Aggravated Robbery Charges Filed Against Local Man

According to complaint reports filed in the Sheriff's Office, aggravated robbery charges have been filed on Terry Durley, 24, of Clarendon.

Durley allegedly knocked on the door of Selmer Ray Warren during the rainstorm about 1:40 a.m., Tuesday, August 3. Warren allowed Durley to come in out of the rain because he recognized him as having worked for a neighbor. The house is out in the country northeast of Clarendon. The suspect reportedly asked Warren for $20, ostensibly to get his daughter out of jail. When Warren declined to give the money to him, Durley allegedly caught the older man from behind, choking him.

When Warren regained consciousness, the culprit had left. Warren's billfold, money, cards and car were also missing.

Warren got in his pickup and drove to town, reporting the offense to the Sheriff's Office about 2:12 a.m. Deputies arrested Durley later that morning and the victim made a positive identification.

Cancer Screening Clinic Started

The Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center has started a new program called "The Women's Cancer Screening Clinic".

The goal of the clinic is to provide women throughout the Panhandle with cancer screening procedures, examinations and education. The clinics will provide breast, abdominal, and pelvic examinations, pap tests, and mammograms. It will help women identify risk factors such as family history and instruct in self-examination. Women who meet specific financial and eligibility guideline can get these examinations at no cost.

Clinics will be held every Tuesday, beginning August 3, on the second floor of the Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center, 1500 Wallace Boulevard in Amarillo. For an appointment, call (806) 359-4673, extension 171 or (800) 377-4673.

Hall-Donley Rural Health Clinics Open

Hall County Hospital District, Memphis, Texas, announces the opening of rural health clinics in Donley and Hall County. Hospital Board Chairman, Johnny Farnsworth, noted that planning for this project began in October, 1991 with the approval of a 3 year grant for federal assistance. Objectives of the grant included improved access to outpatient services and inpatient hospital care, diversification of area medical services, and local physician collaboration. Federal grant monies of $150,000 with funding from other sources (in kind) of $272,000 were allocated over the three year period of the grant. The total grant budget was $422,000.

Phase I of the project supported planning activities during the first year of the grant. Included in those activities were: (1) a community needs assessment for both counties, (2) indication of community support through letters and financial contributions, (3) identification of physical locations and personnel needs for each clinic, and (4) development of marketing strategy.

The second year of the grant (which ends September 30, 1993) centered around implementation activities to put the clinics into operation and to assist with contracting and travel expenses for marketing, medical education and networking. In Donley County, this was accomplished by contracting with Dr. Richard Gilkey to assume his clinic practice. In Hall County, Dr. Robert Watson was recruited by the hospital and the hospital-supported clinic was designated as a rural health clinic.

Under Texas medical statutes, rural health clinics in medically underserved areas are allowed to employ a physician assistant (PA) or advanced nurse practitioner (ANP) as an "extender", under the supervision of a physician, in order to allow the physician to increase his patient load. Medicare allows reimbursement at the physicians level for patients seen by the "extender". Robert Powell has been hired as a PA at the Donley Rural Health Clinic. The Hall County facility is currently recruiting for a physician assistant or advanced nurse practitioner. The certified PA or ANP practices medicine under Standing Delegation Orders set up by the state of Texas along with specific medical orders written by the supervising physician. This process helps ensure consistent quality health care.

Third year grant funds will be used to continue subsidizing clinic personnel and operating costs, assist with expansion of home health services, and development of new programs such as women's health issues. Accomplishment of these objectives will help to sustain future clinic operations after the grant ends in September of 1994. The third grant year will also focus on strengthening the LVN program worth affiliate, Clarendon College, as well as becoming a part of the residency programs at Texas Tech Health Science Center, Amarillo Campus.

Although Hall County Hospital District serves as the parent organization for the clinics, a Rural Health Board was formed to direct the planning and implementation activities of the Hall-Donley Rural Health Clinic project. This board is composed of the administrator of Hall County Hospital, Judi Synek; the Medical Directors of both clinics, Dr. Gilkey and Dr. Watson; the administrator of Clarendon Medical Center Nursing Home, Gene Alderson; Community Representative, Trey Chamberlain; Hall County Hospital Board Member Eddie Huddleston; and Chairman of the Hospital Board, Johnny Farnsworth.

The Public is invited to attend the Donley County Rural Health Clinic open house on Sunday, August 15, at 2:00 to 4:00 at the corner of HWY 287 and 70 S. in Clarendon. Open house for Hall County Rural Health Clinic will be on Sunday, August 22, at 2:00 to 4:00, at 1645 N. 18th, Memphis, Texas.

If NAFTA passes, Mexico will receive more than $5 billion in foreign investment in the environmental protection industry over the next three years. Now is the time for Texas firms to establish strategic alliances with Mexican firms and take advantage of these opportunities.

The Texas Department of Commerce, in cooperation with key public and private organizations from Mexico and the U.S., will host a one-day conference titled, "Environmental and Alternative Energy Opportunities in Mexico." This conference is targeted to small- and medium-sized companies seeking expansion opportunities in environmental and alternative energy markets in the Republic of Mexico. The conference will be held on Tuesday, August 17, at the Omni Austin Hotel, 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Conference panelists will provide practical and up-to-date information related to policy, enforcement, and marketing techniques. Texas companies in Mexico will share experiences and knowledge about working with Mexican firms. At the workshop, attendees will have the opportunity to network with these representatives, and to learn ways to fund environmental and alternative energy projects in Mexico.

Mexican organizations participating in the Environmental and Alternative Energy Opportunities in Mexico Conference include: the National Council of Ecological Industrialists; the Social Development Secretariat; the Federal Commission of Electricity - Alternative Energy; Radian de Mexico; and World Bank.

Game Plan On Food

Each fall the boys (and girls) take to the field with high hopes of scoring touchdowns, blocking punts, and avoiding as many errors as possible. The same can be said for the American agricultural team as it seeks to avoid the penalty that our food is unsafe.

With each passing season, new doubts are raised about the safety of our nations food supply and the reliability of its food protection system. questions focus on how the food was raised, grown, processed, packaged, and shipped. In nearly every instance, the questions are resolved and the matter becomes a faded memory. Americans continue to eat three square meals a day, rarely concerned about the safety of the food they put on their plates and in their mouth.

The another headline stirs their fears and jolts their confidence. Yes, constructive headline remind all in the food industry to do a better job. Other stories are collections of accusations made by one group or another. Most accusations are made with the best intentions but often lack in forethought and fact. Each report seems to chip away at the public's trust of farmers, ranchers, farm and ranch suppliers, food processors, government regulations, and food retailers.

The challenge for all of us in agriculture is to find a way to help consumers sort through the headlines-distinguishing accuracy from accusations-while still searching for ways of improving our score board on food safety. Our best chance for winning with the American people is to deliver a powerful game plan on food. As an FFA member, (however you are involved in agriculture) you are one of agriculture's quarterbacks on food safety.

Concerns about food safety have covered the field from ripening agents used in apple production to fungicides on peanuts, herbicides on corn, growth hormones used in beef production and food additives use by processors. Why do we use these products? Are they safe? Do we really need them? What are the long term effects? How can we be sure our food is safe? These questions are fair. Each of us should know how to respond by covering the entire field.

First Down: The Farm

Have you ever met a farmer or rancher who just could not wait to spend money on herbicides or livestock antibiotics? As Macailay Culkin said in Home Alone, "I don't think so."

Less Than 2% of Americans produce food for the rest of the nation and a major portion of the world; farmers and ranchers have their work cut out for them. The success of producing vast quantities of fruit, vegetables, cereals, grain and fiber crops, as well as cattle, hogs, and poultry, has made American agriculture our number one industry and something of a miracle world wide. Most consumers never give it a second thought; we expect to find fresh and processed foods readily available, convenient and affordable whenever we stroll in the grocery store.

This food abundance could only be possible through farmer/rancher efficiency, use of the latest advances in machinery, agronomic practices and science, and thoughtful attention to carefully managing these technologies. Without these tools, a farmer or rancher could only feed a handful of people (as the case 50 years ago) rather than the nearly 130 consumers fed by each U.S. farmer or rancher today.

Sure, some of those innovations have names that the public often misunderstand-names like pesticides, antibiotics, growth hormones, hybrid seed varieties, genetically engineered crops, and a host of other food production tools and techniques. There is no doubt about it: farmers and ranchers don't use these tools because they want to their hard earned money. They are quick to recognize which innovations work and which ones don't. Thanks to farmers and ranchers making the right choices, our food production system has become the model for the world.

Second Down: The Laboratory

The tools used in food production don't just happen. They are the results of life times of careful research, study, field, greenhouse and laboratory experimentation. Today's productivity enhancements are the product of research, research, research, more research, and success.

For example, let's take agriculture chemicals. Only one (that's right, just one) in 20,000 pesticides survives the journey from the chemist lab, through testing, beyond regulatory review, to the marketplace. Many discoveries are rejected because they don't meet manufacturer standards for pest control, guidelines for safety to humans, safety to the environment, and countless other tests. This long winding process takes from 7-10 years and cost pesticides manufacturers anywhere from $35 million to 450 million. Again, all to end up with only one product out of 20,000 candidates.

The same exhaustive research goes into other production inputs and food processing additives. In fact, anything that has a remote chance of becoming part of the food supply is subjected to a wide variety of company and government directed testing.

Third Down: The Government

Three federal agencies are the primary guardians of our food supply. (1) Environmental Protection Agency. The EPA is responsible for carrying out a law commonly known as "FIFRA" the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act. FIFRA requires that pesticides used in food production meet tough standards for safety and environmental tests.

The law specifies guidelines for product labeling, registration, transportation and worker safety use. In brief, FIFRA ensures vigorous testing and safety to the public and environment, and verifies that any pesticide's benefits far outweigh its potential risks. (2) Food and Drug Administration. FDA administers the federal food, drug, and Cosmetic act, one of the world's most comprehensive laws designed to protect food safety. Because no food is "pure" this law sets a "tolerance" level for all chemicals traces and food additives present that might constitute a "residue." This covers artificial sweeteners, preservatives, traces of animal drugs pesticides even food packaging materials. Together with federal environment officials, the FDA sets legal limits for residues in raw agriculture commodities and processed food.

Food Safety and Inspection Service FSIS is responsible for ensuring that meat and poultry products are safe, wholesome and accurately labeled. This USDA agency inspects products for domestic and export consumption and checks imported products as well. FSIS assures that those who raise animals and process food have lived up to their food safety responsibilities. Consider these facts: (a) Slaughter inspectors and veterinarians inspect nearly 120 million livestock and 6 billion poultry for signs of disease or abnormalities, before and after slaughter. (b) More than 7,000 inspectors are stationed in meat and poultry plants nationwide. (c) Food technologist and processing inspectors annually reinspect about 150 billion pounds of hot dogs, frozen entrees, and processed products. (d) About 325,000 samples are checked each year for residues of animal drugs, pesticides or other chemicals, and roughly 40,000 are checked for bacteria or parasites.

What does all this regulation, testing and inspection mean to us? It means our food is safe! Regulations require such wide margins of safety that a 40 pound child could eat 340 oranges every day of life and still not consume the equivalent amount of pesticide residues that could cause health problems in laboratory mice. Three hundred forty oranges a day? "I don't think so".

Touch Down: The Consumer

How many times have you tasted cookie batter containing eggs? According to the American Dietetic Association, that's a no-no, because raw eggs could contain harmful bacteria.

Believe it or not, foods are at their greatest risk once they've reached the consumer's home, mostly because of how the food in frozen, thawed, refrigerated, cooked (not cooked), or handled. For example, improperly cooked meats can carry dangerous bacteria.

People often become ill because they fail to wash their hands after handling raw poultry and other meats. Similar handling and preparations concerns apply to fruits and vegetables, too.

Assuming our foods are properly handled and prepared, are consumers still at risk because of food additives? As mentioned earlier, food additives are closely regulated and can not be used to hide inferior products, trick consumers, or destroy nutrients. Without food additives ice cream would form icy crystals, peanut butter would separate, and marshmallows would be hard. The most commonly used food additives are sugar, salt, and corn syrup. These and all other additives are listed on the product package to assist consumers in making informed choices.

With all the health concerns surrounding food safety, it is important to remind people that the best health insurance is a balanced diet of nutritious foods-including fruits, vegetables, cereal, dairy and poultry products, fish and meat. Do you eat five servings of fruits and vegetables a day? (Did you say "I don't think so." The National Cancer Institute says that diets rich in fruits and vegetables are the best defense for nine types of cancer.

You have got the facts needed to deliver a winning game plan of food safety. Agriculture has a great team with lots of talent. With all odds in favor of consumers, the healthful benefits of food will continue to outscore the

Tips For Trouble-Free Driving

(NAPS)—Taking proper care of your car can put you on the road to a safer and more pleasant driving experience. Here are some helpful tips from car maintenance experts.

Your Lubrication System
• Check Engine Oil Level—Maintaining the proper oil level in your engine is not only important for operating your car safely, it helps the engine start more efficiently. Check the oil level each time you fill the gas tank.

For safety and more efficient starts, check the oil level each time you fill the gas tank.

• Use The Appropriate Performance Level And Viscosity Grade Of Engine Oil—Follow the lube oil recommendations for your vehicle described in the owner's manual. Because Americans are keeping cars longer, there is a rising interest in synthetic motor oils that help prolong engine life. Experts at Texaco, the company that has just introduced Havoline Synthetic Motor Oil SAE 5W-40, recommend you look for a label on the container which defines both its performance level and fuel economy characteristics. New Havoline Synthetic Motor Oil, for instance, is engineered to provide superior protection against lubricant breakdown and give excellent performance at extreme hot and cold temperatures.

• Keep Engine Oil And Filter Clean—As a car is driven, the level of contaminants in the engine oil constantly increases. As a result, it becomes more difficult for it to protect the engine. Regardless of the season, engine oil should be changed before it reaches a level at which damage can result.

Fuel System
• Maintain A Clean Fuel System—A dirty fuel system can contribute to poor acceleration and driveability. Clogged fuel filters should be replaced.

• Aim For Fuel Efficiency—If you keep baggage to a minimum and comply with the speed limits you'll get better mileage. Sudden acceleration and stop-and-go situations result in poor mileage.

Following these simple suggestions can help make your next drive safer and more enjoyable.

BUSINESS MATTERS

ISO standards required for trade

What are the ISO 9000 Series standards and how important are they to my business?

Now that long-established borders and trade restrictions are vanishing, international trade is becoming the norm. Almost all businesses today find themselves involved in worldwide trade in one way or another, whether as the supplier, the manufacturer, or the distributor. As a result of global competition and international marketing of products, the European Community adopted the standards of the International Organization for Standardization to ensure quality control.

The ISO 9000 Series standards are important to all U.S. businesses—small, medium, and large. With so many small- and medium-sized businesses in supplier partnerships with larger international companies, these ISO standards are critical. If your business is involved in international markets in any way, you need to know about ISO 9000 and how these new international product standards apply to your business.

The ISO 9000 Series is a set of five individual, but related, international standards on quality management and quality assurance. The ISO 9000 Series standards are generic and can be used by manufacturing and service industries alike. ISO 9000 is the road map for the series. Its purpose is to provide the user with guidelines for selection and use of ISO 9001, 9002, 9003, and 9004. The standards were designed to be user-friendly, are generic in nature, and follow a logical, easily understood format.

ISO 9001, 9002, and 9003 are quality system models for external quality assurance. ISO 9001 is the most comprehensive—covering design, manufacturing, installation, and servicing systems. ISO 9002 covers production and installation, and ISO 9003 cover only final product inspection and tests. These three models were developed for use in contractual situations such as those between a customer and a supplier. ISO 9004 provides guidelines for internal use by a producer developing its own quality system to meet business needs and take advantage of opportunities.

Increasingly, European customers expect U.S. companies to have their quality systems registered to ISO 9001, 9002, or 9003. This generally involves having an accredited independent third party conduct an on-site audit of your company's operations against the requirements of the appropriate standard. Upon successful completion of this audit, your company will receive a registration certificate that identifies your quality system as being in compliance with ISO 9000.

For more information on ISO 9000 Series standards, contact Clyde Brewer at 409/625-4609.

Plastics Recycling Keeps Moving Up!

(NAPS)—More and more plastic from used bottles and containers is finding its way back into new products. In fact, the American Plastics Council reports that the recycling rate for plastic bottles and containers increased by 45 percent in 1992, reaching a new high of 15 percent.

Recycling of Plastic Bottles and Containers

The plastics industry has tracked plastics recycling rates since 1990, when just 7 percent of plastic bottles and containers were recycled. Other results of its 1992 recycling research include the following:

- Soft drink bottle recycling continues to grow dramatically. The recycling rate for soft drink bottles topped 41 percent in 1992, up from 36 percent in 1991.

- 19 percent of all plastic bottles are now being recycled—more than 814 million pounds!

In compiling its plastics recycling statistics, the American Plastics Council surveys the more than 250 post-consumer plastic reclaimers operating nationwide. These surveys help to determine the amount of plastics actually recycled into new products—not just the materials collected from communities.

More Than Sun Can Damage The Face In Warm Weather

Experts Offer Tips For Healthy Summer Skin

(NAPS)—If a golden glow is your goal this summer, hopefully, you will achieve a tan slowly, sensibly and by always using products with SPF protectors. Protection is more critical than ever: NASA reports that ozone levels this summer are as much as 15 percent below normal across the U.S.

Less obvious dangers to the face must also be considered, according to Susan Nettesheim, senior scientist for the Pond's Institute, the consumer research and product development arm of Pond's skincare products. "Problems for skin in the summer include extra dryness or oiliness, heightened sensitivity and breakouts," Ms. Nettesheim says.

"Summer skin is far more sensitive to assaults from the climate—or from products that are too harsh," she continues. "We all know that facial lines can result from photoaging, but facial lines can be exaggerated by harsh cleansing products. On the other hand, moisturizers that are too heavy can leave the skin feeling uncomfortably greasy and actually aggravate breakouts," she points out.

Leading skincare experts offer these tips for facing summer in a healthy manner:

• AVOID CLEANSERS WITH IRRITANTS. Soap or deodorants are especially irritating to skin that has been exposed to the sun. Because skin is more sensitive, it needs gentler products.

• CLEANSE THOROUGHLY BUT GENTLY. Grime is a big irritant for city dwellers in the summer. Perspiration that holds dirt on the face is a problem everywhere. A gentle but thorough cleansing in mornings, at bedtime and after outdoor activity is recommended. Pond's Foaming Cleanser & Toner in One is an ideal choice.

• RINSE SKIN THOROUGHLY. After cleansing, be sure to rinse thoroughly with tepid water. Hot water can overdry skin. In a nationwide survey of 3,800 women, researchers at the Pond's Institute discovered that many women stopped rinsing their face after three or four splashes of water. Once you think you're finished, splash twice more to remove the last traces of residue.

• USE LOW-ALCOHOL ASTRINGENT. For a fresh feeling or extra cleansing of makeup and dirt, use astringent, but choose one which has a low-alcohol formula. Astringents that contain large amounts of alcohol can irritate summertime skin that is already aggravated by other elements.

• CLEANSE AND TONE TO COMBAT OILINESS. Contrary to popular belief, the oil glands do not produce more oil during summer. The reason for the oilier appearance in summer is actually the result of the overproduction of sweat and the resulting mixture of oil and sweat which forms a thick film over the face.

• MOISTURIZE SKIN DAILY. The skin can become dried out over the summer, especially in areas of the country with low humidity. Exposure to the sun or chlorine can also lead to dryness. A light moisturizer with built-in sun protection like Pond's Nourishing Moisturizer with Sunscreen SPF 15 is ideal.

For a free skincare discovery guide, which includes samples of Pond's Nourishing Moisturizer and Pond's Two-in-One cleansers, along with gift certificates totalling $1.50 towards Pond's products, call 1-800-34-PONDS.

Remember: Protect yourself. Wide-brimmed hats and indoor activities have become popular in summer, simply because being healthy has become more chic than looking tanned. Caring for your face now will go a long way to maintaining your skin's elasticity and smoothness for years to come—the best news of all.

Poisons Three—Let Them Be

(NAPS)—Lurking in the woods, along park paths and even at seemingly-friendly residences, three enemies are lying in wait for you and your youngsters: they're poison ivy, poison sumac and poison oak.

For most people, touching these plants will lead to a red and itchy rash. Usually, blisters will form as well. The irritation caused by these poison plants can be spread all over the body—and around the family—unless prompt and proper care is taken.

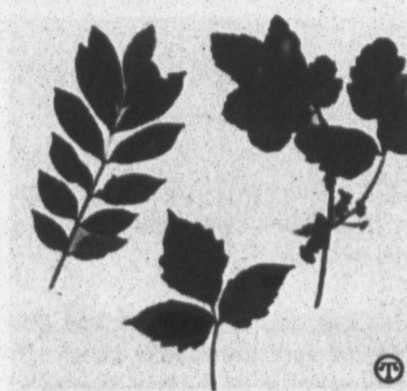

Fortunately, there are a number of things you can do to protect your family from poison plants:

• Teach your youngsters—and remember yourself—to look out for plants that look like those illustrated here and to avoid touching them.

• If you find such plants on your property, don't pick them and don't try burning them out. The smoke can cause more damage to those who breathe it in than can the plants themselves to those who touch them.

• When walking in an infested area, wear boots, heavy socks, long sleeves and cotton gloves.

• If you touch one of these poisonous plants: wash thoroughly with a mild soap using lots of water or with water alone as soon as possible after contact with the plant to help remove the poisonous sap. Clothes and shoes should be handled carefully and washed thoroughly as well to keep them from causing an allergic skin reaction on you or someone else who may contact the contaminated clothes.

• If the rash is severe, contact your physician for treatment. For milder cases, soothe the itching and burning with products available at local stores. Many people turn to Rhuli® Spray, Gel or Cream. They're uniquely formulated to provide penetrating, cooling relief from the itching and pain associated with many common skin irritations, especially poison ivy, poison oak and even insect bites. These products contain no hydrocortisone and can be used on children over two years of age. They can help keep that old ivy from making you climb the walls.

Anyone who wishes to donate to the garage sale can take items by the Lions Hall from August 9 to August 13, or make arrangements to have the items picked up by calling Wilbert Bernabe, 874-2827, or Roberta Pitman, 874-2385 or Billie Shaffer at 874-3287.

Mrs. Shaffer said, "Please help these people by donating your garage sale items. All donations will be appreciated."

Working Smarter and Living Better with Dobson Cellular.

10,000 miles.
For Scott Hahl of Enid, 10,000 isn't the number of miles he racks up in a year. It's how many he drives to and from school every semester.

Scott's Story.
Five days a week, 16 weeks per semester, Scott makes the 150-mile round trip to Northwestern State University in Alva in pursuit of a physical therapy degree; a trek he now makes much more confidently, thanks to his cellular phone and service from Dobson Cellular's sister company, Cellular One.

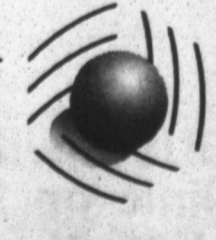

With both the Dobson and Cellular One coverage areas to call upon (and at the same, local air time rate), Scott is never wary of hitting the road, no matter where it may lead.

"When you're on the road two or three hours a day, flat tires, engine problems, bad weather and other delays are going to happen" says Scott. "But I feel much more secure with my cellular phone beside me."

For Scott, Security has its Price: $1 a Day.
Is his phone -- and the peace-of-mind that comes with it -- worth the price?
"Yes, without question. And with my air time plan, I pay about $1 a day, which is definitely worth the security my family and I receive."

A Chili Made For Camping

(NAPS)—If you're a camping enthusiast, you're resourceful, energetic, and up to the challenge of cooking with ingenuity and a few well chosen utensils. From experience you've learned to stock up on multi-use ingredients that team great taste with simple preparation. When a hungry family is waiting for grub after a full day of hiking, biking, swimming or canoeing, supper had better be forthcoming in short order.

Whether you're in the cool of the mountains or on a breeze-swept shore, nothing beats a delicious, soul-satisfying bowl of chili after the sun goes down. Partnered with a pan of corn bread and a simple salad, chili makes a convivial and nourishing meal everyone loves.

The big news is that you can produce a fantastic piquant chili which tastes totally homemade in about 15 minutes from start to finish. The secret? TABASCO 7 Spice Chili Recipe*, a blend of vine-ripened tomatoes, sundrenched peppers, onions, herbs and spices, and just the right amount of TABASCO® pepper sauce. Available in two versions—original (mild) and spicy (for the more adventurous), it's so good it topped a top new product award the year it was introduced.

Here's how to make great one-pot chili in 15 minutes:

Step 1: In a large skillet or heavy casserole, brown 1 pound of ground meat—beef, chicken, turkey or sausage. Drain off the liquid.

Examples include staged auto accidents aimed at producing (usually phony) injury claims; auto theft-related fraud, such as insuring cars that exist only on paper, then reporting them stolen; and arson-for-profit.

"Amateur" fraud is committed by ordinary insurance policyholders who may sincerely believe they're doing nothing wrong.

An Insurance Research Council survey showed 23 percent of Americans believe there's nothing wrong with padding an auto insurance claim to cover collision deductibles. And 20 percent think

Have a hot time on your next camping trip: cook up some TABASCO 7 Spice Chili Recipe.

Step 2: Add 1 16-ounce jar of TABASCO 7 Spice Chili Recipe.

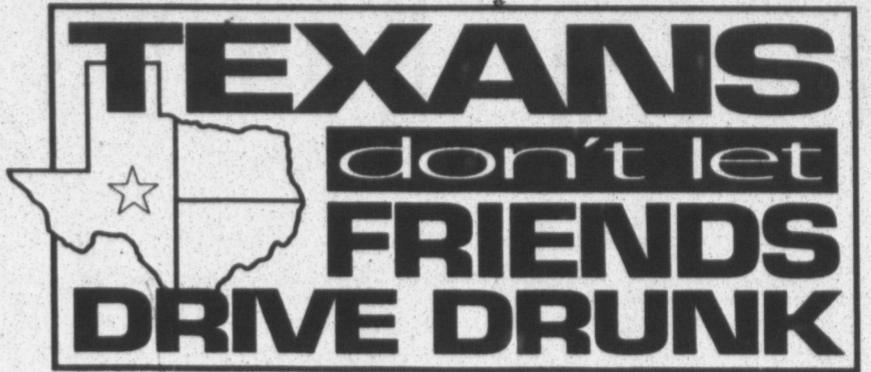

Step 3: Pour in 3/4 cup water, tomato juice or beer.

Step 4: Simmer 10 minutes to blend.

Here's where the versatility comes in. Ladle the chili over crisp corn chips, use it to top blossomed baked potatoes, or spoon it over cooked pasta—Cincinnati-style. Sprinkle with shredded Cheddar cheese. For a great chili dog, top a hot dog in a bun with 1/4 cup prepared chili, or spoon chili on a hamburger bun for a Mexican Sloppy Joe. With all the seasonings included, TABASCO 7 Spice Chili Recipe is a great camping companion. It can be found in the chili or sauce sections of many grocery stores and supermarkets, and is also available from the TABASCO Country Store by calling 1-800-634-9599.

when they had no claims. These folks don't seem to understand that they—and you—end up paying for their dishonesty with higher insurance premiums.

BUDGET STRETCHING IDEAS

We Can Save On Insurance Premiums By Turning In Fraud Artists

(NAPS)—The purpose of insurance is to restore things to the way they were before the claim occurred. The fraud artists want to go beyond that—by making a profit.

There are two types of insurance fraud. "Professional" fraud is usually committed by career criminals, often in league with others who can help create or compound the "incident" that leads to claims.

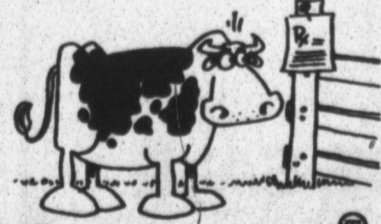

By calling a toll-free number, you may be able to keep insurance costs down for everyone.

it's OK to inflate claims to make up for premiums paid in years

RIDICULOUS BUT TRUE!

Washington, D.C. (NAPS)—The patient has Q fever, a life-threatening condition controlled with tetracycline. With the drug, she can live a fairly normal, active life. Without it, she will suffer and likely die. Seem straightforward? It should be. But for the attending doctor, the case poses a dilemma. Treating the patient with the most beneficial drug—tetracycline—would require this medical professional to break the law. Why?

In this case the patient is a sheep and the doctor, a veterinarian, is prohibited from using tetracycline by the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act (FD&C Act). This Act confines the veterinarian's drug choices to the species and usage specifically dictated by the label. Unfortunately, while tetracycline is available and prescribed for cattle, no comparable drug is labeled for the veterinarian's patient.

Many consumers would like to see the Act amended so veterinarians could use their professional judgment about which FDA-approved drugs to use for each patient—just as doctors who treat humans do.

What's your opinion? You can let your legislators know by writing them at the U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510 and the House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515. (No street address is necessary.)

1993 Property Tax Rates in Clarendon School District

This notice concerns 1993 property tax rates for Clarendon school district. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the school district used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the school district can set before it must hold a rollback election. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes and state funds by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:

Last year's operating taxes	$ 122,558
Last year's debt taxes	$ 44,158
Last year's total taxes	$ 166,716
Last year's tax base	$ 78,598,383
Last year's total tax rate	$.21709 /$100

This year's effective tax rate:

Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 161,415
+ This year's adjusted tax base (after subtracting value of new property)	$ 78,308,930
- This year's effective tax rate	$.20612 /$100
x 1.03 = maximum rate unless the school district publishes notices and holds hearing	$.21230 /$100

This year's rollback tax rate:

School maintenance and operations component	$ 1,040,803
+ This year's tax base	$ 79,855,520
- This year's local maintenance and operating rate	$ 1.30335 /$100
+ $.06 cents = this year's maximum operating rate	$ 1.36335 /$100
+ This year's debt rate	$.05635 /$100
- This year's rollback rate	$ 1.4197 /$100

Farm Focus

Who's Minding The Farm?

Less than two percent of the U.S. population lives on farms today. In 1920, the percentage was 30 percent; and when the U.S. Constitution was signed, the United States was 90 percent farmers.

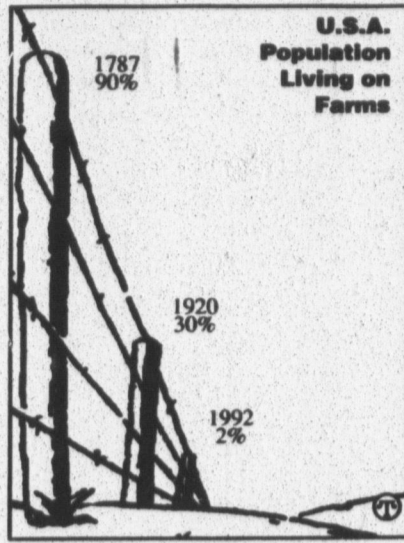

But the grocery stores are always full and the export terminals are always busy. Who's doing all of the work?

In a great feat of productivity improvement, the U.S. economy and its farmers have increased the use of farm machines, improved crop varieties, and scientific pest controls to such an extent that 98 percent of the population can work at thousands of other jobs and buy all of their food at affordable prices. Only 24 cents of each food dollar—both for food eaten at home as well as away from home—goes to pay for the farm value of the food.

Productivity improvements are the foundation of any economy's ability to improve its living standards. By being so productive, each U.S. farmer can feed 94 people in the U.S. plus another 34

Graphic provided by Deere & Company people overseas. Our farmers add immensely to the nation's wealth with every crop.

The U.S. agricultural work force represents just 3 tenths of one percent of the world's agricultural work force, but it produces 12.6 percent of the world's agricultural commodities by value.

Hospices Help Families Care

By Martha A. McSteen
President
The National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare

(NAPS)—Nationwide, about 200,000 patients each year are admitted to hospice programs. Although the number increases steadily each year, public awareness about hospice care is still low.

The purpose of hospice care is to provide a comprehensive range of services to help a patient and family manage a terminal illness.

Those who choose hospice care agree not to seek invasive treatment for their terminal condition other than to control pain.

Hospices provide nursing care, chaplaincy services, home-health aides, physical and occupational therapy, dietary counseling, prescription drugs, medical supplies and equipment.

For seniors who decide on hospice, Medicare's coverage may help. Covered under Medicare Part A, the hospice benefit usually requires only a five percent co-payment on drugs and inpatient nursing home care to give short-term respite to the in-home caregiver.

Additionally, care at home in a hospice program usually is less expensive overall than aggressive treatment as a hospital inpatient or than living in a nursing home.

In addition to Medicare, many private insurance plans cover hospice care.

You can learn more about issues of special concern to older Americans, including Social Security and Medicare, by joining the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, an organization devoted to improving retirement income and health care. Free brochures about the organization and a copy of its magazine are available by writing to: National Committee, 2000 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

Martha A. McSteen is President of the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, the nation's second largest senior advocacy group. She spent 39 years with the Social Security Administration, rising from claims representative to acting Commissioner. As one of the ten original Regional Medicare Administrators, Mrs. McSteen has an understanding of Medicare unique in the nation.

clinical professor of pediatrics at the University of California at Los Angeles and a member of the executive committee of the American Academy of Allergy and Immunology. "There is an effect on growth and behavior. Untreated, an allergy can alter mental, physical and emotional functioning," says Dr. Rachelefsky.

Allergists can properly diagnose your child's runny nose by taking a good medical history, and testing for sensitivity to specific allergens.

Treatment may include allergy immunotherapy—the injection of allergenic extract in gradually increasing amounts over a period of months. Immunotherapy desensitizes the immune system to specific allergens and can help decrease symptoms and prevent further progression of the condition.

Allergies Are Enough To Make You Sick

(NAPS)—Every year for weeks, young Mary snuffles, sneezes, itches and is miserable. What Mary's mom doesn't know is that Mary may be suffering from allergic rhinitis, or hay fever, which plagues 20 percent of Americans.

"When your child seems to always have a runny nose, it may be more than a cold," says Harold S. Nelson, M.D., National Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine, Denver. "Hay fever usually strikes in the spring and fall, when grass, trees, ragweed and other plants pollinate."

Since children are more apt to have allergies than adults, parents should look for signs of recurrent sneezing and itching that tend to be seasonal or fairly regular in recurrence and last for a long period of time. Colds, on the other hand, are usually sporadic and limited in duration, and often associated with body aches, malaise and fever.

If you think you or your child may have allergies, it is important to see an allergist, since hay fever can sometimes lead to asthma or other serious conditions.

Allergies can also interfere with your child's quality of life, says Gary Rachelefsky, M.D.,
