Some of our men had the good fortune to shoot and kill a pelican, a most disgusting sea fowl that lives on fish, and having a large pouch in fish and hav dreaming of soups and milk or something to sustain life. We had a little sick boy, Larcy Griffeth, now more than sixty years of age, who also craved food. The bird was boiled and the boy promised the meat, but I not caring for the meat craved the soup, worth more to me than its weight in gold. When, to my astonishment, the boy was in tears for fear "Aunt Mary would eat all the meat."
