The handling of funds is the basic fun of a bank, but that in itself does not measure up to the service factors that a bank of today should assume. This bank realizes the full depth of obligation, and accordingly has surrounded itself withers and department heads who are competent to end sound, conservative advice on such of your businorblems as you may desire to entrust.

MRS. JAMES HEMBREE PASSES TO REWARD

Mrs. James Hembree, lovingly known to all in this part of the country as "Grandma" Hembree, and one of the pioneer residents of the Cottonwood community, died at her home there at 9 o'clock last Monday morning, after a lingering illness of several months. Grandma Hembree was 71 years old, a native of Georgia and moved to this part of Texas in its early days of settlement, first living in Hunt county and moving from there to Cottonwood nearly forty years ago. She was a faithful member of the Baptist church and had always lived a kind and exemplary christian life.

Deceased is survived by her aged, ever kind and devoted husband, James Hembree; one son, John Hembree of Abilene, and three daughters, Mrs. Lula Thomason of Abilene; Mrs. Minnie Ledbetter of Scranton, and Miss Eunice Hembree of the Cottonwood home. She has a large number of grand-children, six of the grandsons as follows, serving as pall bearers: L. M. and W. J. Hembree, Homer Willie and Hubert Ledbetter, and Willie Thomason. Funeral services, conducted by her pastor, Rev. Howell, assisted by Rev. Baker of Putnam, were held at the Baptist church in Cottonwood and interment was made in the cemetery there at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

No better can we typify the christian fortitude with which this good lady bore her long suffering and peaceful passing away than is contained in the words of Alfred Tennyson, when inspired by the thought of his own spirit ebng into the great sea of Infinity—"When That Which DREW From Out the Boundless Deep Turned Again Home!"

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me;
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea.
But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Of sound and foam that turns
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns home again,
Twilight and evening bells,
And after that the dark;
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark;
For, though from out our bourne of time and place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

Twilight and evening bells,
And after that the dark;
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark;
For, though from out our bourne of time and place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

EVANGELIST MAY LOCATE AT CISCO

Evangelist Will Hogg may locate in Cisco. This is not settled, but while here Saturday Mr. Hogg admitted that that he was considering Cisco as a possibility for his permanent residence. "I expect to locate somewhere in this section," he said, "and I am considering Cisco among other places, though I have reached no definite decision."

The evangelist stated that he was concluding a very successful revival at Rising Star, which will come to a close tonight. "I shall go to my home in Memphis, Tenn., from Rising Star and enjoy a week's rest. My next revival will be held at Cameron, in Milam county.—Cisco News.

FIRST AIR-ROUTE BALE TO GERMANY

There was spirited bidding at Bremen, Germany following the recent return trip of the dirigible Graf Zeppelin. The great air craft, among other things besides her crew and passengers, numbering sixty or more people, carried th first bale of cotton conveyed by air-route across the ocean from this country. The bale was auctioned off, the proceeds used for the benefit of the Zeppelin's crew, and brought 14,000 marks, approximately $3,500. The Bremen cotton exchange was decorated liberally with flags in honor of the occasion, and all of the cotton importers over there participated in the bidding.

BIG REVIVAL CLOSES AT RISING STAR

Evangelist Will Hogg closed his meeting in Rising Star Sunday evening with scarcely standing room to be found. Rising Star received him in the same manner that Cross Plains. He left immediately after the Sunday evening service for Brownwood, where he took a train for home. He reached home Tuesday morning to be with his family, for the first time in ten weeks. Bro. Hogg will start his revival in Cameron Sunday, and will take Monday night off to come and deliver his lecture on "Crap of Khaki" here, Monday Evening, in the High School Auditorium. Get your tickets early, and help the Methodists. Bro. Hogg was invited back by all the churches in town.

CURBING THE RISING STAR-CISCO HIGHWAY

The Rising Star Record of last week reported that the work of cutting trenches for the curbing on each side of the highway leading from Rising Star to Cisco had begun and the putting in of curbing was to begin at once. The work of widening the roadbed, which has been going on for several months, has been completed and the topping is following. In the recently completed work on the road leading east from Cross Plains we now have one of the best hard-surfaced roads to the Eastland county line that can be found in this part of the county, and with the short link from there to Rising Star put in first class condition we will have a fine highway from here to Cisco.

BURKETT NEWS (By Vera Baker)

A play "Yimmie Yonson's Yob" was given by the High School Dramatic Club Thursday night at the Cupid Theatre. $42.95 was taken in. The proceeds will be used to buy books for the school library. After the play a box supper, given for the benefit of the Royal Neighbors, was given.

Mrs. Ralph Phillips celebrated her daughter's twelfth birthday, Gwendy-ton Phillips, Friday afternoon at her home. Prizes were won by Gatha Lee Brady, Ila Wesley and Dorothy Wesley. Sandwiches and cake were served to the following: Thelma and Ouida Casey, Mrs. Beetley, Marie Baker, Lucille Edington, Gatha Lee Brady, Ila Wesley, Murrell Howard, Dorothy Wesley, Crystal Jackson, Juanita Ray, W. C. Wilson, Howard Jackson, and Wayne Donaldson.

Lela Jo Oliver Celebrated her fifth birthday Saturday afternoon with a party.

Refreshments were served to McFerrin, Little Misses, Melba Mead, Estell Burns, Mary Ruth McFerrin, Mrs. Opal Kleong and children, Mrs. Pauline Nickolson, Estell Reed of Novice and Mrs. B. D. Wesley and Ila Wesley.

Miss Vera Pearl Oliver spent the weekend with Mattie Lou Smith at Winters. Mattie Lou returned with her and spent Monday.

Mr. Ney Cartwright of Santa Anna was a Monday visitore with Mr. C. D. Baker.

Mr. and Mrs. Gay Graham, Ernestine Oliver and Thelma Wilson attended the Rodeo at Coleman Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Burns spent Sunday, with C. D. Baker.

Mr. and Mrs. Niell Nicholson and Estell Reed of Novice spent Saturday here.

A second effort of Coleman's city commission to boost the population above 5,000 inhabitants has been successful, according to B. D. Loper, who has just completed his enumeration. The work was completed Saturday night, Mr. Loper said, and the total is 6,044. A few families that were missed will be added, but will not materially increase the number.

Coleman, city officials believe, has grown to the point where it cannot longer operate advantageously under a village charter.—Democrat-Voice.

M. Polishuk left last week for St. Louis where he will buy goods for his business here.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Murphy of Abilene was visiting friends here the past week end.

CHURCH LAYMEN HOLD REGULAR MEETINGS

Since the closing of the recent revival meeting in Cross Plains the preachers and laymen of the various local churches get together every Wednesday afternoon in the K. of P. Hall for a religious meeting. The meetings are well attended and much good is being accomplished therefrom. The chief purpose of the meetings is to keep matters religious up to the standard in Cross Plains and this community.

HUNTERS RETURN FROM N. M. WITH THE BACON

Tom Bryant Dee Anderson and Bob Bryant returned Tuesday of this week from a hunting trip in the mountains of New Mexico and brought with them two large bucks. They are probably the largest specimens of the black-tail deer variety that were ever seen here, were found in the mountainous country some thirty miles from Hot Springs, Ark. The horns of the larger one are in the Cross Plains Cold Storage and will probably be kept for the forthcoming banquet of the local Lions Club.

NOTICE

The Review is requested to announce that the country store, conducted by the Young Ladies Missionary Society of the Methodist church, will be held, as formerly announced, on November 15, 16, and 17, in the building adjoining the Helpy-Selfy store. On Saturday a generous food sale will be conducted.

Ralph Chandler, Herman Rudloff and John Browning left Thursday morning of this week for a deer and turkey camp hunt in the wilds of the Mason country.

VICTORY SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS

On Thursday evening of the past week, promptly at eight o'clock, the members of the Victory Sunday School of the Baptist Church were called around the banquet table in the Church basement. The spacious hall was elaborately decorated with the class colors, and the table groaned under the weight of the sumptuous repast. The occasion: The gentlemen of the class honoring the ladies for having won in the attendance contest.

The president of the class presided as Toast Master of the evening and the program followed the usual trend of programs at church festivities but was rather unusual in character of rendition.

The grades in the recent examination on last quarter's work were announced and Bibles were awarded to Messrs. Moon and Pyle, tying for highest grade, and Mrs. Campbell Morris, who followed with a close second.

The guests of the class for the evening were Supt. Haggard, Tom Upton, Superintendent of the Sunday; T. J. Clark, Harvey Dennis, Mr. Carmichael, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Geo. Scott, Olan Wilson, Harvey Dennis, Robert Young, Albert Gantlin, Author Carmichael and R. E. McGowen.

The program consisted of practical and inspiring talks on different phases of class work interspersed with music, reading and spicy contests of wholesome wit and humor. The program closed with a short talk to the Victory Class by our efficient teacher, Mr. Scott. The occasion was a decided success and proves that the Victory Class is up to the standard in right kind of social affairs as well as in others. Come and work with us; we will do you good.

A TALE OF THE WEST OF TWENTY YEARS AGO DRUMS OF THE SUNSET

By Robert E. Howard

The Wanderer.

"Murken owes me of a new hat," said Steve moodily, "And furthermore and besides it's time somebody showed him he aint runnin' this country. I crave to hunt for that mine I dreamed about it last night."

"You better forget the mountain-business and work with me here on my ranch," Advised Hard Luck, "I'll give you a job of herdin' sheep."

"Dont get insultin'," said Steve reprovingly. "How far up in them hills can a horse go?"

"You can navigate most of 'em on yore bronc if you take yore time an' et him pick his way. But you better not."

In spite of Hard Luck's warning, Steve rode up the first of the great slopes before the sun had risen high enough for him to feel its heat. It was a beautiful morning; the early sunlight glistened on the leaves of the trees and on the dew of the grass. Above and beyond him rose the slopes, dark green, deepening into purple in the distance. Snow glistened on some of the higher peaks.

Steve felt a warmth of comfort and good cheer. The fragrance of Hard Luck's coffee and flapjacks was still on his palate and the resilience of youth sang through his veins. Somewhere up there in the mysterious tree-lad valleys and ridges adventure awaited him, and as Steve rode, the lost mine of the Sunsets was least in his thoughts.

No trail led up the way he took, but his horse picked his route between boulders and cedars, climbing steep slopes as nimbly as a mountain goat. The cedars gave way to pines and occasionally Steve looked down into some small valley, heavily grassed and thickly wooded. The sun high in the sky when he finally pulled up his horse on the crest of a steep incline and looked down.

A wilder and more broken country he had never seen. From his feet the earth sloped steeply down, covered with pines which seemed to cling precariously, to debauch into a sort of plateau. On three sides of this plateau the fourth of east side fell away abruptly into cliffs which seemed hundreds of feet high. But what drew Steve's gaze was the plateau itself.

Near the eastern cliffs stood two log cabins. Smoke curled from one, and as Steve watched, a man came out of the door. Even at that distance Steve recognized the fellow whom Hard Luck had designated as Gila Murken.

Steve slipped from the saddle, led his horse back into the pines, a short distance and flung the reins over a tree limb. Then he stole back to the rest of the slope. He did not think Murken could see him, hidden as he was among the trees. But he did not care to take any chances. Another man had joined Murken and the two seemed to be engaged in conversation. After awhile they turned and went into the second cabin.

Time passed but they did not emerge. Suddenly Steve's heart leaped strangely. A slim girlish form had come from the cabin out of which the men had come, and the sunshine glistened on golden hair. Steve leaned forward eagerly, wondering why the mere sight of a girl should cause his breath to come quicker.

She walked slowly toward the cliffs and Steve perceived that there was what seemed to be a deep gorge, presumably leading downward. Into this the girl disappeared. Steve now found that the mysterious cabins had lost much of their interest, and presently he went back to his horse, mounted and rode southward, keeping close to the crest of the slopes. At last he attained a position where he could look back at the plateau and get a partial view of the cliffs. He decided that they were some of the Ramparts, spoken of by Hard Luck. They rose steep and bare for four hundred feet, deeply weathered and serrated. Gorges cut deep into them and promontories stood out over the abysses beneath. Great boulders lined the edge of the precipices and the whole face of the cliffs looked unstable and treacherous.

At the foot, tall forest trees masked a rough and broken country. And as he looked Steve saw the girl, a tiny, figure in the distance come out into a clearing. He watched her until she vanished among the trees, and then turned his steed and rode back in the direction from which he had come, though not following the same route. He took his time, riding leisurely.

The sun slanted westward as he came to the lower slopes and looked back to see the rim of the Ramparts jutting below the heights he had left. He had made a vast semi-circle and now the cliffs were behind and above him, instead of in front and below. He went his leisurely way and suddenly he was aware of voices among the cedars in front of him. He slipped from his saddle, dropped the reins to the horse's feet and stole forward. Hidden among the undergrowth, he looked into a small glade where stood two figures—the girl of the cliffs and a tall lanky man.

"No! No!" the girl was saying, "I dont want to have anything to do with you. Go away and let me alone or I'll tell my uncle."

"Haw! Haw!" the man's laugh was loud but mirthless, "Yore uncle and me is too close connected in a business way for him to rile me! I'm tellin' you, this aint no place for you and you better let me take you away to whar there's people and towns and the like."

"I dont trust you," she answered sullenly.

"Aw, now dont you? Come on—admit you done come down here just to meet me!"

"That's lie!" the girl cried, stung. "You know I just went for a stroll; I didn't know you were here."

"These mountains aint no place for a stroll."

"My uncle wont let me have a horse and ride, unless he's with me. He's afraid I'll run away."

"And wouldnt you?"

"I dont know. I havent anywhere to go. But I'd about as soon die as stay here much longer."

"Then let me take you away! I'll marry you, if you say so. There's many a gal would jump to take Mark Edwards up on that deal."

"Oh, let me alone! I dont want to marry you, I dont want to go away with you, I dont even want to look at you! If you really want to make a hit with me, go somewhere and shoot yourself!"

Edward's brow darkened. "Oh ho, so I aint good enough for you, my fine lady. Reckon I'll just take a kiss anyhow." He closed his hands and she drenched a small fist and struck him in the mouth, so that blood trickled from his lips. The blow roused all the slumbering demon in the man.

"Yore a spit-fire," he grunted, "But I'll low I'll tame you."

He pinioned her arms, cursed soulfully as she kicked him on the shins, and crushed her slim form to him. His unshaven lips were seeking hers when Steve impulsively went into action.

He bounded from his covert, gripped the man's shoulder with steely fingers and swung him around, smashing him in the face with his left hand as he did so. Edwards gaped in astonishment, then roared and rushed in blindly, fingers spread to gouge and tear. Steve was not inclined to clinch rough and-tumble fashion. He dropped his right fist nearly to his ankle and then brought it up in a long sweeping arc which stopped at Edward's chin. That worthy's head went back as if it were hinged and his body following the motion, crashed to the leaf covered earth. He lay as if in slumber, his limbs tossed about in a careless and nonchalant manner. Steve caressed his knuckles and glanced at the girl.

"Is—is—is he dead?" she gasped wide eyed.

"Naw, miss, I'm afraid he aint." Steve answered regretfully, "He's just listenin' to the cuckoo birds. Shall I tie him up?"

"What for?" she asked reasonably enough. "No, let's go before he comes o."

And she started away hurriedly. Steve got his horse and followed her, overtaking her within a few rods. He walked beside her, leading his steed, his eyes admiringly taking in the proud erect carriage of her slim figure, and the faint delicate rose-leaf tint of her complexion.

"I hope you wont think I'm intrudin' where I got no business," said the Texan apologetically, "But I'm a-seein' you to whar ever you're goin' That bird might follow you or you might meet another one like him."

Well, many people in the United States, may not be satisfied with the result of the election, but they can find some comfort in the hope that the country may be fortunate enough to see the President-elect live out his term of office. We never have much confidence in an Indian.

THE GREAT ISSUE QUICKLY GORGOTTEN

By the time the ink was dry on the first newspapers that announced definitely the result of the Presidential election, and almost with the dying away of the echo of radio voices of the decision the American people had practically forgotten the strained condition of the political campaign. And with no intention to minimize the importance of a Presidential election, or take from Herbert Hoover the great honor that is his, at least two reasons suggest themselves for the apparent indifference of the people toward matters of state between campaigns.

In the first place the form of government of the United States as outlined by the Constitution somewhat surrounds the office of President with certain barriers against possible exercise of autocratic power. It is a case of "we want a President, but we don't want him to 'preside' too much over our destinies." The President has the power of recommendation on the one hand and of veto on the other.

These are indeed great powers. In national emergency he is clothed with the authority of commander-in-chief of the armed forces of the country. The President becomes by common consent as well as by force of custom and law a spokesman of all the people in national and world affairs, altho such monitorship is at best temporary and subject to political change.

Secondly, an attitude of forgetfulness on the part of many people takes predominance because of so many interests other than governmental. But with considerable amount of hopefulness the proposition may be reversed by saying that it is fortunate for the purposes of a democracy that as often as every four years the people take a more or less intensive interest in the issues involving their own government.

Every boy, or girl, born in the United States has a chance to become president, and that chance in the next hundred years, is one to the number of boys and girls divided by 25.

Anybody can make a good President who can make good as President.

To the first half-million new Ford owners

TO THE half-million men and women who have received new Fords in the last eleven months, there is no need to dwell on the performance of the car.

You have tested its speed on the open road. In traffic you have noted its quick acceleration and the safety of its brakes. You know how it climbs the hills. On long trips and over rough stretches you have come to appreciate its easy-riding comfort. Continuous driving has proved its economy of operation and low cost of up-keep.

This is an invitation to you to take full advantage of the service facilities of the Ford dealer organization so that you may continue to enjoy many thousands of miles of carefree, economical motoring. The point is this. You have a great car in the new Ford. It is simple in design, constructed of the best materials and machined with unusual accuracy. It is so well-made, in fact, that it requires surprisingly little attention. Yet that doesn't mean it should be neglected. Like every other fine piece of machinery, it will serve you better and longer if given proper care.

One of the best ways to do this is to take your car to the Ford dealer every 500 miles for oiling and greasing and a checking-up of the little things that have such a great bearing on long life and continuously good performance.

Such an inspection may mean a great deal to your car. To you it means thousands upon thousands of miles of motoring without a care—without ever lifting the hood.

Ford dealers everywhere have been specially trained and equipped to service the new Ford. You will find them prompt and reliable in their work, fair in their charges, and sincerely eager to help you get the greatest possible use from your car for the longest period at a minimum of trouble and expense. That is the true meaning of Ford Service.

BUFFALOES WIN OVER COLEMAN BLUE CATS

Captain Arthur Carmichael led his Buffaloes to Coleman Friday, where they ran roughshod over the Blue Cats to a score of 37 to 0.

A large crowd of Buffalo supporters saw the Buffaloes, down the Coleman team. If it had not been for the boys' pep squad of Coleman, the Buffalo supporters would have outnumbered the Dead Cat supporters.

Davis and R. Clark ran wild around the ends while Murry and Bennett ripped the Coleman line asunder with long and constant gains. The line held so well that the Dead Cats were able to make only three first downs. The Buffaloes Made 396 yards and 26 first downs.

From the time of the first touchdown, which was made in the first four minutes of play, there was no doubt as to the final result.

The Coleman team contested every yard but were powerless to stop the inspired Buffaloes, who were giving everything that they had for their school and their coach.

Six times the Buffaloes crossed the little faded goal line, Davis carrying the ball across four times, and R. Clark and Bennett making one each. They converted only once when "Pat" Clark, 210 pounder, crushed through the line.

R. Clark, a sophomore, ran fifty yards through the entire Coleman team for his counter.

SLY SAYINGS OF THE BUFFALOES

The story is told that after Speedy Clark made his fifty yard dash for a touchdown, Mays, a sophomore, playing safety on the defense, said to him:

"I'm not gettin' away this year. I don't know what's wrong. You've got somethin' I haven't. How on earth do you slip through tackle the way you do? I haven't returned a punt mor'n ten yards this season.

Speedy Clark, his face bespattered with Coleman fertilizer, turned to the safety and said:

"You can fool them if you go slow—fast—slow—and they will miss you everytime.

There in the gathering dusk, Mays, his face also spattered with "Coleman," collected a Blue Cat punt. He followed instructions and returned the punt fifty yards finally being run out of bounds.

And Speedy Clark, the uncouth sophomore, cried exultingly:

"Atta way, big boy, let's work out again tomorrow."

Starting line up:

R. E. Adams, R. T. S. Clark, R. G. McDermitt, C. A. Carmichael, L. G. Maddux, L. T. Harlow, L. E. Mays, H. B. R. Clark, H. B. Davis, Q. B. Bennett, F. B. Murry.

Substitutes:
Ivy for Maddux (2), Coppinger for S. Clark (2), DeBusk for Adams (2), Nickols for Mays (2), Robertson for Ivy (2), Booth for Mays (3), Nickles for Adams (4), Robertson for Booth (4), DeBusk for Harlow (4), S. Carmichael for Maddux (4), Ivy for Robertson (4).
Summary: Punts Cross Plains, 3 times for 140 yards. Average 47 yards
Coleman—9 punts for 270 yards—average 30 yards.
Passes—Cross Plains 12—completed 7 for 71 yards.
Coleman—13—completed 4 for 42 yards, and one intercepted by Murry of Cross Plains.

Ring Wear

Honing is often satisfactory for .0025, .003 and .005 Standard Oversizes. For larger Standard Oversizes, honing alone is seldom economical and efficient. When the ring wear is greater than .005 we recommend STORMIZING, as honing alone cannot be depended upon to keep walls perpendicular to crankshaft.

The walls of the cylinders are amply heavy to stand two borings. .075 to .125 can be removed with safety, as the average thickness of a cylinder wall is approximately .250 or 1/4 of an inch to .312 or 5/16 of an inch, and removing metal enough to barely clean up the worn area of the cylinder will not weaken the wall to any extent. Two borings can be accomplished in most cases by removing .020 to .030 of metal.
