The Coming Railroad Era and Its Natural Consequences Editors Clarendon:

There is no doubt in the minds of most of your readers, that the year 1880 will be noted in all future history in which was developed one of the grandest railroad eras ever known to the American people; extending its influence not only into certain sections of our country but sending its leaders and busy arteries from ocean to ocean, and from the Great Lakes on the north to the Gulf of Mexico on the south. This vast project is the result of the combined intellect of our deepest thinking men- the leading capitalists of the countrywho have been seeking a profitable investment for the millions of capital in their control ever since the panic of 1873, and which have been lying almost dormant up to 1880.

The extension of the great trunk line known as the Texas and Pacific Railway from Fort Worth west to San Diego, or the Pacific coast, which is now under rapid construction, is the fore-runner of the numerous roads now in contemplation, and no doubt, will be built in this coming era - and the one in which the people of the southwest feel heretofore been enjoying ourselves in a quiet, peaceable way, it is true; but of a kind of an out of the way place, and almost beyond the reach of the modern means of communication; with none to molest us, and consequently none to spur us on to that busy life which is only brought about by railroads and other modes of rapid transportation, where by distant points are brought, seemingly, very close to each

The completion of this trans-continental road will not only be of incalculable value to the southwest, but to the country in general; binding, as it were, the business relations of one vast section of country more firmly to that of another, while the building of tap roads and feeders, diverging in different directions will be a natural consequence, giving to a vast extent of country that which is necessary to rapidly develop the natural resources and hidden treasures that have so long

BAIRD-The Baird High School Beta Club will be painting a few teachers' 28, and March 1, 2009.

The Beta Club chose this as its annual project because it has been several years since some of the rooms have been painted and they believed it was time to liven up the rooms. Most of the colors are vibrant and lively, meant to make class time less boring.

The teachers who were chosen are honored and excited to help make this project possible, and can't wait to see the newly painted rooms.

American Life In Poetry

BY TED KOOSER, U.S. POET LAUREATE, 2004-2006

To read in the news that a platoon of soldiers has been killed is a terrible thing, but to learn the name of just one of them makes the news even more vivid and sad. To hold the name of someone or something on our lips is a powerful thing. It is the badge of individuality and separateness.

Charles Harper Webb, a California poet, takes advantage of the power of naming in this poem about the steady extinction of a play that ran for years animal species.

Girls Interrupted

Two new memoirs by poets Lavinia Greenlaw and Sarah Manguso.

Poetry Media Service

The Importance of Music to Girls, by Lavinia Greenlaw. Farrar, Straus and Giroux, $23.00

The Two Kinds of Decay, by Sarah Manguso. Farrar, Straus and Giroux, $22.00.

Few writers are memoirists by profession, and it's hard to imagine what the qualifications might be. A compelling and even awful life history helps (Mary Karr), but it's not really necessary or a guarantee. Exceptional success in some other field (Barack Obama) also creates basic narrative interest, but a talent for politics, for example, doesn't always translate into a talent for meaningful reflection.

Whatdoesseemtodistinguish many great memoirists, though, is an almost supernatural intuition with language: the ability to take recollections that have personal resonance and make them echo for readers in written sentences (Joan Didion, Jamaica Kincaid, and Elie Wiesel). In comparison with this gift, experience seems almost beside the point.

It's no surprise, then, that poets so often write memoirs, and that they take to the prose form so naturally. Karr is the blockbuster example of a contemporary poet-memoirist, but other young poets who have written in the form in recent years include Nick Flynn and Paisley Rekdal. Most recently, both Sarah Manguso and Lavinia Greenlaw have written memoirs that press on the boundary between poetry and prose and affectingly describe, in intentional fits and starts, the poets' tumultuous girlhoods.

Sarah Manguso was 20 when she was diagnosed with chronic inflammatory demyelinating polyneuropathy (CIDP), an obscure neurological disorder. Manguso describes what happened to her in about 80 discrete sections, each focused on one character or moment and none longer than two or three pages. The paragraphs, or perhaps stanzas, tend to be short and are separated by oneline breaks that function like intakes of breath. Manguso's writing is similar to poet Paisley Rekdal's in that, as one reviewer wrote of Rekdal's memoir The Night My Mother Met Bruce Lee, the writing is poetic "not in its dictions but in its elisions." Like Rekdal, Manguso tends to let the most significant moments in the text fall in the line breaks between thoughts.

At the same time, in what she chooses to describe, Manguso is strenuously precise. Most often, this is the facts of her illness and treatment, and how both physically felt. For example, when Manguso explains that she had a central line implanted into her chest, she writes that she would like the reader to know exactly how the cold blood infusions felt. She would like to invent a metaphor, she writes, but instead it seems most accurate to say that "it felt like liquid, thirty degrees colder than my body, being infused slowly but directly into my heart, for four hours." -

Memoirs of sickness are common; what is remarkable about Manguso's is that it conveys more subtle developments. The years she describes as nothing were, as she slowly explains, not entirely empty. They were also the moment when an incessantly driven young adult had to pause, and so look around her, and start becoming a writer.

Lavinia Greenlaw was lucky enough not to suffer physical crises so early in life. Instead, her adolescence in Essex, England, in the late 1970s was characterized by intense but more benign influences. Her most formative experiences involved pop music, and she writes her memoir by describing her first encounters with it. Like Manguso's memoir, Greenlaw's The Importance of Music to Girls is written in short sections that often verge on poetry.

Greenlaw takes 56 of these sections to describe how she went from being a small girl who danced on top of her father's feet to the type of young mother who has an exboyfriend and a Public Image record with her on the day she takes her daughter home from the hospital. Greenlaw often casually plays with chronology, but at the same time she remains intensely aware of the contradictory and painful aspects of her adolescence. Greenlaw recalls being at a school dance where she "shrank and veered, and felt in any given situation that I was wrong--standing in the wrong place and making the wrong shapes, the wrong noise." The song for this is David Bowie's "Laughing Gnome," and it echoes how Greenlaw adapted to her new surroundings. "I looked around, took note, and changed. I was a small person in a small place. I developed a small voice and a small laugh ha ha ha, hee hee hee." Here and elsewhere, Greenlaw uses music not only to situate her young adulthood but also to convey exactly how it felt.

Greenlaw studied the charts, got a transistor radio, and acquired her first tastes from listening to John Peel. The sounds she heard acted upon her as though she were "a cloud struck by lightning," and these were not only music but also the church bells in the village, the singsong and interruptions Submissions sought to:

of dinner conversations, siblings' arguments, and the murmur of her parents' medical language. It seems natural that Greenlaw's imagination also led her to poetry. The ping of the typewriter was everywhere, she writes, "the ratcheting revision of the carriage return." In almost any memoir by a writer, there is a way that, by the end of the story, the author seems to have found his or her calling. The process of becoming a writer isn't treated directly in Greenlaw or Manguso's memoir, but it is constantly present in the example they set with their language and in their shared emphasis on growing powers of attention. Their young lives have so little in common except, it turns out, the powers they apply to them in retrospect.

Walking Is For The Birds

The body signals when the joints and muscles haven't been used. It tells when the internal organs have not been stretched or worked. I try to listen for that signal, but I also try to set a schedule to walk, so that it becomes a purpose into itself. That is boring, so my success at that is not great. One of the motivating things for me is to walk outside, see the town, and see a little bit of nature. After work, I walked the nice park track that is on the east side of Cisco not long ago. I was waiting for the Cisco Writer's Club to meet, and had arrived early. So I chose to use the intervening time for the use of the legs. It was great. Sometimes I pressed it into a brisk pace, then I would slow and go into a dawdle. This let me look at the trees and the season, and feel the cool breeze. The beauty of can exercise with abandon.

Sometimes I need to walk. streets, I obey all pedestrian laws, but at a park there are few of those, so I'm left to the enjoyment of it all. I walked downtown Rising Star recently, and enjoyed it as well. What a great downtown that is! I met some great people. Watching nature is an important part of the walk. Recently, I was surprised to see robins, cardinals and woodpecker this early into the year. The woodpecker didn't seem to mind that I was close by, and began the wood work with a "Tat! Tat! Tat! Tat! This is the successful formula for me, to walk with more than the exercise as the goal.

to go on budget billing at that point.

Now, this begs a question? Do my rates go down as gas prices reduce? I don't see it!!! Is the energy going to keep going up? When will they be honest?

Another good example of a country not willing to take the cuts many of Americans havewas in the Sunday Abilene Reporter News, Page 5A. "Thousands of refinery workers prepare to picket".

Valero Energy, the nation's largest refiner said it "would close down some facilities"! This and the greed of labor unions will drive gasoline prices up! I witnessed it already at the pump! Why not take a hitch in the belt, settle arguments, go back to work and thank God you're in America!

Windows/Locks/Seats, Leather

many bumps and bruises along the way including illnesses and deaths. Just in the last 7 years, I have incurred 14 broke bones and had 5 surgeries. But as I have took pride in saying along the way, the wheels have to stay in motion no matter what, and thus it has even at a threat to my business. What does threaten it however, is the changing political landscape in before their 1st birthdays. We,

just as everyone, have endured

this country.

Let me tell you some little tidbits of fact which might help you understand. First, you have to understand that for every business owner there is a back story. This so called back story is often neglected and overshadowed. ter what, and thus it has even at major costs. And with the help of the great family and employees that make up our business, the bills stay paid, the work-ers were paid, and the door reers were paid, and the door remained open as advertised for 24 years. Not once, ever, have we not paid our employees on time. Not once, ever, were they asked to wait for a check. Not once, ever, have we failed to pay our vendors, or anyone for that matter, and on time I might add. Not once, ever, did we ask them to wait. Not once, ever, did we forget or fail to meet the busioutside my business. Many of you may have seen my decently nice home with shop and pool. Some of you have noticed other nice things and I'm sure at least some of these flashy icons have conjured up some idealized thoughts about my life. However, what you don't see is the back story However, what you don't see is the back story.

I started our business along with my wife and my parents in January 1985, some 24 years ago at the time of this writing. At that time, my wife and I lived in a 900 square foot house. Of course it didn't matter too much because 100% of my time was put into the company, which by the way would eventually employ close to 20 people. My wife and dad worked other jobs for some time during the start up years while mom run the fast pace required to do manual payables and receivables. Our diets consisted of a lot of peanut butter and jelly because every spare dollar we had went back into the company, besides we didn't have forget or fail to meet the business obligations that fewer and fewer of this day and time take pride in, or have understanding of. The "Not once, ever," statement has a cost that is unimaginable by most, including my own children that I love dearly. do believe in time, they will learn though as they are teachable and genuinely interested, as able and genuinely interested, as I hope you are.

Growing up, I started working at the young age of 13. At the age of 15 I started my auto parts career that enabled me to begin the process of learning how to succeed in business and yet again, build something worthy of offering up jobs for people and supplying services for a great small community. Many, many times through the years I worked while my friends went out having fun, partying, and taking trips. In fact, I was married to my business -- hard work, discipline, and sacrifice. I probably still am more than most realize.

Moving on through the years my friends got good jobs and some of them worked 40 hours a week and made a modest living. week and made a modest living. Of course they spent every dime they earned, drove flashy cars, lived in expensive homes and wore fancy designer clothes. Instead of hitting the latest hot fashion items, we were trolling through the Sears catalogs extracting any clothing items that didn't look like they were birthed in the 70's that were affordable. As time went on, my friends refinanced their mortgages and continued living a life of luxury. I, however, did not. I put my time, my money, and my put my time, my money, and my life into the businesses with a vision that eventually, some day, we too, would be able to afford some luxuries that only others seemed to enjoy. So, while many physically arrive at the ofin at about 10:30, and then leave at 5 to 6pm, I don't. There is no "off" button for me.

When many leave the office, they are done and have an evening or weekend all to their self. I unfortunately do not have much of these freedoms and haven't ever since a very young age. I eat and breathe the vision of success every minute of every day, and still have reservations daily about possible failure. There is no rest. There is no weekend.

no rest. There is no weekend. There is no happy hour. Every day the sometimes burden of sustainability is attached to my hip like a 1 year old special-needs child. Outsiders, of course, only see some fruits of that garden - the nice house, the decent cars, a few toys and some vacations... They seldom realize the back story and the sacrifices associated. It's now no secret to anyone that the economy is fallassociated. It's now no secret to anyone that the economy is falling apart and we, the people that made some right decisions and saved a little along the way, have to bail-out some of the people and companies who didn't. The people that overspent their paychecks suddenly feel entitled to the same luxuries that we earned and sacrificed decades of our lives for. The companies and boards that paid their CEO's millions all of the sudden are willing to listen if it means getting those bail out checks. Yes, business ownership has its benefits but the price is steep and not without wounds. Unfortunately, the cost of running fortunately, the cost of running our business, and employing the number of people we employee, is starting to eclipse the threshold of marginal benefit. Let me tell you why:

I am being taxed to death and the government thinks I don't pay enough as it is. I have state taxes. Federal taxes. Property taxes. Federal taxes. Property taxes. Sales and use taxes. Payroll taxes. Workers compensation taxes. Unemployment taxes. Taxes on taxes. We even now have reclamation taxes. I have to hire tax and legal people to manage all these taxes and then guess what? I have to pay taxes for employing them. Our costs on tax accounting have grown over 300% just in the last couple of years. Government mandates, regulations, and all the accounting that goes with it, now occupy too much of my time - even though I have a well versed CPA and lawyer. The question I have is this: Who is stimulating the economy? Is

The question I have is this: Who is stimulating the economy? Is it us, the people who have provided 10 to 20 people good paying jobs and serves thousands of people per year with needed services from several successful businesses? Or is it the single mother sitting at home pregnant with her fourth child waiting for her next welfare check? Obviously, government feels the lat-fice at 8 to 9am, mentally check ously, government feels the latter is the economic stimulus of

this country.

Here is what the politicians don't seem to understand... to stimulate the economy you need to stimulate what runs the economy. Had suddenly government mandated to me that I didn't mandated to me that I didn't need to pay taxes, guess what? Instead of depositing loads of money to that black-hole in Washington, I would have invested it in offering more services, hiring more employees and generating substantial economic growth. My employees would have enjoyed the wealth of that tax cut in the form of promotions, better salaries, and increased commissions. There is no reason this will not work is no reason this will not work is no reason this will not work folks, but it would appear that we can forget that for now.

When you have a comatose man on the verge of death, you don't defibrillate and shock his thumb thinking that will bring him back to life, do you? Small Business is at the heart of America and always has been. To restart it, you must stimulate it, not kill it. Suddenly, the power brokers in Washington believe the poor of America are the essential drivers of the American economic engine. It would appear that they also think the large corporations that can't learn to make a profit are also in the drivers' seat - who knows in the drivers' seat - who knows why? Nothing could be further from the truth and this is the thinking that is creating the fall of this country before our eyes. The letter was created to spawn thought and share true and factual information about my business journey and the current economic woes with those who wish to lend an ear. I hope the letter will alert us to step back and think about the things we do in our daily routines of life. Many of us preach shop at home, buy at home and so one yet we habitually and subconsciously support the going broke or gone broke corporations that house their workforce in Mexico China and India Small Business China house their workforce in Mexi-co, China and India. Small Busi-ness is worthy of us changing our habits to make daily con-scious efforts to support it. The government apparently has lost focus but we the people have the power to bring calm to the economic problems we continue to face. I believe with all my heart that God will continue to look out for us, even during this look out for us, even during this confusing time, but he expects us to do our part and be respon-sible for our livelihood as well. I am proud to be an American, a Texan, a Christian, and a chip off the block business owner with a back story.

God Bless you all and thank you for your business.

SUDOKU

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Seventh-Day Adventist Church Note-Burning February 21

Members of the Timbers Cross Seventh-day Adventist Church, 1233 N. Seaman, Eastland, will have a special celebration on Saturday, Feb.

During the worship hour at 11 a.m. the church will hold a symbolic "note burning," signifying that all the church property is now debt-free. Then the attractive building will be dedicated as a place of worship.

Pastor Ethan Muse and other church leaders will take part in this program. There will be thanks to God for making this place of worship possible, and thanks to businesses and individuals who helped with church building.

Planning and work on this church near Eastland began in 2003, when Jim Ferguson was the Pastor. He Conference President Leighton Holley and local leaders assisted with the project.

The groundbreaking held in May, 2004, and the building occupied in June 2005. Since then the grounds have been landscaped other improvements made.

Church members and Pastor Muse invite the public to come out on Feb. 21 and share this special time. There will be a Bible Study at 9:30 a.m. before the 11 a.m. program.

Stolen Identity

By J. B. Johnston

Down at the Dairy Queen the other day I asked Bubba if he ever worried about having his identity stolen. To which he replied, "No!" When I asked why, he said he had already been through all that. I asked, "How is that?"

It seems that Bubba had lost his drivers license down at the local convenience store, while buying gasoline, and some unscrupulous person had found it. Although I was thinking why someone, after seeing his picture on the license, would want to steal his identity was beyond me, I still had to ask what happened.

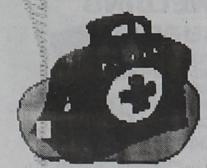

He said the fellow that stole his identity brought the license back, and begged him to take his identity back. I said, "What?". He said, after getting all of his bills, and finding out he had no money, the fellow begged him to be himself again. When I asked what he did, he said he made the man give him $50 to take his identity back. He figures that was fair enough since he had to pay to get a replacement license. I told him it sounded fair to me, but I would have held out for $100.

When I asked if Bubba didn't have any money in the bank at that time, he said he didn't and never had. Since I wasn't sure if I heard right I said, "Do you mean to tell me you have never had a bank account?" To which he replied, "Yep, and I don't plan to start now." Knowing he drew a Social Security check, I asked how he kept his money safe. He informed me he had it buried in the back yard.

Just out of curiosity I asked if anyone else besides him knew where it was buried. After giving me one of those looks indicating I was crazy he said, "No and if anyone else knew where it was buried it wouldn't be safe anymore." I said, "Bubba, just in case something happened to you, why don't you make me your beneficiary and tell me where it is buried." He gave me that look again, and said, "That would be about like telling those Washington politicians not to spend my tax dollars foolishly." I figure he had something there, but I wasn't worried because I have a metal detector, and fruit jars have metal lids. However, I want to get my hands on his old double barrel shotgun

After dwelling upon this for awhile, I figure Bubba is smarter than we who have money in a bank. In fact, I even gave thought to burying mine until I found out after I bought a shovel and a fruit jar, I wouldn't have any money left to bury.

Rising Star Senior Citizens News

By Betty Fisher

Thirty one partook of our meal today, and I expect that is about what the wind is blowing, 31 miles an hour!. I walked in with my hair covering my face. and so did my old friend Olena Ezzell! It was a glorious day! We sat there and talked and laughed until well after most everyone else had gone home. That is part of the fun of our Senior Citizen get together. Shone Abbas was with us again. Good to see his smiling face. Robert "F"inney told me I had been misspelling his name for the last 3 years, and it was time to get it correct. Thank you , Robert. 'Robert' I can spell, I lived for several years with a Robert. My little brother, Robert Siekman, was born when I was 14!

Ran into an old friend, Jim Walker, in our 'like new' City Library one day this week. Like old times he wrote out a new item to include . "Gerald Evans, Grandson of Delia Bonner, died on February 1, 2009. Complications of a long time form of illness similar to Muscular Dystrophy caused his death. Gerald weighed 600 lbs. at the time of this death. He was married to Frances Jean Walker Evans. Her tender love and care and devotion to him gave him many years to enjoy his quick smiles and simple love for all of us. Gerald would have been 59 in a few days."

You are all invited to drop in and see what the ladies are doing to the library, look through the numerous new books now available, both in hard back and soft back, regular and large print, as well as rearranged topical subjects. Several of us [more about this in a minute] attended a book signing in Comanche yesterday. The author, Sandra Teague Gilliland, graciously

Jim and I with Gwen Eberhart and Ginger Tobin drove over to Comanche, where we met my daughter, Beverly Stewart. There was already a houseful of locals, I won't even try to mention all of them, but I shall name a few. I would surely forget someone if I tried to remember all of them. It appeared to be almost all of the girls from the RSHS Class of '65, some before and some after, also there. And I shan't forget the boys either! Got big hug from Covie Weaver who lives in Dallas, who in fact was the first one I saw. Of course his excuse was, Sherry was working, and he had to come without her! He said he planned to stay a few days in their house on Brewster

cookbooks to 'our' library!

Hi, Little John Whiteside! Saw your mother at the 'Book Signing'. She told me you read my column every week in The Rising Star. Thank you. She also said you were as tall now as she! Wow! The ladies who instigated the signing, are to be commended. Sharolyn Roach Cox was the first to get in touch with me, but her sister in law Doris Cox was certainly handy keeping out all the goodies on the table. They were enough to want everyone to get 'that recipe.' I also spotted Sandra's sister in law Mary Frances Teague among the Cook Buying Crowd. Just our car, plus Beverly, carried home 8 of them. Trying to look through my book, and I'm not even past the soups!

The ladies, Carolyn Taylor and Kathy Brown from De Leon were here to do BP, and blood sugars. They stayed for lunch today. Eula Grisham and Norene Pittman were at the Coffee Shop Betty's Quick Stop] Sunday when the errant motorcycle ran through the Antique Shop's front window. Seems no on knows the poor guy's name, although Thelma says he lives next door. Thankfully he wasn't badly hurt, I was told. Norene said the Lees had been sick all week. Remember, LaVerne is Norene's sister. And when I asked about The Romines, Norene said Joann Eulala's daughter, Carolyn, is living with and caring for her mother. She is working by computer for Hendrick's hospital.

Arley Bibby had grandson, Shane Lee, with him today. Shane's mother, Velda, has a beautifully appointed Beauty Shop in town town Clyde. My sister, Joyce Holamon, has told me about it, and each time I do by there I plan on stopping, but haven't so far. I shall be going there Monday, but actually that is my problem. Since I'm there on Monday, and beauty shops are closed on Monday, I haven't had a chance to visit. Shane told me he had a business in Clyde.

Thelma Gilliland (no relation to Sandra Gilliland, although Thelma has a daughter named Sandra who graduated a year or two before Sandra G.} said daughter Judy Johnson and grandson Zane were coming tonight to take her to Weatherford tomorrow for a Dr. Appointment. Hey, all you guys and gals our there, get well! I heard the One Source Clinic was closed on Monday because of the flu!

From Ramona: Pat Newton had a little bad luck this week when a guy went through his front window on his motorcycle. First alert guys had the window boarded up probably before the news of the accident was out.

I am looking for Coann to come home for her week off this weekend.

Arley Bibby went to his eye Dr. in Abilene this week. Everything is fine at this time. Jacki is still having pain from his rattlesnake bite, but he is better today.

Abilene Writer To Be Guest At 'Meet The Author' In Cross Plains

The Cross Plains Public, Library is proud to announce. that Joe Specht, Collections, Manager of the Grady Mc-Whiney Research Foundal tion in Abilene, will be the' featured guest on Tuesday, February 17, 7:00 at the Community Center, 2nd and Beech Street in Cross Plains. 1

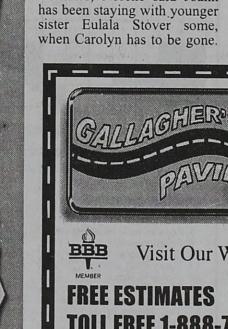

Specht will be sharing his? love of Texas music and his-j tory as they have intertwined, down through the years. Although he has written extensively about Abilene and songs about Abilene, Specht will be focusing on the music; of Slim Willet and his best known song, "Don't Let the, Stars Get in Your Eyes". The evening will be a combination of music and Texas history as researched by Specht.;

Specht has been widely; published in musical and historical journals, and was even featured on a radio program in Australia in 2006.

Make plans now to attend this program - it's truly one of a kind. As always, there is no charge for the evening and refreshments will be served.

Representing 52 Big Country high schools, the players and cheerleaders chosen for the 10th Anniversary Fellow-Greathouse All-Star Classic football game will be announced Saturday.

The 2008 game is scheduled for Saturday, June 13, at Abilene's Shotwell Stadium with all proceeds benefitting the Big Country Chapter of the FCA.

On Saturday, 83 players, 28 cheerleaders and the coaching staffs will be introduced to the media and then attend informational meetings with organizers and coaches at Beltway Park Baptist Church.

Teams, cheerleaders and coaches report for two-aday practices in Abilene on Wednesday, June 10.

As announced earlier, the coaching staffs from the inaugural Classic in 2000 are reuniting as part of the 10th Anniversary celebration.

The North will be led by head coach Steve Warren of Abilene High, assisted by Albany head coach Denney Faith, former Colorado City head coach Gerald James and former Sweetwater head coach Hank Dowell. James is now an assistant coach in Bridgeport, while Dowell is on Warren's staff at AHS.

Wylie's Hugh Sandifer will return as head coach for the South and will be assisted by former Brownwood head coach Steve Freeman, retired Ballinger head coach Danny Slaughter and Wylie defensive coordinator Clay Martin. Martin replaces former Cooper head coach Randy Quisenberry from the first FCA staff. Quisenberry has a scheduling conflict and is unavailable for the 2009 game.

Information about the Big Country Chapter of the FCA can also be found at www. bigcountryfca.org.

Baird I.S.D. Staff Spotlight Jennifer Jarman Bellar

faculty spotlight is on Mrs. Jennifer Jarman Bellar. Mrs. Bellar is the Baird High School counselor. Mrs. Bellar was born on November 25, 1972. BellargraduatedfromCooper High School in 1991, and attended college at Abilene Christian University, West Texas A&M University, and University of the Southwest. She worked for CPS before returning back to school to become a teacher.

Mrs. Bellar has been married to Mr. Jarod Bellar since 1995. They have two children, Jaxon, 8 years old, and Jentrye, 5 years old. I asked Mrs. Bellar how she met Mr. Bellar and she said, "I have been asked several times how I met my husband and I always respond, "sitting down" because he is a couple inches shorter than me! I fell in love with him because of his personality and charm. Yes, he would like to be taller, but I love him just the way he is. I love wearing high heels and he hates them! We actually met when we were both employed as day camp counselors at the YMCA in Abilene."

Mrs. Bellar loves spending time with her family. Her favorite drink is a diet coke. You will seldom see her without one. Her favorite color is pink, and her favorite singer is Kenny Chesney, even though she has a picture of Dierks Bentley and her in her office. Mrs. Bellar's favorite shows are The Big Bang Theory and Top Chef.

Mrs. Bellar became a social worker and a teacher because of the inspirational teachers in her life. Her favorite teacher was Mrs. Chris Faehnle, who taught Bellar in a seventh grade reading class at Jefferson Middle School, "She week's showed us how much fun reading could be and, more importantly, made us feel as though she really cared about us and was interested in our lives." Mrs. Bellar's dad, Wayne Jarman, passed away from Hodgkin's disease in 1983 at the young age of 36. She met weekly with her school counselor and made a large impact on her life, "I had several teachers that took the time out of their busy schedule and to actually talk and listen to me. I will always be eternally grateful. Two such teachers were Mr. Jack Nall and Mr. Mike Newton (Coach Newton's dad). These men expected to great things from all their students and encouraged all of us to not only make goals, but to meet and exceed them."

Mrs. Bellar's parents are Wayne Jarman (d. 1983) and John and Dena Bailey. Dena is a second lograde teacher at Dyess Elementary, and John is an Edward Jones Investment Representative. "My mom married a good Christian man named John Bailey. I admire him for taking on a mom and two children. John raised me with high morals and Christian values. I regret dealing him so much misery as a teenager!"

Mrs. Bellar wanted to add that "I absolutely love" working with the students and faculty at Baird ISD. I know I've already made life-long friends. The community has been very welcoming and I look forward to watching my kids graduate from Baird High School."
