Stricken Parents Plan Memorial To New London Children and Teachers

Deceased parents, still stung by the terrible tragedy which took the lives of more than 300 students and teachers in the New London school, met this week to plan a fitting memorial to their loved ones. From this meeting the leaders of the community grew a plan to create a student loan and scholarship fund as a living memorial to those who lost their lives in the disaster. Citizens, the world over, are asked to contribute to this worthy cause.

The Memorial is to be an educational foundation—nation-wide in benefit and under the supervision of a National Advisory Council. Funds of the foundation will be used to educate needy and ambitious students who would otherwise be deprived of a college education.

Surviving students of a typing class in the school, which was destroyed, were this week typing letters to go out to school superintendents of Texas asking that they sponsor contributions in every school in the State.

Pressure Is On! One Month to Go

Governor James V. Alfred and Congressman Morgan G. Saunders were the first to wire their acceptance of places on the National Advisory Council. The Texas Governor wired other governors in the United States asking them to declare the month of May a memorial month for New London and to make and send their contributions to Mr. Sam Warren, treasurer of the New London Memorial Association, Overton, Texas.

Headquarters for the Memorial have been established in Henderson, Texas, Rock County seat, in the high school building.

Supt. W. C. Shaw of London school requested Dr. L. A. Woods, State Superintendent of Public Instruction in Texas, to write other State superintendents through the United States, asking that they cooperate in this project, which is a living memorial to those who died in the world's worst school disaster.

DOYLE M'MILLAN IS VALEDICTORIAN OF SENIOR CLASS

1080 CATTLE SOLD BY LOCAL RANGERS

Approximately 1080 head of cattle were shipped from the Cross Plains trade territory last week. Fred Cuthbert shipped 450 from his ranch west of town, Mrs. J. O. Hall shipped 175, and 450 were shipped from the Owen's Ranch.

They were delivered to representatives of the Jacobs Bros., Brokers and Commissions Co., at Baird, Monday, April 20th. They were shipped from there to Kansas City, Missouri.

The heifers brought about seven cents per pound and the steers, seven and half. The average was about 500 pounds.

ANDERSON CO. ANNOUNCES CARLOAD OF CHEVROLETS

Anderson Chevrolet Company announced the receipt of a carload of new automobiles early this week. The firm had been without new models since their refusal of a damaged shipment of cars two weeks ago.

A member of the firm said Thursday morning that labor troubles were thought to be settled, at least for the present, and that the company would maintain a stock of new cars constantly.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Josey visited Mrs. C. R. Cook, Wednesday. They are cousins of the late George B. Scott.

PHILPECO GOLFERS OUTSHOOT VISITORS ON HOME LINKS

Philpeco golfers defeated their Coleman visitors 16 to 6 in 22 games played here Sunday. Possibly due to absence of several of their top flight players, the local golfers were defeated by Coleman earlier in the season.

The results were: J. T. Hammett defeated Nevill 4-2, Wright won from O. Gideon 5-3, Harrell defeated Moore 3-2, Sellers lost to D. Gideon one up, W. T. Tunnell 2-2, Basso defeated Allen 5-4, J. MAULDIN'S BEAUTY SHOP

BEAUTY'S DAUGHTER
By Kathleen Norris

He's terribly hungry, Duddy and she late." Quentin said. "I know she was telling us of her husband, I don't imagine she often gets talking of her troubles."

Victoria glanced at his profile in surprise, ready to laugh. But he was quite serious.

"But did you ever know anyone that did dreadful—of ghastly things, so calmly? That poor husband of hers—imagine being cut off the very beginning of your career, blinded?"

Quentin, turning into their own room, made no comment, and Kenty said sadly:

"Why didn't Gita go to the club, today?"

She stays with her amah!" Susan replied.

You speak of the man's misfortune, Quentin began unexpectedly. "I was thinking of hers," Victoria raised interrogative eyes. She had been cutting chicken into tiny pieces on Susan's plate, murmuring to the waitress, musing to her mother.

"I was thinking," Quentin explained, "that it must be a pretty life for her, planted down here in a country house with an invalid child!"

"They have our rabbits, too," Susan contributed animatedly. "They have the two rabbits we had. Gita?"

"Any chance of your going down to Monte with me this afternoon?"

"Darling, not on Sunday! Mollie, and Nurse with all of them, and the Carters coming upper!" They're bringing all the things—I thought that since you didn't be here it would be a chance for a children's surprise."

Quentin said noncommittally. Victoria, made vaguely uneasy by his tone, sent him another longing glance. Quentin wasn't like himself on this hot still day.

"The other doctors are going to see you. You're to have your goat tomorrow?"

"I don't know," he said irresolutely. "I thought I might telephone Johnny. We might have our fight here. You'll get over it, and see her, won't you, Vicky?"

"She was completely at bay," Susan's bit, as Susan led into her. "Take your cookie run, darling," she said to the child, "and don't wake Baby—she's in the side porch!"

"Get over and see the Morrisons," she completed it.

"Oh, yes!"

"How—somewhere, something wrong. Through the familiar chill faint wind seemed to be a faint apprehension of trouble. Vicky couldn't control it, it was only vaguely conscious that she felt it, but it was

There was a wide upper hallway in the house, filled now with a pleasant half-light, like the light under water. Victoria, closing the nursery door behind her, lingered for a moment at its big open window, looking out at the cooling and softening day, breathing the fresh, scented air, resting her eyes on the greenness of the great trees.

So standing, she could look down at the drying yard, and the berry vines, and the flat stretch of neglected lawn where a cow grazed, and the gate in the overgrown hedge that divided the Hardisty property from the small but exquisitely groomed estate of the Morrisons next door. There was a small strip of lane there, and in the lane Vicky saw a white figure, with the level light of the setting sun shining brightly on pale gold hair and illuminating the white parasol as if it were a lantern lighted against the dusky shadows of the lane.

Mrs. Morrison, of course. She was talking to someone, apparently; she had the air of a person talking. But her companion was quite invisible against the hedge; it was tall enough to hide anyone who was close to it on the other side. Victoria stood watching her and reflecting upon the inescapable power of the beauty that had been so suddenly introduced into their compact little group.

Mrs. Morrison continued talking in the lane; the revolving frills of the parasol tumbling, tumbling. Dusk was falling fast now; Anna, coming upstairs, touched the switch that lighted the hall behind Victoria. How many would there be for supper, please? Victoria turned about; considered. The Keates had said they'd stop in on their way home with Kate, and Dr. Miller would be here. Six, please, Anna. No, seven; that be Gwen, Vicky remembered. Anna went downstairs again, but when Victoria turned back to the window the lights in the hall had spoiled the lovely dusk, and the white frock was gone from the lane. She went into her room after a peep at Madeleine. Quentin was tearing off his clothes.

"Oh, did you just come?"

"I hoped you'd gotten a nap."

"I went for a stroll."

"A stroll?"

"Yes, I walked a little way. It was lovely out. Feels hot in here."

"I does feel hot. You didn't get as far as the hospital, did you, Quentin? That woman's coming on all right, isn't she?"

The roar of the shower drowned any reply Quentin might have shouted through the half-closed bathroom door; when he came out again Vicky was getting into an old black Vic was getting into an old black Vic.

"It's frightful to burn your shoulders in just the patterns of your bathing suit," she said. "I wonder how that woman keeps so white?"

Quentin did not answer.

"She was down there in the lane just now, parasol and all," Victoria pursued, now doubled over to insert her heels one at a time into rather tight slippers.

"Zat so?" Quentin asked, shaving.

"Yes, I happened to be looking out of the upper hall window, she was talking to someone—gardener, maybe—but no, it's Sunday night, maybe it was a lover," Vicky said, trying a heel, scowling, taking up the slipper to flex it vigorously. "She's having a terribly bad time, poor soul, with a sick husband and no friends here."

Quentin was pulling his face about with hard fingers, testing his shave. He was non-committal.

When he and she were going to bed after the bridge game, quite suddenly Quentin said:

"How about asking them to dinner?"

"Who?"

"The Morrisons."

"Oh? Oh, d'you suppose he'd come? He seems so cross. I can't imagine him social and agreeable."

"Sure he'd come, and she said to-day he would."

A second's electrical pause. Then Vicky said without volition exactly what she did not want to say, in exactly the tone she did not want to use—silly suspicious word in wife's light suspicious tone:

"Oh I didn't know you'd seen her today?"

"I met her, coming back from my walk," Quentin answered, wondering at the same instant why he hadn't said that he had seen her for a moment at the club.

"In the lane."

"Yep."

Vicky was silent a moment. When she spoke, it was to say amiably that she would go over to see Serena in a day or two to arrange the dinner. But under her surface serenity she felt a little sick from the sudden jarring awakening, sudden vague fears. So-o-o—that was it, was it. It was Quentin to whom Serena had been talking in the lane. Quentin kissed her good-night—a careless kiss on top of her head—went to his own sleeping porch. Almost immediately she heard him snoring. But Vicky lay awake for nervous, restless, unreasoning hours.

begin to beat faster, and the blood in her face.

"Quentin's cigarette lighter!" she said. "He's been looking for it everywhere."

"Imagine," Serena commented, undisturbed.

"He probably dropped it," Vicky said, suddenly trembling, "when you and he were talking here in the lane last Sunday."

Half an hour later Quentin came upstairs to find Vicky changing her gown for dinner.

"I met Mrs. Morrison—Lord, she is a lovely creature!" Quentin observed, plunging at once into his abstractions. "She'd started to walk to the billage, it was too much for her, and she asked me to telephone for a taxi to pick her up. But instead I ran her downtown—it seems he wanted the mail, I guess he gets his own way pretty well!—and then took her home. It only took me ten minutes. She tells me—" he looked out of a towel his hair it wild wet confusion to say in satisfaction—"she tells me you called her today, Vic. I'm glad. She's a lovely woman, and she'll be great company for you."

Victoria, at her dressing table, continued to brush her hair. Once she looked steadily at Quentin, in the mirror, but he did not see her. "I told you they could come Thursday night?" she asked.

"Yep. Who else are you going to have?"

"Gita and Gwen, and ourselves and Mother."

"Quentin turned, his face coloring with amazement.

"Why, my dear, you can't do that," he said quickly.

"Do what?"

"Why, have these people, the first time, and not make an occasion of it."

Vicky was genuinely astonished.

"How d'you mean, Quentin?"

"Well, I mean that they're important people; his father is Sir Percival Morrison. I do think that if ever—ever—we're going to spread ourselves, this is the time."

"But he's an invalid, Quentin!"

"He is and he isn't. He's lost an eye, of course, but he's an Englishman, and you'll find them regular sticklers for formality. Oh, no, we'll have to make it a formal affair. I'd ask the Bays and the Sincelairs and Dr. Anstrolcher."

"I see?" Vicky murmured as he paused. Her heart was lead.

"Why do you say 'I see'?" Quentin demanded suspiciously.

"Well, we haven't given that sort of an affair since before the twins were born. We've had nothing but Sunday lunches and bridges dinners for just four!"

"Why, but there's nothing so formidable about it, Vic!"

He spoke with a sort of amused impatience. It was not amusing to Vicky. She understood his mood too well; his unwonted fusing over every detail of the approaching dinner; his strange excited spirits when the night finally came. Quentin, who usually loathed such affairs, was nervous as a young wife over the candles and flowers, and welcomed the guests with a joviality and assurance that seemed to Vicky almost as bad as his usual manner of grim and polite endurance.

The Morrisons came last; the man, who wore a black patch over one eye, limping a little, evidently glad to drop into the nearest chair; Serena, shining in flawless beauty. Vicky herself felt tired; things had not gone any too well throughout the long rainy day, she had small heart in the affair.

The earlier stages of the dinner were not a success. Just why not, Vic was unable to perceive.

Serena sat next to Quentin. Vicky was miserably impressed, from her end of the table, that the guest of honor did not behave much to say. Anyone as beautiful as that did not have to have much to say, she made all the other women look plain and badly dressed and sound chatterboxes.

The atmosphere seemed definitely clearer when they had gone. They went early; the bowed, carefully walking lean man with the neat black patch over one eye, and the superbly moving woman with her fair head held high. Everyone could discuss them then, and the contract fanatics could settle down to their game. Vicky and Violet and one or two of the other women turned the lights low in the drawing room, gathered about the fire, and analyzed the Morrisons at their leisure. Quentin had said that he would walk through the garden with the Morrisons, but the night had proved to be still blowy and rainy, and they had to have the car for the twice two hundred yards.

On the whole, wearily glad that it was over, limping upstairs in her stiff new slippers, Vicky pronounced the affair a drag, a bore, a failure.

It went on and on; he never saw it; she could see nothing else. Vicky grew nervous and irritable, wondering about it; wondering when ever he was out of her sight where Quentin was, wondering how often he saw Serena, and under what circumstances.

"I saw Serena today," Quentin said one night, when their acquaintance with the Morrisons was of only a few weeks' standing.

"Oh, that was nice. Did she come to the office?"

"No, I took her to lunch."

"Oh? A pause. Then the inevitable interrogation, as unwelcome to Victoria as to Quentin, but dragged from her nevertheless by a power stronger than herself. "Happen to meet her?"

"No. I spoke of it Sunday. She said that she was going to be in town."

HE MUST HAVE MUSIC WHEREVER HE GOES

Music hath charms to soothe the savage beast. And it also has charms to soothe the empty stomach.

Take it from James Cagney, star of "Ceiling Zero," the Cosmopolitan production showing at the Liberty Theatre as a First National release Tuesday and Wednesday.

During the actor's hoofing days on Broadway a dozen years ago, he postponed many meals in order to purchase a ten dollar guitar on the installment plan.

His theory was that he couldn't pick that when he couldn't pick his teeth. He would tighten his belt another notch and make another payment on the instrument. And even now he finds more solace in the old guitar than he does in immediate, marble swimming pool and such.

The guitar is always to be found in his dressing room. And when the actor needs relaxation from dialogue and set lights, he finds it strumming on his old pal, the guitar.

NEVER BEFORE SUCH A CAR AT SUCH A PRICE

$645⁹⁰ Is The Cross Plains Delivered Price of this Thrifty "60" Ford V-8 Tudor Sedan, including front and rear bumpers and spare tire. (Taxes and License Plates extra).

The new Thrifty "60" shown here has exactly the same roomy body on the same "112" chassis, as the brilliant Ford V-8 "85". It has the same, easy-acting, powerful new brakes, the same easy steering and the same big, outside luggage compartment.

It is powered by a smaller, more economical 60 h.p. V-Engine which, owners report, is giving them between 22 and 27 miles per gallon of gasoline. It's a good performer, too... Drive one and see!

THEN, LOOK AT THE PRICE... And realize that your present car will probably more than cover the whole down payment, leaving you less to pay on the easily-retired balance. See Your Ford Dealer Today.

23 Reasons why THE McCORMICK-DEERING FARMALL 12 is by far the Best Buy

At left, The Farmall 12 at work with 2-row Little Gemma Plow.

1. It is an economical tractor to operate.
2. It permits the operator to select the fuel most readily available. Can be equipped to use gasoline, kerosene, or No. 1 distillate.
3. No other tractor in its price or weight class has such a complete line of machines built expressly for use with it.
4. The F-12 has the "Quickest-Attachable" machines on the market.
5. The McCormick-Deering F-12 is fitted with rawhide oil seals that seal the oil in and the dirt out.
6. It has replaceable cylinder sleeves—a feature pioneered by International Harvester.
7. The F-12 crankshaft is hardened by the new Tocco electrical hardening process, with file-hard bearing surfaces and other portions as tough and ductile as ever.
8. High-grade ball bearings are used throughout the transmission and final drive. There are 29 ball and roller bearings in the F-12.
9. A wide variation of trends is available, 44 1/2 in. to 79 in., with special rear axles available at slight extra cost to extend trend to 93 in.
10. The F-12 is regularly sold equipped for general farm work. An unusually wide variety of special equipment is available.
11. Power take-off is regular equipment. No general-purpose tractor is complete without power take-off.
12. Automatic steering brakes (patented) enable the operator to pivot the F-12 on either wheel, 7 1/2 radius.
13. Convenient belt pulley. Ample large to hold a belt at normal tension.
14. The F-12 cooling fan is belt-driven, a feature recognized by the entire automotive industry, as most efficient.
15. The F-12 delivers 70 per cent of its engine power to the drawbar.
16. Highest grades of nickel-chromium alloy steel used in 24 gears.
17. A variable speed governor permits full-open throttle operation at any selected engine speed between 900 and 1400 R.P.M.
18. An unusually accessible engine, with all parts easily replaceable.
19. When desired, special transmissions can be supplied to give higher second and third speeds in rubber-tired tractors.
20. A Quick-Shift cultivator feature that is exclusively McCormick-Deering. It is found only in the F-12 and its big brothers, the F-20 and F-30.
21. A four-cylinder valve-in-head engine, traditional with International Harvester.
22. Six thousand dealers and 86 factory branches are ready to render complete repairs service for the F-12. No other tractor is so well protected.
23. Farmall is built by the world's largest tractor builder, with more than 30 years of farm power experience.

Prevue Of '37 Buffalo Gridmen To Be Given Here Friday 3 O'clock

Coach Bill White will give local fans glimpse of his squad of five lettermen and a flock of rookies Friday afternoon when the 1937 Buffaloes meet last year's seniors on the high school gridiron. Resident devotees of the sport are invited to be guests of the club at the game, which starts at three o'clock this afternoon. There will be no charges to the year's first football game.

The heavier and more experienced "vets" are favored to hand the '37 team a spanking. Both squads have been working together the past five weeks, and though the varsity team will feature a different method of attack than used the past season, their opponents are not expected to be taken in by the new formations.

Since several of the rookies have come through in spring training loss of last year's regulars will not be felt as heavily as previously expected. Willingness and hustle are rampant among the recruits, making up for the lack of beef and brawn.

The municipal band has promised to be on hand at the battle.

Members of the varsity squad are: Neeb, B. Strahan, and Elliott, ends; Upson, Henderson and Lusk, tackles; Tyson, J. McMillan, Harlow and D. Strahan, guards; Lackey, center; Pierce, Hall, Flaech, Childs, Bennett and Hemphill, backs; W. Jones and J. Underwood.

Seniors include: Bertrand, Huntington, Gray, E. Cross, Blitch, D. McMillan, R. Hemphill, J. T. Cross, David Heikel, Pierce and Everett.
