

Dangerous Highway Intersection Gets New Traffic Safety Markers

In response to a request from the Baird Safety Council recently, the State Highway Department is installing more adequate protection for motorists at the intersection of Highways 80 and 283 at the east edge of Baird. Two serious accidents occurred at this intersection during the past few weeks and the highway department was asked to place more warning signs there. The department is going a step farther than was requested and is constructing an island at the approach on 283 where stop signs will be placed in the center of the highway. This will be similar to the stop signs in front of the courthouse, and there will be no excuse for a driver not to see the sign in plenty of time to stop, look both ways, before entering the giant U. S. 80 highway.

The Baird Safety Council, primarily a group of observers of safe practices in this city, has received splendid cooperation from the Texas State Highway Department, and every effort is being made to preserve life and property and to make Baird one of the safest towns of its size in Texas. Outstanding among accomplishments of the Baird Safety Council in its effect is the recent removal of cars from the center of Market Street.

New Voting Box To Be Provided For County Absentee Voters

Callahan, like all other Texas counties, will have one additional voting box this year for the primary and general elections. It will be the county absentee voting box set up under the new State Election Code which revised the procedure for absentee voting. Concerning the new law, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram has this to say:

Under the old election law, absentee ballots were sent by the county clerk on election day to the voting precincts of the voters who cast them. There, they were cast and counted by the precinct election judges and reported along with the other returns from the voting precincts.

The new law provides that absentee ballots shall remain in the county clerk's office and be cast and tallied by a special canvassing board.

Sidewalks to be Paved In Business District

In keeping with the progress of Baird and through the efforts of a committee from the Callahan County Club, new concrete sidewalks will be constructed in the 200 block of Market Street next week. All fronts except two will get the new walks. The project will overcome and do away with the old worn rock walks that have become such a hazard to those who do business in that block, which is the center of business activity in Baird. The two fronts not to get the new walks are owned by an estate which makes it very difficult to obtain authority for the work. It is hoped by leaders of the movement that the estate will be able to join their neighbors and complete the new sidewalk through the entire block.

The contractor will pour the concrete all at one time, which will probably take three days. Business along the walk are contemplating closing for one day to permit the workmen to do their job better and quicker. However, it is not yet determined which day will be the best for this, or that it will be necessary at all. Permit is being sought from the city to park cars in the center of the street instead of parking them at the curb while the work is in progress.

Graham B. Smedley For Supreme Court

HOUSTON — Endorsement of the legal profession was given July 5 to Judge Graham B. Smedley for re-election to the Supreme Court of Texas, Place No. 2.

President Cecil Burney of the State Bar of Texas in reporting the poll, said that "lawyers of the State in an official poll conducted by the State Bar gave Judge Smedley an overwhelming vote of confidence and voted he should be retained on the court by more than a 9 to 1 count."

The vote of the Bar was: Judge Smedley, 5,177. His opponent, 598. Judge Smedley won the endorsement of the attorneys in his home county of Tarrant by a 18-to-1 margin, the vote being 355 to 19.

In Gregg county, Judge Smedley was favored over his opponent by nearly a 3 to 1 margin, the vote being 26 for Smedley to 9 for his opponent, although the county was the home of his opponent.

These figures prove, his supporters said, that Judge Smedley is not only an ideal "layman's lawyer," but he also has the overwhelming respect of the legal profession.

Farm Safety Week Set for July 20 - 26

COLLEGE STATION — Farm and home accidents are creating such a serious problem that President Truman has issued a special proclamation urging farm residents and all persons interested in farm life to observe National Farm Safety Week July 20-26. Estimates just released from the National Safety Council show that 14,500 farm people were accidentally killed last year and 1,250,000 others suffered lost time from injuries.

On Monday, of National Safety Week, programs on home safety will be stressed. Home accidents are costing Americans over $600,000,000 annually, in lost wages, medical expense and insurance overhead. The safe home, for family members and for children to grow up in, is one where the parents are safety conscious and where hazards are corrected.

Accidents in the home may happen because the homemaker is tired. The home management specialists with the Texas Agriculture Extension Service, say its a smart thing to plan devices to save strength and energy. Use the head instead of the feet; don't carry heavy clothes baskets to the line; put the wash in a plastic bag over the shoulder or in a basket on a small cart; save lifting heavy loads and save bending by having work surfaces of the right height.

It's a good idea to make Farm Safety Week last all the year according to the National Safety Council. Remember everyone is important, whether man, woman or child and cannot be replaced. Believe in the dignity of safety. It is worth the time it takes to be safe.

Petry Announces for Congress-at-Large

Herb Petry, Jr.

... Foel of Communism

CARRIZO SPRINGS — Herb Petry, Jr., Carrizo Springs attorney, businessman and past President of Lions International, announces his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Congress-at-Large for the State of Texas.

Petry is president of Dimmit County Bar Association, a director of the Texas Good Roads Association, a member of the Texas Economy Commission and a Steward in the Carrizo Springs Methodist Church.

The candidate states that he is in favor of: legislation to return the tidelands to the State of Texas, soil and water conservation, an economy minded federal administration, adequate national defense, and a domestic policy which would safeguard the nation from insidious attack from within.

Petry also favors strong and definite measures against Communism, the reduction of foreign aid, elimination of waste in government and the early balancing of the federal budget. By accomplishing the former, he believes, the later will be accomplished.

Opposed to additional taxation, this candidate for the important state and federal post states that he favors the reduction of taxes just as quickly as the establishment of national security permits.

It is the belief of the candidate that the man who occupies a position of public trust, either elected or appointed, should be a man of good moral character, one who enjoys the trust and confidence of the people he is to serve.

place for flies, whether actually in the city limits or adjacent to the city, should be removed.

Dr. M. L. Stubblefield spoke briefly at the club meeting to warn people of this area against polio. He said, "We think of polio as being something that people have who live in Houston or Dallas or some other distant city, but Callahan county certainly has had her share of polio. In fact," he continued, "Our per capita record is very bad." He explained that the spread of polio is traced directly to the common house fly, and he urged the people of Baird to clean up all breeding places for flies.

Among the serious conditions and breeding places for flies are pens for holding cows, horses and mules, dogs, hogs, and open toilets. Every resident of the town should inspect their property in advance of the clean-up campaign and see what is needed for a proper clean-up.

Adult Theme Stated in 'Japanese War Bride'

The avid and unending search by film companies for timely and fresh themes meets its latest challenge in "Japanese War Bride," the daringly frank and outspoken romantic drama about a marriage between an Oriental and Occidental, opening Wednesday and Thursday at the Plaza Theatre. Co-starred are the first lady of the Oriental theatre and screen, diminutive and beautiful Shirley Yamaguchi, and the handsome caucasian actor, Don Taylor.

This off-beat feature is seriously and searchingly concerned with the interest-exciting problem of an American GI who returns from war service in Korea and recuperation in a Japanese hospital with his Japanese bride, who nursed him at a Red Cross station in the new democracy not long ago our enemy. Understandably, the boy's parents and friends find it difficult to adjust to the bride he brings back with him to California. It is in the drama of that adjustment of different worlds to one another, and in the learning of the lesson that humanity wears many faces, that "Japanese War Bride" finds its purpose.

Representing Shirley Yamaguchi's initial trek to the United States for picture work, the petite beauty has actually been here many times before and knows English as thoroughly as she does Japanese. She may soon star on Broadway in a new musical called "Messer Marco Polo." She has made a career of playing American films and plays in Japanese versions in her homeland and has done much to popularize American art among her own people.

McKay Opposes Brannan Plan

MIDLAND — Walter McKay, of Fredericksburg, candidate for Texas Commissioner of Agriculture, speaking here today, expressed his firm opposition to the Brannan plan "as advocated by Washington bureaucrats."

"I believe that Texans can operate their own State Department of Agriculture without dictation from Washington bureaucrats and without favoring Socialistic theories such as the infamous Brannan Plan, which would ruin the economy of Texas and the whole nation," said McKay. "If the bureaucrats will just leave Texas farmers alone, our farmers will produce adequate foodstuffs to supply the demand."

"I resigned my position with the Texas Department of Agriculture in 1950, after the election of the present Commissioner, because I could not carry out his Truman-Brannan Fair Deal policies," McKay concluded.

McKay served 22 years in all levels of the department of agriculture. He is 47 years of age and the father of four children. He was born in Guadalupe county and was educated in the public schools of Luling and San Antonio and at Baylor University.

The candidate pointed out that he is a native-born Texan, who was raised on a farm in Caldwell county. He is at present a stock farmer and businessman in Fredericksburg.

By DON H. BIGGERS

"Daylight found us only a short distance from our destination, and on the edge of a long slope that descended to the river. I took my field glasses and carefully scanned the country in every direction, but saw no signs of Indians. I felt greatly relieved and virtually out of danger, so I had the herd turned off of the trail, the wagons stopped and breakfast prepared, for had the Indians intended attacking us they would certainly have done so during the night or been upon us, or at least in sight, by daylight. After breakfast the wagons moved along, the herd was thrown on the trail again and, being thirsty and smelling water, traveled in a swift walk. My feelings of security were now almost as great as my uneasiness had been during the night, the bright cheerful morning had dispelled the gloomy forebodings of the men and they again began singing their lively Spanish songs, which commingled with the chattering and whistling of the flocks of cowbirds and field larks which always hovered about. But notwithstanding this feeling I did not cease to be vigilant. When about six miles from the river I saw, with the aid of my glasses, what seemed to be a cloud of smoke or dust a considerable distance back the trail we had traveled during the night, and after watching it very closely for several minutes, discerned a large body of horsemen, apparently Indians, rapidly approaching. All my fears and apprehensions returned, for I was sure we were being followed and that a fight was certain, and that the only sensible thing to do was to make arrangements accordingly. All the men with the cattle were warned, the herd thrown from the trail and we rushed to the wagons, which had already reached the bank of the river, and began making all possible preparations to resist an attack. Where the fight occurred the river makes a small but almost perfect horseshoe bend, and fortunately for us, there was a heavy rise, the red, muddy waters whirling and swirling from bank to bank, and for a man to have ventured into that flood would have meant certain destruction, consequently the Indians could not cross the river and get in our rear, but must make a front attack. Another fortunate circumstance was that the Indians did not charge the wagons immediately, but dashed into the herd and spent several minutes killing cattle and endeavoring to stampede the horses, and this respite enabled us to make many necessary preparations to give them a warm reception.

"The wagons were drawn in a semi-circle across the crossing, the mules were unhitched, but not unharnessed, and turned loose, and bedding, boxes, sacks of flour and everything that would in any degree turn bullets and serve as a breastworks was piled under the wagons and between the spokes, and a few yards back of this we dug a small ditch, which was not a very difficult job, owing to the soft, sandy character of the soil, and in this ditch we took refuge, knowing the wagons would break the force of a charge. Owing to the large number of extra guns and the great amount of ammunition, each man went into the trench with from three to eight loaded guns and several extra rounds of ammunition, yet there were nearly two hundred of the Indians well armed and well mounted, and I really had no hopes of making a successful defense. Ten of my men had never been in an Indian fight, were excited and scared—in fact, almost panic-stricken. Had they all been experienced Indian fighters I should not have been at all apprehensive as to the outcome. I told the men that their lives depended upon their coolness and courage and the amount of execution they did; that they must obey my orders and must not shoot until I gave the order to do so, and then shoot to kill.

"After the Indians tired of killing cattle, they rode to a point where they could be easily seen from our entrenchment, and about fifty of them left the main body, riding slowly and shooting occasionally. Then, breaking into a fast run, whooping, yelling and firing an almost continuous volley, they came dashing toward us. I glanced along the line of men on either side of me and felt considerably relieved, for their fear and excitement had given way to grim determination. Every gun was in readiness, every eye was glancing down a gun barrel pointed at the approaching demons and not a nerve seemed to quiver. The Indians' fire was not returned until they approached close enough for us to do proper execution. I then gave the command to fire and every gun boomed at once, and the men continued to shoot as fast and accurately as possible. This checked, but did not stop the Indians, who made a desperate effort to pass the wagons, but the steep banks of the river and the high water stopped them, after which they resorted to their circling tactics, but we killed so many of their number and horses that they soon beat a hasty retreat. They left sixteen dead horses just in front of our wagons, but succeeded in carrying away all dead and wounded Indians. They had inflicted severe punishment upon us. Juan Gonzales, one of the men who had been with me in the Adobe Walls fight, and upon whom I placed my greatest reliance in this trouble, was killed; another one of the men was mortally wounded, and I was slightly crippled in the arm.

"As it afterward developed, Dull Knife, chief of the Comanches and one of the worst products that tribe ever produced was in charge of this band, and the failure of the first attempt not only enraged him, but made him more cunning and cautious. He sent one body of Indians to the left and another to the right, both bunches protecting themselves as much as possible by creeping from one sandhill or small mound to another until they got within range of the wagons and then began mercilessly shelling our position, and continued to do so for a considerable time. Once in a while we could get in a shot, but for the most part we were more than content to lay low in the ditch. As a result of this assault, the wagon sheets were riddled and torn to pieces, the bedding and boxes under the wagons were filled with holes, while thousands of bullets whistled over us, but not one of our party was scratched.

"After some time the flanking parties ceased firing and occasionally displayed themselves in a manner calculated to draw our fire, but I understood their scheme and did not fall into their plans. The main body of the Indians was still in our front and their idea was to have us empty our guns, waste our ammunition and concentrate our attention on the flanking parties, and at a time when we were unprepared and off our guard they would dash upon us. The wary old chief, realizing that his ruse had failed, decided to make a desperate, over-powering effort, so he signaled the flanking parties to keep up a continuous fire while he with the main body came charging toward us. It was a magnificent and awe-inspiring spectacle, those hundred or more Indians in war paint and plumes, mounted on beautiful, fleet-footed horses, five or six feet apart, in single file, yelling, brandishing their guns and riding at full speed toward us, while the bullets of the flanking parties whistled above and rained about us. We gave no heed to the flanking parties, but as soon as the main body got reasonably close, turned loose on them. At our first volley a number of Indians and horses went down, the others halted and seemed confused, but while our bullets spat and whistled among them they closed their ranks, began firing and came dashing on. It looked as though they would succeed in passing the wagons, but our fire was so rapid, constant and destructive that when only a few feet from the wagons they wheeled and once more beat a hasty retreat, leaving nine dead Indians and several dead horses in sight. We had sustained no damage other than a few other additional bullet holes in the wagon beds, wagon sheets, bedding and boxes. It was now getting late in the evening, the men, who had not slept for thirty-six hours were becoming exhausted, discouraged and demoralized, the ammunition in the ditch was getting scarce, and as the Indians soon approached again and began firing rapidly, it was impossible to send a man to the wagons for a fresh supply, so we simply lay quiet, awaited developments and trusted to chance. Under cover of their heavy fire a few of the Indians would dash up, tie a rope around the foot of a dead Indian and drag him away. I then understood that they had enough of the fight for the present at least, and that what they now wanted was to carry away their dead. It was certainly a temptation to shoot these adventurous redskins, but I held the Mexicans down by telling them that if they killed any more of them it would only make matters worse, for the Indians would have their dead or harass us all night, and a daylight fight was all we could attend to properly.

"When night came the dead had all been taken away and not an Indian was to be seen, but knowing what to expect, we stood guard all night, and a solemn, gloomy vigil it was. Behind the trench lay the dead man wrapped in a blanket, the wounded man moaned in agony, while his companions ministered to his sufferings in every way possible under the circumstances, and my wound was paining me considerably. The bullet riddled wagon sheets flapped about the broken bows, and every breath of wind whispered a mournful dirge. Save the lashing waters, the moans of the dying man, the occasional whisper, an oppressive silence reigned and the very air seemed charged with impending disaster.

"Daylight came at last, but not an Indian was in sight, only our own horses and cattle scattered throughout the valley, along the hillside and the river banks. About sunrise the wounded died and we buried both the dead men on the right bank of the river near the spot they had sacrificed their lives defending. We then prepared breakfast, after which we rounded up the stock, and the river having fallen sufficiently, crossed the herd and reached Fort Dodge late in the evening.

"The Indians had killed about two hundred head of our cattle and several horses, and these, added to their own dead stock, made a field of carnage that ought to have at least partially satisfied a savage's thirst for slaughter.

"While on the Fort Sill reservation some time after the Lone Tree fight, I became acquainted with Sun Boy, a sub chief and participant in the Lone Tree fight, and got some information from him that I had longed to obtain. I asked him why they had not molested us during the night or at least kept us in siege for some time, and he said it was because they had escaped from the reservation, knew the soldiers would follow them and consequently they had no time to tarry long in one place. He would scarcely believe me when I told him that after their first charge I had only eleven men left, and that when they dashed so near the wagons the second time I was sure we were gone. He said the number of wagons and the rapidity with which we fired caused the Indians to think there were at least forty in our crowd, and consequently they were not anxious to pass the wagons and engage in a hand to hand encounter. He then asked me how eleven men could load their guns so quickly and fire so rapidly, and when I told him that each man had from three to eight guns he looked like the victim of a lost opportunity, grunted a few times and then said: 'Huh, you fool Injun! Heap gun, shoot all time. Injun think him heap cowboys; get scared, go way! Huh, d-n!'

"And when I further told him that nine of the men left after the first charge were tenderfoot and had never been in an Indian fight, the 'noble red man' seemed humiliated beyond endurance, but presently his face lighted up as though a revelation had come to his rescue and after a few grunts and chuckles he said:

"'Maybe so you talk heap lie to me all time. Him no tenderfoots. Tenderfoots no shoot like that. Tenderfoot shoot all time, no hit much. Cowboy heap shoot, hit all time. Him Cowboys. You no fool me,' and I never convinced him to the contrary."

Serving Others Disperses Fright

TWELVE YEARS AGO, says Miss Marguerite Perry, Clanton, Alabama, she met one of the most desperately unhappy boys she has ever known.

She was working at the Alabama Baptist Children's Home in Troy, when there came a knock on the door of her room. Opening it she found a young lad of 14, whom we will call John, who lived in one of the nearby cottages.

The boy was very much upset and could not control his tears. She invited him in and persuaded him to talk with her, only to learn that he was in such distress that he wasn't sleeping at night. He didn't really want to talk over what troubled him, but she induced him to tell her what was worrying him, saying she couldn't possibly help him unless she knew the source of his distress. Finally, after she had made him realize that she was his friend and that she would consider his story confidential, he said that he could not think of anything else at night except a scene in which his father kill his mother and then kill himself.

Miss Perry made him realize that this was something in which he had had no hand and told him there was just one way to overcome his distress: to do something for someone else every time the subject came to his mind. She encouraged him to go on long hikes on Saturday afternoons, and during the rest of the week to tire himself physically so he would fall asleep despite himself. And that was all; advice so simple that anyone could follow it.

Shortly after that, Miss Perry left and began teaching in Clanton. To her great and happy surprise one day she found John singing in one of the church choirs, being enrolled as a student in the University engineering school. He had conquered his worry and his sleeplessness, and had achieved a peaceful mental attitude in doing for others.

"We are getting along about as usual," he said, "barely making the income pay the bills." Sometime we get to wondering if the city would not be better off financially without the municipal light plant. If the light plant only breaks even under present operation, will it make more or lose more if it had all the business. This is something for the citizens to think about for the next couple of years. West Texas Utilities Company's franchise expires in 1955. There will probably be a decision as to whether the City Council will renew the West Texas Utilities franchise and continue the friendly competition, or to deny its renewal and order the company to remove itself from the city. In whatever manner the proposition is handled, the people of Baird should know true facts and figures. After all, the taxpayer is the fellow most affected, and he should know and understand how his interest is being cared for by those in authority.

An Opportunity For The Voters

This newspaper is very interested in the fact that friends of L. R. Pearson, of Ranger, have filed his name as a candidate for Representative of the 76th Legislative District of Texas, comprising Eastland, Callahan, and Shackelford counties.

The office of State Representative is one of the lowest paid, but one of the most important in our state. On an average this office pays less than $700 per year—$10 per day for the first 120 days and $5 thereafter—while the legislature is in session. The legislature meets every two years and usually remains in session from 120 to 150 days. The members are required to pay their own expenses. The kind of state government we will have for the next two years will be determined in a large measure, but the kind and character of men elected to the 53rd Legislature. The Legislature truly runs Texas. It not only makes our laws, but levies our taxes and spends the money.

When a man of Pearson's ability is willing to make the personal and financial sacrifice required by such an office it is indeed an opportunity for the voters of the district to cast their ballots in his favor. He served the 107th District (Eastland and Callahan) in three sessions of the Legislature, and it is generally conceded that the district has never been more ably represented. He has sponsored some of the most wholesome and beneficial legislation the states has experienced in the last six years. In the 1952 Legislature he carried one of the heaviest committee assignments in the House, including the committees on State Affairs, Judiciary, Oil, Gas, and Mining and two minor committees.

His keen insight and foresight in government affairs are well known to those who know him best, and no one has a better knowledge of the needs of the state and the district than has Pearson. He is a successful attorney, business man and independent oil operator whose advice is sought in every walk of life. He has been closely associated with the civic development of his home town, county and state. He is conservative and retiring by nature, and his friends filed his name because of his proven ability. He is thoroughly versed in affairs of state, and has a first hand knowledge of the workings of the Legislature. His judgment is sound and fair and of the "down to earth" variety. He is a positive character and not easily swayed by fads and trends, but clings to the sounder principles on which our government was founded. He is a man of balanced judgment, thoroughly Democratic and opposed to socialistic trends in our state and national government, and again we say, it is a privilege for the 76th District to be represented in the Texas Legislature by L. R. Pearson.

This newspaper has adopted the policy of steering clear of partisan politics. But in the interest of good, sound government, if Mr. Pearson permits his name to remain on the ticket, this newspaper will be found in his corner.

SHIVERS AGIN AUTO INSPECTION LAW; "SHALL CHANGE IT OR REPEAL IT" He Says

By Ben Kaplan, Press Staff Writer

Governor Allan Shivers today said that the new auto inspection law should either be modified or repealed.

His idea is to take the red tape and confusion out of the law. "The law was intended to bring about real safety and not inconvenience," said Governor Shivers.

"We need to stop killings on the highways. Texas has become the number one State in the United States for murder on the highways.

"The Legislature passed this inspection law by a vote of 117 to 12 in the House of Representatives and 19 to 9 in the State Senate, with the thought that it would save more than 200 Texas lives each year. If the law fails to do this and instead causes confusion and inconvenience, it ought to be changed or repealed."

The Governor said that he would recommend to the next session of the Legislature that it re-study and examine this law in view of the experience and either modify or repeal it.

(Several months ago, when it became apparent that the new law was causing inconvenience and confusion, Governor Shivers ordered it suspended until it can be reviewed by the Legislature.)

OMAR BURKETT

—Candidate For—
State Representative District 76
Comprised of Callahan, Eastland, and Shackelford Counties

IT BEING IMPOSSIBLE to meet and talk with each voter in this three-county district, I take this method of giving you my views on certain public issues that will come before the 53rd session of the Legislature to convene next January, 1953. In addition to former statements made upon announcing my candidacy which appeared in each newspaper in the district, I wish to make this further statement:

1. There is so much confusion regarding the teachers' certificate law that a new certificate law should be written. I shall favor a law written in such plain language that the teachers and the people as well, can make certain of its meaning.
2. I favor continued support of our Junior College program and adequate salaries for the teaching profession, especially the class room teachers.
3. I shall oppose the movement to abolish the 21-member State Board of Education which is now elected by the people, same to be substituted by an appointive board with main office in Austin.
4. It is reasonably sure that the Federal Government will add an extra $5.00 per month to the needy aged. I shall favor necessary legislation to make it possible to match same with State Funds.
5. The New Matter in the election code (House Bill 6) should be amended. The proponents and sponsors of this measure stated that the Bill would purify Texas politics and put the government back in the hands of the people, yet, it has developed that the results of the first election held under this new code, has developed into a State-wide and National scandal.
6. Briefly repeating my former statement: I shall favor the out-right repeal of the "Car Inspection Law." It is indeed an added, unjust burden on the people.
7. I favor the repeal of the "Car Insurance Law," or radically changing its provisions by amendment so as to make it fair and just to all car owners alike.
8. I favor retaining our present Rural Road Program and that our local roads and local road fund be kept under county control.
9. I shall oppose any effort to set aside the "Road Bond Assumption Act," which has meant so much to each county of the District and area.
10. I shall oppose a State Bond Issue for any purpose. I am opposed to any new tax levies or increasing present rates as I am fully convinced that the present levies of around two million dollars daily will more than meet expenses, make necessary improvements for State Agencies, and lay up an emergency balance.

These are My Principles—I shall steadfastly follow same, as is known by my past official record. On this I solicit your vote and help in this campaign.

Sincerely yours,
OMAR BURKETT

Blast Mutilates Fish Dynamiter

AUSTIN — A Texas man paid a frightful penalty for trying to dynamite fish, according to a report to the Executive Secretary of the Game & Fish Commission.

The man was standing nude beside a creek. He held a stick of dynamite which had been lighted. He apparently thought the fuse was not ignited.

The blast blew off his left arm above the wrist, as well as his right thumb and forefinger, and damaged the remaining fingers. It tore a large wound in his left leg. Part of the charge perforated his abdomen and caused other severe injuries. No charge was filed.

CHICAGO, HERE WE COME

"Paula," Starring Loretta Young, Coming to Plaza Theatre Sunday and Monday

The story of a woman with a secret she can neither share nor keep is told in Columbia Pictures' "Paula," starring Loretta Young and featuring Kent Smith and Alexander Knox. "Paula" opens Sunday and Monday at the Plaza Theatre.

Miss Young plays the title role or Paula, a young wife, envied and adored, who learns she cannot bear children. One night, hurrying from a doctor's office to a party at which her educator-husband is guest of honor, she is unable to avoid hitting a small orphaned boy, Davey. A rancher rushes the boy to a hospital, and Paula, following him in her car, loses him in traffic. The rancher tells the police than an unknown "drunken hit-and-run woman driver" is responsible for the accident.

Paula is unable to turn herself in to the police, afraid the resultant scandal will ruin the career of her husband. With the help of her doctor and friend, she takes Davey, mute as a result of the accident, into her home and starts teaching him to regain his speech. The childless couple learns to love the boy and plans to adopt him. Davey suddenly realizes Paula is responsible for his condition. Despite his seeming hatred of her, Paula works harder to teach the boy to speak the words she thinks will destroy both her marriage and her new and prideful motherhood.

Kent Smith appears as the husband of Paula, while Alexander Knox plays the doctor and family friend. The new film offers an unusual role to young Tommy Rettig, who plays the boy.

Price Daniel Files Reply Brief In Major Oil Companies Suit

Attorney General Price Daniel Thursday filed in Judge Charles O. Betts' 98th District Court of Travis County, Texas, the State's reply brief to the brief heretofore filed by the defendant major oil companies in the State's antitrust suit pending against Arkansas Fuel Oil Company, Cities Service Oil Company, Magnolia Petroleum Company, Standard Oil Company of Texas, The Texas Company, Sinclair Refining Company, and Phillips Petroleum Company for alleged violation of the State's antitrust laws since July, 1946.

Daniel filed his original suit against the above named oil companies and refineries and marketers of gasoline on February 21, 1949. Thereafter, at Daniel's request a pre-trial hearing was held in Judge Charles O. Bett's District Court between May 16, 1949 and May 25, 1949. Also heard at this same time was the plea of privilege of the defendant Magnolia Petroleum Company to move the State's suit against it to Dallas county.

or about July 29, 1946, the ten defendant oil companies had combined their capital, skill, and acts to fix, increase, and maintain uniform prices on gasoline for sale in Texas filling stations. Daniel also alleged 'agreed uniform and non-competitive' prices with respect to crude oil purchased in Texas was a part of the alleged combination and conspiracy existing among the defendants to fix, establish, and maintain uniform tank wagon prices on gasoline.

The brief this day filed by Daniel and his staff is the reply brief ordered and authorized to be filed by Judge Betts. It is expected that Judge Betts will in the near future set the case for further pre-trial hearing and trial on the merits.
