BROWNWOOD SCHOOLS READY FOR OPENING OF FOOTBALL SEASON

Practice sessions for the 1935 football teams of the two local colleges are scheduled to start the first part of next week in preparation for the opening games of the season, little more than two weeks off. Both teams are facing heavy schedules this year, but with many of last year's lettermen returning prospects seem bright for a successful season for both the Daniel Baker Billies and the Howard Payne Yellow Jackets. Brownwood High Lions have been working out for the past two weeks.

The Billies have one letterman for each position with the exception of one tackle. Travis (Pete) Roach, 1935 captain, will head the team with Norman (Beans) Morris serving as co-captain. Other lettermen from the 1934 squad will be Bill Trammell and Tommy Webb, guards, Orville Adams, tackle; Frank Coker, end; Medford Conner, quarterback; John Little, fullback; Charles Chrane and S. J. Howard, halfbacks.

Squadmen returning will be: Fred Sailings, guard; Hubert Davenport, tackle; Jake McCulley, end; Nolan Oliver, tackle; Scott Whitaker, center or tackle; J. P. Payne, half back; and "Bull" Durham, end.

Sophomores asked to report are: Glenn Wagner, San Angelo, guard; Randall McLelland, Harlingen, tackle; Davey Carroll, Coleman, tackle; Grady Whitehead, Brownwood, tackle; Woodrow Red, Harlingen, end; Chester Paris, Brownwood, end; Alvin Stanford, Hillsboro, halfback; Kara Newton, Hamilton, full; Phillip Barnhart, Harlingen, back: Ernest Skiles, Brownwood, back.

Two graduates of Ranger Junior College are also expected to report on the tenth and both are considered likely contenders for Varsity duty. One is a 195-pound back and the other is a 175-pound end.

Coach Gene Taylor refuses to make any predictions about his team's chances for winning conference honors this year.

Coach McAdoo Keaton of the Howard Payne Yellow Jackets will have fifteen lettermen on which to build his 1935 machine. Gervis Archer, quarterback, and Ray O'Brien, center, will captain the Jack-ets.

Other lettermen returning in addition to Archer and O'Brien are Vickers, center; Clovis Fletcher, guard; John Dyer, Willford Chew, and Robert Simmons, tackles; "Ox" West, Houston Wedeman and Albert Whitehead, ends; Ray Nunnally, Bob Harlow, Brady Thomas, Jim Marshall and Eugene Sunderman, backs.

Lettermen returning to play with the Lions this year are James Thomason, Lynn Clardy and E. Crow, backs; Wall, guard; Oscar Paris, end, and John Swaggerty, end or tackle. Damon Vernon, guard, and Stephens, back, are the outstanding prospects from last year's crop of ineligible.

The Lions start the season with no captain. One will be appointed for each game until the team decides that one member is worthy for election.

With last year's record of not a single scoring behind them this year's team is starting from zero to make their 1935 season's record. However the coaches have a normal amount of material on hand, and supporters of the Lions hope to see a number of touchdowns made before Turkey Day and the close of the season.

Robert Grant, Harold Barham and Osborn Little, Miller, Bounds, Chrane and Grant are backs. Coach Keaton is counting on only a few sophomores being of much help this year. These include McDonald, McGinty, Galloway, Sunderman and Barbes, all linemen.

"Nig" McCarver, former Howard Payne star athlete, will assist Keaton in coaching the team which will have for its goal conference championship.

Coaches Pat Cagle and Mac Miller of Brownwood High School have been working a squad of between thirty and forty daily for the past two weeks. Official practice season for the high school players opened Tuesday.

Seven Rehearsals, but Worth It

There doesn't seem to be anything very bad about Bing Crosby's wailing technique in this picture, but it seems King and the boys don't want to go through this scene seven times before the director was satisfied. Maxine Bing was just playing dumb, and who could blame him?

A Message To You

Mr. Farmer and Mr. Ranchman:

It is about the time of year when you market your yearly commodities of cotton, corn, feed, wool and mohair. When you market your cotton, wool and mohair, are you going to sell your cotton and mohair to the buyer for a cent or cent and a half per pound less than the market on it just because the buyer is a personal friend of yours? Of course you are not.

Then when you buy your lumber why jeopardize your buying power and pay more by letting personal friendship intervene?

CIVIL WAR VETERAN WHO LIVED HERE IS SUBJECT OF SKETCH

An interesting sketch of the experiences of J. W. Cottrell, Confederate veteran from College Place, South Carolina, who is attending the Confederate reunion in Amarillo this week, appeared in a recent issue of the Columbia (S. C.) State. Mr. Cottrell formerly lived in Texas and his life is closely identified with the history of the early days of Texas. Following the convention he plans to remain in Texas for an extended visit to old friends in this state.

The story of his days as a soldier and peace officer as it appeared in The State follows:

J. W. Cottrell, who lives in College Place, is an interesting character. Eighty-three years of age, he has seen days of frontier-expansion and fighting between the states. Mr. Cottrell has been here since 1917 and is now in monumental work. He is going to Amarillo, Texas, to the national Confederate reunion in September. Mr. Cottrell is well known in Texas, where he served with the Rangers under Captain Bill McDonald.

He was carried to the Comanche country when very young from his native state of Alabama. Texas then was "wild and woolly" and Mr. Cottrell saw much fighting in molding frontier. His father, J. A. Cottrell, was captain of a militia company in Alabama during the war and after the War Between the States moved to Texas and settled in a colony there, inhabited mostly by people from Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina.

In 1877, he was with a band of buffalo hunters. Later he worked in the dangerous Panhandle region as a cowboy, driving cattle across the plains. During the War Between the States he served as a guide for the Fifteenth Alabama cavalry at the age of 14. For this work he is recognized in Alabama now as a Confederate veteran. During the war he was arrested and kept in prison by Union soldiers.

After working as a cowboy he then became a Ranger serving as a peace officer during the time when Sam Bass, John Wesley Hardin and the Dalton Gang made Texas red with bloodshed. He has seven bullet marks in his body as a memento of his peace activities in Texas.

Mr. Cottrell was instrumental in breaking up the Wall-Brookes-Roberts feud in San Augustine county and assisted in breaking up the incipient Garza revolution. He also saw service in Old Mexico and drifted to the Panama canal.

He was captured by Villa soon after the punitive expedition of Pershing and kept in a Chihuahua jail for four and one-half months as a suspect.

Mr. Cottrell says that he has always loved Confederate veterans due to the fact that he had a son, J. M. Cottrell, who died in 1902, and spent his life in hospital work for the veterans. His son's death was due to germs contracted while treating the Confederate veterans. He is buried in Austin, Texas, and appreciative veterans have placed a marker above his grave in honor of his devoted service to them.

Mr. Cottrell is active for his age and his keen, keen eyes will look you straight in the face. His deep-lined face denotes the vigorous and courageous life he has lived.

This pioneer Indian fighter, ranger, deputy marshal, scout, fighter, is now willing to settle down to a "quiet life."

Now that the city elections are a long way off, both in the past and the future, and it could not be presumed that there is anything personal in the discussion, seems an opportune time to bring forward a suggestion that seems to us to have much merit. That is, the possibility of the City of Brownwood having a city-wide primary election, preceding the annual general election now provided, in which the two high candidates would be contenders for the position.

A City Primary

The primary idea is not new to voters, it having been in vogue for a decade or so in the State elections. There it has worked fairly satisfactorily—to much greater benefit to the State than the old system whereby the high candidate is the winner. To be true, the State primary is a mechanism of the Democratic party, whereby the winner in the second primary becomes the party nominee, but the fact that Texas is a one-party State makes the State system similar to that which would exist within the city—the general election taking place of the second primary.

As a matter of fact, city primaries are not unknown in Texas, a number of cities having employed the system to their advantage for several years. Houston is one city that comes to mind as well satisfied with the primary election preceding the general city election. Other smaller cities also hold primaries, and seemingly are sufficiently satisfied with results to continue the practice.

There are many advantages to the primary. While Brownwood voters have been singularly successful in selecting efficient and quite satisfactory city officials, it does not necessarily hold that such always will be the case. With a number of candidates offering for any office, it is entirely possible that a well organized minority group might be able to place their man in office against the desires of the majority of the voters.

With a preliminary primary election, such could not be the case. Even though the minority candidate should place first in the primary, voters would have a second opportunity to vote on the two high candidates, and select the more suitable. The whole system is more in line with the Democratic principle of majority rule than is the wide-open general election.

Very likely it would be necessary for the city to secure an amendment to the charter under which it is operating in order to be permitted to hold the primary—or at least before it could be effective. The charter provides for a general election once a year, and while not specifically denying the council the right to hold a city primary election, qualifying provisions in the charter would render the primary ineffective. The section describing the official ticket in the general election, for example, sets forth that the City Secretary "shall place thereon the names of all persons who may present or cause to be presented their names as candidates for such office, on or before two days prior to such election." Obviously this section would have to be changed, and in making the necessary amendment it would be just as easy to provide for the primary election.

The Banner believes that such a reform in city election procedure would be a definite step for an improved method of selecting city officials, and suggests that the City Council, now that the election is far distant, give serious consideration to such a proposal.

To the plea of the Coleman County Chronicle and the Brownwood Bulletin, that "sound system" ballyhoo from automobiles be abated, The Banner adds a fervent "Amen" and a prayer for success to these two journals.

Less Noise, Please

The Coleman newspaper complains that the action of an unnamed Brownwood merchant in sending a sound truck into Coleman to disturb them with announcements from the streets, and The Bulletin suggests that this is a means of creating ill will toward Brownwood.

This is all true enough, and the point is well taken. But there is a more important consideration. That is the peace of mind of those people who come to Brownwood to do business and while shopping must listen to the jargon of music and sales talks shouted through the skies. Not to mention us lesser souls who live here and must of necessity listen to each appeal without fear or favor.

It is bad enough with one sound wagon pouring forth its praise of merchandise through the air, but when, as recently was the case, two such meet at a street intersection and each endeavors to drown out the other by shrieking louder, it's time to pass a law.

Saving of inestimable damage to the city is credited by the Brady Standard to the Brady Creek levee and the deepening of Brady Creek channel following the floods of 1930. But for the flood protection work done by the city a few years ago, the rains of Monday night, which reached a total of 10 inches in some parts of McCulloch County, would have visited destruction on the city.

Brady's Downpour

Fortunately, little damage was done by the heavy rains, according to the Brady paper, and fears expressed in Brownwood Tuesday were without foundation. Incidentally, at least twice since the construction of the Lake Brownwood dam this city similarly has been prevented from sustaining heavy flood losses.

Prevention again has been proved a better virtue than cure, and we are happy to know that serious damage was prevented. Laconic Harry Schwenker, editor of the Brady Standard, reports: "One of the most damaging results of a flood appears to be the great display by the male citizenship of shirts and shanks—none of which may be said to be very beautiful."

RELAXING

Can you relax? To relax means to slacken, and relaxation does just that to human beings, it slackens them. Some individuals grow more tense as the day grows rushing hither and yon, tremendously busy with tremendous trifles. Seven days a week is this program enacted until haste becomes a habit. Tension is a foe to modern living. Business folk often start the day tensely by trying to do two things at once—reading the morning paper while eating breakfast. The whole goal of American living seems to be to save time. We eat faster, we drive faster, which means we really live faster, all to save time.

Much of the work of the world becomes an endurance test in seeing how long we can hold on, because of tenseness and rigidity that comes of gaining it, and the arch enemy of the human race appears on our horizon, horns, hoof and tail, in the shape of Fatigue. Normal fatigue is nature's way of calling one's attention to the speed limit as a protective measure from driving too fast. She takes this way to assert her own rights. If this sign is unheeded she sends a danger signal which one cannot ignore, in the shape of over fatigue. Over fatigue claims a tremendous toll from the human race in the form of health efficiency and joy, and leaves in their places strained nerves, poor or half-done work, worry and irritability. Physicians tell us that ten minutes daily, complete relaxation, mind blank, body limp, on couch, with or without sleep, preferably after lunch, recreates body and soul with renewed energy and outlook on life for the other half of the day. It is an art, however, and how to do it successfully must be learned like learning to play a violin. Relaxation of this sort should be planned in a day's regular schedule like meals are planned, for it is of equal importance to mind and body. If ignored, accumulative fatigue comes sneaking up behind us and insidiously undermines us at our daily tasks. Unaware of its harmful influence we keep on, keeping on until some day we fall to appear at our accustomed place and the physician says sadly, "Too bad, too late, this is a nervous breakdown." Think this over in the next ten minutes rest, repose, renew, revivify and rejoice, through relaxation.

CCC BOYS ENROLLED

A total of 15 boys from Coleman and McCulloch counties was enrolled here for CCC service Tuesday by Lieutenant Paul Ivanich, commanding officer at the CCC camp at Lake Brownwood, and members of his staff. The boys were sent to the CCC camp at Littlefield.

MARK TWAIN'S WAR PRAYER

(Pt. Worth Star-Telegram) Mark Twain's "War Prayer," only recently published for the first time, was written 30 years ago, when the great humorist was 70 years old. He considered it one of the best things he had written, saying: "I have told the truth in that prayer, but only dead men are entitled to tell the truth in this world. It can be published after I am dead."

This is the prayer: "Oh Lord our God, help us to tear their youth to bloody shreds with our shells; help us to cover their smiling fields with the pale forms of their patriot dead; help us to drown the thunder of the guns with the moans of their wounded, writhing in pain; help us to lay waste their humble homes with a hurricane of fire; help us to wring the hearts of their widows with unavailing grief; help us to turn them out roofless with their little children to wander unfriended through the wastes of their desolated land in rags and hunger and thirst, sport of the sun flames of Summer and the ice winds of Winter, broken in spirit, worn with travail, imploring Thee for the refuge of the grave and denied it—for our sakes who adore Thee, Lord, blast their hopes, blight their lives, protract their bitter pilgrimage, make heavy their steps, water their way with their tears, stain the white snow with the blood of their wounded feet! We ask of One who is the spirit of love and who is the ever faithful refuge and friend of all that are sore beset, and seek His aid with humble and contrite hearts. Grant our prayer, O Lord, and Thine shall be the praise and honor and glory, now and forever. Amen."

GOAT RENS AMUCK

A wandering milch goat ran through a large plate glass window at Patterson Motor Company Monday, shattering it. The goat was uninjured, but the glass was unharmed. Charley Bean, pound man, took the goat in charge.

Stephenville—"Alfalfa won't grow here," is a statement often heard in Erath county, according to Mark Buckingham, county agricultural agent.

"Yet E. W. Bradley sowed four acres of alfalfa late in April in 1934 and although drouth hit fast summer, he harvested three cuttings this year totalling more than seven tons," Buckingham said.

Another man in this county, O. O. Gain, seeded 10 acres to alfalfa in the spring of 1933. This year he has harvested twenty-two and one-half tons from three cuttings and has a growth at present some 10 inches high. He plans to thresh seed from the next cutting.

She dyed some scraps of ratine in the water where one-half gallon of rusty nails had been boiled.

The light brown ratine was used to make slip covers for the cushions of wicker chairs. In order to give a tailored appearance to the cushions a heavy cord was stitched around the boxing. "The harmonizing light cushions make the bedroom look light and cool for summer time," Mrs. Jones commented.

Olton—Eight out of 12 grape vine cuttings set out in a permanent location last winter by Mrs. Ray Bartelee, farm-food supply demonstrator of the Center Home Demonstration Club of Lamb county, have survived and are growing.

Mrs. Bartelee says that she took the cuttings from a neighbor's vines, turned them up-side down in a hole deep enough to cover them, covered the cuttings with dirt and kept them moist for several weeks.

The cuttings were then taken up, turned over and set out with their buds upright.

San Augustine—"I have four gallons of cucumbers in brine curing now, and have started four gallons more," said Mrs. A. N. Sowell, farm-food supply demonstrator for Norwood Home Demonstration club of San Augustine county.

"The packing brine preserves the cucumbers so that there is no waste or loss," she explained, "and they may be used at any time later for pickles."

George West—Two trench silos have just been filled with red-top cane by Reeves Brown of Booth community in Live Oak county.

Each of Mr. Brown's silos will hold 350 tons of feed. Mr. Brown estimates his land will produce 19 tons of green feed per acre. Feeding at the rate of 35 pounds a day per head of livestock, one acre will produce enough feed to last one animal 571 days.

"I have used these same silos for the past 12 years and found that more feed value is obtained by using silos, than by feeding dry fed," Brown stated.

Grill Aged Mooney 'Key Witness'

Despite severe grilling by William F. Cleary, deputy attorney general for California, with whom he is shown above, John MacDonald, 63, paralytic in Baltimore city hospital, insisted that his testimony in 1934, which sent Thomas J. Mooney to prison for the prepared-for-bombing in which 19 people died, was false. Though an abject figure, MacDonald stoutly maintained, before a California supreme court referee and Mooney's attorneys, that he had not seen Mooney until after the bombing, and that California officials "coached" him in his original story.

GRAY THINKS SALES TAX IS LAST RESORT FOR PENSION MONEY

Representative Courtney Gray does not favor a sales tax to pay the old age pensions provided for in the newly passed amendment to the state constitution except as a last resort. He believes that a good part of the liquor tax should be used for the pension payment and that a closer rendition of taxable property in addition to taxation of several items now going untaxed, will provide the necessary funds for their payment.

He also suggests a chain store tax which he believes will yield a large revenue as well as "give the independent merchant a chance to stay in business." He also suggests that a good part of the liquor tax be used for pension payment.

Representative Gray continues: "It is generally conceded that the utilities are not paying their just proportion of the taxes. This is especially true as to major distributors of gas. Some method should be devised by which gas could be taxed between the well and the consumer. Under present conditions owners of gas producing wells get little for their gas, while the consumer pays a big price in 'lost' localities," he said.

In speaking of liquor legislation Mr. Gray said he favored sale of liquor in unbroken packages, not to be used on the premises where sold. "Since we are to vote on a compulsory dispensary amendment in November, 1936, I should like to see the system of state dispensary liquor out during the interval. A liquor political machine might be obtained by allowing the commissioners' courts of wet counties select those who are to dispense liquor in that county. I also believe these officials should be bonded," he said.

Representative Gray is also in favor of tightening the laws governing driving while intoxicated. "The laws on this matter are stretched and made much more rigid than they are at present. I believe it will be a great help to the protection of life. This would be a good measure for people in the streets as well as a protection of the intoxicated persons," he stated.

"Since Brown county is, and probably will remain dry, the man in which liquor is to be dispensed does not have the local significance which it will have in the wet counties," Mr. Gray said. In talking of a liquor tax, he favors

Brick Plant May Be Operated As A City WPA Project

Plans for a WPA project to be sponsored by the Brownwood Business and Professional Women's club for opening the Brownwood brick plant to make brick for community use were discussed at the meeting of the club this week.

The objective of the project, which is being sponsored through co-operation with city council, is to obtain brick for use in construction of a community house and for building brick walls along the banks of the slough where it passes through Brownwood.

Mrs. J. W. Trapp, Mrs. Velma DeBenedetti and Miss Estelle Duran have been named a committee to work with city officials toward obtaining the proposed grant.

BUSINESS MEN HELP SCHOOL IN STARTING VOCATIONAL COURSES

Local merchants and tradesmen are cooperating 100 per cent with high school officials in plans for the new diversified occupations courses to be inaugurated in Brownwood High School this year. Bill Hooper, faculty member, will be in charge of the work, having been named diversified occupations coordinator.

Boys and girls taking the diversified occupations courses will work in the occupations of their choice half of each school day and attend classes the rest of the day. This is an entirely new plan of teaching in the public schools and is being introduced this year, the local school being one of the first in the state to offer the courses.

Mr. Hooper and Mr. Erhardt, supervisor of the diversified occupations division of the State Department of Education, completed a survey of business firms and industries to determine the practical features of the plan.

A medium tax so the price will not be so high as to encourage bootlegging.

In regard to abolition of the fee system in some counties, he is in favor of the Legislature fixing the salaries of county officials. He thinks a population scale should be used and uniform salaries be fixed throughout the state. He said the valuation of taxable goods in the counties could also be used as another fair and equitable method of fixing salaries.

Zephyr Well To Be Shot At 3,000 Feet

Casing in the McDonald & Campbell deep test on the Smith tract, 3 1/2 miles south of Zephyr, is being pulled from around 3,400 to 2,864 and the well will be shot at this depth, probably Friday. A showing of oil and gas was encountered at 2,864 feet, but casing was cemented and the well was carried on down to granite.

Operations on the Hightower Oil and Refining Company's deep test on the McLaughlin tract, west of Blanket, have been closed down at 3,900 feet. Officials have not yet decided whether to plug the well or go deeper. The company's No. 1 Counts, 2 miles southeast of Bangs has been plugged and drilling on an offset on the Wooten tract has been shut down at 500 feet.

SALES TAX SEEN AS ONLY WAY TO RAISE MONEY FOR PENSION

Seeing a sales tax as the only means of raising funds to pay the old age pension, Senator E. M. Davis said last week that he would favor the levying of such a tax although he is basically opposed to that form of taxation.

He also expressed the opinion that sale of liquor only in unbroken packages and regulating of county officials salaries by the commissioners courts would be the only course to pursue regarding the other two new amendments to the Texas constitution.

"The people voted the payment of pensions upon themselves and the only way I can see of paying them is by a sales tax. I do not favor the sales tax, but it is the only way that I see of paying the pension, so there is nothing else that we can do. I want the people to say every time they buy something that they are paying the pension through the sales tax," Senator Davis said.

"The sales tax is something that we should get along without, but since there is a pension to pay it is the only way I can see of raising that much money each year. I have been saying ever since my election that I did not favor a sales tax, and I still don't favor one; but what else can we do?"

Other Two Amendments

"So far as the other two amendments are concerned there is only one course to pursue—opposition to the return of the open saloon and regulation of salaries of county officials. With the passage of the salary amendment, I am afraid, went the diligence of county officials. Regardless of what you say, a county official is not going to be so efficient in collection of fees when the money goes to the county, and he is getting a regular salary, regardless of whether he collects or not.

"The liquor amendment is drawing the greatest amount of attention, but it is not any more important than the other two. The regulation of liquor sales, definition of local option counties, and a tax to be paid upon liquor sales will be the main thing that the Legislature will discuss.

"There can be only one course to pursue and that is a tax upon sale of liquor in wet counties and abolition of sales in dry counties. I can not see where we can do anything else except put a heavy tax upon sale of liquor and make a working definition of the term, 'local option counties.'

"The other amendment passed providing for the change from a fee system to salaries for county officials, is something that there will be a strong lobby for in Austin during the special session, but it is something that should be left to the county commissioners to decide," Senator Davis concluded.

ATTENDS PITTSBURGH PAINT SALES MEETING

Bob May, head of the paint department of Weakley-Watson-Miller Hardware company, last Friday and Saturday attended a meeting of the sales organization of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, manufacturers of the Pittsburgh Paint Products which are sold and distributed in this territory by Weakley-Watson-Miller.

Mr. May was the only dealer represented at the meeting, which primarily was for salesmen of the company in the Texas district. The local organization is the second largest independent dealer in Texas, and has had remarkable success in sales of the Pittsburgh paints. During the first eight months of 1935, Mr. May said, the company sold more paint than during 1934 and 1934 combined.

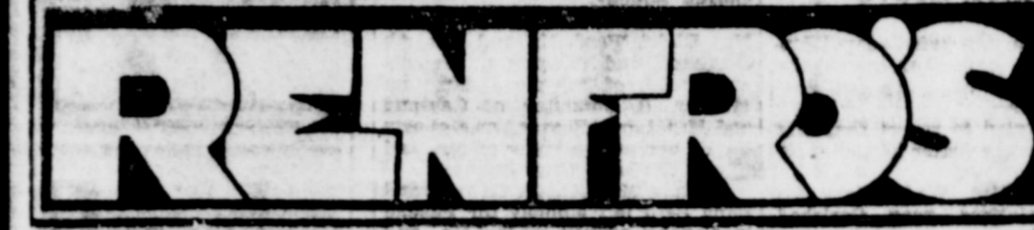

Officials of the company were very optimistic about future prospects in the paint business and predicted that the remainder of the year would see even a greater increase in sales than the past.

THE EARLY HISTORY OF TEXAS

AS SHOWN FROM THE AUSTIN PAPERS

This is one of a series of articles taken from the hundreds of special collections of family archives in the University of Texas library. The collections cover all periods of Texas history from the earliest days of the Spanish missionaries in the province of Texas, through the colonial era to the present. This series of articles presents interesting excerpts from a number of these collections, some chosen for their intrinsic significance in the development of the empire of Texas, others for their purely human interest in portraying personalities, and some conditions and social conditions.

The flavor of a sage of "Old Texas," tinged with the wisdom of the "Old South," is best in a description of the Capote Ranch of the Erskine family on the Guadalupe River, as it is in B. H. Erskine's unpublished biography of his father, Andrew Erskine. A similar feeling is given in his biographical notes now deposited in manuscript in the archives of the University of Texas library.

Andrew Nelson Erskine and Theresa Johnson were married in Seguin, Guadalupe County, Texas, December 27th, 1847. He was in his 22nd year and she was the daughter of John F. Johnson, an early day settler in Seguin. Her father was from Lexington, Kentucky, in Texas in 1835, with his daughter Ann and two sons, John and Ignacious, and some negroes, settled on the Brazos River near Richmond, Fort Bend county, Texas. They were on this river when the family hearing of Anna's near approach with a party of near two thousand men, the father and his brother Alexander were off with Houston's army (about seven hundred men) to the San Jacinto. The wife and children were left alone when they got the word that the Mexicans were coming, being scared, they hurriedly left the table, took the negroes and fled to the Brazos River bottom to meet from the Mexicans whom they expected would come to their place. They fled in such haste they made no preparation, leaving everything as it was at the moment of their flight. An old friendly man and his squaw, whom the family had befriended and aided, went to the house, turned the key out of the pen, took clothes from the line, and taking such things as they thought the family would need, closed the house, and went to find the fugitive in the morning. They were in hiding for three days.

Hearing that Santa Anna, the self-styled Napoleon of the West, had left his Waterloo, on the battlefield of San Jacinto, April, 1836, some years later Joseph F. Johnson and family moved out West to Gonzales, Gonzales county—then in Seguin. The Indians raiding in Seguin, they returned for better protection to Gonzales and there some time before returning to Seguin, where they permanently resided.

Also, his father-in-law, Joseph F. Johnson, dealt very largely in Texas lands and would have surveyed to be done. He continued to buy and sell much land for ten years after his daughter married Andrew. Our grandfather, Joseph F. Johnson, died at his home, December 25th, 1857, in Seguin, in Guadalupe county, Texas.

Returning to the bride and groom Erskine writes that his father accepted the offer and invitation of his father, Michael Erskine, owner of Capote Ranch, made by letter December 26, 1847, to "come and live with me. You can fit up and occupy part of the new house."

The biographer here becomes reminiscent. "Michael Erskine's Capote home as we knew it, many years later, as we intimately knew it, was the dear old home in and around which we spent some of the happiest years of our life. It was built on the south side of the lovely Guadalupe river; on a high bluff, second bank of the river some 60 feet high above the channel, back from the brink of the hill a scant one hundred yards. The land slipped to east and west, to the south, nice level grounds. Near the front of the house some grand old live oaks as straight and nice looking as we ever saw such trees. Some little distance to the east, towards the very large farm, was built four comfortable log cabins for the negroes. A little south of them, blacksmith work shop, large barn (which would house at least 4,000 bushels of corn, and cograis (pans).

"The home, a one and half story double log house—two large rooms and hall between, ground floor—two rooms and hall, upper half story—a comfortable porch, the length of all on the east, rock chimneys, large fire places, each end, north and south—not grand but very comfortable and in those early days considered a good house, for a ranch. A very large dining room, say six feet from north end of house, and porch, would seat fifty people. An equally large kitchen adjoining an ell to north of dining room, at the north end of which was a very large rock fire place and chimney—which fire place took a back log one foot in diameter, six feet long and other wood to make a good fire, before which a beef could be roasted. A negro woman cook, who could not be surpassed in the delicious roast and oven baked meats and bread. She prepared especially the famous 'corndogger.' Such was Michael Erskine's means of extending to all comers the proverbial Erskine hospitality—the latch string always hung on the outside.

"Such as described was the ancestral home, to which Andrew Erskine brought his young wife, March, 1848, and found a happy family of five—father, sister Ellen, oldest daughter at home, house keeper since her mother's death September, 1846; her husband John D. Anderson, who was assisting John in farming on their large plantation; also sister Malinda in her 19th year, just returned home after five years of absence, in Virginia at school; Agnes Ann, youngest of a family of ten children. Making a family of seven which the house could well accommodate—I failed to mention a little north of the kitchen, between it and the river, was built a very comfortable louver cabin of lumber, for Old 'Aunt' Dinah (head cook), and her large family of eight. She was a very favorite negro of the Capote Erskines—as well as those of Huntsville, Ala., from where she came to Michael Erskine about 1834. As far back as the writer can remember she was practically free. Near, a little east of the kitchen was a large 'smoke house,' very necessary on so large a farm and ranch, with so many people to feed, whites and blacks numbering at least twenty, which was kept well filled with bacon, hams and all hog products, for Capote was naturally a splendid place to raise hogs. With fine 'masts' of many sorts, farm, ranch and plenty of fish and game, they had an abundance of substantial food—four coffee, sugar and all other necessities had to be hauled about one hundred and fifty miles from the Gulf Port Lavaca.

"Located on the famous Capote Rancho of 26,000 acres. The most desirable, and loveliest ranch, of valley and timbered land the writer ever saw, although so well known we have not the gifted pen or space to attempt description. We have evidence that the father turned over the large farm of 600 acres and large force of a dozen negroes to his oldest son, John, to manage, and farm upon, for the year 1848, and that brother Andrew went in with and helped John to manage the same, and during the year with John's assistance—and four negro men, experts in the handling of the ax—broad ax for hewing, foot, adz, hand, and cross cut saws—all very necessary, for building log houses, it would not take such a force long to build Andrew a house. He selected a nice location half mile south, a little west of his father's house, on an elevated plateau, groves of live oaks near, none immediately about the house. He selected the open space, so as to have a nice piece for garden and orchard, of two acres. The house he built of hewn logs—one and a half-story—large room ground floor, the same half story above—covered with 'clabboards' from the fine 'Burr Oaks' on the ranch—a good and lasting roof. Near he built a very neat, rock store room for his meats and other necessities for family use. A well dug on north end of it, the end of the roof projecting over the well, making nice covering for it, German fashion. From this well the life giving water was obtained. Water for the 'old home' was furnished by the Guadalupe river.

PYROIL actually enabled a car to run 745 miles with no oil in the crankcase! Ask for the complete story.

PYROIL increases power

Think of the power of plunging pistons... sufficient to move tons of rock up steep mountain grades. Yet the efficiency of pistons depends on the adequacy of the combustion chamber. Carbon-stuck valves, leaking rings, weaken the piston stroke and make motors lag and balk.

PYROIL increases power in motors because it seals rings and keeps valves carbon-free. Simply added to regular gas and oil. Supplies constant lubrication to the entire motor head where withering heat kills ordinary lubricants. Actually builds lubrication into the metal.

PYROIL deposits a patent-processed, heat-, wear- and dilution-proof element on all metal parts, building and constantly maintaining an actual self-lubricating surface. Bearings run freer, cooler. Power, endurance, are marvelously improved. Easily saves many times its small cost.

Ask for your filling station or garage for further details. Try PYROIL today.

Anything You Want to Know? Here's A Federal Unit That Will Tell You All

WASHINGTON.—In a neat ground-floor showroom of a former retail store in the shadow of the U. S. Treasury, one of the least-known but busiest units of the federal government is bowing along. It is the U. S. Information Service, established in 1933 to help the public and its officials find their way around in the maze of the New Deal.

President Roosevelt commented at the time that "only through a clear understanding by every citizen of the objectives, organization, and availability of the government agencies can they render truly effective service."

So at 1423 F Street NW, you find Miss Harriet Root and a staff of 25 assistants, to try to keep track of the government's activities and people.

Here is the clearing house for any information you want regarding the departments, bureaus, and alphabetical agencies, what they're doing and who works there.

When you visit the office it looks like the information bureau at Grand Central station in New York. A stream of people passes through; one wants to locate a friend in the government service; one wants a loan; one wants a contract; another wants a job. To answer their questions, the Information Service functions.

Anything You Want Here

Here is kept a current catalog of the business of the federal government. Personnel lists are kept up to date, production charts show what each bureau is doing, inventories record stock on hand, transactions going forward, past accomplishments and contemplated plans. All this information is available to any citizen at the cost of a postage stamp, a telephone call or a personal visit.

The smoothness of operation of the service has been accomplished by careful subdivision of the work, skillful arrangements of files and indexes, an accessible supply of rules and regulations of the departments, of the laws of Congress and of executive orders (these number thousands), and a directory of employees listed both alphabetically and under the departments in which they work.

Three Divisions Operate

The work falls into three divisions: The congressional information section, the works progress section, and the general information section.

HERE'S WHAT THEY WANT TO KNOW

(Being actual questions recently received by the U. S. Information Service at Washington, D. C.)
"We have a cow and her hide is all coming through and out around the neck. What can we do to stop this?"

"One of our relatives claim they have a treasure (treasure) on their farm so I like to ask the information burrow if they know a good business man where they can buy a treasure machine to locate hidden treasure or rent one that is reliable?"

"Do you have a machine that will pick up and register words or conversations that have been spoken months or years ago and where I can get such a machine?"

"I have heard there are wild horses in Oregon, and that the government was paying so much a head for capturing them. Please let me know."

"I would much appreciate you sending me a copy of the Declaration of Independence, with whatever changes there have been recently made there-to."

maintains a record of congressional action of this and past congresses. Other government agencies use this section freely. Here inquiries are handled that deal with dates of passage of laws, termination of laws, the provision of such laws.

The Works Progress section deals with activities started since passage of the five billion dollar work relief bill. The work of this section is growing in volume and intricacy and will soon be the principal part of the service's activity.

General Information Given
A daily report on the progress of each project is sent to the information service. From this information all inquiries are answered.

The general information section deals with all other inquiries. Here are handled questions over the counter, telephone calls, and letters. This section answers all questions coming from congressmen. These are various and manifold.

The mail of congressmen is enormous. Such parts of it as deal with requests of constituents for information concerning New Deal activities are sent to the information service for answers.

On a normally busy day, activities of the service were as follows: 53 persons called for information. There were 147 telephone calls, 32 of these from government bureaus, 8 from senators, 19 from representatives, 58 from the public and 39 from the National Emergency Council.

On any day a long distance telephone operator may call to inquire where she can locate a government official whose office the party calling does not know. The

Nobody's Business

By JULIAN CAPERS, JR.

Speculation as to the range of legislative subjects to be submitted by Gov. Allred, which will determine the length and the number of special sessions, filled the atmosphere in Austin as the solons prepared to answer the Sept. 16 call for an extraordinary session. Financing a state old-age pension program, authorized by the voters in the special election by an overwhelming majority, may reopen the entire subject of state revenue. This would be an opening for the governor to resubmit all or part of his extensive tax program, most of which fell by the wayside in the regular session. Such highly controversial subjects as chain-store taxes, sales tax, state income tax, liquor taxes and other doubtless will be offered and debated at length, if the governor's message opens the way.

The governor has clearly indicated he considers liquor regulation under repeal the paramount subject. He has advised against hasty action. The legislature is probably as closely divided upon the liquor questions as were the people, who registered less than 10 per cent majority of votes cast, in favor of repeal. Bitter controversy is forecast by the lengthy battle that was necessary for the legislators even to get the matter before the voters as a constitutional amendment. Opinion ranges all the way from state monopoly, from the bone dry bloc, down to minimum restrictions and free flow of hard liquor by the extreme liberals. It will take many hours of committee sessions, hotel room caucuses and floor debate to enact finally a state law to license the sale of liquor and enable dry communities to protect themselves by local option.

Sensational charges that certain major oil companies are preparing to demoralize the market for crude oil, break the $1 crude price that has held steadily in Texas for many months, and fill their empty storage tanks during the ensuing chaos, made by Col. Ernest O. Thompson, chairman of the Texas railroad commission, marked the week's developments in oil. Thompson asserted the move was planned as a "punishment to Texas" for the successful fight the state, through its officials, has made on federal control, advocated by some major companies. First step, Thompson said, was a cut in gasoline prices, which would then be carried back to the crude market as justification for a slash there. The commission last week denied the plea of certain major companies that the proration basis be changed to an acreage factor instead of the well-established well-potential basis that has been in use for two years.

Thompson charged then the movement was a "share-the-wealth program with reverse English" that would take the property of small independents and give it to the large companies. Testimony at the hearing showed that 200 millions of property values in east Texas would be confiscated, that the permanent school fund would lose $300,000 a year in royalties and the state many thousands in taxes, if the proration formula were changed. The commission renewed its proration order on the potential basis, which Thompson charges, is another reason why some of the disappointed majors seek to demoralize Texas' billion-dollar oil business. It is broadly hinted in Austin the commission may meet such an attack by ordering a complete shut-down of all fields in Texas for a period, to take bottom-telegraph companies refer emergency wires to the service for delivery. Often when some notable citizen is to visit Washington, the service will be asked to locate the hotel where the visitor is staying. The unit does not broadcast any information. Nothing is released voluntarily. Propaganda is not its function. Perhaps this is the reason the service is not better known. Demands for its help are increasing, broadening in scope, coming from an ever-widening territory. Foreign legations now draw much of their information from the unit. Uruguay may be interested in low-rent housing projects, China in the current ginseng crop, and messengers from the chancelleries call for the requisite information.

The U. S. Information Service exists for the use of the people. An inquiry often saves the sender time and expense.

Experts have difficulty in keeping track of current legislation, termination dates of emergency operations and the requirements in contracts, but the government itself supports this agency to supply free accurate information.

With expert craftsmen at work fitting complicated instruments into its interior, the largest gondola yet built for stratosphere exploration is shown at Wright Field, Dayton, O., from where it will be shipped to Rapid City, S. D., for the next campaign in the upper air, set for June. The hollow metal ball, of a magnesium alloy lighter than aluminum, is nine feet in diameter, eight inches more than the gondola used in last year's hop.

Filmland Greet Ex-Follies Star

Behind every man who has achieved greatness in history, there is usually the shadow of a good woman. Close friends of United States Senator Tom Connally, 2900 of whom gathered at Marlin to pay their last respects to Mrs. Connally, say this is true to an unusual extent in the case of the distinguished junior senator from Texas. Possessed of a remarkably keen mind, and a sure instinct for the right, which hurdled easily the hazards of politics, Mrs. Connally was not only the constant companion, but the influential adviser of the senator. From every corner of the state friends came to the family home at Marlin last week, to extend their condolences to Senator Connally and his young son, Ben, and to express their conviction that all of Texas, as well as her own family, had suffered a great loss in her death.

Many men live on "borrowed time" as the saying goes, but to Fred Glasie, Tarrant county farmer, goes the distinction of having lived for six years on borrowed time. Every six weeks he has to undergo a blood transfusion, due to aplastic anemia, a rare disease about which doctors know little. Relatives have furnished the blood, his wife having contributed hers three times. Between times, Glasie goes about his work normally, and feels no ill effects, except for a few days prior to each transfusion, when he becomes weak and tires easily.

Another Ziegfeld Follies star crashed Hollywood when Lois Bennet, above, formerly acclaimed as one of the foremost singing stars on the New York stage, arrived in the film capital to begin her screen career. Miss Bennet is rumored to have been given an important role by a major studio.

Aluminum and copper, stripped from confiscated slot machines, are sold for scrap at public auction by the police of Oakland, Calif.
