WASHINGTON LETTER. (From our Regular Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, Jan. 21st, 1889. Representative Springer, backed by 143 of his colleagues, has given the Republican Senate an opportunity of showing how sincere the great interest they are constantly expressing for the Territories really is.

Senators Gorman, Vest, Vance, and others, are vigorously combating the growing sentiment among the Democrats in the House to accept the Senate tariff bill as better than no legislation on the subject.

TROUBLE HUNTERS.

Men Who Climb Telegraph Poles and Things They See. How Breaks in the System Are Discovered and Remedied—Looking on Beecher's Death—A Lineman Who Did a Woman a Service and Had to Pay for it.

To a person not thoroughly versed in matters pertaining to telegraphing the hook on the street, it is a very interesting sight to see a man climbing a telegraph pole.

When a wire 'grounds' it is a different thing. The earth, of course, is a repository for all electrical fluids, and as an exposed wire touches at any place it naturally interferes with the circuit.

According to the statement of half a dozen linemen spoken to, some very strange sights have been witnessed by those who perch on a crossbar of a pole.

When a man is climbing a telegraph pole, he is in a position to know that the pole will never be considered by the House.

The active fight that Mr. Blaine is giving McKinley in his fight for the Speakership is having its effect. His chances are now regarded as best by close observers, but if Blaine should get 'turned down' by Harrison, it will cause a big tumble in McKinley stock.

There are nearly 250 nominations pending before the Senate, the most of them for postmasters. There is no reason why they should not be confirmed except that the Republicans want to keep the places for Harrison to fill.

CHAPTER XXII.

On the following morning, about 10 o'clock, Edward Cossey was still at breakfast, a dog cart drew up at his door and out of it stepped Col. Quartich.

"Mie de la Molle," he repeated, "perhaps you will remember a conversation that I had with you on the subject of the story."

From whom we come, to whom we go, and from arms are ever open to clasp the children who can hear her voice. Drawn thence by an impulse which she could not have analyzed, she went upstairs, put on a thick pair of boots, a mackintosh and an old hat, and sallied out into the wind and wet.

"I don't quite know what to say," he replied at length. "The whole affair is so sudden and so full of mystery, I thought that I had better not tell you anything more until I had had some time to think."
