

The Baird Weekly Star.

VOL. III.

BAIRD, CALLAHAN COUNTY, TEXAS, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1889.

NO.

DRY GOODS.

CLOTHING.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

COME AND SEE THE

NEW - DRY - GOODS - FIRM.

J. D. BOYDSTUN,

(Successor to S. L. Robertson, Baird, Tex.)

Having bought out the stock of dry goods and store house owned by S. L. Robertson, I desire to say to the people of Baird and Callahan county that I COME TO STAY and to form the acquaintance of the people of the town and country, and shall endeavor to make it to your interest to give me a share of your trade. We are determined to keep up with the times, and furnish our customers with the latest styles of

DRY GOODS, CLOTHING, BOOTS AND SHOES.

We want your trade now, will want it this fall, and will in the future want it, and shall endeavor to treat our customers fair and square.

We can't be excelled either in PRICE, STYLE or QUALITY.

LOUIS BOYDSTUN, - - - MANAGER.

HO, FOR CHRISTMAS.

Holiday Goods---Fancy, Ornamental, Useful and Substantial :-

If you want a present suitable to the season for some loved one, call and see me. I have some very unique articles, appropriate as a gift to your sweetheart. Wagons, velocipedes, base ball goods, etc., a variety for the boys. Plush, shell China and glass goods. Albums, mirrors, work boxes, perfume, frames, toilet and smoking cabinets and cases for ladies and gentlemen. Fine assortment of dolls and other choice presents for the girls. Toys in endless variety for all. Gift books. Nice souvenirs for the little ones. Violins, accordions, flutinas, harmonicas, etc. Fancy stationery and toilet goods.

I would also call attention to my stock of drugs and medicines, school books, stationery, window glass, paints, oils, varnishes, brushes, sponges, etc.

PRICES AND QUALITIES GUARANTEED.

With thanks for past liberal patronage and a Merry Christmas to all. Respectfully,

R. PHILLIPS.

A BIG OFFER!

From November 15th to January 1st we offer our entire stock of

JEWELRY,

Consisting of

Diamonds, Watches, Clocks, Silverware, Musical Instruments, Fine

Mother of Pearl, Vienna, Bohemian, and

French Glassware at

20 - PER CENT REDUCTION - 20

Having purchased the goods direct from the manufacturer, saving 20 per cent that most Jewelers pay the jobber, and wishing to reduce our stock, are the reasons we make this extraordinary offer.

We can suit you in

Christmas - Presents, - New - Year - Presents - and - Wedding - Presents

All at a Big Reduction.

Our stock must be reduced and we give this special

20 PER CENT DISCOUNT STRICTLY FOR CASH,

come now before the assortment is broken, and when you get our prices, we do all kinds of Watch, Clock and Jewelry repairing.

IR & CLARK, Jewelers,

ABILENE, TEX.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

A Long and Eventful Career in Business, War and Politics.

FOUR SCORE YEARS AND MORE.

The Two Kentucky Boys, Lincoln and Davis—On the Northern Frontier—A Cotton Planter—Enters Congress—The Mexican War—President of the Southern Confederacy—Imprisonment, Release and Old Age.

More than eighty years ago two Kentucky boys, born in widely different social spheres, entered upon still more widely diverse careers: Abraham Lincoln, in Hardin (now Laramie) county, and Jefferson Davis, in Christian (now Todd) county; Lincoln born February 12, 1809, and Davis on the 3d of June preceding.

COL. JEFFERSON DAVIS.

His Heroic and Successful Action at Buena Vista.

While Mr. Davis was active in congress in July, the First regiment of Mississippi volunteers enrolled for the Mexican war elected him their colonel. He resigned at once, overtook his regiment at New Orleans, organized and drilled it to a high state of efficiency, and early in September was on the Rio Grande, in the army of his father-in-law, Gen. Zachary Taylor. A few days later he bore a conspicuous part in the siege and storming of Monterey, and, as commissioner, assisted in drawing up the terms of capitulation.

Five months of comparative quiet followed, and then came the crowning glory of his military career, the achievement of which, more than all else, fixed him firmly in the affections of the southern people, aided him effectively at each turning point in his subsequent career, made him secretary of war and finally president of the Southern Confederacy. This was his gallantry, coolness in danger and soldierly skill at the battle of Buena Vista, Feb. 23, 1847.

In July, 1849, Mr. Davis was in congress, in September he was leading his regiment against Monterey; in February, 1847, he was at Buena Vista, and July of the same year found him again a peaceful planter. His term of service having expired, in August, 1847, the governor of Mississippi appointed him a United States senator to fill a vacancy; the legislature in 1848 re-elected him to complete the term, and in 1850 re-elected him for a full term. The ever memorable congress of 1850-'51, at its long session, had adopted the noted "compromise measures," but fully satisfied neither party.

Soon after the birth of Jefferson, Samuel Davis removed to Mississippi, locating near Woodville, in Wilkinson county. The son there acquired an unsteady good English education for the time, and at an early age Jefferson entered Transylvania college, Kentucky. In 1831, however, President Monroe appointed him a cadet at West Point, whence he was graduated in 1833, at the early age of 20. He had stood high in his class, and at once cut out an active duty, though for some time commissioned only as a brevet second lieutenant. Promotion was very slow in those peaceful times, but he soon won his full commission, and in the next three years demonstrated his organizing capacity, both as infantry and staff officer on the northwestern frontier.

The year 1837 brought a surprise and many promotions. Black Hawk entered on his famous campaign, and Jefferson Davis was at once given an active and responsible position to monitor in and organize the new recruits. There had long been a tradition, that in this capacity he sustained in the company of Illinois volunteers from New Salem and vicinity commanded by Capt. Abraham Lincoln, but there is no record of it.

CAREERS AMONG THE INDIANS. Early in 1838, L. Davis was transferred from his place to Company B, First United States Infantry, and in recognition of his services in the Black Hawk war was promoted to a first lieutenant in the First United States dragoons, of which command he was soon made adjutant. In this position he made a very brilliant record, not only as an organizer and efficient administrator in garrison life, but in several active campaigns against the Comanches, Pawnees and other Indians. And it is at this stage of his career that active, one might say ardent, criticism first concerns itself with Jefferson Davis. Those writers who persist in attributing the downfall of the Southern Confederacy to President Davis and that this early life exhibited the same faults and virtues which marked his administration in greater and greater degree with each successive increase of rank and power. The greatest fault alleged, perhaps, is unreasonably attachment to a few ideas and corresponding prejudice against other persons.

It was while in this service that Lieut. Davis won and won a daughter of the eminent general and president, Zachary Taylor. Her father was in command of Fort Crawford, near Prairie Du Chien, and his daughter, a beautiful and refined young lady, was the center of attraction among the subordinate officers. Innumerable are the romantic stories of their rivalries, the final success of Lieut. Davis, the bitter opposition of the "stern parent" and old Indian fighter, and the final departure by night of the young couple to be married by a priest on the western bank of the Mississippi. Let the young and romantic continue to read and believe. Suffice it that the father remained old-fashioned for some time, and was not completely reconciled to his son-in-law all the latter lay wounded in his tent after the battle of Buena Vista. There are as many accounts of what was said there as of the battle of Shiloh. Gen. Taylor's words appear to have been these, or very near them: "Davis, you have saved the day—God bless you! When Davis would have you, she was a better judge of a man than I was."

SHORT YEARS A PLANTER. In 1838, Lieut. Davis resigned his commission and located in Christian county,

where he lived for eight years the quiet life of a cotton planter. Then came a "crisis," the annexation of Texas which distinctly northern and southern parties confronted each other. In 1843 Lieut. Davis took an active and most effective part in the state campaign and in 1844 he was one of the Democratic electors for Mississippi. In 1845 he was elected a representative in congress, and in December of that year took his seat in the house. It was called then a "stormy session," but in retrospect after the long session of 1849-'50, it was thought mild.

Mr. Davis took an active part in the discussion on the tariff, the Oregon boundary issue, the Mexican imbroglio, and the slavery question so far as it came up, but his speeches at that time indicate a position far more moderate than was afterwards attributed to him. It is of no great consequence now, but worth noting as curious matter of history, that in the heated discussion regarding Texas the extreme northern men, while the most eloquent eulogies upon the union came from the south. In a speech on the Oregon question, Feb. 6, 1849, Mr. Davis said: "From sire to son has descended the love of union in our hearts, as in our history are mingled the names of Concord and Camden, of Yorktown and Saratoga, of Moultrie and Pleasantburg, of Chippewa and Erie, of New Orleans and Bunker Hill. Grouped together they form a monument to the common glory of our common country; and where is the southern man who would wish that that monument were less by one of the northern names that constitute the mass?"

While Mr. Davis was active in congress in July, the First regiment of Mississippi volunteers enrolled for the Mexican war elected him their colonel. He resigned at once, overtook his regiment at New Orleans, organized and drilled it to a high state of efficiency, and early in September was on the Rio Grande, in the army of his father-in-law, Gen. Zachary Taylor. A few days later he bore a conspicuous part in the siege and storming of Monterey, and, as commissioner, assisted in drawing up the terms of capitulation.

Five months of comparative quiet followed, and then came the crowning glory of his military career, the achievement of which, more than all else, fixed him firmly in the affections of the southern people, aided him effectively at each turning point in his subsequent career, made him secretary of war and finally president of the Southern Confederacy. This was his gallantry, coolness in danger and soldierly skill at the battle of Buena Vista, Feb. 23, 1847.

In July, 1849, Mr. Davis was in congress, in September he was leading his regiment against Monterey; in February, 1847, he was at Buena Vista, and July of the same year found him again a peaceful planter. His term of service having expired, in August, 1847, the governor of Mississippi appointed him a United States senator to fill a vacancy; the legislature in 1848 re-elected him to complete the term, and in 1850 re-elected him for a full term. The ever memorable congress of 1850-'51, at its long session, had adopted the noted "compromise measures," but fully satisfied neither party.

Soon after the birth of Jefferson, Samuel Davis removed to Mississippi, locating near Woodville, in Wilkinson county. The son there acquired an unsteady good English education for the time, and at an early age Jefferson entered Transylvania college, Kentucky. In 1831, however, President Monroe appointed him a cadet at West Point, whence he was graduated in 1833, at the early age of 20. He had stood high in his class, and at once cut out an active duty, though for some time commissioned only as a brevet second lieutenant. Promotion was very slow in those peaceful times, but he soon won his full commission, and in the next three years demonstrated his organizing capacity, both as infantry and staff officer on the northwestern frontier.

The year 1837 brought a surprise and many promotions. Black Hawk entered on his famous campaign, and Jefferson Davis was at once given an active and responsible position to monitor in and organize the new recruits. There had long been a tradition, that in this capacity he sustained in the company of Illinois volunteers from New Salem and vicinity commanded by Capt. Abraham Lincoln, but there is no record of it.

He lived for eight years the quiet life of a cotton planter. Then came a "crisis," the annexation of Texas which distinctly northern and southern parties confronted each other. In 1843 Lieut. Davis took an active and most effective part in the state campaign and in 1844 he was one of the Democratic electors for Mississippi. In 1845 he was elected a representative in congress, and in December of that year took his seat in the house. It was called then a "stormy session," but in retrospect after the long session of 1849-'50, it was thought mild.

Mr. Davis took an active part in the discussion on the tariff, the Oregon boundary issue, the Mexican imbroglio, and the slavery question so far as it came up, but his speeches at that time indicate a position far more moderate than was afterwards attributed to him. It is of no great consequence now, but worth noting as curious matter of history, that in the heated discussion regarding Texas the extreme northern men, while the most eloquent eulogies upon the union came from the south. In a speech on the Oregon question, Feb. 6, 1849, Mr. Davis said: "From sire to son has descended the love of union in our hearts, as in our history are mingled the names of Concord and Camden, of Yorktown and Saratoga, of Moultrie and Pleasantburg, of Chippewa and Erie, of New Orleans and Bunker Hill. Grouped together they form a monument to the common glory of our common country; and where is the southern man who would wish that that monument were less by one of the northern names that constitute the mass?"

While Mr. Davis was active in congress in July, the First regiment of Mississippi volunteers enrolled for the Mexican war elected him their colonel. He resigned at once, overtook his regiment at New Orleans, organized and drilled it to a high state of efficiency, and early in September was on the Rio Grande, in the army of his father-in-law, Gen. Zachary Taylor. A few days later he bore a conspicuous part in the siege and storming of Monterey, and, as commissioner, assisted in drawing up the terms of capitulation.

Five months of comparative quiet followed, and then came the crowning glory of his military career, the achievement of which, more than all else, fixed him firmly in the affections of the southern people, aided him effectively at each turning point in his subsequent career, made him secretary of war and finally president of the Southern Confederacy. This was his gallantry, coolness in danger and soldierly skill at the battle of Buena Vista, Feb. 23, 1847.

In July, 1849, Mr. Davis was in congress, in September he was leading his regiment against Monterey; in February, 1847, he was at Buena Vista, and July of the same year found him again a peaceful planter. His term of service having expired, in August, 1847, the governor of Mississippi appointed him a United States senator to fill a vacancy; the legislature in 1848 re-elected him to complete the term, and in 1850 re-elected him for a full term. The ever memorable congress of 1850-'51, at its long session, had adopted the noted "compromise measures," but fully satisfied neither party.

Soon after the birth of Jefferson, Samuel Davis removed to Mississippi, locating near Woodville, in Wilkinson county. The son there acquired an unsteady good English education for the time, and at an early age Jefferson entered Transylvania college, Kentucky. In 1831, however, President Monroe appointed him a cadet at West Point, whence he was graduated in 1833, at the early age of 20. He had stood high in his class, and at once cut out an active duty, though for some time commissioned only as a brevet second lieutenant. Promotion was very slow in those peaceful times, but he soon won his full commission, and in the next three years demonstrated his organizing capacity, both as infantry and staff officer on the northwestern frontier.

The year 1837 brought a surprise and many promotions. Black Hawk entered on his famous campaign, and Jefferson Davis was at once given an active and responsible position to monitor in and organize the new recruits. There had long been a tradition, that in this capacity he sustained in the company of Illinois volunteers from New Salem and vicinity commanded by Capt. Abraham Lincoln, but there is no record of it.

CAREERS AMONG THE INDIANS. Early in 1838, L. Davis was transferred from his place to Company B, First United States Infantry, and in recognition of his services in the Black Hawk war was promoted to a first lieutenant in the First United States dragoons, of which command he was soon made adjutant. In this position he made a very brilliant record, not only as an organizer and efficient administrator in garrison life, but in several active campaigns against the Comanches, Pawnees and other Indians. And it is at this stage of his career that active, one might say ardent, criticism first concerns itself with Jefferson Davis. Those writers who persist in attributing the downfall of the Southern Confederacy to President Davis and that this early life exhibited the same faults and virtues which marked his administration in greater and greater degree with each successive increase of rank and power. The greatest fault alleged, perhaps, is unreasonably attachment to a few ideas and corresponding prejudice against other persons.

It was while in this service that Lieut. Davis won and won a daughter of the eminent general and president, Zachary Taylor. Her father was in command of Fort Crawford, near Prairie Du Chien, and his daughter, a beautiful and refined young lady, was the center of attraction among the subordinate officers. Innumerable are the romantic stories of their rivalries, the final success of Lieut. Davis, the bitter opposition of the "stern parent" and old Indian fighter, and the final departure by night of the young couple to be married by a priest on the western bank of the Mississippi. Let the young and romantic continue to read and believe. Suffice it that the father remained old-fashioned for some time, and was not completely reconciled to his son-in-law all the latter lay wounded in his tent after the battle of Buena Vista. There are as many accounts of what was said there as of the battle of Shiloh. Gen. Taylor's words appear to have been these, or very near them: "Davis, you have saved the day—God bless you! When Davis would have you, she was a better judge of a man than I was."

SHORT YEARS A PLANTER. In 1838, Lieut. Davis resigned his commission and located in Christian county,

where he lived for eight years the quiet life of a cotton planter. Then came a "crisis," the annexation of Texas which distinctly northern and southern parties confronted each other. In 1843 Lieut. Davis took an active and most effective part in the state campaign and in 1844 he was one of the Democratic electors for Mississippi. In 1845 he was elected a representative in congress, and in December of that year took his seat in the house. It was called then a "stormy session," but in retrospect after the long session of 1849-'50, it was thought mild.

Mr. Davis took an active part in the discussion on the tariff, the Oregon boundary issue, the Mexican imbroglio, and the slavery question so far as it came up, but his speeches at that time indicate a position far more moderate than was afterwards attributed to him. It is of no great consequence now, but worth noting as curious matter of history, that in the heated discussion regarding Texas the extreme northern men, while the most eloquent eulogies upon the union came from the south. In a speech on the Oregon question, Feb. 6, 1849, Mr. Davis said: "From sire to son has descended the love of union in our hearts, as in our history are mingled the names of Concord and Camden, of Yorktown and Saratoga, of Moultrie and Pleasantburg, of Chippewa and Erie, of New Orleans and Bunker Hill. Grouped together they form a monument to the common glory of our common country; and where is the southern man who would wish that that monument were less by one of the northern names that constitute the mass?"

While Mr. Davis was active in congress in July, the First regiment of Mississippi volunteers enrolled for the Mexican war elected him their colonel. He resigned at once, overtook his regiment at New Orleans, organized and drilled it to a high state of efficiency, and early in September was on the Rio Grande, in the army of his father-in-law, Gen. Zachary Taylor. A few days later he bore a conspicuous part in the siege and storming of Monterey, and, as commissioner, assisted in drawing up the terms of capitulation.

Five months of comparative quiet followed, and then came the crowning glory of his military career, the achievement of which, more than all else, fixed him firmly in the affections of the southern people, aided him effectively at each turning point in his subsequent career, made him secretary of war and finally president of the Southern Confederacy. This was his gallantry, coolness in danger and soldierly skill at the battle of Buena Vista, Feb. 23, 1847.

In July, 1849, Mr. Davis was in congress, in September he was leading his regiment against Monterey; in February, 1847, he was at Buena Vista, and July of the same year found him again a peaceful planter. His term of service having expired, in August, 1847, the governor of Mississippi appointed him a United States senator to fill a vacancy; the legislature in 1848 re-elected him to complete the term, and in 1850 re-elected him for a full term. The ever memorable congress of 1850-'51, at its long session, had adopted the noted "compromise measures," but fully satisfied neither party.

Soon after the birth of Jefferson, Samuel Davis removed to Mississippi, locating near Woodville, in Wilkinson county. The son there acquired an unsteady good English education for the time, and at an early age Jefferson entered Transylvania college, Kentucky. In 1831, however, President Monroe appointed him a cadet at West Point, whence he was graduated in 1833, at the early age of 20. He had stood high in his class, and at once cut out an active duty, though for some time commissioned only as a brevet second lieutenant. Promotion was very slow in those peaceful times, but he soon won his full commission, and in the next three years demonstrated his organizing capacity, both as infantry and staff officer on the northwestern frontier.

The year 1837 brought a surprise and many promotions. Black Hawk entered on his famous campaign, and Jefferson Davis was at once given an active and responsible position to monitor in and organize the new recruits. There had long been a tradition, that in this capacity he sustained in the company of Illinois volunteers from New Salem and vicinity commanded by Capt. Abraham Lincoln, but there is no record of it.

CAREERS AMONG THE INDIANS. Early in 1838, L. Davis was transferred from his place to Company B, First United States Infantry, and in recognition of his services in the Black Hawk war was promoted to a first lieutenant in the First United States dragoons, of which command he was soon made adjutant. In this position he made a very brilliant record, not only as an organizer and efficient administrator in garrison life, but in several active campaigns against the Comanches, Pawnees and other Indians. And it is at this stage of his career that active, one might say ardent, criticism first concerns itself with Jefferson Davis. Those writers who persist in attributing the downfall of the Southern Confederacy to President Davis and that this early life exhibited the same faults and virtues which marked his administration in greater and greater degree with each successive increase of rank and power. The greatest fault alleged, perhaps, is unreasonably attachment to a few ideas and corresponding prejudice against other persons.

It was while in this service that Lieut. Davis won and won a daughter of the eminent general and president, Zachary Taylor. Her father was in command of Fort Crawford, near Prairie Du Chien, and his daughter, a beautiful and refined young lady, was the center of attraction among the subordinate officers. Innumerable are the romantic stories of their rivalries, the final success of Lieut. Davis, the bitter opposition of the "stern parent" and old Indian fighter, and the final departure by night of the young couple to be married by a priest on the western bank of the Mississippi. Let the young and romantic continue to read and believe. Suffice it that the father remained old-fashioned for some time, and was not completely reconciled to his son-in-law all the latter lay wounded in his tent after the battle of Buena Vista. There are as many accounts of what was said there as of the battle of Shiloh. Gen. Taylor's words appear to have been these, or very near them: "Davis, you have saved the day—God bless you! When Davis would have you, she was a better judge of a man than I was."

SHORT YEARS A PLANTER. In 1838, Lieut. Davis resigned his commission and located in Christian county,

where he lived for eight years the quiet life of a cotton planter. Then came a "crisis," the annexation of Texas which distinctly northern and southern parties confronted each other. In 1843 Lieut. Davis took an active and most effective part in the state campaign and in 1844 he was one of the Democratic electors for Mississippi. In 1845 he was elected a representative in congress, and in December of that year took his seat in the house. It was called then a "stormy session," but in retrospect after the long session of 1849-'50, it was thought mild.

Mr. Davis took an active part in the discussion on the tariff, the Oregon boundary issue, the Mexican imbroglio, and the slavery question so far as it came up, but his speeches at that time indicate a position far more moderate than was afterwards attributed to him. It is of no great consequence now, but worth noting as curious matter of history, that in the heated discussion regarding Texas the extreme northern men, while the most eloquent eulogies upon the union came from the south. In a speech on the Oregon question, Feb. 6, 1849, Mr. Davis said: "From sire to son has descended the love of union in our hearts, as in our history are mingled the names of Concord and Camden, of Yorktown and Saratoga, of Moultrie and Pleasantburg, of Chippewa and Erie, of New Orleans and Bunker Hill. Grouped together they form a monument to the common glory of our common country; and where is the southern man who would wish that that monument were less by one of the northern names that constitute the mass?"

While Mr. Davis was active in congress in July, the First regiment of Mississippi volunteers enrolled for the Mexican war elected him their colonel. He resigned at once, overtook his regiment at New Orleans, organized and drilled it to a high state of efficiency, and early in September was on the Rio Grande, in the army of his father-in-law, Gen. Zachary Taylor. A few days later he bore a conspicuous part in the siege and storming of Monterey, and, as commissioner, assisted in drawing up the terms of capitulation.

Five months of comparative quiet followed, and then came the crowning glory of his military career, the achievement of which, more than all else, fixed him firmly in the affections of the southern people, aided him effectively at each turning point in his subsequent career, made him secretary of war and finally president of the Southern Confederacy. This was his gallantry, coolness in danger and soldierly skill at the battle of Buena Vista, Feb. 23, 1847.

In July, 1849, Mr. Davis was in congress, in September he was leading his regiment against Monterey; in February, 1847, he was at Buena Vista, and July of the same year found him again a peaceful planter. His term of service having expired, in August, 1847, the governor of Mississippi appointed him a United States senator to fill a vacancy; the legislature in 1848 re-elected him to complete the term, and in 1850 re-elected him for a full term. The ever memorable congress of 1850-'51, at its long session, had adopted the noted "compromise measures," but fully satisfied neither party.

Soon after the birth of Jefferson, Samuel Davis removed to Mississippi, locating near Woodville, in Wilkinson county. The son there acquired an unsteady good English education for the time, and at an early age Jefferson entered Transylvania college, Kentucky. In 1831, however, President Monroe appointed him a cadet at West Point, whence he was graduated in 1833, at the early age of 20. He had stood high in his class, and at once cut out an active duty, though for some time commissioned only as a brevet second lieutenant. Promotion was very slow in those peaceful times, but he soon won his full commission, and in the next three years demonstrated his organizing capacity, both as infantry and staff officer on the northwestern frontier.

The year 1837 brought a surprise and many promotions. Black Hawk entered on his famous campaign, and Jefferson Davis was at once given an active and responsible position to monitor in and organize the new recruits. There had long been a tradition, that in this capacity he sustained in the company of Illinois volunteers from New Salem and vicinity commanded by Capt. Abraham Lincoln, but there is no record of it.

CAREERS AMONG THE INDIANS. Early in 1838, L. Davis was transferred from his place to Company B, First United States Infantry, and in recognition of his services in the Black Hawk war was promoted to a first lieutenant in the First United States dragoons, of which command he was soon made adjutant. In this position he made a very brilliant record, not only as an organizer and efficient administrator in garrison life, but in several active campaigns against the Comanches, Pawnees and other Indians. And it is at this stage of his career that active, one might say ardent, criticism first concerns itself with Jefferson Davis. Those writers who persist in attributing the downfall of the Southern Confederacy to President Davis and that this early life exhibited the same faults and virtues which marked his administration in greater and greater degree with each successive increase of rank and power. The greatest fault alleged, perhaps, is unreasonably attachment to a few ideas and corresponding prejudice against other persons.

It was while in this service that Lieut. Davis won and won a daughter of the eminent general and president, Zachary Taylor. Her father was in command of Fort Crawford, near Prairie Du Chien, and his daughter, a beautiful and refined young lady, was the center of attraction among the subordinate officers. Innumerable are the romantic stories of their rivalries, the final success of Lieut. Davis, the bitter opposition of the "stern parent" and old Indian fighter, and the final departure by night of the young couple to be married by a priest on the western bank of the Mississippi. Let the young and romantic continue to read and believe. Suffice it that the father remained old-fashioned for some time, and was not completely reconciled to his son-in-law all the latter lay wounded in his tent after the battle of Buena Vista. There are as many accounts of what was said there as of the battle of Shiloh. Gen. Taylor's words appear to have been these, or very near them: "Davis, you have saved the day—God bless you! When Davis would have you, she was a better judge of a man than I was."

SHORT YEARS A PLANTER. In 1838, Lieut. Davis resigned his commission and located in Christian county,

where he lived for eight years the quiet life of a cotton planter. Then came a "crisis," the annexation of Texas which distinctly northern and southern parties confronted each other. In 1843 Lieut. Davis took an active and most effective part in the state campaign and in 1844 he was one of the Democratic electors for Mississippi. In 1845 he was elected a representative in congress, and in December of that year took his seat in the house. It was called then a "stormy session," but in retrospect after the long session of 1849-'50, it was thought mild.

Mr. Davis took an active part in the discussion on the tariff, the Oregon boundary issue, the Mexican imbroglio, and the slavery question so far as it came up, but his speeches at that time indicate a position far more moderate than was afterwards attributed to him. It is of no great consequence now, but worth noting as curious matter of history, that in the heated discussion regarding Texas the extreme northern men, while the most eloquent eulogies upon the union came from the south. In a speech on the Oregon question, Feb. 6, 1849, Mr. Davis said: "From sire to son has descended the love of union in our hearts, as in our history are mingled the names of Concord and Camden, of Yorktown and Saratoga, of Moultrie and Pleasantburg, of Chippewa and Erie, of New Orleans and Bunker Hill. Grouped together they form a monument to the common glory of our common country; and where is the southern man who would wish that that monument were less by one of the northern names that constitute the mass?"

While Mr. Davis was active in congress in July, the First regiment of Mississippi volunteers enrolled for the Mexican war elected him their colonel. He resigned at once, overtook his regiment at New Orleans, organized and drilled it to a high state of efficiency, and early in September was on the Rio Grande, in the army of his father-in-law, Gen. Zachary Taylor. A few days later he bore a conspicuous part in the siege and storming of Monterey, and, as commissioner, assisted in drawing up the terms of capitulation.

Five months of comparative quiet followed, and then came the crowning glory of his military career, the achievement of which, more than all else, fixed him firmly in the affections of the southern people, aided him effectively at each turning point in his subsequent career, made him secretary of war and finally president of the Southern Confederacy. This was his gallantry, coolness in danger and soldierly skill at the battle of Buena Vista, Feb. 23, 1847.

In July, 1849, Mr. Davis was in congress, in September he was leading his regiment against Monterey; in February, 1847, he was at Buena Vista, and July of the same year found him again a peaceful planter. His term of service having expired, in August, 1847, the governor of Mississippi appointed him a United States senator to fill a vacancy; the legislature in 1848 re-elected him to complete the term, and in 1850 re-elected him for a full term. The ever memorable congress of 1850-'51, at its long session, had adopted the noted "compromise measures," but fully satisfied neither party.

Soon after the birth of Jefferson, Samuel Davis removed to Mississippi, locating near Woodville, in Wilkinson county. The son there acquired an unsteady good English education for the time, and at an early age Jefferson entered Transylvania college, Kentucky. In 1831, however, President Monroe appointed him a cadet at West Point, whence he was graduated in 1833, at the early age of 20. He had stood high in his class, and at once cut out an active duty, though for some time commissioned only as a brevet second lieutenant. Promotion was very slow in those peaceful times, but he soon won his full commission, and in the next three years demonstrated his organizing capacity, both as infantry and staff officer on the northwestern frontier.

The year 1837 brought a surprise and many promotions. Black Hawk entered on his famous campaign, and Jefferson Davis was at once given an active and responsible position to monitor in and organize the new recruits. There had long been a tradition, that in this capacity he sustained in the company of Illinois volunteers from New Salem and vicinity commanded by Capt. Abraham Lincoln, but there is no record of it.

CAREERS AMONG THE INDIANS. Early in 1838, L. Davis was transferred from his place to Company B, First United States Infantry, and in recognition of his services in the Black Hawk war was promoted to a first lieutenant in the First United States dragoons, of which command he was soon made adjutant. In this position he made a very brilliant record, not only as an organizer and efficient administrator in garrison life, but in several active campaigns against the Comanches, Pawnees and other Indians. And it is at this stage of his career that active, one might say ardent, criticism first concerns itself with Jefferson Davis. Those writers who persist in attributing the downfall of the Southern Confederacy to President Davis and that this early life exhibited the same faults and virtues which marked his administration in greater and greater degree with each successive increase of rank and power. The greatest fault alleged, perhaps, is unreasonably attachment to a few ideas and corresponding prejudice against other persons.

It was while in this service that Lieut. Davis won and won a daughter of the eminent general and president, Zachary Taylor. Her father was in command of Fort Crawford, near Prairie Du Chien, and his daughter, a beautiful and refined young lady, was the center of attraction among the subordinate officers. Innumerable are the romantic stories of their rivalries, the final success of Lieut. Davis, the bitter opposition of the "stern parent" and old Indian fighter, and the final departure by night of the young couple to be married by a priest on the western bank of the Mississippi. Let the young and romantic continue to read and believe. Suffice it that the father remained old-fashioned for some time, and was not completely reconciled to his son-in-law all the latter lay wounded in his tent after the battle of Buena Vista. There are as many accounts of what was said there as of the battle of Shiloh. Gen. Taylor's words appear to have been these, or very near them: "Davis, you have saved the day—God bless you! When Davis would have you, she was a better judge of a man than I was."

SHORT YEARS A PLANTER. In 1838, Lieut. Davis resigned his commission and located in Christian county,

where he lived for eight years the quiet life of a cotton planter. Then came a "crisis," the annexation of Texas which distinctly northern and southern parties confronted each other. In 1843 Lieut. Davis took an active and most effective part in the state campaign and in 1844 he was one of the Democratic electors for Mississippi. In 1845 he was elected a representative in congress, and in December of that year took his seat in the house. It was called then a "stormy

Subscription $1.00 a Year

When in our regular authorized

Thursday, December 19, 1889

In Memoriam

By Miss Alice Sharpe

He slept on his bed in rest,

The statesman sleeps; he tells no more,

In death he lies, our noble chief,

Bring flowers in honor of the dead!

Before another issue of THE STAR

Christmas will have come.

More towns die for want of confidence

Tuesday morning in the wee sma' hours

There is on the way a fine display

What about the Christmas tree?

If you burn out to-night how much

While at court call on Powell

Best wines, liquors and imported

LADIES, READ THIS UNPARALLELED

To any lady sending us the names

Just received an elegant assortment

One-half car of Kansas barrel

Just received an elegant line

Ladies' hats from 75 cents up

Three hundred head of half-blooded

To all who wish to buy lumber

We respectfully solicit your trade

A Well Known Educator

Fort Worth, Tex., April 10, 1889

On account of injury to my eyes

Now, one thing I would like to

Whenever an old road is cut off

ALEX. HOGG,

Supt. City Schools.

Ladies' Aid Society.

The Ladies' Aid society of the

As her killing time is approaching

I remember an inquiry from

California Wines

Just received at Office Saloon

WHEELER'S EXCHANGES

The BAIRD STAR indignantly

The Stockman is correct in its

Davis, the slayer of B. C. Evans,

That's the idea. Stop making

More towns die for want of

Tuesday morning in the wee sma'

There is on the way a fine display

What about the Christmas tree?

If you burn out to-night how much

While at court call on Powell

Best wines, liquors and imported

LADIES, READ THIS UNPARALLELED

To any lady sending us the names

Just received an elegant assortment

One-half car of Kansas barrel

Just received an elegant line

Ladies' hats from 75 cents up

Three hundred head of half-blooded

To all who wish to buy lumber

We respectfully solicit your trade

A Well Known Educator

Fort Worth, Tex., April 10, 1889

On account of injury to my eyes

Now, one thing I would like to

Whenever an old road is cut off

ALEX. HOGG,

Supt. City Schools.

Ladies' Aid Society.

The Ladies' Aid society of the

As her killing time is approaching

I remember an inquiry from

gets there Wheeler is already there.

John Blake received this week his

George Slaughter met with a very

Ten per cent lower than any one's

Miller Bros., our old photographers,

When you want a town lot in Baird

December 14.—Last Saturday Rev.

Stone, the ever welcome Presbyterian

Tuesday morning in the wee sma'

There is on the way a fine display

What about the Christmas tree?

If you burn out to-night how much

While at court call on Powell

Best wines, liquors and imported

LADIES, READ THIS UNPARALLELED

To any lady sending us the names

Just received an elegant assortment

One-half car of Kansas barrel

Just received an elegant line

Ladies' hats from 75 cents up

Three hundred head of half-blooded

To all who wish to buy lumber

We respectfully solicit your trade

A Well Known Educator

Fort Worth, Tex., April 10, 1889

On account of injury to my eyes

Now, one thing I would like to

Whenever an old road is cut off

ALEX. HOGG,

Supt. City Schools.

Ladies' Aid Society.

The Ladies' Aid society of the

As her killing time is approaching

I remember an inquiry from

weight of the head, and will give

John Blake received this week his

George Slaughter met with a very

Ten per cent lower than any one's

Miller Bros., our old photographers,

When you want a town lot in Baird

December 14.—Last Saturday Rev.

Stone, the ever welcome Presbyterian

Tuesday morning in the wee sma'

There is on the way a fine display

What about the Christmas tree?

If you burn out to-night how much

While at court call on Powell

Best wines, liquors and imported

LADIES, READ THIS UNPARALLELED

To any lady sending us the names

Just received an elegant assortment

One-half car of Kansas barrel

Just received an elegant line

Ladies' hats from 75 cents up

Three hundred head of half-blooded

To all who wish to buy lumber

We respectfully solicit your trade

A Well Known Educator

Fort Worth, Tex., April 10, 1889

On account of injury to my eyes

Now, one thing I would like to

Whenever an old road is cut off

ALEX. HOGG,

Supt. City Schools.

Ladies' Aid Society.

The Ladies' Aid society of the

As her killing time is approaching

I remember an inquiry from

Money to Loan.

Gold medal, inscribed on one side

My residence in west part of town,

All kinds of Salt at Lea's.

Get your hams and bacon at Cop-

Braid sets for dresses at Moon &

Coffins put up at short notice. L.

Plain Hams and breakfast bacon at

Furniture cheap at Gould's Furni-

Go to Coppins' for pure leaf lard.

Warranted.

Hides and furs of all kinds wanted

Get your full patent flour at Cop-

Bran, Cotton Seed and other feed cheap

Ed Copps is receiving new goods

Finest line of pipes ever in Baird

All kinds of candies and nuts,

Bring in your wheat corn and oats.

Second-hand sewing machines for Hartman steel wire picket fence at Nicest bacon in the market. Ogle.

A full line of undertaker's goods al-

Misses' and children's cloaks at re-

Big fat turkeys. S. L. Ogle.

A fine assortment of Christmas

Call and see; you will be

The finest assortment of sugar and

You will find at the Office Saloon

Kentucky Comfort and McBrayer

If you need any for Christmas call

Our prices are the lowest. Foy &

New crop sugar house molasses at

New furniture to arrive at L. Gould's

You will get the best of groceries at

Machine, engine and wagon oils at

Just received an elegant assortment

One-half car of Kansas barrel

Just received an elegant line

Ladies' hats from 75 cents up

TAX SALE.

J. E. W. LANE, Town Marshal and Tax

RESIDENT ROLL FOR THE TOWN OF BAIRD.

Table with columns: NAME, TOWN, Original Grantee, Acres, No. of Lots, Val. of Land, Val. of Improvements

NON-RESIDENT ROLL

Table with columns: NAME, TOWN, Original Grantee, Acres, No. of Lots, Val. of Land, Val. of Improvements

UNRENDERED ROLL

Table with columns: NAME, TOWN, Original Grantee, Acres, No. of Lots, Val. of Land, Val. of Improvements

I further notify all parties that I will

Just received a large lot of apples,

Buy a White sewing machine from

Car of flour just received from Fort

Just received fresh lot of mince

We are informed that J. L. Lea &

Blankets and comforts from 75 cents

J. L. Lea & Co. are selling stone-

Just received 30 barrels of apples,

J. L. Lea & Co. have just received

Just received fresh invoice of granu-

Comforts, blankets, quilts just re-

You will always find the best wines

Just received a car of fruits and

Finest jerseys in Baird at Moon &

We have the best ladies $2.50 shoe

Don't you never forget that we will

Just received one car of salt. S. L.

New lot of furniture at L. Gould's,

Kelley, Goodfellow & Co.'s shop-

A magnificent line of glassware just

Coppins has just received over 700

Keep it in your mind when you

It is an established fact that Ph.

Don't forget that Ogle carries the Finest line of window curtains ever

Just received car flour, meal and

Don't forget that Ogle carries the

Some new goods just received in

Don't forget that we are still in the

We want to convince you that we

Shiloh's Cure will immediately re-

"Hackmeck" a lasting and frag-

LEGAL NOTICE.

Reported as an stray by R. J.

FOR SALE OR RENT—The store house

MONEY TO LOAN—We have $100,000

IF YOU WILL get a bottle of

CHOP, WHOOPING COUGH and

CATARH CURE, health and sweet

FOR ALL FORMS of female

Neuralgic Persons

And those troubled with nervousness

Brown's Iron Bitters

In order to keep my present force

WHY WILL YOU suffer and at last die of some kind of blood

When one bottle of Shiloh's

Blood Syrup will cleanse your

of all traces of blood trouble.

Care constipation and indigestion;

acts on your kindneys and restore your health in less time than any remedy that was ever given to humanity. Sold by R. Phillips.

Among the incidents of childhood that stand out in bold relief, as our memory reverts to the days when we were young, none are more prominent than severe sickness. The young mother vividly remembers that it was

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

that cured her of croup, and in turn administered it to her own offspring and always with the best success. For sale

by Baird Drug Co.

THOSE THAT suffer from that dangerous and loathsome disease,

catarrh, have at last a remedy that will never fail to permanently

cure, and it is in the reach of all;

for bronchitis, croup, and catarrh of the throat. Always remember that they don't pay no clerks, no

rent, and therefore buyers get the benefit.

We see that J. L. Lea & Co. have in operation a wire picket fence machine. This fence, besides being mental and cheap, is an ingenious

contrivance for keeping stock and chickens out of yards, orchards, and gardens. It is absolutely rabbit proof.

A preventive for croup. There no longer exists any doubt but croup can be prevented. True croup never appears

without a warning, and if

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

is given as directed as soon as the first indication of croup appears, it will invariably dispel all symptoms of the disease.

This can always be done if it is kept at hand. 50 cent and

$1 bottles for sale by Baird

Drug Co.

Mr. T. A. Deroven, merchant,

Deroven, Louisiana, says: "The

St. Patrick's Pills went like hot cakes." People who have tried them are never satisfied with any other kind.

Their gentle action and reliability as a cathartic is what makes them so popular. For sale by

Baird Drug Co.

Shiloh's Cure will immediately relieve croup

BIG STONE GROCERY STORE

J. L. LEA & CO.

Keep on Hand

The Largest stock of Groceries in town; Therefore they buy and sell cheaper than anyone.

PLOWS, WAGONS, DRILLS

AND ALL FARM IMPLEMENTS, CHEAPER THAN EVER FOR CASH OR ON REASONABLE TIME.

D. M. OSBORNE'S HARVESTING MACHINERY

Cheap and on Liberal Terms.

We will Buy or Help You to Sell Your COUNTRY - PRODUCE - FOR - CASH.

Cash paid for

: Cotton, : Wool : and : Hides :

J. L. Lea & Co., - - Baird, Tex.

DRY GOODS.

CLOTHING.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

DON'T - FORGET - THE - CHEAPEST - PLACE

IN TOWN TO BUY

Dry Goods,

Clothing and Furnishings, etc.

Boots and Shoes.

T. E. POWELL'S

THE LEADER OF CORRECT STYLES AND LOW PRICES.

A look through our various departments will delight the best dresser in the country and satisfy the most limited buyers that there is excellent value within their reach.

5 to 7 1/2 c. a yd.
7 c. and up.
25 and up.

DRY - GOODS.

Dress gingham, from 7 1/2 to 10 c.
per yard.
Calicos, - - - 1/2 to 7 c. a yd.

We also carry a full line of Atlas, Worsted, Corsets, Laces, Ribbons, Hose, buttons, and in fact everything kept in a first-class dry goods store.

Ladies' Newmarkets, Cloaks and Shawls.

50 to $10
5 to $25

CLOTHING.

Overcoats from $3 to $18
Wedding Suits a Specialty.

suit of clothes cheaper than any house west of St. Louis. We can fit a boy 3 years or man as big as a giant.

kid, $1
to $3.25
to $2.75

BOOTS & SHOES.

Mens' - Brown Des Noyer's best calf shoe, $2.50. The best shoe in town for the money.

We carry a complete line of HAND-MADE Boots and Shoes. All warranted.

PS. We carry a complete line of hats made by the manufacturers, including the J. B. Stetson, "Tiger" and "The Lion." Call and examine goods and prices.

white and colored shirts, underwear, neckties, collars and of buttons etc. To price our goods is to buy them.

GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS.

Trunks and Valises.

We have a large variety of

FOR SALE. The fine residence of Joe Bushing in Baird, is for sale. Price, $3,000.
Will exchange for good agricultural land. Dwelling has six rooms, gable roof.
Finest residence in the city. Ten acres under fruit trees, two acres in trees and one acre in grapefruit. Two acres in trees and one acre in grapefruit. Private water works. This is one of the best bargains in Callahan county. STAR LAND CO.

MARRIED.

TURNER-CLEMMER.—Near Putnam last Sunday, December 15, Mr.
J. P. Turner and Miss Emma Clemmer were united in marriage by Rev. R. F. Dunn, of the M. E.
Church, south.

LUETARO-SNAPP.—On the 15th
inst., at Baird, Mr. Ygnacio Lueta-ro to Miss Annie Snapp, of Shackelford county; Rev. B. F. Stone of the Presbyterian church, officiating.

THE TOWN.

Beautiful weather.
See list of town property advertised for taxes.

Mr. J. D. Boydston, of Rockwall, is in town.

Uncle Ben Walker, of Turkey creek, is in town.

Wiley Lambert, of Toro, was in town Tuesday.

Pay your taxes before January 1
and save cost.

Tom Windham, of Tecumseh, was in town last week.

Christmas next Wednesday. Remember the poor.

Dr. D. C. Rumph, of Tecumseh, was in the city one day last week.

There will be a basket supper at Belle Plaine to-morrow night.

Henry Lambert and Philip Yost, of Tecumseh, were in town Tuesday.

See resolutions of sympathy. They were handed in too late for last issue.

Ellis Richards, sold three Hereford bulls to J. Bowman, of this county, this week.

Go to the entertainment at the court house to-morrow night for the benefit of the school.

Judge Solomon and Dr. Wilson returned from the grand lodge all right side up with care.

S. R. Windham and his son, "Top," of Byrd's Store, Brown county, were in town this week with a lot of hogs for sale.

Miller Bros., the well known artists, are in town, and will remain only a short time. Call at once if you want photos.

Wm. Cranston, of Abilene, was in town Monday. He came down to look at Ellis Richardson's herd of Herefords.

We desire to thank our subscribers for the promptness with which a great many of them are renewing their subscriptions.

Hick Windham, son of Maj. A. J.
Windham, was in town Monday. He went to Falls county, where he will spend Christmas.

THE STAR is under everlasting obligations to our genial tax assessor, T.
J. Norrell, for the present of a Christmas turkey. Thanks.

Town Marshal J. E. W. Lane and J. B. Seny are debating the question as to whether the latter shall pay the corporation occupation tax. The case will be tried before Judge Solomon to-morrow on writ of habeas corpus.

THE STAR takes pleasure in informing the public that Miller Bros., the popular artists, of Abilene, are in town and will remain twelve days from to-day. Miller Bros. are well known to our people. Their work is all first-class.

W. L. Wrinkle, of Cottonwood, called at this office and paid for a year's subscription for his brother
A. L. Wrinkle, Cottage Grove, Tenn.
Mr. Wrinkle will start to Tennessee next Saturday on a visit, and if he has good luck he will read this notice at his old home Christmas eve. THE STAR wishes Mr. Wrinkle a safe journey.

Tuesday night about 9 o'clock the alarm was sounded that the school house was on fire, and everyone in town liked to have crippled themselves getting there. The fire was caused by a large lamp falling during a rehearsal. The fire was extinguished before it had done much damage. The lamp was hung with a rope, which either broke or was burned in two.
Prof. Haynes says he will never hang another lamp with anything but wire.
A good idea, for an old rotten string in this instance came very near being the cause of the destruction of the school house.

Why is it that some people cannot hear the alarm of fire given without firing off a gun or pistol? Tuesday night when the alarm of fire was given and while the bells were ringing and everybody was yelling fire at the top of their voices, several shots were fired from a gun or a pistol by some one. Of course the idea was to sound the alarm, but in this instance it was wholly unnecessary, and such promiscuous shooting is dangerous to human life. Don't shoot off your gun when you hear some one yell fire next time, but shoot off your voice as loud as you can. It will do just as much good and no one will be in danger of being shot.

Overshoes cheap at Powell's.

All groceries fresh and good. Ogle does not keep shoddy goods.

"Christ before Pilate," pictures at Foy & Richardson's.

DELAYED LOCALS.

Mr. E. J. Hicks of the Lytle Gap neighborhood was in town last Thursday, soliciting subscriptions to build a school house in his neighborhood.

A nice suit for $6.50 at Powell's.
Julius Norton brought into THE STAR office one day last week the largest bunch of collards we ever saw.
It was about four feet across the top and was a good load for one man to carry. It was raised on E. M. Norton's farm near Cottonwood.

Twenty dollars of good domestic, 31 worth 80 cents, at J. D. Boydston.

The Baptists received the bell for their new church last week and the same was placed in position in the tower of the new church last Saturday. The church has also made arrangements to buy an organ, which we suppose will be received soon.
We are glad to note this evidence of prosperity on the part of our Baptist brethren.

If you want shoddy goods don't go to S. L. Ogle.

"Ted" Archer and wife of Cottonwood were in town Saturday and made THE STAR a call. We regret that they were absent at the time. However, we met them on the street, where Mrs.
Archer handed us the money for a six months subscription to THE STAR.

Bring in your work to be enlarged at Miller Bros. while they are in Baird.
If you want cheap goods go to Powell's.

Entertainment.

Baird school will give an entertainment at the court house Friday night December 20 for the purpose of supplimenting the expense fund, so as to enable our public school to run five months. Before you say "well I guess I'll not go," think of the purpose for which this little entertainment is given, and if you have the cause of education at heart we think you will give us your presence. Admittance 25 cents.

We are overstocked with ladies'
shoes, and are selling them at 75 cents, worth $1.50, $1.75 and $2. J. D.
Boydston.

Do You Want to Contribute.

Money is being raised to dig a cistern at the Methodist parsonage. If you want to contribute something call at this office or on G. E. Nelson at J. L. Lea & Co.'s. The committee to solicit subscriptions are very busy and have not time to call on the members of the church and others. All members of the M. E. Church are earnestly requested to assist as they may feel able. Subscriptions from any source will be thankfully received and properly acknowledged.

I have the largest stock of all kinds of dry goods, clothing, boots & shoes in Baird, and I will sell cheaper than any one. T. E. Powell.

Baird Chapter.

Companion J. R. Lynch, of Albany, will install the officers of Baird Chapter No. 182, R. A. M., at the Masonic hall next Saturday night. Work in council degrees. All R. A. Masons cordially invited.

Santa Claus just arrived at S. L.
Ogle's.

We are expecting another new line of jewelry this week. J. D. Boydston.

Miller Bros. will make views in any part of the city or surrounding country while they are here. Leave orders with them early, that they may receive attention.

Reduced Rates.

Tickets will be sold December 22, 23, 24 and 31, one fare for round trip, to points not exceeding 200 miles distant, good to return until January 2, 1890. Tickets to points east of Missouri and south of Central City, Ky., good for 30 days, one fare for round trip. Tickets on sale December 21, 22 and 23. Notice must be given a few days before hand and the same will be sent out. Also tickets for St.
Louis, Indianapolis, Louisville and Cincinnati, same rates and limits.

Large line of jerseys, and cheapest ever seen in Baird. Powell.

A new line of newmarkets and cloaks arrived this week; will sell cheap. Powell.

Car of bran. S. L. Ogle.

Notice.

We will issue THE STAR next Tuesday night, two days ahead of time, in order to give the printers a holiday.

Coming, coming, coming. Miller Bros.
of Abilene will open a photograph gallery on Monday, December 16, in the first door south of Central hotel.

We have the largest and cheapest line of flannels in the city. J. D.
Boydston.

ADVERTISED LETTERS.

The following letters are advertised and will be sent to the dead letter office at Washington on January 1, 1890, if not called for:

Henry E. Dawson, Miss Lillie Darden,
Miss Dora Fery, J. M. Green, Geo. M.
Hall, Sam Long, J. G. LeBlanc, Mrs.
A. L. Magpie, H. W. Pierce, Gay D.
Pierce, John R. Sawyer, C. B. Smith,
E. P. Weirauch. Wm. McLaughlin, P.M.

Finest and largest line of dewer ever seen in Baird

Every photograph that Miller Bros. is guaranteed to satisfy. Call and

Don't be gulled by the cost, but call and see my prices; low anyone's cost. T. E. Powell.

Call early at Miller Bros., that you may escape the rush during the days.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY.

Whereas, the inexorable messenger, death, has entered the home of our brother, J. E. W. Lane, and removed from their midst his beloved wife, Harriet F. Lane, and

Whereas, it is fitting and due to her memory that we testify the deep sensibility with which we bow to this sad bereavement; therefore, be it

Resolved, by Baird Lodge No. 47,
K. of P., that in the death of Mrs.
Harriet F. Lane, Brother Lane and family have lost a good, true and loving wife and mother, and the community a kind-hearted lady; that we deeply sympathize with him and relatives in this sad affliction, and as a feeble tribute to her memory, it is hereby ordered that this resolution be printed, and that a copy of these proceedings be sent to him and family.

H. SCHWARTZ,
W. C. POWELL,
P. H. SCHWARTZ,
—Committee.

Come at once and see our clothing and be convinced that our prices are still lower than anyone's. J. D. Boyd-ston.

Miller Bros. copy and enlarge old and faded tin types, photographs, daguerotypes, etc., and give to them a life-like expression. Bring in your family pictures and have them enlarged.

A new line of trunks and valises arrived this week, and will sell them cheaper than ever. Come and see them before buying. T. E. Powell.

AGENTS WANTED.

Agents wanted in every county.
Big inducements to good men to introduce our work. For terms address (enclosing stamp) Texas Portrait
Co., Dallas, Texas. 2-3m

Braid dress sets at Powell's.

The largest line of clothing and cheapest ever seen in Baird. Powell.

Newmarkets and wraps of all kinds very cheap at Powell's.

A big line of flannels cheap at T. E.
Powell's.

Frames of every description made to order. Call at Miller Bros' photograph gallery at once, first door south of Central hotel, Baird, Tex.

Miller Bros. will remain in Baird for two weeks only, as their business in Abilene will require them after that time.

A Wonderful Recovery.

Mrs. Geo. P. Smoot, a highly cultivated and estimable lady of Prescott,
Ark., writes under date of April 22, 1889: "During the summer of 1887 my eyes became inflamed, and my stomach and liver almost hopelessly disordered. Nothing I ate agreed with me. I took chronic diarrhoea, and for some time my life was dis-paired of by my family. The leading physicians of the country were consulted, and the medicines administered by them never did any permanent good, and I lingered between life and death, the latter being preferable to the agonies I was enduring. In May, 1888, I became disgusted with physicians and their medicines. I dropped them all and depended solely on Swift's Specific (S.S.S.), a few bottles of which made me permanently well
—well from then until now."

My stock is complete in everything and can suit you in both price and quality. T. E. Powell.

I sell cheaper than anybody's cost.
Call and see. T. E. Powell.

Don't fail to visit Miller Bros' photograph gallery, first door south of Central hotel. They will be here for TWO WEEKS only.

Scroll photographs of every description at Miller Bros' photograph gallery, first door
south of Central hotel.

Disabled for Business.

Several years ago my health failed me and I was compelled to give up my business. I was in constant agony caused by excruciating pains in my back, liver and stomach. I tried every medicine I could hear of, but without receiving a relief. My attention was then called to S.S.S. I tried five bottles of it and received the most gratifying results. I am to-day as healthy and sound a man as you will find anywhere, and I owe it all to the curative properties to be found in Swift's Specific (S.S.S.) R. L. Womack, Morgantown, N. C.

Treatise on blood and skin diseases mailed free.

SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

You will never be pleased with enlarged work until you have Miller
Bros. enlarge a picture for you.

Largest and best line of hats at Powell's.

Suit of clothes worth $20 for $10. T.
E. Powell.

Low prices always gets there. T.
E. Powell.

Fifteen yards good domestic $1, worth 16 cents a yard. Powell.

The best line of boots and shoes
in town.

