Foundry to Open

The area economy will soon get a boost with the opening of the foundry at Memphis. The facility is now the property of Crane-Fiat, and the company is doing extensive remodeling to the already modern complex.

Crane-Fiat will manufacture vitreous-glazed, cast-iron sinks and lavatories. Most will be for commercial applications. At present the factory has a staff of about 13, but they expect to increase that to 25 by the end of the year. They hope to employ about twice that number sometime in 1993. The factory is inviting applications from potential employees. Crane-Fiat is looking for employees who are ready to learn. They want people who are alert, dependable and safety-conscious.

Crane-Fiat is a major international corporation with copious resources and a growing share of the market. With the major investment that the company has devoted to this project, they are expected to produce a stable, permanent business in this area.

A small crew started upgrading the plant in January. They hope to be in full production by the end of August.

The renovated plant will feature state-of-the-art environmental quality equipment. They have concentrated on air quality, so that sand, fumes and dust will be held to a minimum. "This will be the cleanest foundry in Texas," says Jim Weems, Plant Superintendent. He is obviously proud of the spotless facility.

The iron will be cast in molds on a conveyor belt. Much of the production will be mechanized, from machine-made green sand molds to an automatic shot-blasting room.

The foundry will hold an open house for the public this fall, after the weather has cooled off.

College Raises Funds

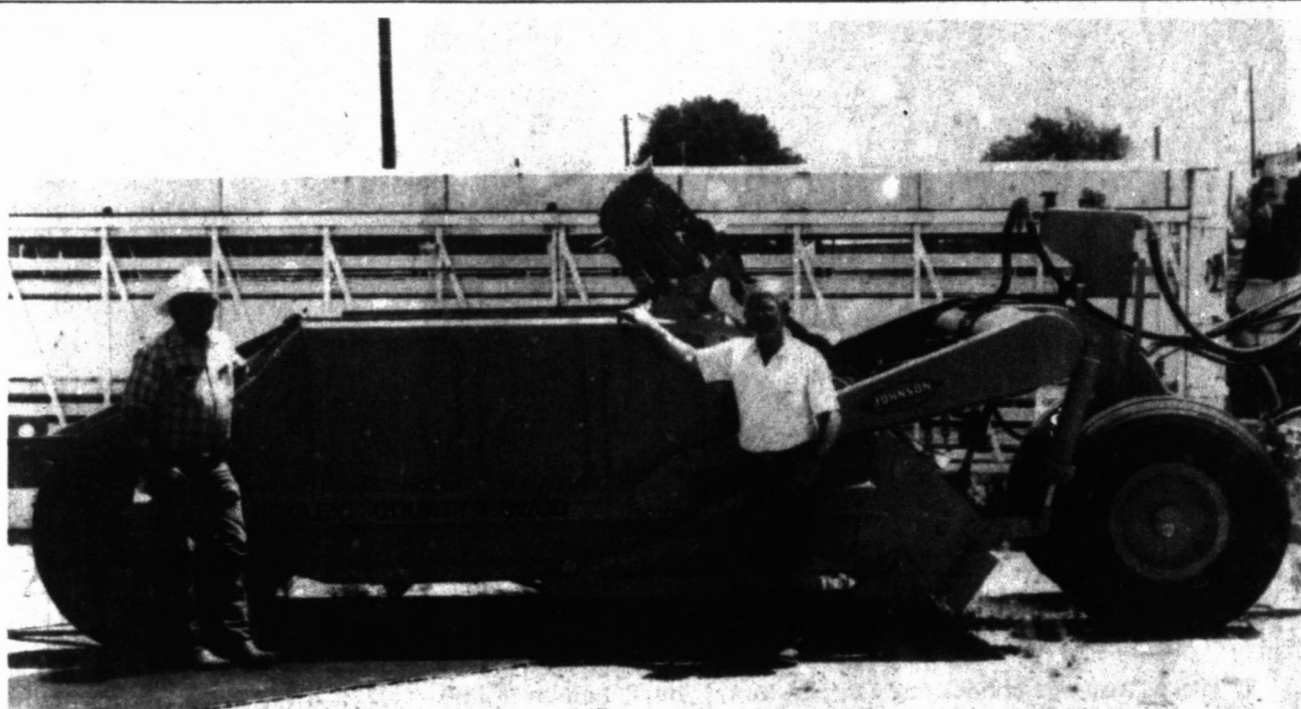

The quarterly meeting of the Clarendon College Foundation in Pampa, the board of directors agreed to focus fund raising efforts of the foundation on the development of scholarship and endowments to benefit all students of the college. The need is great. Seventy-five percent of the students attending Clarendon College need some sort of financial aid to enable them to continue a formal education.

The plan is to assist students on the main campus at Clarendon and various off campus sites of the college. Other locations where students are studying Clarendon College courses include: Pampa, Childress, Wellington, Memphis, and Shamrock.

Dr. Jerry Stockton, Clarendon College President, said, "We want to continue charting the course for excellence in education. More of our students can be afforded educational opportunities through endowed programs. Whether it is an endowment for excellence in Fine Arts or any other of the college's courses of study, these kinds of investments would give us the capability to extend additional opportunities to our students."

Endowed funds or scholarships may be established to assist in any academic or vocational program offered by the college. Donors to the foundation may direct the use of the funds they contribute at the time the gift is presented. Those, who want more information about how the Clarendon College Foundation can be helped, are invited to visit the college or call (806) 874-3571.

Producers interested in attending the workshop should contact the Extension Service Office by August 19. Producers that plan on participating should bring 3 to 5 cotton plants from their fields to be used in plant mapping. Plants should be an average representative of the field.

Private applicators will receive two (2) CEU's for participating in the entire workshop.

Crop Report

By Tim Trimble

Cotton has made good growth in the past several weeks, but is beginning to react to the short moisture conditions. Most cotton ranges from first 1st bloom to 2nd week of blooming. Demonstration work in the county has shown that generally after August 25, white blooms have very little chance of making a quality boll for harvest.

Cotton is entering peak water use at a time we generally don't see much rain. Fruit production, retention and shedding are closely related to availability of soil moisture. Moisture stress during the peak flowering period will have the most pronounced effect on yield. However, stress either early or late in the blooming period can also result in significant yield reduction.

Heavy fleahopper numbers are still present in many fields. After cotton sets five or six squares per plant, fleahoppers become less important. Bollworm moth numbers have decreased as of last week. Some light infestations of bollworms have been seen in some fields. Look for moth and egg lay activity to increase in the next two weeks. Cotton aphid populations can be found in most fields. Most populations a light at present and beneficial are beginning to increase in many fields. Reports from the Brazos Valley indicate that no insecticide is providing good control of aphids there.

CROP REPORT - from 1. Sorghum is in varying stages through out the county. Greenbugs are becoming easier to find, but are fairly light for the most part. With the wide range of age in sorghum, midge infestations could become a problem especially on late planted fields. The damaging threshold is one to two midge per head. Sorghum midge deposit their eggs in the yellow blooming florets. After pollination has occurred, the floret is no longer susceptible to midge damage.

Stress and High Blood Pressure

Although high blood pressure affects all age groups, it is most commonly seen in the elderly, especially black elderly. There are many potentially harmful effects of high blood pressure, including heart attack, loss of vision, stroke, and loss of kidney function. Therefore, it is wise for everyone to have his or her blood pressure checked periodically. Also it is advisable to eliminate or modify factors that increase the blood pressure. One such factor is stress.

Dr. David Nash, Clinical Professor of Medicine at State University of New York Health Science Center has studied the effect of stress on blood pressure. According to Dr. Nash, writing in a recent issue of Pharmacy Times, the role of stress and high blood pressure in persons who previously had normal blood pressure is not fully understood. However, research has shown that persons with stressful jobs, such as air traffic controllers, experience more high blood pressure than do other groups. Dr. Nash calls this condition "hyperkinetic hypertension."

Eliminating risk factor, such as smoking and obesity in the hyperkinetic hypertensive person may help control blood pressure. Exercise, relaxation, and biofeedback may help also. Prescription medicines such as beta blockers ACE inhibitors, and calcium blockers may be needed if non-drug approaches are not effective.

Efficiency Saves Money

As more energy is required by Texas residents, more power plants to produce that energy will be built, and this is a cost we all share as consumers of energy.

Currently, the most effective way of reducing the continuous need for energy is to change our consumption habits. Increasingly, municipalities are requiring that new homes be fitted with energy-efficient and water saving appliances and fixtures. But for the majority of homeowners, the appliances we use are the original models and may be in need of replacement.

If you are planning on purchasing a new water heater, dishwasher, air conditioner, furnace, or washer and dryer, the 1991 Consumer Guide to Home Energy Savings by Alex Wilson na the American Council for an Energy Efficient Economy can help you locate appliances that will contribute to a reduction in your electricity bills.

The guide provides tips on what to look for when shopping for new appliances, lists the most energy-efficient models available and even provides a form to calculate your savings from purchasing energy-efficient models.

Even if you are not planning on buying new appliances, this guide offers advice on how to reduce energy consumption with your current refrigerator, water heater, air conditioner and other appliances.

Texas has the distinction of having an abundance of natural gas as a resource. If possible, use gas appliances in your home. Many of the power plants that provide our electricity use to coal shipped in from other states for producing that power. Switching to gas appliances will not only save you money on your electrical bills but will help the Texas economy as well.

MRS. BRADLEY LEON BRADDOCK (nee Stephanie Gayle Miller)

Miller-Braddock Wed

Miss Stephanie Gayle Miller became the bride of Bradley Leon Braddock at seven o'clock Friday evening in the Amarillo Wedding Chapel.

Rick Mathis officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Wayne and Sharon Miller of Childress. Parents of the bride-groom are Mary Cole of Clarendon and Jim Braddock of Pampa.

Decoration included a brass archway entwined with grape ivy and white roses. Candelabra holding lighted tapers were accented by ivy and roses with white and mauve bows.

Escorted and given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white satin with cathedral train. The sweetheart neckline was embellished with Alencon lace, pearls and iridescent sequins. Designed with a mermaid fitted torso, the short bouffant sleeves featured puffed satin bows.

Her veil of bridal illusion fell from a headpiece of lace and flowers accented with pearls and sequins.

She carried a cascade arrangement of antique roses with accents of gypsophila and satin ribbon.

In keeping with the old-new tradition of brides, she wore a Queen Elizabeth sixpence in her shoe. Her Garter was blue.

Sherri Gannaway of Childress, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Her gown, a tea length floral print of mauve and teal, was fashioned with a fitted bodice and scalloped neckline. She carried an arrangement of mauve antique roses with accents of gypsophila and satin ribbons.

Bridesmaid, Pamela Lankford of Childress, wore a dress identical to that of the matron of honor.

Best man was Robert Lee of Clarendon. The groomsman was Brandon Strawn of Pampa.

Rusty Gannaway of Childress was ringbearer; Lindsey Gannaway of Childress was flower girl.

Candles were lighted by Krissy Arnn of Childress and Tanya Braddock of Wellington.

Reception guests were registered by Dusti Arnn of Childress. Guests were presented favors of white bells filled with yogurt covered nuts wrapped in net with teal and white streamers.

The serving table, covered in white lace, was centered with a vase of mauve and teal roses. The bride's three-tiered white cake featured a fountain with accents of mauve and teal roses and was topped with a miniature bride and groom.

The grooms three-layer spice cake was accented with bride and groom monograms.

Assisting with the reception were Linda Hill of Clarendon, Karen Arnn and Shirley Hodges of Childress.

For a wedding trip, the bride traveled in a two piece navy suit with a applique collar and gold tone buttons. Her corsage was of antique mauve roses, gypsophila and satin ribbon.

Mrs. Braddock will receive her bachelor of science degree from West Texas State University this month.

School Safety Tips Given

Bells will be ringing shortly, as thousands of Texas children return from summer break. This means making adjustments in their routines. It's also time for Texas motorists to make some adjustments in their driving habits.

The first few weeks of school are the most dangerous, according to Major Cawthon, Regional Commander for the Texas Department of Public Safety. "This time of year presents safety problems for both the school children and the drivers," Cawthon explained. "Many kids are attending school for the first time and others might be going to a different school where they are unfamiliar with the local traffic conditions."

Another problem is that during the summer recess many drivers have gotten out of the habit of being alert for both school zones and school buses. Drivers must remember that children have many things on their minds as they go to and from school. They are also easily distracted from important things like remembering to watch for traffic. Children should be reminded to:

- Line up away from the road and wait for the approaching bus to come to a stop before entering the roadway to board.
- Avoid pushing and shoving

--Use the grab handle when boarding and move directly to a seat.

--Avoid horseplay
--Refrain from making loud noises that could distract the driver
--Remain seated for the entire trip
--Exit the bus in an orderly manner

--Walk to where the driver can see them if they must cross the street and wait for the driver's signal before crossing

It is against the law for a vehicle to pass a school bus that is loading or unloading passengers--some drivers still do.

By observing the speed limits, being alert for increased pedestrian traffic, and watching for school buses, we can make this a safe year for all.

Cowboy Poet to Perform

Perry Williams, Lubbock, headlines the Cowboy Poet Performance next Saturday, August 15th, at the Big Texan Steak Ranch, 7701 I40E. Honky-tonk piano music by Rusty Nichols of Borger begins at 10:30. Cowboy poets are called to the stage at 11:00, and those in the audience are urged to participate.

Opie Hileman of Panhandle

will be featured as the student poet on the 15th, followed by Larry Kelly's hilarious specialty act. Williams' half-hour presentation concludes the ceremony. Since some of the cowboy poets, as well as the cowboy poet fans, travel over a hundred miles to appear, the mid-morning performances should be welcomed with smiles of relief.

Perry Williams' family history goes way back to the beginning of Texas. Both parental great-great-grandfathers fought with the army of the Republic of Texas in the fight to gain independence from Mexico, and were awarded headrights of land for their service to the Republic. Minding Your Own Business

Jed Wrote the Book

by Don Taylor

Jed wasn't his real name. A teacher called him Jed and the name stuck. Jed was only 30 when he took over as Chief Executive Officer. He soon proved to be clever businessman. He possessed wisdom beyond his years and pioneered many business concepts still used today.

Jed built a financial empire. His personal wealth was known around the world and his fortune would rival Fortune magazine's entire top ten.

Jed was into mergers and joint venturing long before the Wall Street barons made it popular. He built and used the regional distribution center concept years before Sam Walton opened his first Wal-Mart. Jed was an expert negotiator and a sharp trader. Many companies still use his import-export concepts today.

Yes, Jed wrote the book, but it never made the "business best seller" list. Most folks who have read his book don't even realize its business implications. However, if you will find a copy today, reading it will help you and your business.

Jed believed in making careful plans. "Planning will put money in our pocket and quick decisions will speed you to the poorhouse," he wrote in one chapter.

There is no better way to prevent mistakes than through proper planning. Planning helps us determine where we are and guides us toward where we want to go. Planning allows us to map the steps to get from where we are to where we want to be. Like a good map, planning helps us establish direction, foresee obstacles and estimate resources needed to help us arrive at our destination.

We live in an instant society. Nowhere is that more evident than among those who wish to start a business. We have counseled hundreds of individuals who can't wait to get going. They don't take time to plan, and that often leads to failure.

Jed was successful because he didn't repeat his mistakes. "When you make a mistake twice you're as foolish as a mongrel pup that goes back and licks up his own vomit," he wrote.

I hope you are not eating as you read this column. However, the message is so important, I couldn't leave it out. Everyone who goes into business will make mistakes, but if you make mistakes twice, you probably won't survive.

Someone once wrote that success comes from experience and experience from making mistakes. Therefore, if you want to be successful you must make mistakes.

Sam Walton's success with Wal-Mart stores has come from learning from previous mistakes--not only his-but also other's. Walton's company loves to innovate. If it works, they continue doing it. If it doesn't, they note the mistake and move on the other ideas.

Jed said, "You can value a man by what others say about him." This principle is absolutely true for business. The philosophy that you're only as good as your last sale is correct. It is also true that your business is valued by what your customers have to say about it.

What do your customers say about your business? Do they talk about your excellent quality, outstanding service, convenient hours and great delivery? Or, do they discuss the lack of these elements.

Oh yes, I guess I should tell you a little more about Jed. Nathan the prophet-his teacher-christened him Jedidiah. He was more commonly known by his given name, Solomon. Jed is King Solomon, one of the world's wisest and richest men.

The book he wrote is Proverbs, the 20th book of the Old Testament. The quotes are from Chapter 21, 26 and 27. I paraphrased slightly from the New International Version Bible.

Letters to the Editor

Communication within a community is always good. However, all the facts must be brought out so that citizens may form their own opinions.

I'd like to assist Jerry Courtney in presenting a true, balanced picture of the Thunder Junction project and events surrounding it. In his letter to the editor last week, Mr. Courtney was apparently misinformed, so let me try to correct that situation.

1) Neither The Clarendon News representative nor myself "demanded" permission to remove the Thunder Junction feasibility study from City Hall so that we could make copies elsewhere. There are several witnesses who can attest to our courteous behavior. After the study was removed from the city office, I used the words "request" and "Thank you" in the written request that I submitted to the Board of Aldermen. It was understood by everyone that the copies were to be made at my expense.

2) "Statutory procedure" is indeed being followed and all the press is aware of this. The Texas Attorney General will soon determine whether the feasibility study is a public document. Mr. Courtney states unequivocally that the study "does not belong to the City of Clarendon and is not a 'public' document." However, the City directly paid the consulting firm which produced the study, and we must all wait for the attorney general's ruling as to ownership.

3) The money which paid for the study belonged to the City of Clarendon. If the Board of Aldermen had not spent $17,000 to help a business that will be located outside the city, a business that will pay not city or county taxes, the money could have been spent to help other projects, such as the Saints' Roost Museum, etc.

4) In my opinion, Mr. Courtney's logic was flawed in equating making copies of a feasibility study to "copying the books of any business". Obviously, these are totally different actions.

5) Thunder Junction board members requested the City of Clarendon to pay for a feasibility study. In their words at the board meeting, "a go-no go" study, not a master business plan. If the study in question is a detailed business plan to be protected from competitors, was that point sufficiently made to the Board of Aldermen before they cast their votes to fund the study?

6) Members of the press understand their responsibility to protect information that might be "proprietary". No shadowy conspiracy is involved on the part of the local or regional press. If someone has $11 million to build a western heritage theme park, why would they want to use the ideas from a study costing a mere $17,000.

Newspapers cannot be blind cheerleaders for economic interests if the public is to be well served. Instead the press must seek out all the facts of a story so that citizens may weigh the positive and negative implications of any project seeking public support. Some questions with major implications for area taxpayers are yet to be answered. How much extra law enforcement and fire protection will thousands of tourists require? How much faster will our roads wear out with the increased traffic? If our population booms, is our current water and sewer capacity adequate? Will existing businesses be helped or harmed by incoming new business competitors?

The answer to these and other questions, to be fair, must be weighed along with the benefits a theme park might bring. The role of the press is to help find these answers for the public. It is a vital role in a democratic society. For example, if a bond issue were proposed to aid a business, wouldn't you want the press to tell you as much as possible about that project?

Thank you.
Kevin Welch

I want to thank our City Mayor and Aldermen for what they have done and continue doing for the progress of Clarendon. The time and work they do is volunteer time. They spend many hours in meetings that they could spend on their personal interests. If a town does not progress, it will go backward. Some have said we need an industry or factory here that will bring in money. Well, we have several industries, namely our college, our nursing home, a candy factory, BK Jeans factory and Greenbelt Lake. Employees of all of the add to our population, and they all spend money in Clarendon. When we have the opportunity to create new interests in and around town we need to promote the idea when foresight proves to be feasible and for progress.

Our Chamber of Commerce and merchants are all working to keep business in town. If we do not support local business people, they cannot stay in business. If we do not have a variety of businesses, people will find other places to live. If our population decreases, our churches also lose members and supporters. Who wants to live in a town where there is not a church of his or her choice? Let us support local merchants and officials. They are working to make our town one of which we can be proud.

Finally, I have known David Pitts many years. He likes to help others who need help. He unselfishly gives volunteer time as alderman and fireman. I know he is a man of honesty, integrity and hard work. He does not go into a project blindfolded and certainly not secretly or unlawfully with the intention of hurting or offending anyone.

To the editor:

I would state that divisiveness is not healthy for any community, whether it "becomes" them or not, but I don't agree that items such as the July 30, 1992, Clarendon News story under the headline "Alderman Hides Feasibility Study", and the editorial headed "Who Cares What the Law Says", spawned said divisiveness. In my opinion, the discontent, distrust, and discord existed long before Thursday, July 30.

Maybe what it is about the prospect of growth, economic advancement, the creation of jobs, and the construction of facilities designed to enhance the quality of Clarendon life, "that brings out the worst personality traits in us," is the realization by most everyone around here, that as soon as it became obvious that there were "millions of dollars to be spent and made here" (quoting the Amarillo Globe News Sunday, August 9) the three gentlemen on the bench who are supposed to represent what Thunder Junction is all about, suddenly became invisible. We are not afraid that it may cost us something, on the contrary, most of us are like the widow at the treasury that Christ spoke of in Mark 12: 41-44, what we're giving may not be as much, but neither is it taken from our "surplus". We are not jealous of those who conceive the ideas, we just don't want to be patted on the head and told we're too naive and simple to understand when a proposed concept is not necessarily the best idea for all concerned. We're not envious of other individuals or institutions who might stand to prosper by "their" labors, but if possible we're not going to allow anyone around here to prosper at the expense of others. This new attitude among the "common folk" of this community, of which I am proudly one of, may not be becoming either -- Tough!

What I believe the proponents of Thunder Junction need to realize is that as long as they keep their sights set on "what this will do for Clarendon and them" instead of what it will do for "the senior citizens of the panhandle" Thunder Junction will never be anything more than a pipe dream, and the controversies will never go away.

At this time I will also take issue with David Stevens who in the afore mentioned article said that "the skeptical news media wouldn't believe the Pope without documentation". That makes it sound like it's not good. On the contrary I would hope that will always be true.

I think it's time to take a different look at everything involved with Thunder Junction.

I am not, let me repeat for those of you who sometimes let rhetoric get in the way of the meaning of words, NOT anti-Thunder Junction! The real question here is, what is Thunder Junction and what is Yesterday's Children? But before we get into that, let me give us another opinion about this infamous feasibility study. As I see it, it is irrelevant who owns the study, when the two contenders are a municipal government, and a not-for-profit corporation established to benefit the panhandle's senior citizens. As far as the money that paid for it not really being the "taxpayers money", isn't that sort of like being a "little bit pregnant", I mean since Donley County citizens didn't really "pay" the money (unless they stayed in a local motel during such and such a period) maybe the alderman really didn't have the right to spend it either. And it's exactly right that it can only be spent for certain things, like the Saint's Roost's Museum, or the Clarendon City Park, or maybe a community visitor's center, or a feasibility study. Now about this idea that someone is going to "steal" this document and "use" it to get financing, then build Thunder Junction out from under us. Now really, lighten up, first off unless they, whoever "they" might be, were going to call their theme park Thunder Junction, it seems to me they would have to do a lot of editing, and if even at this early stage of the development, precautions have not been taken to protect that name, I for one would wonder why not. Then this notorious "they" would have to undermine all the preliminary ground work that has been laid with Greenbelt Water Authority, in order to get the land away from Yesterday's Children. Right or wrong? And if that's right, I for one would like to know if Greenbelt Water Authority is still open to the highest bidder, or are they an integral part of our dream. And lastly, I know that if I was considering lending 15+ million dollars to someone, and they handed me a Feasibly study on their project, I would request an interview with the company who wrote the study to glean any additional information from the research that might not have made it to the final document. Bankers there's a free piece of advice for you if you haven't already thought of it. And I honestly believe that somewhere in the conversation with the people who did the study, the subject of how "they" got it would come up. Now if we really believe that someone could build this park somewhere else with this study, gee maybe we should have tried that first with the $25,000 Amarillo area study.

I also don't believe that just because the City of Clarendon paid for this study, that that gives them or any individual, nor any given reporting agency proprietary rights to "The Document" and I don't feel that any of the citizenry of Clarendon, the City of Clarendon, nor any reporting agency is asking for any "proprietary rights" to the "document" that would be rather silly.

But isn't it just as silly to think that a representative from any news organization, operating on behalf of that news organization, would be requesting a copy of any given document for reason other than the reporting of information from that document.

"Ownership" of this document is not really the issue here. Has anyone besides me stopped to consider, that full disclosure of the content of this document to the local news media, would only have enhanced public support. -- Let's all try this on for size -- Maybe Yesterday's Children should have requested 25 copies of this study from the firm that wrote it, which for them should have been an easy task; then sent one by messenger to each of the television and radio stations and to the news papers in this area and the remaining copies to the and public libraries for individuals to look over.

Granted the fact that cities and other governmental bodies at every level-- national, state, and local may, and often do offer incentives (cash grants, tax abatement, property, job training and many other incentives) to businesses to locate their business in a particular community. And that does not mean those businesses are subject to being denuded in public, and I have no interest in seeing their books. However, they also are not, not - for - profit businesses, and what's more, they're not asking individuals and other for - profit corporations to donate money's, goods, and services to an organization founded for the express benefit of the panhandle's senior citizens, that as of this date has done very little to benefit anyone, and by their own admission, says they probably never will benefit anyone if Thunder Junction doesn't become a reality.

I did not feel that the News implied that it is illegal for aldermen, or any elected, or appointed governmental official, to meet "in secret" with individual or groups, to discuss matters of concern. I think the implication was that it is illegal to meet with "each other" in secret to discuss anything.

IS THAT LEGAL?

I would never expect any elected or appointed official to be a mind reader. How about just straight forward and honest.

What I'm asking for is full financial disclosure of Yesterday's Children, how much money have they received, from whom, and what besides feasibility studies, of which I think their have been aplenty now, has it been spent for. Now I realize that may be none of my business, but then I wish someone would tell me that, and I would quit asking. Then I would simply tell people I encounter on the street, that I was told it was none of my business. Instead what Yesterday's Children keeps telling me, is that the "check" or information as it were, is in the mail. And you know what? I don't believe them.

I also would like to know if any stock or compensation of any kind, generated by Thunder Junction, has already been promised to any one individual, or group, or corporation, for services rendered, other than Yesterday's Children, should Thunder Junction ever become a reality.

I would like to know if Thunder Junction should ever become a reality, is Yesterday's Children going to receive its share from the "gross proceeds" or the "net profit".

I would like to know if Yesterday's Children is planned to ever be any more than Pat Kaiser and a few office volunteer's or will she or any other "one person" always be in relative sole control of the monies flowing through that organization.

Minding Your Own Business

"The Law of Increasing Returns"

We live in a land of laws. Laws from the foundation of democracy. Laws protect us from others and sometimes from ourselves. Men and women created most of these "rules for living together." However, not all laws that affect our lives are manmade. Some laws are natural laws.

The law of gravity is one example of a natural law. If I stand behind you and throw a bucket of water up in the air right over your head, you will get wet. It doesn't matter if you know about the law of gravity or if you understand how gravity works; you still get wet.

The law of "Increasing Returns" is another natural law. You may never have heard of the law of increasing returns, but like gravity, it still exists. This interesting natural law manifest itself in many areas of human endeavor.

Napoleon Hill wrote about this law in his book "Law of Success." He wrote, "Render more service than that for which you are paid and you will soon be paid for more than you render. The law of 'Increasing Return' takes care of this."

I've seen this law manifest in business, in the work force and in my own life. I know it's true.

Sometimes we do not wish to hear the truth. For example, a few weeks ago Japanese officials suggested that American workers were a little on the lazy side. Labor unions, industrial workers and many others rose up in protest. Not true, not true, they shouted. However, there is some truth in what the Japanese said.

When I worked in the corporate world, I had the opportunity to tour and work in some of the nation's largest industrial plants. I watched workers in steel mills, canneries and automotive foundries. I observed thousands of American workers and few of them do more work that for which they are paid.

Maybe the reason they don't work more productively is they don't understand the law of increasing returns. How often have you heard someone say, "That's not my job," or "I don't get paid to do that." It is obvious to me that those people don't understand how the law works.

I grew up on a farm and know that most farmers understand the law of increasing returns. They till the soil, plant the seed, cultivate the crop, pray for rain-not that much rain-and harvest in the fall. Before they get any return, they work hard and invest heavily.

If they plant 100 acres, they can harvest no more than 100 acres. Sometimes the harvest is dismal, but the farmers plant again. They know that they have to plant if they ever expect to harvest. They understand that the more acres they plant the greater their potential harvest.

The parallel with business is interesting. We must prepare the business field, cultivate our customers and provide valuable services. Only then can we harvest our profits.

Individual workers, often find this process hard to understand. Most employees react to short-term incentives. The weekly or monthly paycheck is the most common. The harvest comes even if they loafed during the week. Actually the law is still in force though everyone appears to receive the same reward.

When hard times come, management releases the lease productive and least efficient workers. Therefore, if you are worth more than you are paid, you have additional job security.

In good times, the law of increasing return improves your chances for raises, promotions and additional benefits. Perhaps not in the short run, but always in the long haul. Those businesses and individuals who render more service than that for which they get paid, will soon get paid for more than they render. It's the law.

School Safety Tips Given

Bells will be ringing shortly, as thousands of Texas children return from summer break. This means making adjustments in their routines. It's also time for Texas motorists to make some adjustments in their driving habits.

The first few weeks of school are the most dangerous, according to Major Cawthon, Regional Commander for the Texas Department of Public Safety. "This time of year presents safety problems for both the school children and the drivers," Cawthon explained. "Many kids are attending school for the first time and others might be going to a different school where they are unfamiliar with the local traffic conditions."

Another problem is that during the summer recess many drivers have gotten out of the habit of being alert for both school zones and school buses. Drivers must remember that children have many things on their minds as they go to and from school. They are also easily distracted from important things like remembering to watch for traffic. Children should be reminded to:

- Line up away from the road and wait for the approaching bus to come to a stop before entering the roadway to board.
- Avoid pushing and shoving

- Use the grab handle when boarding and move directly to a seat.

- Avoid horseplay
- Refrain from making loud noises that could distract the driver
- Remain seated for the entire trip

- Exit the bus in an orderly manner

- Walk to where the driver can see them if they must cross the street and wait for the driver's signal before crossing

It is against the law for a vehicle to pass a school bus that is loading or unloading passengers--some drivers still do.

By observing the speed limits, being alert for increased pedestrian traffic, and watching for school buses, we can make this a safe year for all.

will be featured as the student poet on the 15th, followed by Larry Kelly's hilarious specialty act. Williams' half-hour presentation concludes the ceremony. Since some of the cowboy poets, as well as the cowboy poet fans, travel over a hundred miles to appear, the mid-morning performances should be welcomed with smiles of relief.

Perry Williams' family history goes way back to the beginning of Texas. Both parental great-great-grandfathers fought with the army of the Republic of Texas in the fight to gain independence from Mexico, and were awarded headrights of land for their service to the Republic. His great-grandmother and step-great-grandfather were involved in the original petition around 1855 to separate Winkler County from what was then Bexar County.
