith, "not being a fool, and realizing that one of the men we want might possibly be in hiding in here, I am going to peek in."

"Not being a fool," he repeated after her, adding gently, "and being a girl, which means filled with curiosity."

A disdainful shoulder gave him his answer. The door was unlocked, after immemorial western custom, and Judith opened it. Lee heard her little gasp of pure delight.

"He's a dear, the man who lives here!" she announced positively. "You can just tell by looking at his home."

Looking in over her shoulder, Bud Lee wondered just what in his one-room shanty had caught her enthusiasm. There was the rock fireplace with an iron hook protruding from each side for coffee-pot and stew-pot; a bunk with a blanket smoothed over cedar boughs; a shelf with a dozen books; little else, so far as he could see or remember, to catch at Judith's delight. Yet she, looking through woman's eyes, read in one quick "peek" the character of the dweller in this abode. One who was content with little, who loved a clean, outdoor life, and who was tranquilly above the pettiness of humanity. Judith closed the door softly.

Going straight across the plateau, she showed him where one could clamber up a steep way to the ridge. Once up there, it was but ten minutes until, in a hollow, they found the monument marking a trail, a stone set upon a boulder.

It was after five o'clock. When, following the trail back and forth in its winding along the side of the ridge, they found the signs they sought, it was fast growing dark. But there, in a narrow defile where loose soil had filtered down, were tracks left by a large boot. Lee went down on his hands and knees to study them in the dusk. He got up with a little grunt and moved down the trail. Again he found tracks, this time more clearly defined. So dark was it now that they had lighted several matches.

"Two men," he announced wonderingly. "Fresh tracks, too. Made this morning or last night, I'll bet. One coming east from Indian Head. The other coming west from the plateau behind us. Who's he? Where'd he come from?"

"He's the second of the two men who shot at you," said Judith quickly. "Don't I know every trail in this neck of the woods, Bud Lee? He followed another old, worn-out trail on the south side of the ranch. They met here just as I knew they would!"

"What for?" Lee frowned through the darkness at her eager face. "What would they want to get together for? If they had any sense they would scatter and clean out of the country."

"Unless," Judith reminded him, "they don't intend to clean out at all! Unless they mean to stick to the cliffs and try their hands again at their sort of game. They'll figure that we will expect them to be a long way from here by now, won't they? Then where would they be safer than right here in these mountains? Give me a rifle and something to eat and I'll defy an army getting me out of here. And think of it: If this is Trevors' work, if he means business, think what two gunmen on these heights could do to us. They could pick off a three-thousand-dollar stallion down in the pens; they could drop more than one prize bull or cow; and she added sharply, "If they thought about girls as some men think, they could take a chance on scaring Judith Sanford out of the country."

Lee stared at her a long time in silence.

"I wouldn't have said," he offered finally, "that Bayne Trevors would make quite so strong a play as that."

"You wouldn't! Then look him in the eye! And where's his risk, if he's picked the right men, if he sees them through, keeping the back door open when they want to run for it? You just gamble your boots, Bud Lee, that Bayne Trevors . . ."

Without warning, without a sound of explosion came a wry whine into the still air, a little venomous ping, and a bullet sped by just over their heads. But, through the gloom, they both saw the flash of the gun as it spat fire and lead, and, as though one impulse commanded them Judith's rifle and Bud Lee's went to their shoulders and two reverberating reports rang out in answer.

"Lie down, d—n it!" cried Bud Lee to the girl at his side, as again there came the flash from the cliffs off to the right and as again he answered it with his rifle.

"Lie down yourself!" snapped Judith. And once more her rifle spoke with his.

For one instant, framed against the darkening sky along the cliff edge five hundred yards away to the right, they saw a silhouette of a man, leaping from one boulder to another, a man who looked giganticly big in the uncertain light. They fired; he jumped again and passed out of sight.

"Got his nerve," grunted Lee as he pumped lead at the running figure.

As an answer there came the third flash, the bullet striking the trail in front of them. And then the fourth flash, from a point a hundred yards to the left of the other.

"That's Number Two," muttered Lee. "They've got us in the open,

Between Them—a Man Lay Helplessly.

Judith. Let's beat it back to the cabin."

"I'm with you," said Judith, between shots. "It's just foolishness" . . . bang! . . . "sticking out here" . . . bang! . . . "for them to pop us off." Bang! Bang!

They ran then, Bud slipping in front of her, his tall body looming darkly between her and the cliffs whence the shots came. He slid along the sharp slope to the plateau, putting out his arms toward her. And as she came down, Bud Lee grunted and cursed under his breath. For there had been another flash out of the thickening night, this one from the refuge toward which they were running. A third man was shooting from the shelter of the cabin walls. And Lee had felt a stinging pain as though a hot iron had scorched its way along the side of his leg.

"Hurt much?" asked Judith quickly. Without waiting for an answer, she pumped two shots at the flash by the cabin.

"No," grunted Lee. "Just scared. And now what? I want to know." Bud Lee, in the thicker darkness lying along the edge of the plateau, sat with his back against the rocks while he gave swift first aid to his wound. He brought into requisition the knotted handkerchief from his throat, bound it tightly around the calf of his leg and said lightly to Judith:

"Just a fool scratch, you know. But I've no hankering to dribble out a lot of blood from it."

Judith made no answer. Lee took up his rifle and turned to the spot where she had been standing a moment ago. She was not there.

"Gone!" he grunted, frowning into the blackness hemming him in. "Now, what do you suppose she's up to? Fainted, most likely."

He got up and moved along the low rock wall, seeking her. A spurt of flame from the east corner of the cabin drew his eyes away from his search and he pumped three quick shots in answer.

Again he sought Judith, calling softly. There was no answer. Once more came the spurt of flame from the shelter of the cabin wall. Then fifty yards off to Lee's right, some fifty yards nearer the cabin, another shot.

The first suspicion that one of the men from the cliffs had made his way down to join issue at close quarters, was gone in a clear understanding. That was the bark of Judith's rifle; she had slipped away from him without an instant's delay and was creeping closer and closer to the cabin.

"D—n the girl!" cried Lee angrily. "She'll get her fool self killed!"

But as he ran forward to join her, he realized that she was doing the right thing—the only thing if they did not want to lie out here all night for the men on the cliffs to pick off in the morning light. He knew that she could shoot; it seemed that she could do everything that was a man's work and which a woman should know nothing about.

Frowning into the night, he thought that he could make out the dim blur of Judith's form. The girl was standing erect; shooting, too, for again the duel of red spurts of flame told where she and her quarry stood.

Meanwhile Lee ran on, changing his original purpose, swerving out from where Judith was moving forward, turning to the left, hopeful to come to close quarters with their assailant before she could go down under that sharp rifle-fire or could bring down the other. For certainly, if she kept on that way, the time would come when some one would stop hot lead.

Lee shifted his rifle to his left hand, taking his revolver into his right. From the cliffs came a shot and he grunted at it contemptuously. It could do nothing but assure those below that there was still some one up there.

"Three of them to our two," he estimated, "counting the two jaspers on the cliff. Two of us to their one, counting what's down here. And that's all that counts right this minute."

A shot from Judith; a shot from the cabin; two shots from the cliffs. The two shots from above brought fresh news; not only were they closer together, but they indicated the men up yonder were coming down. Lee hurried.

Then, at last, his narrowed eyes made out the faint outline of that which he sought. Close to the cabin, low down, evidently on his knees was the most important factor to be considered now. Still Lee was too far away to be certain of a hit and he meant with all of the grim determination in him to hit something at last. He ran on, drawing the fire away from Judith. A rifle ball sank close to his side, another and another. He lost the dim shape of the kneeling man, who, he thought, had risen from his knees and was standing, his body tight-pressed to the cabin.

"Why the devil doesn't he run for it?" wondered Lee.

But evidently, be the reason what it might, the man had no intention of running. A bullet cut through Lee's sleeve. At last Lee answered. He ran in closer as he fired and, running, emptied his revolver, jammed it into his waistband, clapped his rifle . . . and realized with something of a shock that there were but two rifles on the cliffs to take into consideration. That other rifle, at the cabin, was still. Out of ammunition? Or plugged? Or playing possum? Which?

"Stop shooting!" he shouted to Judith.

"I'm coming!" she cried back to him.

Almost at the same instant, their two rifles ready, they came to the cabin. Between them on the ground a man lay at the corner, moving helplessly, groping for his fallen gun, falling back.

"Open the door," said Bud. "I'll get him inside and we'll see who he is. Hurry, Judith; those other jaspers are working down this way as fast as they know how."

Judith, taking time to snatch up the fallen rifle, ran around to the door. Lee slipped his hands under the armpits of the wounded man and dragged him in Judith's wake. In the cabin, the door shut, Lee struck a match and went to a little shelf where there was a candle.

"Bill Crowley!" gasped Judith. Almost before Lee saw the man's face he saw the canvas bag tied to his belt, a bag identical with the one he himself had brought from the bank at Rocky Bend.

"The man that struck up Charlie Miller," he said slowly. "And there's your thousand bucks, or I'm a liar. I get something of their play now; those two fellows up there were waiting to meet him and split the swag three ways. And I've got the guess they'll be asking a look-in yet."

Lee knelt and with quick fingers sought the wound. There was a hole in Crowley's chest, high up near the throat, that was bleeding profusely. At first that seemed the only wound. But in a second Lee had found another. This was in the leg, and this, like Lee's was bound tightly with a handkerchief.

"Got that first rattle out of the box!" commented Lee. "See it? That's why he stuck on the job and didn't try to run for it. Looks like a rifle ball had smashed the bone."

He didn't look up. His fingers, busy with the string at Crowley's belt, brought away the canvas bag. There was blood on it; it was heavy and gave forth the mellow jangle of gold.

"You win back your thousand on tonight's play," he said, holding up the bag to Judith, lifting his eyes to her face.

But Judith shrank back, her eyes wide with horror.

"I don't want it! I can never touch it!" she whispered.

Suddenly she was snaking from head to foot, her eyes fixed in terrible fascination upon Crowley's face. Lee tossed the bag to the bunk across the room, whence it fell clanking to the floor.

"Now she's going to faint," was his thought. "Well, I won't blame her so d—n much. Poor little kid!"

But he did not look at her again. He tore away Crowley's shirt to discover just how serious the wound in the chest was. Unless Bill Crowley bled to death, he stood an excellent chance to doing time in the penitentiary. Lee stanch the flow of blood, made a rude bandage, and then, lifting the body gently, carried it to the bunk.

"Now," said Lee, speaking bluntly, afraid that a tone of sympathy might merely aid the girl to "shake to pieces." "We've got a chance to be on our way before Number Two and Number Three get into the game. Let's run for it, Judith."

Judith shook her head. "We'll stay here until morning," she said finally, her voice surprising Lee, who had looked for a sign of weakness to accord with her sudden pallor and visible trembling.

"What for?" he wanted to know. "We'll have another fight on our hands if we do. Those fellows, this deep in it, are not going to quit while they know that there's all that money in the shack!"

"I don't care," said Judith firmly. "I won't run from them or anybody else I know! And, besides, Bud Lee, I am not going to give them the chance to get Crowley away. . . . Do you think he is going to die?"

"No. I don't. Doc Tripp will fix him up."

"Then here I stay, for one. When I go, Bill Crowley goes with me! He's going to talk, and he's going to help me send Bayne Trevors to the pen."

Bud Lee expressed all he had to say in a silent whistle. He'd made another mistake, that was all. Judith wasn't going to faint for him tonight.

"Then," he said presently, setting her the example, "slip some fresh cartridges into your rifle and get ready for more shooting. I'll put out the light and we'll wait for what's next."

Judith replenished the magazine of her rifle. Lee, watching from under the low-drawn brim of his hat, noted that her fingers were steady now. Crowley moved in his bunk, lifted a hand weakly, groaned and grew still. Lee rearranged his bandage.

"Put out the light now?" he asked Judith.

"No," she answered. "Since we've got to spend the night with a man in Crowley's shape, it will be more cozy, won't it, with the light on?"

She even put out her hand to one of the books on the shelves which she could reach from her bench.

"And now," she added, "I'm sure that our hermit won't mind if we peep into his library, will he?"

"No," answered Lee gravely. "Most likely he'll be proud."

Lee found time to muse that life is made of incongruities, woman of inconsistencies. Here with a badly hurt man lying ten feet from her, with every likelihood of the night stillness being ripped in two by a rifle-shot, Judith sat and turned the pages of a book. Bud Lee flushed as he watched her. She turned the pages slowly, came back to the fly-leaf page, read the name scrawled there and, turning swiftly to Lee, said accusingly:

"David Burrill Lee, you are a humbug!"

"Wrong again," grinned Lee. "A hermit, you mean! 'A man with a soul!'"

"Scat!" answered Judith. But, under Bud Lee's teasing eyes, the color began to come back into her cheeks. She had been a wee bit enthusiastic over her hermit, making of him a picturesque ideal. She had visioned him, even to the calm eyes, gentle voice. A quick little frown touched her brows as she realized that the eyes and voice which her fancy had bestowed upon the hermit were in actuality the eyes and voice of Bud Lee. But she had called him a dear, and Lee had been laughing at her all the time—had not told her, would never have told her. The thought came to her that she would like to slap Bud Lee's face for him. And she had told Tripp she would like to slap Pollock Hampton's. Good and hard!

She had called him a dear. And now she wants to slap his face. Well, well! What next?

Insect-Eating Plant

An insect-eating plant is the sundew, so called because of a shining sticky substance secreted by glands in the sunlight like a rare gem, says the Detroit News. By means of the sticky mess, the sundew attracts and entangles its prey. Then the edges of the leaf curve inward, forming a sort of stomach into which an acid secretion is poured to digest the meal. The portions which cannot be digested are later thrown out and the trap is set for the next victim.

The sundew seems to know when food is near, for if meat is placed close to it the plant slowly reaches out for it. If a portion is placed within a few inches of the plant the leaf will bend toward it until the tiny hairs enfold the delicacy and the sticky substance completes the grip.

WEAK, RUN DOWN AFTER SICKNESS

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Mrs. Dube Well and Strong

E. Hartford, Conn.—"After a severe sickness I was so weak that I could not do my housework, so my mother told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The first bottle helped me so much that I took six more bottles and felt fine. I have just given birth to a nice baby girl and am feeling strong and well. So different from the way I felt before. I am taking the Vegetable Compound right along while nursing. The baby seems to be in good health, and my friends say they see a big change for the better in me."—Mrs. EUGENE DUBE, 59 Woodbridge Street, East Hartford, Connecticut.

The Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine to bring back health and strength. Many mothers have found this true, as did Mrs. Dube. Ask some of your neighbors and friends, for there are women everywhere who know by experience the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
