A. H. McCORD TRADES FARM FOR C. P. PROPERTY

A. H. McCord, a few days ago, traded the farm which he owned near Carrollton, in Erath county, for the residence and shoe shop formerly owned by Carl Slaughter. The residence is located in the east part of the city and the shoe shop on South Main street. Mr. Slaughter, ex-service man in the World War, who has been under treatment for rheumatism at the government sanitarium at San Antonio for the past few months, has returned and may continue to live in Cross Plains, having rented the farm for the coming year. John Price has leased the shoe shop from Mr. McCord and is now conducting the business.

Uncle Henry Childs is now putting on some good semi-regular shows at his Electric Theatre. For Thursday and Friday of this week he has secured that famous picture, "The Fleet Is In," and for Saturday afternoon and night you can have the pleasure of seeing that amusing and interesting production, "Chinatown Nites."

ORGANIZED TO FIGHT THEFT OF POULTRY

In connection with the big dairy meeting which was held in Cross Plains on Friday night of last week, an organization to combat the theft of poultry and livestock within this community was perfected. Ross J. Newton, vocational agriculture instructor of the Cross Plains High School, was elected chairman, and Porter J. Davis, of the Davis Produce and Grain Store, was elected secretary of the organization. Another meeting at which it is urged that all parties who are interested in the more will attend, has been called for Thursday night of this week, at the City Hall, and it is believed that a large organization will be enlisted. This organization will work in cooperation with similar organizations in the other surrounding towns and communities, and it is expected that good results will be accomplished in the way of checking poultry and livestock stealing.

Misses Vada and Ada Smith, and friends visited Lake Cisco Sunday.

FIRST STATE BANK ELECTS CASHIER

At a recent meeting of the directors of the First State Bank of Cross Plains, Clyde Durringer was elected cashier of the institution, succeeding the late Geo. B. Scott, whose tragical death resulted from drowning in Philpeco Lake last June 2nd.

The new cashier has been closely identified with the general affairs of the bank for a number of years, serving in the capacity of private secretary to its president, M. E. Wakefield, and as assistant in the various branches of the work incident to operating the business. Clyde Durringer is capable, popular, has the confidence of the general public, and will be a valuable addition to the conduct of the First State Bank.

LOCAL TRAPPER'S WIFE CAPTURES LARGE WOLF

Verily, our successful wolf trapper E. Brumbelow, who has destroyed about forty wolves in this locality within the past eighteen months, is in danger of losing his laurels, his wife becoming his chief competitor in the art of trapping the wild dogs. They brought in another large gray wolf Saturday morning and exhibited it at the Review office. This wolf was captured in a trap-set planned and executed by Mrs. Brumbelow Friday night. She heard the wild animal howl in a nearby territory that was not covered at the time by Mr. Brumbelow, and with a good knowledge of trap-setting and the habits of the wild wolf, which she has acquired from the work of her husband, she went after the "varmint" with a steel-trap in true trapper's caution and procedure. The capture was made on the Harrell ranch, where it is stated this large wolf had recently ventured and created renewed menace to sheep and turkey in that locality. The greatest number of wolves which Mr. Brumbelow has destroyed were captured in the neighborhood of the Harrell ranch, about four miles from Cross Plains.

SMITH DRUG STORE LEASES OGILVY BLDG.

J. P. Smith, head of the Smith Drug Store on North Main street, has leased the Ogilvy building, also located on North Main street, and which has been occupied by the Neeb Produce Company for a number of years. The drug store contemplates moving into the new location shortly after the first of the year. Mr. Neeb is undecided as to whether he will build or lease another location for his produce business.

DRESSY SCHOOL OPENED MONDAY

The fall term of the Dressy public school opened Monday of this week and the attendance is expected to be between eighty and ninety pupils. Prof. Clarence Martin, who was the head of the school the last term, will continue as superintendent, assisted by Mrs. Martin and Miss Theola Payne, daughter of Mr. Lee Payne. Another successful term of the school is a general forecast of its patrons.

MAN ARRESTED FOR SHOOTING IN HOME

A Mr. Clark, known to a few acquaintances in this community as "Fat" Clark, was arrested last week by Deputy Sheriff Jim McMillan on complaint of having discharged a gun in the home of Floyd Lee, on the Rollin Keller place, about the 23rd of last August. He was apprehended and arrested at Ivan, in Pecos county. He was returned to this county and placed in jail at Baird to await action of the forthcoming session of the grand jury.

Oscar Newton of Tye was in town Monday.

LIONS ENJOY SECOND DOVE BANQUET

The second annual dove banquet and entertainment given by the local Lions Club on Tuesday night of this week was another big event in the history of that live organization. The banquet was given in the basement of the First Methodist Church, and there were 210 hearty Lions and their guests present for the occasion. There were about ninety visiting Lions from the surrounding cities, including Abilene, Baird, Rising Star, Coleman, Santa Anna, Brownwood, Eastland, Cisco and DeLeon.

The meeting was presided over by Paul V. Harrell, as chairman, and a hearty address of welcome to the visiting guests was made by Nat Williams, superintendent of the Cross Plains Schools. Response to the address of welcome was made by Lion Orne of Cisco. The program of entertainment included many amusing and enjoyable features, one which was the sparring joke perpetrated upon the High School Superintendent and Methodist preacher.

Mrs. Lexie Dean Robertson rendered several selections from the book of her own author, "Red Heels," which added classic literary talent to the evening's program.

The local Lions Cowboy Orchestra, composed of those rural virtuosos of the violin, Frank and Vernon Spencer, Homer and George Johnson, were present and rendered a number of thrilling old-time tunes.

DAIRY MEETING FRIDAY NIGHT INTERESTING

A mass meeting called by the Lions Club to consider the question of the advisability and practicability of building a creamery at Cross Plains was held in the Auditorium of the Presbyterian Church here on last Friday night. It was well attended, there being about seventy persons present, a great majority of whom were farmers. Mr. Ross Newton, the vocational instructor in the High School, read some answers to several questionnaires which he had sent out to creameries in neighboring towns. A majority of these reports indicated that the creameries were paying propositions in small towns, especially where only butter was manufactured. It would seem, according to these reports that cheese factories do not pay so well. Speeches were made by Mr. Anderson, connected with the Brownwood Creamery and Mr. Mathews representative of creamery equipment house at Fort Worth. Several farmers and business men made talks. All agreed that a creamery would be a fine thing for the community as it would bring in money to the producers of cream at all periods of the year and relieve the farmers of depending on cotton and other uncertain crops for their sole livelihood. It was also agreed, however, that it will be necessary to have many more cows in the country than we have now, before a creamery will be able to pay. It was the opinion of a majority of those who spoke that if a creamery is organized, it should be a co-operative concern, being financed by both the business men and farmers.

A temporary organization was entered into for the purpose of determining whether the creamery should be built or not and Paul V. Harrell was elected Chairman and Ross Newton Secretary. The following parties were named to canvass the situation in their respective communities and find out and report how many cows the farmers now have and will acquire in case a creamery is built and how much stock they will subscribe for in said organization, Virgil Fulton, John Moore, Elmer Vestal, W. E. Koenig, Eugene Atwood, Frank Golsen, Pit Ramsey, S. O. Montgomery and Mr. Purvis.

All persons who are interested in the creamery or in securing better markets for their dairy products, please see one of the parties mentioned above and tell them how many cows they now have and how many they expect to acquire. It is earnestly desired that all interested parties get behind this project. In fact it is necessary that they do so or it cannot be put over.

SERIOUSLY INJURED IN AUTO WRECK

J. W. Matthews, step-father of H. D. Mitchell of Cross Plains, was seriously injured in a car wreck near Fairman about 8:30 last Saturday night. The accident occurred when the auto driven by the injured man attempted to pass another car which was parked in the road and occupied by ladies. It is reported. The Matthews car went into the ditch, turning over and completely wrecking the vehicle. Mr. Matthews was carried to the Griggs Sanitarium at Baird, where examination is believed to have revealed a fractured skull and other painful bodily injuries.

ALL TALKING PICTURE AT PALACE, CISCO

"The Dance of Life" is the ultimate in perfection in the all-talking motion picture medium. It has everything that makes for thrilling, gripping entertainment—a romantic love story of backstage life, burlesque sequences dancing, a gorgeous "Follies" revue, singing, music, color. It is Paramount's master production made from the remarkably successful stage play, "Burlesque." "The Dance of Life" will show at the PALACE, CISCO Theatre, starting Sunday Oct. 6th for 3 days.

Hal Skelly, who originated the role of Skid in the stage production, continues in this part in the motion picture production. Nancy Carroll, red-headed beauty of "Close Harmony" and "Abie's Irish Rose," has the other featured role. The cast includes such stage and screen favorites as Dorothy Revier, Ralph Theodor, Charles D. Brown, Al St. John and May Boley.

"The Dance of Life," for the first time in any motion picture, combines the two latest achievements of the screen, sound and color. A spectacular revue scene, with lavish costumes, brilliant settings and eighty beautiful girls, is shown entirely in color by the Technicolor process, and sound and dialog are heard throughout the action.

The story takes one behind the scenes in a burlesque theatre and follows the love affair of the interesting performers throughout a series of events takes one of them to the Broadway circuit and the big revues. Six original song hits were written for the production and many on-time and popular songs are heard throughout the picture.

New dances, originated by the leading dance masters of the country, are seen for the first time in "The Dance of Life." Two of the greatest directors of stage and screen productions, John Cromwell and Edward Sutherland, makers of "Close Harmony," collaborated for this picture.

Peanut buyers in this section of the country have recently received communications from one of the largest wholesale peanut buyers in the State, who after inspection of the crops have dictated the following letter:

Referring to the writer's inspection of the peanuts in your territory this week, I have found that the growing and fruiting had been delayed considerably by the continued dry weather, and as a whole, the crop is poorly fruited but the vines have held up and most of them continue green and in healthy condition.

Now, if the peanuts are left in the ground until the vines begin to turn and shed their leaves freely and a few of the stems on the older nuts begin to rot or decay, we feel that the yield will be increased considerably, possibly 50 per cent to 75 per cent, and of course, the quality will be much better than if they dig them while the vines are green and the nuts premature, and unless weather is unusually favorable, it is almost impossible to cure premature peanuts without some damage and loss; in addition to the shrinkage and poor quality, shriveled nuts.

We hope that you will be able to induce your farmers to hold up digging their peanuts until they are matured and shock and leave them on the vines until they are properly cured, as this is the only way that they can hope to handle the crop successfully and turn out good merchantable stock, which of course, in the end will give them better demand, and in the long run, realize them more out of their peanuts and the difference in the cost of curing the peanuts in this way will not exceed the difference in the value of their hay, as hay from wind-row peanuts that takes any rain at all, has very little value.

H. A. Dubey returned Tuesday from Fort Worth.

Miss Viola Harwood and Budge Baum of Coleman visited in Cross Plains Sunday.

The following guests from Rising Star were present at the Lion's banquet Tuesday evening: Messrs. and Mmes. Frank Robertson, Bill Tyler, Bill Bohon, Dee Breeding, Messrs. Phil Berry and Dr. Head.

Mr. and Mrs. Parker Bond of Santa Anna were in Cross Plains Tuesday evening, along with a number of other guests from Santa Anna to attend the banquet.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bryant of Fort Worth were the guests Tuesday night of Dr. and Mrs. Young.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Marsh of Abilene visited with Mr. and Mrs. Brew Bram Sunday.

ALBANY LIONS DEFEAT CROSS PLAINS BUFFALOES

C. P. H. Buffaloes To Play DeLeon Oct. 4th At Murphy Field

Second Conference Game

Cross Plains High School Big Buffaloes and the Albany Lions put on one of those sturdy act things at Albany last Friday, and the Buffaloes lost, 32 to 13, in the first conference game of the season, but the Buffs have seven more chances.

While the sun was sinking out beyond the hills and oil derricks, composing the scenery of this battle in which the game was spoiled by the long passes and crack, crack, crack that whistled through the air in a manner which the Cross Plains front did not enjoy.

It seemed the Buffs expended the force of their attacks in the first five minutes of the game, and whenever they made a long gain, something always happened. That was quite true Friday.

They had two during the first half; DeBusk on second play of the game ran 55 yards to Lions 5 yard line. Buffs were penalized 15 yards, so the ball was brought back. This brought about a punt.

"Boots" Harlow Runs 55 Yards For First Touchdown

The Lions started passing at the beginning of the game and kept it up continuously until the end. The Lions ball in mid-field, a pass was intercepted by "Boots" Harlow, which he run 55 yards for Buffs first touchdown. Boots plays center on offensive, and backs up line on defensive. He was in almost every play, having little opportunity to parade his ability and was pocketed at almost every turn the last half. He went out late in the final period with an injured collar bone, which he received at the starting of the third quarter.

It was late in the second quarter when the Lions passed from Buffs' 40 yard line to the 15 yard line, and another to the 5 yard line, which resulted in a touchdown.

This touchdown the Albany fans seemed to thoroughly enjoy, and were given an excuse to let it out. But there was a heart-breaker. (one-half minute to play), when a Lion caught a pass and fumbled after taking three steps. Sweetie Webb scoops it up and runs 40 yards for touchdown. But the play was nullified. Score, Buffs 6; Albany 7.

During the second period the Buffs were playing stubbornly, but their potency was no fire in the organization; nor was Albany too intense. They were playing bad fundamental football, particularly in tackling and punting on fourth downs. During the game, having four or five yards or more to make on fourth downs, they would try to play it over, in which they always failed, but gained yard after yards on passes with success.

The third period was begun where the second left off. It was strenuous affair through the third period; the Lions soared, and they began a series of passes that were effective and a touchdown was made.

Capt. E. Webb kicks to Lions, returning it to the 35 yard line, after running one play. The next play was a pass to a Lion that had hidden himself on the side (ghost making), and a pass was completed for 25 yards for another touchdown. Then the sideline was turned over to the Lions hand, (and the rest) which tried desperately to act happy and careless.

Arbie Booth Makes Second Touchdown

There was four minutes to play in third period. The Buffs made it appear that some business would be done. By Alternating the four backs carried the ball from mid-field to Lions 15 yard line.

A. Booth, calling signals, was especially fierce. You would have thought the fellow was trying to get hurt. When he run 15 yards around right end for a touchdown. Buffs plunged line for extra point.

Modern football weapons were employed during the last period. It was one of the bone-cracking affairs which participants seemed to thoroughly enjoy.

The Lions block a Buffalo punt on 10 yard zone, for their fifty touchdowns. The Buffs were driving hard when the period ended with the ball in our possession, on their 35 yard line.

Another Biggest Bank
Poor Broker—Sold Short
Our Disgraces
A Fight for John D.

Again "The world's biggest bank" makes its bow, bigger than any thus far.

Charles E. Mitchell, head of New York's National City bank, absorbs the Corn Exchange bank, creating an institution with resources of two thousand five hundred millions of dollars.

This one financial giant will have 100 branch banks in New York. The old-fashioned million has given way to the new "billion."

When will the TRILLION be transferred from books on astronomy to the books of United States bankers?

In Wall street a broker has closed up. His story is sad and brief. HE SOLD SHORT.

And, most strange, he sold bank stocks short.

To "short" a bank stock with banks getting from 10 to 20 per cent for money on call, calls for an investigation in lunacy.

The Prince of Wales buys his first airplane, making his first flight as an owner to see his father at Sandringham. It is a G. H. Gypsy Moth, price only $3,300.

The prince would not buy anything not "pure British." The little Moth makes ninety miles an hour, is painted bright red and blue, and carries a silver plate marked "H. R. H. the Prince of Wales."

We have an assortment of "national disgraces." One, our high percentage of illiteracy; another, the high efficiency of bootleggers, hijackers, or-ganized criminals.

Another is the official usury established by the federal reserve as a basis for dealing in American securities.

Our worst disgrace is the fact established by the American Association of Obstetricians, Gynecologists and Abdominal Surgeons, that this nation has the highest maternity death rate in the civilized world.

Of the thousands of mothers dying every year in childbirth, 65 per cent are killed by septicemia and toxemia, both preventable.

You read that the naval conference will depend largely on what Japan wants and agrees to. The powerful face of the Japanese Premier Hamaguchi, who will do the deciding, tells you that Japan will talk plainly.

If Uncle Sam and Britain cannot agree, Mr. Hamaguchi might be useful as a good excuse.

Why doesn't Uncle Sam decide for himself what he wants in airplanes, cruisers, submarines and everything else? Do we NEED the approval of another country?

Cel. R. W. Stewart, formerly head of Standard Oil of Indiana, beaten in a fight with Mr. Rockefeller, has gone to England. Perhaps he goes to join the Shell company in a great British oil merger and anti-Standard oil fight.

Colonel Stewart will visit Sir Henry Deterding, head of British "Shell," the biggest Rockefeller rival in the world's oil trade.

If the British want action and an American representative who knows the oil business, they show intelligence in selecting Colonel Stewart.

It looks like a real oil fight. Betting is wrong, and apart from that it might be unwise to bet against the Rockefeller. They have never acquired the habit of losing.

News from Jerusalem that will doubtless cause indignation and mass meetings tells of the arrest of 44 Jews of Haifa, held without bail, accused of premeditated murder of Arabs during the recent Arab-Jewish riots.

The President announces the appointment of Harry F. Guggenheim as ambassador to Cuba.

Cubans will welcome Mr. Guggenheim, representing an able and powerful American family well.

Americans will be glad to hear that Mr. Guggenheim's work for aviation in America is conspicuously recognized.

Happy Free State of Ireland! It lacks the blessing of prohibition, but on the other hand it lacks our stupendous crime wave.

Irish military barracks are being changed into dwellings for workers. And Irish prisons are changed to broadcasting stations and other uses.

While this country multiplies its prisons, containing thousands of prisoners, with occasional frightful rebel Moa, the Irish Free State reports a total prison population of 700.

Britain is disturbed because the nation seems to have reached the "stationary point in population."

No wonder—the same animal cannot be a good brood mare and a good cart horse.

JUNIORS ADOPT CLASS POEM

The following poem was written by "Peggy" McMillan, a talented member of the Junior Class, and has been accepted as the Class Poem:

We, the Juniors of '29, must have some monument; yet, 'Lest you forget, 'Lest you forget.
 "Go forward, not backward; you cannot stand still."
 This is our motto; let yours be what it will.
 Step by step we have climbed the ladder; now we are almost at the top.
 We will soon have finished the course; if not, why not?
 Though these years we've toiled seemed many, in number they are only a few.
 The tie that binds as companions, has bound us as classmates true.
 In school there is still one higher class above.
 On them we bestow the scholarship of love.
 In one more year this class will leave us; no more we'll see its face.
 Work, fellow juniors work; and we will take its place.
 Some say we are proud and selfish in the hopes of our desire;
 Judge not, that ye be not judged, for we only want a plane that is higher.
 The Juniors, as ever, are ambitious; go on with forward looks;
 We'll master this geometry and history before we turn in our books.
 Now, English and Spanish are easier, but we musn't leave them out;
 As time about is fair-play, and the teachers will get jealous, no doubt.
 Now, Freshmen, Sophomores and Seniors, the Juniors have challenged you.
 Be a "sport" in the work you are completing, and in fellowship true.

"Service With A Smile"

RETRIBUTION OF VANITY

By R. F. GAFFORD,
Cross Plains, Texas

He was now receiving his just punishment; he was reaping what he had sown. That proud and haughty spirit was broken. There upon the floor, he bowed in humility, and supplicated God to mitigate his sorrows, and forgive him of his sins.

In the days that followed, Luther grieved about silently, in his bereavement, I knew his suffering was great, and my heart softened, and went out in sympathy to him. I did not express my sympathy in words, it was not necessary. He knew, and understood, and I think he was hurt more, than he would have been if I had not softened towards him.

He would sometimes steal up to Hazels' room and sit for hours alone and touch the things carelessly that once belonged to her, and that spoke mutely of her. Sometimes, he would start, and listen, and listen, as if he heard the clatter of little footsteps on the stair-way, or the sound of her voice as she romped as play. But never again would those little footsteps be heard in this world, for those little feet were stilled forever and the sound of her voice would be heard no more.

I had taken my abode with Luther and Mary in their bereavement for Mary had said it was so lonesome there without me. On the following Sunday morning, I prepared to go to Church at the little Brown church where mother was sleeping. When I came down stairs dressed, I found Luther and Mary prepared to go also. I was somewhat surprised, for no one had mentioned it to the other; but I suppose we were all possessed with the same feeling—the sense of duty.

The old Gray Haired Minister read passages of Scripture from different parts of the Bible. The first and last passage that he read impressed me deeply, and I have never forgotten them. The first was from Ecclesiast. 1:2:

"Then I looked on all the works that my hand had wrought and on the labour that I had laboured to, and there was a profit under the sun."

How well I realized the verity of these words, and I think Luther did also. His hand sought Mary's and clasped it tenderly, but there was no responses from Mary. She sat motionless, as the old Ministers' words solemnly resounded through the silence of those hallowed precincts.

The old fellow made a wonderful talk, and every word seem to strike home in my heart. Then in conclusion, he read congruously, a passage from the book of St. John:

"These things I have spoken unto you, that in me might find peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."

We walked home in silence, there was scarcely a word spoken between us. But there was a light in Mary's eyes that was not there before, and I knew she had received benefit, as well as myself from the services. But underneath this light, was written her great sorrow.

As we walked along, I pondered upon that last passage of Scripture the Minister had read: "In me ye might have peace." and kept turning it over and over in my mind, there was a comforting thought about it.

We ate lunch in silence. Scarcely a word was spoken. Words did not seem necessary; we seemed to understand each other perfectly, and suffered together in silence. But Luther I knew was suffering the most, he was remorseful.

Several days of this silent suffering passed, and then I informed Luther that I was going away. For the time had come, when I knew I would be unable to resist longer, the temptations that Mary, unconsciously put before me each day. I told him that the Mill was his, that I would deed it and the house in which he lived to him. But he refused to accept. He said that all he would accept, was the job back as Superintendent, at a reduced salary. He said he did not care for wealth any more. All that he wanted was just a modest income for he and Mary.

"Luther," I said to him. "You don't know how much it means to me to see you back your self again. It's worth twenty times the price of the mill. It will be a favor to me if you accept it, for I have plenty, and no one but myself."

But all of my persuasion was useless. He declined to accept anything more, than the Superintendent's job at a reduced salary.

It was the morning of the day that I intended to go away before I informed Mary of my intentions. I came down stairs dressed in a traveling suit, a little earlier than usual, and found her standing by the dining room window, gazing out upon the snow-covered lawn, that was glistening in the sunshine.

A flood of sunlight fell upon her, that awoke slumbering flames in her yellow locks, that was soft as thistle-down. There was a pallidness about her cheeks, and dark rings beneath her eyes, that marked her terrible suffering.

I hesitated a moment before I approached her, wondering just how I would break the news to her. Could I go away and leave her thus? It was like tearing my heart from my bosom, and casting it aside. I knew that she loved me; that's what made it so hard. Had I known that she did not love me in return, it would not have been so hard. But then, it must be done.

She did not hear me enter the room; she was lost in thought gazing out into the beautiful sunshiny morning. I walked up to her side, still unobserved.

"Mary," I whispered softly.

She started, then looked up into my eyes with a soft tenderness, but remained silent. No word was necessary. I could see all that was in her heart, reflected in her eyes. I gazed into their depths, too overcome with emotion to speak. She swayed towards me, and I could not resist the impulse of the moment. I clasped her tenderly, and our lips met in a profound kiss. In that brief moment, my soul mounted to ethereal realms of bliss.

Suddenly coming to myself, I released her and stepped back trembling with emotion.

"Forgive me, Mary. I pleaded breathlessly. I didn't mean to do it. It doesn't matter now, Craig," she smiled sadly.

"But I had no right to do it Mary."

"Do you really think it was wrong?" she asked earnestly.

I was silent. I could not say it; that we were wrong. Yet, I knew that we were. That was just why I was going away; she was so frank and earnest in such things, and made it so hard for me to resist.

"Mary, I'm going away," I said at length, ignoring her question.

She did not speak immediately, but a profound sigh escaped her lips.

"Luther told me. When are you coming back?"

"I knew it," she said at length.

"I am not coming back, Mary," I replied hoarsely.

"Never!" she exclaimed, frightened like.

"I'm afraid not Mary," I sighed.

There was a wounded look came in her eyes, she hung her head, and I noticed her hand trembling that rested on the window sash.

"Can't you see Mary, that this cannot go on." I explained. The temptations are too strong for us to resist.

Why try? she asked innocently.

"My love for him is dead, and I cannot go on with him after all that has happened."

"But your duty to spoil the happiness of two lives?" she asked.

We have no choice Mary. God has ordained it so, and I have no power to change it.

But I can't go on with him; I can't even think of being left here alone with him. I can never love him again, and—I er—was in hopes that you cared more," she stammered.

"It is because I do care so very very much Mary," I replied. Perhaps if I cared less, I would act upon the promptings of my selfish desires. But it's you, your own good, that I am considering. Have you forgotten the sacred vows made before God? until death do us part were your vows, and: "What God joins together, let not man put asunder." I quoted.

"God has joined you by the Holy Bonds of Matrimony, to be broken only by Him. That was His law, and I, nor no earthly man has the power to change it. But I only wish I did."

"You are right Craig," she sighed. I only knew too well I was wrong, but oh, it will be so hard to go on."

At this moment, I heard Luther making an unusual noise, coming down the stairway. He came on in, and we sat down to breakfast.

When breakfast was over, Luther said goodbye. He was going to work, and said he would probably not see me anymore, for I was going away on 11:40, train. He pressed my hand warmly, and seemed to cling to me in a way that I could scarcely understand. His hand trembled slightly, and he was almost overcome with emotions.

Poor old Luther, I was so sorry for him. He was so remorseful.

After Luther had gone, I went up to my room, to gather my things together. I had about everything packed, and went to the dressing table to get my toilet articles, when I found a letter there addressed to me. I knew it was from Luther, from the writing, and sat down on the bedside, and tore it open. Great was my astonishment, when I began to read.

"Dear Craig," it read "I understand now, why you are going away. I saw, and overheard your conversation with Mary this morning. I was not aware that you loved her until then. It was mighty fine of you to say what you did, and do what you intend to do. But I'm not worth the sacrifice Craig. I have been the cause of enough of sorrows for you and her, and shall not continue to cause you more. When you read these lines, I will have ended it all, and I wish you much happiness. But may God help me."

I grabbed my hat and started down the stairs in a mad rush. I must stop him before it was too late. But as I was passing thru the hallway, I saw Mary standing at the telephone that had just rung, and I stopped suddenly at the words she was saying.

"Did you say he was killed?" she was asking. Then there was a pause.

She slowly hung up the receiver, and turned facing me expressionless.

"What is it?" I asked nervously, knowing too well what it was all about.

He is dead, she said calmly, staring blankly out at the window. Caught in the machinery at the Mill.

There was a hush pervaded, not a sound to break the silence except the ticking of the old clock in the Hall. She did not seem to be moved by the news of his death. She stood there before me expressionless, staring blankly out at the window.

I did not mention the letter I had found on my dresser. I did not want it to be known that he had taken his own life. One reason was: I felt, in a way, guilty of his death. My cursed wealth had been responsible for it all. Had I let them went on in their own way in life, this would not have happened. But by meddling—though with the best of intentions—I had brought about all of this.

"Poor old Luther. It's too bad," I sighed at length.

"It is just," she whispered faintly. It is God's punishment."

VOLUNTEER WHEAT PUZ LES FARMERS

To leave it, or not to leave it, is the question that is bothering farmers in the Plains country at the present time, who have excellent growing crops of volunteer wheat.

Because of the large crop just harvested, and the fact that so much of it was not harvested until it was past dead ripe, there has been considerable grain shattered on the ground, which has produced an extraordinarily large volunteer crop. Farmers are puzzled as to the best thing to do about it, whether to plow it up and kill it, or let it grow to maturity.

The county agent of Hale county doesn't know what to recommend. Some years volunteer wheat does well and other times it does not, depending on the season, and the thickness of the crop. One farmer in that county is going to leave 250 acres of his volunteer crop. He says he will graze it early and thin it down to where it will have a good ordinary stand. He has been successful in this several times before in his long experience in raising wheat. Many of the wheat fields in the Cross Plains territory have excellent stands of volunteer wheat, and the situation is also a local puzzle.

Mural Wakefield of Brownwood was in Cross Plains the first of the week.

How to Raise Poultry
By Dr. L. D. LeGear, V.S., St. Louis, Mo.

Dr. LeGear is a graduate of the Ontario Veterinary College, 1892. Thirty-six years of veterinary practice on diseases of live stock and poultry. Eminent authority on poultry and stock raising. Nationally known poultry breeder. Noted author and lecturer.

ARTICLE II
Pullets For Profit When Winter Comes

Editor's Note—This is another story in a series of 52 stories on poultry raising written by the well known national poultry authority, Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S., of St. Louis. The entire series will appear in this paper. Our readers are urged to read them carefully and clip them out for future reference.

ARTICLE IV
A Robber in the Flock
Roup May Wipe out a Whole Season's Profit If Allowed to Gain Headway, Says Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S., of St. Louis.

"The best way to cure roup," sagely remarked an old timer in the poultry game, "is never to have it." That may sound like a very weak attempt to be funny, but it is gospel truth. Contagious diseases such as roup do not fall willy nilly from the heavens on some whimsical freak of fate. The way is usually paved for them by the lack of adequate sanitation, improper housing facilities, incorrect feeding, failure to cull out weaklings, the weakening effect of parasites, or by some other form of neglect. Healthy, robust fowls, properly fed and housed in sanitary surroundings, will almost always throw off the germs of disease. Even when they do not, however, their rugged constitutions make the success of treatment practically certain.

Acting on the idea of prevention as the best cure for roup, I never add new fowls to my flock until they have been kept in quarantine from two to three weeks. Even if it is practically sure that the birds come from an uninfected flock, this is a wise precaution. They might be carrying the germs of infection which would mature later with disastrous results. If this should happen before they are added to the flock they can be destroyed or treated as the case may demand without danger of spreading the disease.

Watch young and delicate birds very closely as they are most susceptible to the deadly "roup" germs. The same is true of fowls suffering from common cold or catarrh. The throat and nasal passages, being already sore and inflamed, are easily infected. Sick birds, no matter what the ailments, should always be isolated. They can be much more effectively treated when away from the flock and they cannot contaminate the healthier ones if the disease should prove to be contagious.

Should any of your flock begin to show symptoms of roup, no time should be lost in starting measures to prevent further spread. All houses, pens, coops and runs should be thoroughly cleaned and sprayed with a strong solution of a good coal tar dip and disinfectant. Droppings, litter and trash of every description should be removed and burned. All unnecessary equipment of every kind should be removed from houses and yards. Every piece of equipment for supplying food and water should be scrubbed and disinfected. All this sounds like work and it is, but the saving is decidedly worth the work required.

As the inroads of this deadly disease have been known to wipe out as high as 95 per cent of a flock, every owner of a poultry flock should learn to recognize the symptoms. At first they are much like those of a simple cold or catarrh, but more fever, dullness, prostration are a watery nasal discharge, difficult breathing with wheeze sound and constant shaking of the head to dislodge accumulated matter.

After two or three days the discharge from the nose becomes thicker and gives off a characteristic offensive odor. The nasal passages then become so clogged that the bird must breathe through its mouth. A discharge will also run from the eyes. Discharge gradually becomes thicker, causing painful swellings below or in the eye which often destroy it. As it hardens, this discharge may cause the eyes to be completely pasted shut and may gather in such quantities that the head is swollen to twice its normal size. Quite frequently these deposits will press down the roof of the mouth so that the fowl cannot swallow. In some cases there is a canker deposit of yellowish matter on the tissues of the mouth and throat. It is easily removed, however, and should not be confused with a deposit of similar appearance which is a symptom of diphtheria.

As soon as any fowl is known to be sick, put it at once to itself as far from the flock as possible and give it one full teaspoonful of epsom salts to remove cold and fever from the system. If the bowels have not moved by the following day, repeat the dose. Give one roup pill night and morning. Wash the affected eyes, nose and mouth once a day with a solution made by mixing one teaspoonful of dip and disinfectant in one quart of warm water. Souse head, eyes and all into this solution each time. Roup will often yield to treatment if caught in time, but each case must be handled individually and more detailed instructions are required than the space allowed for this article will permit.

As a measure of protection for the balance of the flock, after infected birds are removed give epsom salts in a wet wash. Give one pound of epsom salt for each 100 fowls of lighter breeds and for each 75 of the heavier breeds. Repeat in one week. A second dose of such a time. By careful treatment, the germ of infection may keep in a good lair, the job without interruption.

But, after all, there's no remedy like the one quoted at the beginning of this article. I do not claim that roup and kindred diseases cannot invade the premises where sanitation and other precautionary measures are always observed. I do not hesitate to say, however, that the flock where such measures do not obtain is infinitely more liable to suffer infection. Furthermore, if the properly managed flock does become infected, the damage will be much less than among fowls not so well cared for. The old maxim, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" may be well worn from much usage, but it is still as true as it ever was.
