MRS. WILMANS SPEAKS HERE

Mrs. Edith Wilmans of Dallas, candidate for governor, drew a sharp distinction between the national and state democratic campaigns in an address in Brownwood Tuesday afternoon, declaring that she would vote for every nominee of the democratic primary in Texas in accordance with the pledge to support "the nominees of this primary," but that she would not vote for Alfred E. Smith for president.

She understood, Mrs. Wilmans said, that her name was to be left off the primary ballots in four counties, though she had not been officially notified of it. From only one county of the four, she said she had received any direct word of the committee's action.

Under these circumstances, she said, "I believe the people have awakened to an interest in my campaign," she said.

Reviews Record Mrs. Wilmans spoke of her work in the legislature. "I was appointed a member of the committee created by the House of Representatives in 1925, to consider all House bills for constitutional or other errors," she said, "which would invalidate them or make them unconstitutional. As a member of this committee I discovered and pointed out to the House the unconstitutionality of the Road District laws which were so much before the people in 1926, in which opinion I was sustained by the United States Supreme Court." Out of the law referred to here by Mrs. Wilmans came the famous Archer County case. Mrs. Wilmans told of being criticized by the then Attorney General Dan Moody, and others for holding up important legislation by her position in regard to the road district bill when it was presented to her committee, but said if her opinion as to its legality had been heeded it would have saved the trouble that later arose.

Moody Impeached Mrs. Wilmans did not refer to either Wardlaw or Hawkins, two of her opponents, and but very briefly to Moody. After speaking of her difference with Moody over the constitutionality of the road law, she said that she had no disposition to criticize him in any way.

In closing her address Mrs. Wilmans invited the voters to call on her at the Governor's office at any time they might visit Austin next year, and said: "I neither hunt nor fish."

Mrs. Wilmans discussed for an hour the planks of her platform and declared that every one of them represented something that had been on her heart for years. Her platform was typed last November, she said, and had not been influenced by any later developments in the campaign.

Repeal of the automobile tax, changes in the primary election law, adequate help for the rural schools, enforcement of the prohibition law, court reform, co-operation with the farmers toward bettering farm conditions, and changes in the penitentiary system were among the measures advocated by the candidate in her address here.

No More Trouble From Sandino is Expected by U. S.

MANAGUA, Nic., July 25.—(AP)—Brigadier General Logan Feland, commanding American marines, believes the rebel general Augustino Sandino is near the Honduras border with his field of operations small. He thinks that there is small likelihood that the insurgents will be able to cause further serious disturbance.

Threats that Sandino intends to conserve his forces until shortly before the national election on November 4 and stage an outbreak to nullify the election are not taken seriously in marine quarters. "Sometimes Sandino may cross into Honduras and then return to Nicaragua," General Feland said, "but the scope of his operations is confined to a comparatively small area."

Iris Nell Leach, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Leach, who reside at 1406 Avenue E., was struck by a passing car Monday afternoon at five o'clock and was painfully hurt, but it has not as yet been determined how serious the injuries are. The car that struck the child was driven by Charlie Moore.

A. W. Womack was charged in Justice of Peace Perkinson's court with swindling. Max Middlebrook was placed in jail on charge of maliciously destroying personal property.

the power company. Several similar trips had been made by attorneys and members of the Board during the past six months.

ABILENE, July 25.—(AP)—With announcement by the Middle West Utilities Company of Chicago that it had terminated its negotiations with the Syndicate Power Company looking toward development of hydro-electric projects on the Colorado River, citizens of West Texas who opposed the project apparently had gained a victory in the controversy which has raged intermittently for several months.

At a meeting of interested parties six weeks ago at Brownwood it was announced that an agreement had been reached acceptable to all. At that time a representative of the Middle West Utilities Company stated that his company was not disposed to press development of the Colorado River project if it were shown not to be to the best interest of the state.

The controversy arose when the Syndicate Power Company obtained grants to water of the Colorado for purposes of hydro-electric development from the State Board of Water Engineers. The West Texas Chamber of Commerce immediately called a meeting of interested persons, where resolutions were adopted stating that grant was in conflict with best interests of the section of the state involved and should be abrogated.

The Middle West Utilities Company is affiliated with the Insull interests of Chicago, which at the Abilene meeting were charged with being sponsors of the Syndicate Power Company in hydro-electric projects in Texas.

OBREGON LEADERS SPLIT OVER CALLES KEEPING HIS OFFICE

MEXICO CITY, July 25.—(AP)—Obregon leaders appeared to be split today over the continuation of President Calles in office for two years as provisional president. Antonio Soto Ygama, agrarian leader, when asked if the provisional president would be General Calles, replied:

"A constitutional president who continues in power as provisional president directly violates the constitution which prohibits reelection."

The demand has already been formulated that Calles continue in office after his term expires on December 1. Ricardo Topete, leader of the Obregon bloc in Congress which controls that body, has placed himself on record as predicting that either Calles or Aaron Saenz, governor of Nuevo Leon, will carry on the government until elections can be held in 1930.

Agrarian Opposition

Soto Ygama's statement was construed in some quarters as voicing agrarian opposition to Calles as provisional president. Calles himself apparently does not desire to continue in office and his friends were quoting him as having reiterated his desire to resume his life as a dairy farmer.

Agrarian leaders in various parts of Mexico demand that "all labor influences" be removed from the government because of the assassination of General Alvaro Obregon. So insistent are they that Obregon's political enemies are morally responsible for the crime that they assert they do not even ask the death penalty for Jose De Leon

Toral, who shot Obregon to death. "We regard Obregon's assassination as a percentage who was controlled by superior outside forces," said Aurelio Manrique, an agrarian leader. "We do not demand his death, but we do demand justice, and we believe this can be achieved most quickly by removal from the government of those labor leaders whose anti-Obregon activities created the atmosphere for the mad act of the assassin."

Rumors Current—Innumerable rumors were current today regarding Luis Morones, former minister of Labor, whose resignation had been demanded by the agrarians. One was that he had escaped to the United States by airplane. Reports received in New York that he had been stranded on the Sunday before the assassination could not be verified.

The Golden Cocoon

SYNOPSIS

Molly Shannon, of the brood of "shiftless Shannons" of northern Texas, has won a scholarship in the State University, and is beside herself with joy and gratification when she arrives at the capital, where the university is located. The family is poor and she is the only ambitious member of it. She has always longed for an education and to avoid the constant drudgery which has made life a burden to her mother.

And there was the library. She had never seen more books at one time than she could possibly read, and she was obsessed lest something should happen before she could get round to them—lest the library be swallowed up or simply fold its tent in the night and steal away. She read greedily, indiscriminately, as of old, everything from the reports of the Society of Psychological Research to Tolstol, from Greek drama to Rosen.

She did not go home at Christmas time. The long trip was too expensive. At the close of the spring term she secured a little school in a nearby village for the summer and sent the sorely needed salary home. It proved equally impossible for her to go home for the next Christmas holidays. Her scholarship sufficed only for actual expenses, and she had to squeeze out of it an occasional item of apparel, a dentist's bill, etc.

At the end of her sophomore year, she got some coaching in the university summer school and a class or two in a near-by "prep" academy. When the dormitory closed, she moved over to one of the girls' boarding houses opposite the campus. Mrs. Parker, the landlady, had a mere handful of table boarders left—ministers and faculty members whose wives had fled the August and September heat. She offered Molly board in return for a moderate amount of help. It would have been foolish, under the circumstances, to try to go home.

Many a reproachful twinge of conscience she suffered because she did not want to go home. Molly was not one of those blessed, well-born people who defer reading and gracefully to others. She was not more selfish perhaps than the normal, healthy young person, but frank about it. She was stubborn and head-strong, and above all things on earth she hated compromise.

Molly was nineteen now, lithe, willowy, not too tall, slim to a fault. The sunburn had faded from her skin, leaving it smoothly transparent with a dash of poppy petals underneath. Her eyes were of the same dazzling cornflower blue, her hair dusky black with a smoke-blue haze upon it—gifts from her father's Celtic inheritance. A forehead high, but generously wide, winged black brows, a nose not very straight, a resolute but sensitive chin, mobile lips that matched the poppy hue in her cheeks, could quiver readily to laughter or tears—and usually did neither. Such, outwardly at least, was Molly on the eve of that memorial August.

CHAPTER V

"Molly"—Mrs. Parker popped her head in at the door, and Molly guessed from certain crackly noises that she was in the act of buttoning herself into one of the stiff, starched dresses she always donned for the afternoon—"I wish you'd answer that pesky bell if you don't mind." The whole of her little pine knot of a body came into Molly's room, still buttoning. She made a wry mouth and peered out over her steel-rimmed spectacles with mingled humor and concern. "It's the first of the month, you know, and I'm not at home!"

Molly smiled rather dubiously as she gave a downward push to her own white frock, freshly laundered that very morning, and made an absent pass at her hair as she went by the mirror. Before she could reach the stairs there was another ring at the bell, louder this time and more insistent. She sighed. That was certainly a billcollector ring. Dear Mrs. Parker, she was the soul of honesty. It was pitiful she should have to hide and dodge like this, even if she did make her little jest. And Molly didn't like to tell a lie.

"Mrs. Parker is not in," she announced with cool impartiality, one hand reaching suggestively for the door knob.

"No, really . . . ?" The voice was deep and regretful and very masculine.

She still did not look up. "No, but if you care to come back—say a week or two from now."

"But, my dear young lady—" The tall figure stepped across the narrow aperture left by the gently but firmly closing door. His tone was argumentative, plaintively humorous. The smile that went with it was wasted on Molly, however, for her eyes were fixed on a spot exactly two feet above the door knob. "What am I to do in the meantime?"

The door edged a trifle closer. "I don't know, I'm sorry."

"But your hotel here is quite impossible," the persuasive, deep voice went on injudiciously "and I'm told on the best of authority that Mrs. Parker's meals—"

"Oh . . ." The door and Molly's cornflower eyes flew open startledly and simultaneously. "You don't mean you're a boarder?"

The stranger looked entertained. "Of course. What did you think?" Molly deemed it prudent not to answer that question at once. Instead, she piloted the way toward the shabby but immaculate little parlor. At the door the prospective boarder stood aside with an easy deference, which implied yet a subtle compliment.

"Too bad Mrs. Parker is not in. He settled himself in the chair she indicated and laid the folder on the table—she could see now it was the sort professors carried. With a resigned grimace, he mopped at his brow. "I'm afraid your climate is to be recommended only for salamanders," he said.

Molly had never given the climate a thought, but she felt sorry he was displeased about anything. "It does get hot in the afternoons," she admitted. Then she explained quickly that Mrs. Parker was in. "It's the first of the month, you see and we couldn't be sure—"

"Hum—m—" The stranger threw back his beautiful dark head and laughed—this time aloud. "You took me for a bill collector, eh?"

She moved quickly to the door, with some murmur about "calling Mrs. Parker"; got out of the room as swiftly as decorum would permit. She was intensely conscious of his eyes riveted with casual, detached interest on her back. No doubt he had noted the very pitted place in her skirt! She paused at Mrs. Parker's door, retailed briefly the business in hand, then ran on up to her own room.

The arrangement with Mrs. Parker did not include any waiting on the table—sufficient comment on that discerning little woman's kindness of heart. But the next morning, the first occasion on which the new boarder was to appear in the kitchen until the others were through. As the breakfast hour drew near, dread had increased to positive panic. How could she ever look at him again?

"Molly, you run along and eat now," Mrs. Parker advised, bustling into the kitchen with a towering pyramid of plates. There were not enough boarders to justify keeping on her servants, and she acted as both cook and waitress. "I'll be in directly."

Molly, who had been cooking waffles, tossed off her apron, pushed back the hair from her hot face, and went toward the dining room—exquisitely cool and inviting after the broiling kitchen. On the threshold she brought up short, one hand to her heart, which pounded smotheringly. She was just turning to fly when a deep voice observed from the depths of a newspaper: "Good morning. It's no use running, you know, because I've seen you already!" A leisurely motion of the paper indicated the sideboard mirror opposite.

The new boarder—he was the only one left in the room—looked round quizzically as Molly hesitated in the doorway. He rose, pulled out the chair across from him, steered her toward it, adjusted her at precisely the right angle. "There," he said, setting the fern dish to one side. "What could be more charming? And how very nice of you to wait and keep me company!"

Molly's colorful face whitened a little. The tide of shame and anger started mounting again. "I didn't," she said. "I supposed that every-

Our Support in the Coming Election

McDONALD ASKING OFFICE OF COUNTY CLERK ON MERITS

TO THE VOTERS OF BROWN COUNTY:

As time for the election draws near I realize that I have not met, and will not be able to meet, each of you personally, and I am taking this method to say to you that my failure to see you has been unavoidable.

In presenting my claims to you for the office of County Clerk, I am doing so solely upon my merits and qualifications, and urge any and all of you to investigate. There is doubtless some one near you who can inform you concerning me.

There are two points which I wish you to investigate: AM I WORTHY? AM I QUALIFIED? I place "WORTHY" first, as to me it matters not how well qualified one may be, if he is not WORTHY (honest, honorable and upright) he should not be put in any place or office of public trust.

If after investigation you find the answers to the above to be that "I AM" then I most earnestly solicit your vote on next Saturday, July 28th, assuring you that same will be appreciated and that I shall so conduct the business of the office that you will never have occasion to regret your action.

Very respectfully,

J. T. McDonald

Candidate for County Clerk

VOTE FOR

E. M. DAVIS

BECAUSE:

County Judge

(Re-Election)

- 1—He has been active and aggressive, and on the job all the time.
- 2—He has been responsive to every move that has for its purpose the best interests of Brown County.
- 3—He initiated and fought through, at an expense of more than $400 to himself, the law that gives to our county 20% of the weight tax on automobiles, amounting to $25,000, increase for roads for Brown County each year.
- 4—He is now president of the county judges and commissioners association of Texas, and has pledged himself to launch a campaign to reduce the license fees, and give to the smaller counties all of same.
- 5—He is working with the commissioners to wipe out the indebtedness of Brown County, and the auditors report shows that the indebtedness was reduced $17,000, and cash on hand was increased $17,400, this year over last year.
- 6—He has had 16 years of varied legal experience, and is in a better position to law on evidence, write charges to juries, and advise the commissioners court on the law in handling the business of the county.

E. M. DAVIS

Remember—His name is E. M. Davis, and the first one on the ticket.

VOTE For—

E. J. MILLER

HE STANDS FOR:

MORE TRIALS AND FEWER CONTINUANCES. Continuances and delays are the greatest friends to the criminal and the greatest foe to civil justice. "Justice delayed is justice denied." There is a cry all over the district about violations of the prohibition law and other laws and it has been charged by surrounding people that it is easier to clear a murderer in this district than any other district in the State. Delays and continuances are responsible for a good part of this.

MORE WORK AND LESS PAY. Six days work per week or keep dockets clear. It costs your County $100.00 per day for court and jury to sit around and do nothing. My opponent says that another Court must be created to handle the business of this district. If you elect me I will stay on the job and attend to all the business of the district thereby saving the expense of another court, $10,000.00 per year.

DEMOCRATIC ROTATION IN OFFICE. Isn't 20-years long enough for one man to hold this office? Twelve years ago my opponent said, "Give me 8-years and I will get out and give a young man a chance"; four years ago he said, "Give me one more term and I will quit." Why not help him keep these promises? Isn't $80,000.00 enough for one man to draw from the public treasury?

Why not give a young man with vigor, zeal and industry an opportunity for faithful patriotic service?

Brown County is the largest county in the district. Why not elect a local man to the office?

Marion Ford's Special Announcement to the Voters of Brownwood and Brown County

EXPERIENCE

As the time for the primary election approaches, I wish to again thank my numerous friends for the interest they have shown in my race for COUNTY CLERK of Brown County and for the help they are so generously giving me.

I feel especially grateful for the kind assistance and encouragement of so many of the good women of Brownwood and Brown County; with their help and influence confidence in my election will be assured.

When elected, while I shall serve all my constituents impartially, it will be an especial pleasure to me to be of service in any way I can, both officially and personally, to the men and women of the county who may have business relations with the COUNTY CLERK'S OFFICE, and to advise with them, when it may be desired, as to matters of business.

Both as COUNTY CLERK and later as a banker, my father, HENRY FORD, was the confidential adviser of many women in their business dealings, many of whom have asked me of their appreciation of his assistance and have given that as one of their reasons for supporting me now for COUNTY CLERK. Nothing could please me so much as to be able to secure and maintain the high esteem in which he was held by both the men and women of BROWN COUNTY. If I should have the honor of being your next COUNTY CLERK I will endeavor to give you an honest and accurate administration with prompt and courteous attention to all alike, and to that purpose I now renew my pledge to the people, and solicit their support.

VOTING IN THE PRIMARIES

BY THOS. H. TAYLOR
 Chairman, Brown County Democratic Executive Committee

All citizens of the United States who are over twenty one years of age can vote in the primary on July 28th, except the following classes: Idiots and lunatics, paupers supported by the county, persons convicted of felonies who have not been pardoned and soldiers, marines and seamen employed in the service of the United States.

Any person who was over twenty one years of age on January 1, 1927 or under sixty years of age at that time who was likewise a resident citizen of Texas at that time, must have a poll tax receipt paid to the tax collector of the county where he was a resident citizen on January 1, 1927, which receipt must have been issued on or before January 31, 1928.

Article 293D of the Texas Civil Statutes has repealed all exemption certificates for voters in Brown county.

A person who was not twenty one years of age or a resident of Texas on Jan. 1, 1927 is not due a poll tax and can vote if he has been in Texas twelve months and in Brown county six months on July 28, 1928. City poll taxes of one dollar each are not necessary as a qualification for voting in any election. However, these taxes are due the city and should be paid. They are simple, not necessary as a qualification for voting. These city poll taxes were levied against men only and constitute a violation of the nineteenth amendment which prohibits discrimination on account of sex.

Citizens vote in the precinct of their residence. Any citizen who has changed his residence in Brown county since his poll tax payment is not required to re-register. He can vote in the precinct of his residence even if he has been there only one day. Residence is a matter of fact. A married man's residence is where his wife lives unless he is separated from her. A single man's residence is where he sleeps at night. Students are not residents of a college city unless they have permanent employment in that city and expect to make it their home after completing their year's work.

Boundaries of Wards
 The city council during the past year has changed the boundaries of the Brownwood Wards. The boundary between Wards One and Two remains the same; it goes down the middle of Main Avenue. Those living northwest of Main Avenue are in Ward One and vote in the west side of the Court House in the Tax Collector's office. The line runs through the middle of the Court House and hence the election cannot be conducted in the east wing of the building. Those living on the east side of Main Avenue live in Ward Two and vote at the city hall in the council room. The new boundary between Ward Two and Wards Three and Four extend down the middle of Brady Avenue. All those who live on the northwest of Brady Avenue to the middle of Main will vote at the city hall. The boundary between Ward Three and Four is First Street. All those living on the northeast side of First Street and extending to Willis Creek are in Ward Three and vote at the high school. The line between the wards runs down the middle of the streets. Those on the southwest side of First Street and extending to the old city limits just beyond the Coggin Park are in Ward Four and vote at the Coggin Ward School. No part of the new extension includes Ward Four. Those beyond the old city limits and to the right of First Street are in the Cannon box which votes at Woodland Heights.

Primary Pledge

Voters in the primary subscribe to a pledge which contains two parts: First, "I am a Democrat," Socialists, Republicans and Independents cannot conscientiously vote in the Democratic primaries. Second: "And pledge myself to support the nominees of this primary. Voters in the primary are not pledging themselves specifically to support the nominees of any other primary or convention. Any citizen to support the president's electors nominated by the Beaumont convention is contained in the expression "I am a Democrat." In the case of Briscoe vs. Boyle, a county executive committee was held unauthorized to require a voter in a primary to make affidavit that he did not vote for, or give aid, support or comfort to any other political party in the last general election. In the case of Cunningham vs. McDebott, voters who voted at primary election and later at general election, scratched name of party candidate and voted for defeated primary candidate, held a qualified voters despite violation of primary pledge. Hence the county executive committee is without power to enforce the pledge. Neither does the state executive committee have such power. Article 2107 allows the state committee to prevent nominees from voting in the primary but states that no person may be prohibited from voting on account of former political views or affiliations or because of membership or non-membership in organizations other than the political party. For these reasons the primary pledge has been held to be a "moral obligation." How an individual can claim to belong to a political party and yet vote against its nominee is a matter for the voter to determine for himself. The nominees for president and vice president and the names of presidential electors do not appear on the primary ballots of July 28th and August 25th.

Row Boat Trip Over Michigan Lake Tried

MILWAUKEE, July 25.—(AP)—A nonstop row boat trip across Lake Michigan in a specially constructed 14-foot boat was the goal today of Michael Elcher.

In a boat which he designed and built himself, and which he claims cannot be tipped over even if he sits on its side, Elcher planned to leave here for Grand Haven, Mich., 85 miles away. He expected to cross the lake within 30 hours.

Elcher, a marine engineer who has sailed the Great Lakes since he was 17 and served with the Navy during the world war, intended to rest every hour on the trip but did not plan to anchor. Only a compass was to guide him.
