GALA THROUNGS ATTEND 53RD PICNIC

HOME TOWN GOSSIP

It would be amiss to open this column today without telling a story on Mrs. A. J. Gensley that is really good.

She returned from California Monday night after having driven the entire route just as planned and never getting off the route until reaching Baird. But coming from the county seat to Cross Plains, where she's lived for 10 many years, Mrs. Gensley got lost and wound up nearer Burkett than Cross Plains. In company with her were her parents, Dr. and Mrs. R. Robertson. It's surprising that "Doc" could be lost anywhere in this locality, having ridden even the cow trails for more than 50 years.

And while we're reporting on the residents of the Southwest part of town, let us say that the Edwina Anderson and Vellie Joe Williams marriage—as predicted last week is expected to take place about the time this paper reaches you.

Although the couple continue to deny their marital intentions, it is believed that they will journey to Strawn—we don't know why—to recite their "I do's". The ceremony was originally scheduled for Friday but there is a possibility of it happening Thursday night.

And incidentally, there's another couple both of whom are residents of the Southwest part of town, that are more than passingly interested in each other.

We've got it straight that they will take the nuptial leap the twenty second day of this month. Both are well known having lived here a number of years. They are incidentally neighbors as well as sweethearts.

Oh what privations a rural newspaperman must suffer. These lines are written on a hot August afternoon, while virtually every other citizen of this trade territory is at the picnic enjoying the occasions.

Like a galley slave chained to his oar, we're sticking to the job until this is finished and then—off to the picnic. Hot cha chaaraa.

There are fishermen who tell stories and then there are fishermen who tell stories and display the proof. Into the latter class fall "Red" Huckaby, "Dick" Dixon, and John Browning.

They returned from Don Martin lake in old Mexico last week with enough fish meat to feed the county.

Readers would probably assess us a drink each should we quote "Red" hence we skip his yarn about a hail storm killing several million bass and there still being so many left that they draw straws to see which will be allowed to swallow the next lure.

Due to the fact that the imaginary sound of the merry go round organ is singing in our ears, not to mention the privilege of mingling with the folks at Cross Plains' fifty third annual celebration, we're shutting off this instalment right here and are bound for the picnic grounds.

Red lemonade? Yes sir fill 'em up.

Mrs. George B. Scott has as her guest this week Mrs. R. L. Hickey of San Angelo.

Miss Merline McCool of Putnam is the guest of Miss Frances Sparawles this week.

Mrs. Lee Swan of Patricia is visiting friends and relatives here this week.

Vote On Beer, Amendments August 24th

PETITION ASKING REPEAL SUBMISSION GRANTED BY COURT

When voters of justice precinct number six of Callahan county—Dressy and Cross Plains—go to the polls August 24 to vote on seven proposed constitutional amendments, they will also be confronted with a ballot asking whether or not the sale of 3.2 beer is to be continued.

The election was officially called by members of the commissioners court in regular session Monday, after a petition bearing 80 signatures asking for the election had been circulated.

The election will be held in the Anderson Chevrolet building and virtually the same officials as served in the last general election will work, according to a statement from County Judge J. H. Carpenter.

Number of qualified voters in this justice precinct has not been officially learned by the Review when this paper went to press but a well informed source said that the number of paid poll tax receipts were considerably fewer than a year ago this time.

Ross B. Jenkins Says Callahan County Ginners Are Cooperating With Farmers For Continuance Of Agriculture Adjustment Act

At a meeting in the office of the county agent Wednesday afternoon with the County Cotton Committee composed of Aaron McKee, chairman, Steven N. Foster, and V. F. Jones the ginners of the county signed affidavits to the effect that they were not a party to the suit against the Bankhead Act.

W. H. Bryant manager of the new Clyde gin expressed the opinion of the group when he said, "I have never been in favor of this suit against the government and never authorized any one to make me a party to such action. I am a farmer and have seen the benefits of the AAA and the Bankhead Act only helped to make the voluntary program workable."

B. L. Boydston stated that he was in favor of the Bankhead act and had found many advantages to it. He stated that for one thing it stopped the stealing of cotton from the yards or practically from the fields as each bale was required to have a certificate to get it ginned and that it must have a gin tag to move in the channels of commerce.

E. I. Vestal stated he had always been for the program in every way and it was his aim to co-operate with his fullest ability. He said he was primarily a farmer but as a manager of the Planters Gin at Cross Plains he was bound by the directors of the company.

The gins that signed affidavits so as to get the gin tags from the government without being a party to the suit brought by the Texas

ROSS B. JENKINS MISS VIDA MOORE PLAN FARM BOOTH

Arrangements were being made this week for an agricultural booth at the Cross Plains fifty third annual picnic and old settlers reunion. County Agent Ross B. Jenkins and County Home Demonstration Agent Miss Vida Moore were cooperating to make the display.

While the display had not been completed when this article was prepared for publication, it is un-

Tax exemption certificates were received by County Agent Ross B. Jenkins last week and were to be released to producers during the Cross Plains picnic. Mr. Jenkins said to the Review in a communication Tuesday morning: "It is planned to release these certificates to as many producers as show clear records during the two days of the Cross Plains picnic. Call at the Agricultural booth for certificates and information."

derstood that in the agricultural booth there would contain samples of practically all crops grown in this county, specimen of work done by the various home demonstration clubs and other features of this nature.

County Agent Ross B. Jenkins was also arranging early this week for a two hour discussion of the A.A.A. activities. The discussion would be held over the public address system, giving both pro and anti speakers an equal voice.

BAPTIST CONCLUDE SABANNO MEETING

Rev. Roy Shahan, pastor of the Moran Baptist church, concluded a revival meeting at Sabanno Sunday night.

Rev. W. L. Bryan, of Cross Plains who is pastor of the church, told the Review yesterday that the meeting resulted in 15 additions to the church membership—eight by letter and seven by baptism—and was generally a splendid success.

Mrs. Stanley Clark, Mrs. Edwin Baum and Mrs. Jack Scott were visitors in Dallas Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Pratt and daughter Wilma of Brownwood were week end visitors here.

Mr. and Mrs. James Walker of Odessa are visitors here this week.

REVIVALIST

DR. C. A. VOYLES

BAPTIST MEETING WILL BEGIN WITH SERVICES FRIDAY

The annual revival meeting of the local Baptist church will begin Sunday morning. Services are to be held in the tabernacle just in rear of the church and will continue through two weeks. Dr. C. A. Voyles, pastor, will do the preaching.

E. E. Gibbs, an evangelistic singer, has been secured to have charge of the music and personal workers band. Mr. Gibbs is a graduate of Southwestern School of Music at Fort Worth. He has had several years experience in choir direction and working in revival meetings.

"All singers of any or no church affiliation are invited to avail themselves of the training they will receive during Mr. Gibbs' stay here," Dr. Voyles said to the Review.

Invitations have been sent all churches in the Cross Plains territory, urging their attendance. Special nights have been designated for all communities in this immediate area.

12 cottage prayer meetings have been held in various parts of the city this week in preparation for the revival.

Two services will be held daily; morning at 10 and evening at eight.

MITCHELL FAMILY HAS REUNION HERE

A reunion of the Mitchell brothers and sisters was held at the City here Thursday. In attendance were three brothers and sisters from Arkansas and three brothers, T. E., P. J., and R. L. Mitchell, from this vicinity.

Those visiting here were: Q. A. Mitchell, Waldo, Arkansas; L. H. Mitchell, Hope, Arkansas; Mrs. George Logan, Texarkana, Arkansas; Mrs. Sam Walters, Williamsville, Arkansas; Mrs. Hershel Taylor, Rosston, Arkansas.

Other present included; the T. E. Mitchell family, P. J. Mitchell family, R. L. Mitchell family, A. L. Conlee family, Clarence Scott family, all of this place; Mrs. H. T. The group adjourned to the T. E. Mitchell home in the North part of town late in the afternoon for an ice cream supper and devotional

VARIED ATTRACTIONS DRAW HUGE CROWD TO PICNIC AND REUNION

Cross Plains fifty third annual picnic and old settlers reunion was in full swing Thursday afternoon with people from virtually all corners of Texas and several from adjoining states in attendance. The celebration which opened Wednesday morning was to close at midnight Thursday.

The program was officially opened Wednesday morning by Nat Williams, local school superintendent, who presented Mayor S. P. Collins for the welcome address. The mayor in an inspiring speech paid tribute to the old timers of this area and assured the large crowd that the city's every hospitality was theirs.

Mr. Williams introduced old timers for more than an hour giving each an opportunity to recount early day happenings in this section and interesting facts concerning the first Cross Plains picnics.

Paul V. Harrell, local attorney, relieved Williams as chairman at noon and presented State Representative Cecil A. Lotief who in turn introduced J. Bryan Bradbury, of Abilene, who spoke in behalf of the Dean law and retention of prohibition in Texas.

Other Wednesday speakers included: County Judge J. H. Carpenter, Sheriff Robert L. Edwards, W. H. Jobe of Sweetwater, and others.

On Thursday's docket were: J. C. Duvall, state representative from Fort Worth, who was to speak in behalf of repeal; Victor B. Gilbert, member of the Railroad Commission and a former citizen here; Thomas E. Hayden, of Abilene who was scheduled to speak in behalf of the retention of the Dean law; W. R. Chambers, Ross B. Jenkins, Cecil A. Lotief, Willbourn B. Collier, Ed Curry and others.

The Valley Shows, under the supervision of Ed Stritch, will remain through Saturday night. All carnival attractions will continue to run until then, the Review was told.

Former citizens by the hundreds, visitors to Cross Plains for the first time, and old timers who have attended Cross Plains picnics "religiously" constituted the large crowds which marked both days of the celebration.

One of the most interesting spots on the ground, according to passers-by, was an agricultural booth which was prepared by County Agent Ross B. Jenkins and Miss Vida Moore, County Home Demonstration Agent, showing the progress and development on Callahan farms in the past few years. Augmenting interest at the agricultural booth were cotton tax exemption certificates which were being passed out to farmers by the County Agent.

Exemption Certificates At Cross Plains Picnic

Tax Exemption Bale Certificates were received by the county agent last week and the office force has been busy checking them against the compliance measurements and it is planned to release them to as many of the producers as show clear record during the two days of the Cross Plains 53rd picnic.

County and Home Agents to be At Picnic

County Agent Jenkins and Home Agent Vida Moore plan to be at the picnic both days and plan to have suitable exhibits in a booth given them by the picnic committee to demonstrations in bettering home conditions.

They have been handicapped in presenting a complete line up of their work because of the time necessary to collect such was used at the Short Course all during the past week at Texas A&M College.

Triple A activities are to be explained and future programs discussed.

Texas, August 1, 1935 Cotton Report

The August 1, 1935, cotton forecast for Texas is 3,851,000 bales (500 pounds gross weight) compared with 2,406,000 bales produced in 1934, 4,428,000 in 1933, and at 74 percent of normal, which indicates a yield of 168 pounds per acre. The acreage planted to cotton in Texas this year was estimated at 11,357,000 acres. Assuming an abandonment equal to the 10-year average of 3.2% the area harvested will be 10,994,000 acres.

The indicated lint yield of 168 pounds per acre is 56 pounds above the low yield in 1934 and 24 pounds above the 10-year average (1924, 1933). However, due to reduced acreage brought about primarily by the acreage control measures of the AAA, the indicated production is 17% below the 10 year average production.

The prospects in south and southeast Texas are for a yield below averages. Rains in May and June were detrimental to the proper growth of the crop, and insect damage is heavy. In east Texas and in the north Blacklands where considerable cotton acreage was replanted, the present prospects are generally good but continued showers during July have hindered the fight against boll weevils and other insects. In the Northwest and North Central Plains the crop is late but the present outlook is for a good to excellent crop. This area was most severely affected by the drought of 1934.

United States

For the United States a crop of 11,798,000 bales is indicated from a reported condition of 73.6 percent of normal. The lint yield per acre is placed at 198.3 pounds, and the area in cultivation, less the 10 year average abandonment, 28,480,000 acres.

Inflation And Taxes!

We hear a great deal of talk about a mysterious thing called "inflation." Many persons think that inflation is a menace to be averted at all hazards. Many others look to inflation as the only possible way out of our economic troubles.

As we understand it, inflation is a condition under which prices of all commodities go up with more than normal rapidity. Put another way, inflation comes about when the value of money, its purchasing powers, goes down.

Inflation may occur from a variety of causes. Most folks think of the great inflation in Germany, when the government deliberately issued so much paper money that it took a billion marks or more to buy a beefsteak.

We are not heading for that sort of inflation in America, but many economists are predicting another kind of inflation. It will come about through the operation of the inexorable laws of economics.

The first symptom of an inflationary tendency is always a general movement, on the part of far-seeing men to take their money out of hoarding and put it into commodities. The dollar in the bank has been steadily declining in value.

That is why, we think, the stock markets have shown such a steady upward tendency in the past year. Men are putting their idle dollars into shares which represent tangible wealth.

THE BOOK by BRUCE BARTON The New Testament

THE first books of the New Testament "read in churches" with the Old Testament selections, were apostolic letters, notably those of Paul, and including generally, though not invariably, the longer epistles of John, Peter and James.

When discussion began as to which books ought to be read regularly there was immediate argument on the most important ones, the four Gospels and the larger epistles. There was a good deal of doubt about Revelation and Second Peter and the two short epistles of John, which were relatively unimportant, as was then acknowledged and is still relatively unimportant, as was then acknowledged and is still evident.

If any one asks whether we know absolutely that every book in the Old and New Testaments is holy above all other books, the answer is, We do not. No one can say that Esther, which is in the Bible, is nobler than Ecclesiasticus, which has been dropped out; certainly it is not so religious or so sweet.

We come now to the second question, How were these chosen books preserved through the ages and passed down to us?

Until the invention of printing, which was desired mainly that the Bible might be published, copies were made by hand, are errors inevitably crept in, no matter how scrupulous the copyists' care.

Old-Age Pension Amendment.

The old-age pension amendment, which is one of the seven propositions for changing the State Constitution to appear on the ballot August 24, falls a good deal short of perfection, from any view.

The enthusiastic devotee of the old-age pension cult does not like it for several reasons. In the first place, it is not mandatory, but permissive only. The Legislature would be empowered to set up an old-age pension system, but would not be required to do so.

The full-blown advocate of old-age pensions always imagines a state of affairs in which everybody over, say 60, receives a larger sum than $30 a month, with, usually, some radical method provided for raising the funds required.

On the other hand, the conservatives in either politics or finance looks askance at the old-age pension proposal, finding in the form in which it goes on the ballot August 24 several inlets for mischief. To begin with, adoption of the pension system would, it is estimated, commit the State to an expenditure of at least $40,000,000 a year.

The history of pensioning in Texas is that regulations limiting eligibility and holding down payments are progressively liberalized. If the amendment is adopted, it may be taken for granted that the full $15 pension will be paid out within a short time, and that the number of pensioners admitted will be larger in any year than the number previously estimated.

There is no present tax of the State that produces as much as $40,000,000 a year. That sum is about twice what the State gets out of the ad valorem tax collected upon all real and personal property within the State.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. Charles E. Dunn Martha. Lesson for August 18th. Luke 10:38-42. Golden Text: John 11:5.

It is easy to misunderstand this appealing domestic scene chosen for our lesson. For instance, we are tempted to be unjust to Martha. We are inclined to belittle her as a rather unworthy sort of woman. But she was nothing of the sort. Her work was necessary, and most diligently and faithfully performed.

believe that Martha was not a devout woman, sensitive to religious influences, in love with her Lord. She may very well have yearned to change places with Mary. We must beware of condemning Martha as an irreligious person interested only in practical efficiency.

On the other hand, it is easy to swing to the opposite extreme and glorify Martha in a very one-sided fashion. Ripling, for example wrote a characteristic poem, "The Sons of Martha," in which he depicts Martha's boys as the hard toilers of the world shouldering rough, rugged burdens in order that the idle sons of Mary may have a comfortable, easy time.

The truth lies between these two extremes of undue censure and extravagant praise. Martha was a wholesome, well-balanced woman, sensible and attractive. But in this particular incident she was a bit distracted and fussy. Perhaps she was tired. At any rate her irritation deserved the gentle rebuke of Jesus, "Martha, Martha, Mary has chosen the best dish."

The Story of the Constitution by CALEB JOHNSON

WHAT CONGRESS MAY AND MAY NOT DO

The powers granted by the States to the Congress under the Constitution are strictly defined and limited. In brief, they include the following:

- 1. To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises. 2. To pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States. 3. To borrow money on the credit of the United States. 4. To regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States. 5. To coin money and fix standards of weights and measures. 6. To establish postoffices and post roads. 7. To grant patents to inventors and copyrights to authors. 8. To declare war, and to raise and support armies and a navy and make rules for the government of military forces. 9. To call out the militia in case of emergency.

In general, Congress has authority to make all laws necessary to carry into execution the powers granted to the Federal Government by the Constitution. But through out the document the rights of the individual States are carefully safeguarded.

For example, each State has the sole right of appointing the officers and prescribing the training of its militia. Each State can determine for itself who constitutes its militia. In New York the Militia consists of every able-bodied male between the ages of 18 and 45 whether enrolled in the National Guard or not.

Congress was given power to establish a uniform rule of naturalization, but that does not carry with it the right to say who may vote in any given State. Each State sets up its own qualifications for voters and can change them at will. At the time of the adoption of the Constitution practically every State limited the franchise to tax-payers or property holders.

Other important restrictions are placed upon the power of Congress by the Constitution. It cannot enact a law retroactive in its application—an "ex post facto" law. That is, it cannot make illegal any act committed before the law prohibiting it was passed. It cannot impose taxes or duties upon articles exported from any State. It cannot impose taxes or duties upon upon articles exported from any State. It cannot suspend the writ of habeas corpus. This does not sound so important today, but the framers of the Constitution had a vivid recollection of the custom of their British rulers of putting people in jail and refusing to produce them in court.

The purpose of the Constitution to vest supreme power in Congress except for the rights reserved to the States, is indicated in the provision for the passage of laws over the veto of the Executive. An act of Congress does not become effective until it has been signed by the President, with the exception that if the President refuses to sign it, Congress may, by a two-thirds vote re-pass the bill. It thereupon becomes a law regardless of the President's dissent.

It is also within the power of the Congress to dismiss from office any member of Executive or Judicial branches of the Government, including the President. This is done by the process of impeachment, in which the House of Representatives has the sole power to indict and the Senate the sole power to try any official indicted or impeached by the House. Numerous Federal Judges have thus been impeached and dismissed from the public service and one President, Andrew Jackson, was impeached by the House of Representatives but was acquitted by the Senate.

In Other Towns

Local citizens who raised such a loud wail over the tall growing weeds on the postoffice lot can now qualify the complaints they made by cutting the weeds in their own back yards. When Uncle Sam had his attention called the the unsightly condition of property he owned in this flourishing village he very promptly hired a man to go out and smite the luxuriant growth of thorns and thistles. If all the people who have weeds growing on their premises would cut them down like the government cut its weeds then this would be a greatly improved appearing community.

The Republicans are crowing over their victory in Rhode Island, claiming that it means death to the New Deal next year. Democrats claim there is no real significance attached to the GOP victory. If the election had gone the other way, Democrats would be crowing and Republicans trying to explain. Such is life, especially in politics.

So long as American newspapers and cartoonists can with impunity caricature their own President, and quote Huey Long's opinion of him and publish Cramer's whispered insinuations that he is as crazy as a March hare, no lese majeste is involved in picturing the emperor of Nippon as a coolie drawing a cart. For the moment, the emperor of Ethiopia is worth a great deal more attention than the emperor of Japan, although the later claims descent direct from heaven while the former is content with tracing his lineage back to Solomon.

We doff our hat today to the city of Sweetwater! The people of that city have a wonderful appreciation for recreation. Since threshing is over farmers are getting into their feed crops. Great fields of shocked feed, cut with row binders, can be seen on every side of the road. This section really made feed this year, and if saved, will last for a long time. Much of the government rented acres were planted in feed, besides the regular feed crop. Last year's drought caused every one to plait sufficient feed. Many fields cut several weeks ago are suckering out and will make another crop. With a rain in the next few days, practically all feed will come again and nearly double the crop.

The DIVORCE COURT MURDER
By MILTON ROSS

TENTH INSTALMENT

SYNOPSIS—Barbara Keith, wife of a prominent Philadelphia business man, is murdered as she waits alone in a side room to testify in the divorce case of Rowland vs Rowland—She was to have testified for the husband, a friend, who was defendant in the action. Detective Tommy Rankin is assigned to the case from police headquarters—His preliminary investigation disclosed that both Mr. and Mrs. Rowland had gathered evidence against the other of infidelity. The will of Mrs. Rowland's first husband directed her lawyer brother, Mr. Willard, to handle the estate until she remarried when the new husband was to come into control. Detective Rankin finds motives and the evidence of guilt for the murder of Mrs. Keith, leading to the doors of virtually all of the principals involved. These principals are, the two Rowlands, Mr Keith, husband of the murdered woman, Hugh Campbell, paramour of Mrs. Rowland, and his underworld confederates—

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

The detective could not decide whether to believe the story or not. "Do you know whether Mrs. Keith ever visited Allerton, Indiana? Abruptly Rankin shifted the subject.

The other shook his head. "Allerton? Certainly not in the four years since we met; before that, she may have been there. She never mentioned it—Why do you ask?"

I found an empty bottle with an old label from a hospital in that town in her medicine closet. It had contained pyramidon."

Rankin bent toward him to emphasize the importance of his next question.

"Isn't it a fact, Mr. Keith that in spite of your liberal allowance and income, your wife was always pressed for funds?"

Mortimer Keith looked startled. "How could you guess that, Rankin?" he exclaimed. "It's true she worried about money, and often approached me for more, for charities and clothes. Once I questioned her about it, and she made some vague excuse about losing it in stocks."

"Perhaps this will explain her expenditures," Rankin said, "these check-stubs and canceled checks."

As he studied them, Mr. Keith's lips tightened into a formidable line and his eyes flashed in features darkened by a swift anger.

"Steady payments like this for two years," he cried harshly, at last "as if she were being blackmailed to prevent me from learning some secret about her!"

"They certainly suggest that," Rankin said, in disappointed tones. "You had no knowledge of them or to whom or for what reason she drew them?"

"No, this is my first inkling of them."

"Were you aware, sir, that Mrs. Keith would be a witness in the Rowland divorce suit in Mr. Dawson's office, yesterday?"

Mr. Keith shook his head. "Not until I read where she met her death."

"Had you any idea," Rankin asked, "how she happened to accompany young Rowland, two weeks ago, and be in a position to give evidence for him?"

"I still don't understand how she ever permitted herself to become involved in such a vulgar public scandal!" the manufacturer rasped out.

"Did you know Mrs. Keith was going out that Wednesday night at all?"

"Yes, she was to visit her physician, who attends her when her headaches become particularly vicious. Dr. Anton Brantman on Pine Street. I didn't pay any attention to when she left or returned home."

"Then, Mr. Keith, what was your connection with the Rowland divorce action?"

At the abruptness with which the detective shot this question the other gazed at him in perplexity and surprise.

"My connection?" he repeated wonderingly. "I don't follow you, Rankin: I haven't the slightest interest in it."

Rankin's voice rang with the vigor he put into his unexpected offensive.

"In that case," he demanded, "what were you doing at Sunset Inn, the evening of February first, when Mrs. Rowland discovered her husband in compromising relations with her secretary there?"

If it was Tommy Rankin's intention to startle the manufacturer by his sudden query, he succeeded by his sudden query, he succeeded admirably.

"How in the world did you find that out?" he finally asked in a dry voice.

Rankin saw no harm in answering. "It came out at the hearing that you reached the Inn just after Mrs. Rowland's party and witnessed the interruption of her husband's affair."

"Well, it—all happened quite accidentally—I had no warning of what was happening," the other floundered. "I was driving to New York alone that night, and when I reached Quakertown, I decided to sleep there because it was so late. I had left Philadelphia at about—"

Obviously he was stalling for time. "That won't wash, Mr. Keith! the detective answered curtly. You surely don't hope to persuade me your presence was only a coincidence?"

Mr. Keith compressed his lips. "Yes, of course that's ridiculous. The truth is, I have no explanation to offer; I can't tell you why I went there."

It was Rankin's turn to be taken aback, and he stared incredulously, as though he had not heard aright.

"You can't tell me, Mr. Keith?" he said harshly. "You mean you won't?"

"Have it any way you like, Rankin," his opponent returned, firmly. "It concerns me alone and can't possibly be of interest to the authorities. It is a private matter I prefer not to disclose."

"Mr. Keith," Rankin cried sharply, "do you realize, what your refusal means? Nothing is private in a murder case; and I am investigating the murder of some one near to you—your wife."

The manufacturer winced. "If it had any relation to the crime at all, I promise you I wouldn't hesitate to speak out, Rankin."

"I'm the best judge of what is pertinent to the case and what isn't, Mr. Keith."

But Mortimer Keith shook his head. "I'm sorry I can't oblige," he said more gently.

The detective had to acknowledge defeat in his effort to discover the secret of Mr. Keith's visit to Sunset Inn. The man stood clearly within his rights in not answering.

Leaving Cottman on guard, the detective returned to Headquarters.

"That fellow Campbell Gordon's been hunting has shown up, Tommy," the captain announced. "He came in and asked for you of his own accord, twenty minutes ago."

Rankin began by ignoring the hand Campbell proffered, and the visitor flushed.

"Sit down, Campbell," he invited blandly. "I've often wanted to meet you; considering our mutual interests, it's strange we haven't done so before."

Campbell set aside his cane. "Yes it is, he agreed. "I might return the compliment, Rankin; you're to be congratulated on your splendid reputation. It's a privilege to know you."

"I had expected to hear from you before this," the detective continued.

"It's been in all the papers that we wanted to communicate with you."

"That's what really brought me in," Campbell returned easily. "I happened to be called hastily to the country, where there were no newspapers. I spent the night on the Perkiomen Creek, at the cottage of my friend, Nick Alberti, who manages the Organdy Club."

Rankin spoke casually. "That was where so much of the trouble began, wasn't it, Campbell? When you and Mrs. Adele Rowland spent a night there, two weeks ago?"

At the deliberate provocation, the racketeer compressed his lips resentfully and his eyes flashed; but with an effort he held his peace.

"What about that phone call in the lawyers' offices?" Rankin challenged. "You were heard to cry out, 'Oh, my God!' and 'You fool!'"

That didn't mean very pleasant news. You were, alarmed enough to rush out quickly to—well, be on hand yourself and then leave the city."

Again Campbell's features hardened. "You haven't a single fact to prove any connection with Mrs. Keith. It's no use, Rankin; you can't show I had any knowledge of her death before today, or expect me to admit anything you can use."

"At least you have no objection to telling me who phoned you," Rankin suggested.

"Oh, but I certainly have. That's my private affair."

Abruptly the detective shifted his attack. "If I'm not mistaken you reached Mr. Dawson's office yesterday before Mrs. Keith arrived with her escort."

"No, I wasn't there then," Campbell corrected him. "I followed them by a few minutes—it must have been almost twenty to three; and they had already gone into the library to wait."

"Mrs. Keith chose to stay in the inner office, fifteen-oo., where she could be alone," Rankin stated, "and you were aware of that; in fact, Mrs. Rowland joined you from the library to tell you that." His tone became hostile. "Just she entered fifteen-five herself, to unlock the hall door."

The implied accusation brought Campbell forward in his chair, in a swift burst of anger.

"So that's what you're getting at," he said, through his teeth. "You'll claim next I committed the murder myself! Damn it, Rankin, be careful with your charges; you might have the unpleasant job of trying to prove them. I was in the main office during the time she was killed."

"So you know when that happened?" the detective observed drily.

"And why not?" his visitor demanded wrathfully. "It's in all the papers that she died between half-past two and three o'clock."

"Well, what about the time before you arrived—two thirty-eight—or after you left. That was at two-fifty-six; you still had four minutes leeway. And the whole business could be accomplished in hardly more than a minute. Mrs. Rowland had unlocked the door from the corridor and pulled the curtains; it was only necessary to enter fifteen-oh-five, Mrs. Keith answers, chloroform Mrs. Keith answers then open them again."

Excited, Campbell appeared ready to blurt out a refutation, but caught himself, in a desperate attempt to regain his equanimity.

"Well, what of that?" He spoke more calmly. "It's all words, Rankin, nothing more; you've no foundation or confirmation of any of these suppositions. It's ridiculous for me to take them at all seriously."

Disappointed at his control, Rankin played his trump card, his unwavering gaze fixed on the other.

"Campbell," he demanded slowly, "where can I find Mitch Riley? I think he could help me and I would like to have a short conversation with him."

At last he had penetrated Campbell's vigilant guard. Startled and furious, a cold rage leapt to his eyes, in which the detective recognized amazement, shock and, what was most significant fear.

To take off fat easily, SAFELY and HARMLESSLY—take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—cut down on fatty meats, butter, cream and rich pastries—it is the safe way to lose unsightly fat and one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle. Get it at Smith Drug Store or any drugstore in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the safest way to lose fat—money back.

But be sure and get Kruschen Salts—imitations are numerous and you must safeguard your health.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO "BREAK IN" THE FORD V-8

You can drive it 50 miles an hour the day you buy it

THE FORD V-8 is ready for normal driving when you buy it. There is no tedious period of breaking-in for 500 or 1000 miles. You can drive it up to 50 miles an hour the first day. And after the first hundred miles you can drive it as fast as you desire.

The reason for this is as important as the result. The Ford V-8 needs no breaking-in because of unusual accuracy in the manufacture of moving parts and the smoothness of bearing surfaces. Clearances are correct when you buy the car. It is not necessary to depend on a long wearing-in period to eliminate tightness and insure smooth running. Longer life, greater economy and better performance are bound to result from such precision methods. A good cigarette, too needs Balance—

And that's why the tobaccos in Chesterfield are carefully balanced one against the other... not too much of one—not too little of another.

We take the right amounts of the right kinds of four types of tobacco—Bright, Burley, Maryland and Turkish.

It is this balancing of tobaccos that makes Chesterfields milder and makes them taste better.

Chesterfield... the cigarette that's MILDER

Chesterfield... the cigarette that TASTES BETTER
