"MILLION DOLLAR" RAIN OVER AREA

HOME TOWN GOSSIP

For nearly five years this column has been applying his journalistic efforts toward the construction of a weekly Home Town Gossip column.

Although our offerings have been short of the desired merit on many occasions, we have never called in a substitute. It seems fair, that now after 250 consecutive weeks, we surrender our quill to another for at least a single week.

We, therefore, present for your approval the Home Town Gossip this week, written by none other than Hugh McDermott, the Tinsley chewing Burnt Branch bronco buster.

The rain seemed to help us all. After the sand-storms the refreshing showers washed the dirt out of the wrinkles of Fred Outbirth's face and therefore brought out the dimple in his chin, improving his appearance as well as his disposition.

Rain and hail brings everyone closer together. It brought Wilburn Walker and Clyde Blair, the two rival cowboys of the Victoria community, on the same horse.

And speaking of rain, Judge Owens, of Oklaboma, says he has been coming to Texas every year for 20 years and the first Texas rain he ever saw was last week.

Mrs. Ludie Owens, of the Owens ranch, remarked that she wished she were half Negro and half Jew. For a negro she states, is happy when he has a dollar and the Jew always has the dollar.

CARNIVAL WILL BE HERE WEEK OF 29th TO FOURTH

Shamrock Shows, a carnival attraction of shows, riding devices and concessions, will be in Cross Plains the week of April 29 through May fourth. The troupe is coming here under the auspices of the fire department, and will be located on the lots South of the water tower.

Bonnie Del Clark, three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Clark, of Pioneer, was laid to rest in the cemetery there Monday afternoon. He succumbed Sunday afternoon of pneumonia. Funeral services were conducted from the Pioneer Church of Christ.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Gilbert left Wednesday afternoon for Austin to be at the bedside of his mother, who is critically ill. They will not return until the latter part of the week. M. K. Lowry, of Comanche, has replaced Mr. Gilbert at the bakery during his absence.

Vernon R. King, Tax Assessor and Collector was a business visitor in Cross Plains Wednesday.

Dressy Farmers Meeting Endorses T. B. Testing

VOTE THAT COUNTY RANGES BE THINNED OF TUBERCULAR COWS

At a meeting held at Dressy Monday night in response to the call of County Commissioner B. H. Freeland, 15 ranchers and cattlemen were present and voted to inaugurate the tuberculosis testing in this county. The following statement on the meeting is furnished the Review by County Agent Ross B. Jenkins.

"Oscar McDermott seemed to voice the sentiment of the group when he said that if any of his cattle had it he wanted it eradicated as quickly as possible and the sooner it could be done suited him. He and his brothers are going to test with the Coleman county program now."

"W. E. Melton, Secretary and Treasurer for the Coleman Production Credit Association addressed the group on the advantages of Production Credit. He pointed out the funds of the association were for the help of the sorely oppressed farmer and stockman and the loans were made for that purpose alone and were not put out as a money making enterprise, such as banks must maintain, but to help the farmer class to receive credit when needed and to remain with them so long as their collateral stands with the company."

"County agent Ross B. Jenkins, assisted in the meeting and explained the questions relative to the processing tax and its influence on the present cotton price level. It was pointed out that the processing tax would cost a farmer $4.20 if he were to purchase 100 pounds of manufactured articles made of cotton, which is more than most any family will buy in a year, yet the tax has enabled the farmer to get 12 1/2 cents per pound for his cotton whereas he got 6 cents before the plan was adopted, or if he sold one bale of cotton and bought 100 pounds of manufactured goods he would net $28.30 profit."

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?

AN EDITORIAL

There are in Cross Plains today two youths, alive and uninjured merely by the kindness of Providence. They are peeping-toms, who for weeks have been loitering about homes in the North part of town, watching ladies and girls undress.

Tuesday night the pair walked into a "trap" and escaped capture and then injury merely by accident. A man, whose home had been a victim of the peeping-toms' prying eyes, secreted himself at a vantage point of his premises and awaited the mischief makers' nightly visit. After but a short delay the two strolled from behind the man's home and gazed into a window. Seeing nothing of interest, they scurried across the lawn to another home and began to look inside.

The man in hiding did not disclose his presence until after making a complete study of the peeping-toms in the darkness. Presently he exposed himself with a pistol in one hand and a flashlight in the other. With the light focused upon the pair and pistol leveled, he commanded: "Don't move."

The youths sensing their predicament fled around the corner of the house with bullets whizzing past their ears. But they had left behind tracks and a fair impression of their appearance, which perhaps could be used for identification.

The local linksters have one victory to their credit already this season, having trimmed Coleman on the Phil Pe Co course, March 31.

Teams in the Heart o' Texas Golf Association are: Ballinger, Brady, Coleman, Phil Pe Co, Santa Anna.

LAST RITES FOR J. C. BROWN ARE HELD AT BURKETT WEDNESDAY

John C. Brown, 77, one of the earliest settlers of the Burkett community, was laid to rest in the cemetery there Wednesday afternoon. He succumbed at his home Wednesday morning shortly after three o'clock. Funeral services were conducted from the Union Tabernacle at Burkett, with Rev. S. P. Collins, pastor of the Cross Plains Presbyterian church officiating.

Mr. Brown had been ill about six weeks and for days his condition had grown steadily weaker. He is survived by his widow, three sons, George, of Burkett; Aubrey, of Mankin; and Finis, of Arizona; also two daughters, Mrs. Bill Underwood of Snyder; and Mrs. Lois King, of Burkett and one sister, Mrs. T. L. Harris, of Burkett.

Pall bearers at the funeral and interment service Wednesday afternoon were: Bert Brown, L. L. Brown, Jesse Harris, Emmett Harris, James Brown and Franklin Brown.

John C. Brown was born April 13, 1858 at Bremond, in Robertson County Texas. He moved to Coleman County in 1875, where he resided continuously more than 60 years. A recent check-up revealed Mr. Brown and his sister Mrs. T. L. Harris, also of Burkett, to be the oldest citizens of Burkett from the standpoint of residence there.

Mr. Brown was married to Miss Myrtle Stanley at Burkett in 1898. That same year he affiliated with the Presbyterian church and was an Elder of the Burkett church until it's discontinuance a number of years ago.

Friends crowded the Burkett tabernacle to capacity Wednesday afternoon in final tribute to the man the years had endeared to the hearts of all who knew him.

CONTRACTS GIVEN ON STAR ROUTES IN AREA FOR 4 YEARS

Awarding of four year contracts for operation of star routes by the post office department has been virtually completed, according to information released for publication from official quarters.

Until the present administration took office the practice was to award all star route contracts throughout the nation every four years. Postmaster General James A. Farley altered the method by dividing the nation into four divisions. Contracts in one division will be awarded each year for four year terms but the awards will be made in only one division each year, thus spreading the work of the department over a period of four years rather than having all changes fall in the same year.

In order to place the terms in rotation, contracts were made last vision in which Texas is located. This year contracts were made for four years, from July 1, 1935, to June 30, 1939.

Contracts awarded for routes in this section are as follow: Baird to Cottonwood, Mrs. Elva Lena Smith; Baird to Rowden, James W. Burks; Burkett to Coleman, Wilmon Calk; Cisco to Cross Plains, Robertson Bus Lines, Inc.; Cisco to Nimrod, S. J. Holland; Coleman to Gouldbusk, Glenn Lee Strange; Glen Cove to Coleman, Ely Carl Simmons; Santa Anna to Rockwood, Moody Copeland.

Mrs. James Alexander, of Coleman, is visiting Mrs. Fred Burgin here at present.

IS ACCOMPANIED BY WIND; MUCH DAMAGE DONE NORTH OF TOWN

An inch and a half rain fell here early yesterday morning. The precipitation began about two thirty and continued intermittently until sunrise. The moisture was accompanied by an electrical storm but at noon Thursday the Review had learned of no serious damage done.

A dry spell which had begun to threaten all vegetation throughout this area, was broken with a general rain Thursday afternoon of last week. The precipitation was general over the entire Cross Plains trade territory.

Near Cottonwood the rain was heavier than here and was accompanied by damaging winds. The fall at Cottonwood was measured at four inches. Quite a bit of damage was done by wind and hail. George Coats home, two miles West of Cottonwood, was severely rocked and two rooms and a hall were ripped from the structure. W. A. Brock's barn was scalped of the top and a large out-building on the C. W. Worthy place was demolished. A number of windows were also broken by the hail at Cottonwood.

West of Cross Plains hail and wind are reported to have damaged growing crops considerably. One of Lee O. Payne's cotton fields was beaten bare.

Toward Rowden the wind, hail and rain are reported to have been even more destructive. Orchards are reported to have been the chief sufferers in that locality.

More than seven feet of water—depth not shore line—was caught in the Phil Pe Co country club lake, between Pioneer and Rising Star. The former city lake, which adjoins the B. H. Freeland place, four miles North of Cross Plains, caught several feet of water.

One of the greatest benefits of the rain was in washing sand from grass, which had become so dusty as a result of the recent storms that cattle were already dying.

MISSIONARY TO CHINA WILL SPEAK MONDAY AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

A general invitation to all women of this city was extended yesterday to be present at the Presbyterian church Monday afternoon, when Margaret Mazelle, a missionary to China, will speak and exhibit interesting items of Oriental life. The invitation was extended by Mrs. Jessie McAdams.

Miss Mazelle, who is regarded as a most interesting speaker as well as successful missionary, is comparatively well known in Cross Plains. She is a sister of Mrs. J. C. Young, formerly of this place, and visited here a number of years ago.

The meeting at the Presbyterian church is the regular fifth Monday occasion, in which ladies from all churches meet together. "We especially urge every woman who is interested in mission work to be in attendance", Mrs. McAdams stated.

The Farmer's Interest In Foreign Trade

In a radio address on "Land Utilization and Foreign Trade", Mr. L. R. Edminister, Export Section A.A.A. said, "Whether they know it or not, farmers in this country have a big stake in this trade program. This is not merely because so much of our agriculture is dependent on foreign markets, important though that is. Farmers are also consumers. Most of the consumer's goods and many of the producers' goods that they buy are subject to high tariffs. If these tariffs are reduced, most farmers will get more for what they sell, all of them will get more to spend. To be sure, some branches of agriculture are sheltered by the tariff. But farm products that we export are much more important than those that we import. The whole range of farm products has felt the price-lowering effects of our loss of foreign markets much more than it has felt the price-raising effects of the tariffs on farm products. By and large the interests of farmers in this country as a whole, lie on the side of restoring our foreign trade. This we can surely do if we have the intelligence to understand, and the courage to face, the central problem involved. This is the problem of reducing our tariff, thus enabling our foreign customers to sell us more goods than we now permit them to sell."

If we expect to sell all the surplus farm products that we wish to grow we must also expect to buy some of the surplus products that other nations produce. No nation can expect to do all selling and no buying, neither should any nation situated in any of the climatic zones expect to create a monopoly on the crops grown but should expect to see like crops to be grown in like climatic and soil. Cotton and wheat may grow in either the north or south temperate zone and such is the actual case.

A&M Farmers' Short Course Announced

Texas A&M College announced this week that the 1935 Farmers' Short Course would be held July 28-August 2. The theme of the twenty-sixth annual meeting will be "Changing Country Life"

Phases of the housing problems facing the rural family; soil conservation with particular reference to emergency erosion work; and agricultural adjustment will feature the program. Demonstration in doing will be stressed rather than talks and lectures at this event, which is the largest gathering of rural people in Texas each year.

A newspaper staffed by 4-H club boys and girls as reporters will be printed daily during the Short Course week. Neal Douglass, agricultural editor of the Austin American, will be managing editor. A small news sheet was mimeographed and sold on the campus last year, and because of its success plans have been made to enlarge and print the paper this year.

Callahan sent her first boys and girls to the Short Course last year and the Demonstration Agents plan a much larger group this year.

Farmers Repay Loans Before
Before Due

"In their determination to pay their bills promptly some farmers are not only doing their part but going the extra mile. "according to Albert Gross, Farm Credit Administration.

Almost 2000 of the debt-burdened farmers in whose interest the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act was passed, have entirely repaid their loans and an additional number are making regular advance payments of principal although only interest payments are required for the first three years.

When 2000 farmers can pay their loans in full who were faced with foreclosure two years ago and the average amount paid is $2600 apiece, then it can be truly said the farm is a place of opportunity. Good rains have put the spirit into farmers in Callahan this week that were in great need of some kind of inspiration.

The Rural Community Has Come to Town

The rural community and small city faces a new future. Electric service and all that electric power and light mean to home life, commercial and industrial development is now available for a more constructive and wider field of achievement.

Much work, planning, testing, engineering and large investments of capital was necessary in order to make this possible. Our 2600 miles of power transmission lines, interlacing 49 counties in West Texas and serving 160 towns and communities provide an adequate and economical source of dependable electric service with precise regulation to meet the requirements of modern day appliances.

Today hundreds of small West Texas towns and communities can offer to industry this modern electric service in proximity to its raw materials . . . two very necessary prerequisites for industrial progress.

We point with pride to our part in assisting the small towns and communities in this way, thus guaranteeing to them the same opportunities in respect to power as the larger metropolitan cities enjoy. It is our policy to fully co-operate with the small towns and communities we serve so that they may realize the full benefits accompanying and made possible by electrical development.

Ward School To Give Operetta 26

An operetta in three acts is to be presented by Ward School Friday night April 26. The name of the operetta is "The Land of Dreams Come True" by Alan Campbell. Mrs. Pittman, director of music in Ward School, will have charge of the operetta.

The first act opens as a group of children are enjoying a holiday. Betty, who refuses to join in the fun, admits that she is searching for magic berries. She explains that a person who has eaten these berries will enter into the land of Dreams Come True. They finally find the berries but only four of the children eat them. These four are soon carried off into deep slumber.

In the second act these four children meet Mother Goose, the Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe and many other Fairy Tale folks including the big, bad Giant who "smells the blood of an Englishman."

The last act finds the four children once more at the edge of the forest fast asleep. When they awake they are surprised to find themselves in their own world again and they finally contend that there is a time and place where dreams come true.

The price of admission for this operetta is 5c for Ward School students, 10c for High School, and 15c for outsiders.

Freshman Dramatic Club

The Freshmen Dramatic Club hopes to present their play, "The Pampered Darling", within the next 3 weeks, however the date has not been set. The play is of two sisters Connie and Janet Gibbons, whose little brother, Victor makes life miserable while their mother and father are away in California. The two girls have planned a three-day House party at the home of Dr. Norman Evans, Janets, betrothed. - Just before time.

Senior News

The Seniors are looking forward to only one thing now and that is to get that "diploma" into their hands. They are all hoping that they will graduate, but at times it seems rather trying for some of us to stay.

We are all practicing on something for senior night and are hoping the desired will come to pass with as little friction as possible.

Dr. C. Q. Smith, Dean of McMurry College, has been selected to give the commencement address on May 24. His acceptance has not yet been received. Rev. S. P. Collins has been asked to deliver the baccalarete sermon, May 19.

HINTS TO THE BOOKLOVER

The phase of writing that most often is neglected is poetry. Especially poetry by modern authors. There is one rather new book of poems in our CPHS library which is very interesting. It is a book called Modern American Poetry, by Louis Untermeyer. This book is a collection of the works of practically all the famous poetry. There are poems by such renowned poets as Emily Dickinson, some of her principle poems are "The Heart Asks Pleasure First," "The Brain Is Wilder Than the Sky" and "I never Lost As Much. There are other outstanding writers poems such as Helen Hunt Jackson, Bret Harte, Sidney Lanier, and Steven Crane.

Pokes & Jokes

Author Unknown
This week we wish to apologize for an error printed in this column last week. That "crack" about the V-8 Ford going one block East of the Methodist Church was a mistake. We hope the parties involved will excuse us. Our source of information was unreliable.

Lloyd Bryan, ladies man and man about Cottonwood, is still making weekly trips to Cottonwood although his pal Berl Lusk has quit. Lloyd was seen in the presence of three charming ladies Sunday afternoon. Our guess is that they are from Cottonwood.

James Carpenter and Stanley Pierce, a couple more Cottonwood visitors, were also seen with two charming girls Sunday afternoon. There must be something in Cottonwood that we don't know about yet. We will have to investigate this if we have to go to Cottonwood ourselves.

Miss Nelson has found her a new boy-friend. We also think he's a pretty swell guy, but we can't get her to admit it although we are sure she thinks the same thing. We were just informed from a reliable source of information that Donnel Lutgens has become a messenger boy. Maybe you like the job, Donnel, but we wouldn't have it on a bet.

Buck Wheeler, ex-teacher in Cross Plains, High School, came down last week to visit our Spanish teacher.

SYNOPSIS: Young Ed Maitland and the hardened gambler Speed Malone became partners on the trip north to the Yukon gold fields in '37, when word of the rich ores there first came down the Pacific coast. Maitland, son of a New England seafaring family, was determined to win back his lost family fortunes. Frenchy, the fisherman who took him and Speed north; Lucky Rose, beautiful young woman who had given Maitland a ring for a keep-sake; Fallon, trail boss of the miners, who resented Rose's attentions to Maitland; Steiner the money lender; young Pete and his drunken partner Bill Owens; Brent old-time prospector; and Garnet, a wild-to-do modern one who hired Maitland and Speed to haul his stuff from the beach over the mountains to the Yukon—these were among the crowd that made up the gold seekers. At Liasville, a camp in the hills. Speed was made trail boss in Fallon's place, because Speed insisted on closing the trail till it could be repaired—it was almost impassable. But the fickle crowd veered back to Fallon. Speed and Maitland took a stand above the pass to keep the miners from breaking through. Pete came to offer his help, but Speed refused it and the boy, after saying his partner had been drowned after a drunken brawl, rode off. But he took a position where he could fire on the miners when they tried to rush the pass, and so helped Speed. Later Brent, with an old deer gun, added his help. Just when Speed seemed to be gaining the upper hand, Fallon called his men with an exultant shout. A cavalcade was coming down the trail.—Now go on with the story.

with an effort to be a brighter guest. "There's lots of snow." He encouraged her to talk. "I guess, even if the place you grow up isn't wonderful," Pete mused, "you imagine it's so. Hardly anyone ever came near Bill's ranch but I used to dream I had a friend out in the hills somewhere. He rode a big bay horse with a cream-colored mane. When the hot wind blew, I'd imagine I was holding to the saddle horn and we were leaving a long coil of dust into the lue water of a mirage. I asked Bill about it once and he said I'd been chewin' loco weed. There wasn't no such horse in the range. He said the only kin I had was a prospector wh'd left Nevada, and he wasn't a man I would want to remember."

The enigmatic figure of the man with the mukluks loomed across Maitland's mind. "Sometimes, when Bill was drinking, he'd mutter about this prospector—Dalton, he called him. He spoke as if he'd grubstaked him once, to be rid of him. They had a jealous quarrel over a woman Bill was married to, I think, and I was mixed in it someway. He never talked of it when he was sober."

That fragment cast the shadow of a strange triangle, though Pete seemed unaware of anything tragic in its reference to her. After this break-up she had lived alone with the brooding Owens—a secluded life. She did not say what had brought him North at last to join the prospector who had wronged him, nor what her own adventures had been after his death, or why she had recently left the rafters' camp on the Lewes with the intention of going out.

"Did you ever find Dalton?" Maitland asked, after a silence. "I—saw him," Pete said, in an oddly withdrawn tone. More hesitantly Maitland asked, "Did you remember him?" "I don't know." Her voice had the same troubled constraint. "In a kind of way."

"This is none of my business, Pete, but why didn't he take you with him?" Her hand brushed her eyes with a shadowy gesture. "I can't—My head's kind of jumbled, Bud."

"Anyway you're safe now, Pete," he said. "By the time you're able to travel, we'll figure something better for you than going out."

The cell of the Skagway jail was a plan thick-studded box, except for a small grilled vent in the seaward wall, and the cot on which Speed was sitting, inwardly raw with chagrin. Outwardly he wore an air of composure for the benefit of the heavily armed guard in the passage, on the other side of the grated cell door.

Being arrested on the charge of having murdered the shell dealer in this camp last fall, was bad enough. But he had not discerned the real teeth in the trap until Fallon entered the marshal's office, just before he was committed to the cell. Now when he thought of his dog team waiting for him by the warehouse wharf, and of Drew waiting at Tagish for the mail and freight he had been trusted to deliver, it was all he could do to refrain from getting up and kicking the wall. The blizzard had caused a disruption in Drew's mail service at a critical time when the inspector was short of a driver. A sled shipment of gold was to be run to Skagway and a packet of mail brought back, containing a considerable amount of bank currency consigned to Dawson against the gold. Drew's choice of a substitute courier had been good gambling. Speed knew that life had left marks on him legible enough to that veteran judge of men. On delivering the gold to the wharf agent in Skagway, he had not immediately for the return trip. A ship lay in the gulf in a twinkling flotsam of shore ice. Her arrival, delayed by the storm, was being celebrated as a harbinger of Spring and spoils. Even the shore crew was drunk, further retarding the loading of her cargo. Meanwhile the mail was brought ashore, and the agent, nervous enough at having custody of the gold, was still more uneasy about the police mail—an oilskin—wrapped and sealed packet of bank notes in easily portable form. His strong-box had been broken recently by thieves, and the packet was presumptively safer in the game pocket of Speed's coat. Facts to be read by the marshal as indicating that Speed had stolen the regular mail runner's orders, had delivered the gold to obtain the mail, and had been prevented from taking the ship only by the long-shore tie-up.

The strangely timed event that left him open to capture, occurred during the forced wait. With many hours to kill, he had decided to visit Steiner at what was now Skagway's General Store. Money lending was one of his gold mines and speaking of curious pledges, he mentioned an oddly shaped el-over-leaf nugget on which he had loaned something more than its weight to a gambling client. Then the hunt was on.

The client wore a dicer hat and stuttered; was known as "Lefty" and suspected of being a pickpocket. Speed ran the man to earth in a gambling tent, where he cut into the same poker game, and dealing Lefty a hand on which the thief would willingly have bet his shirt, lured the nugget into the game on a raised pot. The shining, foliated piece of gold was weighed on the bar scales and played for twice its gold value. Speed won it with a straight flush. When Lefty disconsolately quit the table, Speed grilled him about the nugget. Under pressure, the thief maintained the extraordinary story that he had lifted it in Skagway from the pocket of a man now dead—the shell dealer, in fact, whom Speed had shot at the door of The Pack Train saloon.

In order to learn something more about the man with the dicer, Speed had been looking for Rose when the marshal seized him. That the man he was accused of murdering should be the man who had brought the nugget to Skagway, was an apparently perverse loop of the influence he called luck. Now it lay in the marshal's safe, along with Speed's guns and the mail.

Speed reached the corridor in a bound

Speed's breath smoked in the old cold cell. They had freed his hands, and had not troubled to remove his gun belt—signs that pointed to brief imprisonment and swift judgment, although this was his second day in the cell.

He did not notice the darkening of the cell, or the wilder music that sounded from the camp during his long abstraction. It was the opening of the street door that made him aware of both doorbaw made him aware of both. There was a different tread in the passage; different, yet somehow familiar.

"Take it in yourself," the guard growled testily to a shadow by the grating.

The big door was unlocked and as the figure edged into the somewhat clearer light of the cell, Speed understood why he had been trying to place the footfall in his memory. The man who confronted him was Frenchy, carrying a plate and curving his chest to bring a deputy's badge into more formidable prominence.

Speed bit his cheek as he glanced over the contents of the plate without accepting it.

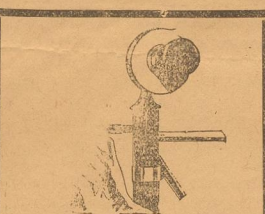

"Well, you're a nice one, Frenchy," he commented mildly. "So they give you a deputy's star. Looks good on ye, too."

The ex-fisherman squirmed back a little, not quite able to keep a firm front with that even voice in his ears.

"You don't forget, neither, do you, Frenchy," his prisoner acknowledged, eyeing the fish, and then the knife in his belt, on which his free hand had closed. "Are you the marshal's official sticker?"

Narrow black eyes beaded with a rankling heat which only blood could quench, as the cool gray ones of his defenseless prisoner lifted to his face.

The pause grated on the impatient guard at the door. "If that's the best you can do, frog, back out here with them plates before he takes your knife and carves ye."

Funeral notices are something of which none of us wish to think, and as a result they are often forgotten with the funeral arrangements. It is an item that should not be overlooked. The Review Publishing Company is thoroughly stocked along this line.

"Reckon this feller don't know who he's callin', Frenchy," Speed observed as the fisherman backed an involuntary step or two. "Tell him what you done to Horse McGinnis of Spokane. Tell him you could lick ten half-baked deputies like him with one foot."

An oath from the guard showed that Frenchy's elevation to office was not popular with the marshal's squad. He swung the door, and hooked the fisherman with a boot-toe to speed his exit. In that finely measured instant, Speed jumped for the door.

The canvas between the frame and the rafters was dark. Unfortunately or otherwise, Steiner was out. Speed cut a slit in the canvas, and climbing through the aperture, dropped inside.

Though the tent had looked dark from outside, its interior was vaguely illumined by a filtered wavering flow from the kerosene flare in the street it faced on. Rummaging uncovered a crowsbar of handy size. In a drawer he found a collection of six-shooters, which said little for Steiner's judgment of firearms, but he quickly picked out a .45, loaded it from his own belt and put it in the holster.

Still the object of his search eluded him. He was beginning to think that the Jew had done some empty boasting when his eye fell on a longish box in the far corner under a shelf. He pulled it out, and delicately prying it open with the bar, put his fingers inside. With a grunt of relief, he removed the cover and took out two sticks of dynamite.

As he dropped in the snow and paused to listen, his skin prickled with a sense of some lurking presence close by, soundless and unseen. He started swiftly back along his previous trail through the tents, without touching the gun at his belt.

Speed crouched forward tensely, gripping the bar, as a dark shape brushed along the tent wall within a yard of him. In that instant of its disclosure, his hand lunged out and clutched a man by the throat. He raised the pinch bar.

"D-d-don't hit me," he protested in a hoarse whimper. "T-t-t-for ye. I s-see you prol into the Jew's t-t-tent to get the d dynamite. D-d-don't try it! What'd the m-marshal take of y-yourn?"

"My guns and jack—they don't matter. The packet of mail I've got to get."

Lefty caught his arm. "L-leave me ease this trick," he whispered huskily. "You wouldn't have have a chance in a m-m-million with dynamite. I seen that safe once when the marshal pinched me, and with a few minutes, I could f-feel the c-combination. It used to be my racket."

"What's in it for you?"

"I owe you a hand, and the m-marshal a bad turn. G-give me the bar," whispered Lefty. "You wait here."

"How—wait here?"

"W-watch for the mob. Whistle if they get too close. But give me all the t-time you can."

Speed yielded the bar. Lying in the drift, his gun covered the only door to the jail, so the chance of Lefty's playing him double was slight. Long minutes dragged before a distant tramping began to pound on his eardrums. A shore party had been combing the beach. The empty boats at mooring and the ship in the gulf would naturally suggest that way of escape. As he sprang erect, his sharp whistle pierced the dusk.

CROSS CUT

Six week exams! And only one more set before school is out. We're blaming the Federal Aid for that. We got it the other day, and now we're to have a full nine-months term. Fine for the teachers, the community, and perhaps the pupils, though many believe otherwise. But after all, it's worth something to know that our community can come up to par with any other, no matter how large and prosperous it may be; and if we get the affiliation Mrs. Leewright believes we are to get, then there is nothing to keep Cross Cut from having a good school next year—nothing except the lack of a gymnasium. We are still in favor of one, though it appears that our preaching did us little good.

Community night last Wednesday evening was a great success. The program committee is to be commended for putting on such a show free of charge. We are reliably informed that this is the last gathering this year.

And another thing, the seniors plan to have Senior Night about May 10. At this gathering the class will, class history, class prophecy, etc., will be read. There will probably be other attractions, so be sure to watch for the exact date. This will be something new in Cross Cut. This has never been done before, and the seniors this year hope to be the originators of a plan that will be successfully enacted hereafter.

The seniors have received an in-

METHODIST CHURCH SERVICES ANNOUNCED

The following announcement concerning services at the Methodist church for Sunday was submitted the Review for publication yesterday by Rev. J. C. Mann, pastor.

"Passion Week with its Garden of Gethsemane and the cross, convincing revelations of the measure of Divine love, are past. So also is the Resurrection Day, reminder that by Divine power, "Death is swallowed up in victory," and "Immortality brought to light." Every true Christian ought to feel called upon and strengthened to carry on.

"At the Methodist Church Sunday School meets at 9:45 and preaching hours are 11:00 and 8:00.

"The subject of the morning sermon will be Jesus' Love for the Beautiful. May we follow Christ and find God in the beaties of the new life of spring time. The subject of the evening hour will be "Somethin fer Somebody". The title is borrowed from and the story told of an old man who learned, all but too late, that this is a fundamental law of happiness and the abundant life.

"All whose duty does not call elsewhere have a cordial welcome at the Methodist Church."
