Dedication Set For Windmill Park

Mayor Steve Benton and the Spearman City Council would like to invite all Spearman and Hansford County residents to a dedication of the new Windmill Park at 1:00 p.m. on Friday, October 12. Located east of the Spearman High School, this park, upon completion, will feature six newly-renovated tennis courts, a 1/2 mile fully lighted walking trail, windmills from the J.B. Buchanan collection, a covered pavilion area with picnic tables, and playground equipment for children. This park should be 95% completed by the time of the dedication. The mayor and the council would like to thank Ralph Blodgett for donating the land for the park. This generous donation added over $170,000 of land value to the grant project which was matched by Parks and Wildlife funds. Appreciation is also expressed to the Southwestern Pioneer Windmill Association for the donation of the two mills that will be added to the park. These mills will be a wonderful attraction to the park. Without the support of Mr.

Blodgett, the Windmill Association, the Spearman Independent School District School Board, and many citizens, this project would have never been achieved. The park is considered a work in progress, and due to its size, its possibilities for additions are limitless. The city is already in the process of applying for additional grant money to provide trees at the park. Donations to the park fund may be made by contacting Robert Patrick, Spearman City Manager.

Out At The Lake

by Dorothy Hudson

Joe McDonald from Dumas with a 16# blue catfish caught on shad west of the office boat ramp

Lake Depth—October 1, 2001—38.96 feet
Joe McDonald, Cement Contractor at Dumas, is a regular at the Lake. He has caught several nice fish, but this time Jim got a picture. We are always pleased when someone who lives closer to Lake Meredith drives over to fish at Palo Duro.

Barbara and Fred Castor of Guymon camped at the Park this week. They have been good friends of the Lake for several years. Jim had a burrito breakfast on Friday for the Castors. He included JoAnn and Bobby and Ramon.

There were no campers on the north side, but there were five for the weekend on the office side. Beta Sigma Phi Sorority used the shelter Saturday evening.

Herman Blanton spotted the osprey while he was talking to Jim near the bridge. It is being seen at several spots around the Lake. The Blantons, who live south of Spearman, are another couple that relax at Lake Palo Duro. Often they meet their daughter Karen Swink, Junior High Computer teacher at Spearman, and her husband Travis Swink for little fishing get-togethers. Karen caught a 3# crappie this year.

Wildlife mentioned this week included a Belted Kingfisher skimming barely above the water in a flight of 50 yards or so by Jim. Frank Edwards saw from his canoe the beaver again and a bobcat. While observing the animals he caught some nice catfish. He was alone on this trip, but at times he is accompanied by wife Kitty or a daughter.

We haven't been able to find a reference to what school Tom McQuillan taught in Hansford County in 1893, but we do have some of his family history. The family was Irish, and before coming to the States, the father Alexander McQuillan was a master engraver of Belfast, Ireland. He enjoyed the patronage of the Queen of England, and when he left Ireland, he was given a letter and a purse of money by the Queen to show her appreciation. At least four of his children spent some years in Hansford County and in the Strip. Lizzie married Patrick O'Neil in 1888 and came to live on the south side of the Palo Duro on what is now part of the Joel Lackey ranch. Her sister Rose was a musician teaching on the DBL Ranch where she met a young cowboy, Jim Henson. They were married in 1893 and settled down the creek on the north side a short distance from her sister. Brother Tom came to the county as a schoolteacher, but on the 1900 Census he was living with the Hensons and gave his occupation as photographer.

Another brother Jim McQuillan bought part of the OX Ranch and lived in what became the Oklahoma Panhandle.

The following prayer was written by author Max Lucado following the tragic events on September 11th.

Dear Lord,
We're still hoping we'll wake up.
We're still hoping we'll open a sleepy eye and think,
"What a horrible dream."

But we won't, will we, Father? What we saw was not a dream.

Planes did gouge towers. Flames did consume our fortress. People did perish.

It was no dream and, dear Father, we are sad.

There is a ballet dancer who will no longer dance and a doctor who will no longer heal. A church has lost her priest, a classroom is minus a teacher.

Cora ran a food pantry. Paige was a counselor and Dana, dearest Father, Dana was only three years old. (Who held her in those final moments?)

We are sad, Father.

For as the innocent are buried, our innocence is buried as well.

We thought we were safe. Perhaps we should have known better. But we didn't.

And so we come to you.

We don't ask you for help; we beg you for it. We don't request it; we implore it. We know what you can do.

We've read the accounts. We've pondered the stories and now we plead, Do it again, Lord. Do it again.

Remember Joseph? You rescued him from the pit. You can do the same for us.

Do it again, Lord.

Remember the Hebrews in Egypt? You protected their children from the angel of death. We have children, too, Lord.

Do it again.

And Sarah? Remember her prayers? You heard them.

Joshua? Remember his fears? You inspired him. The women at the tomb? You resurrected their hope. The doubts of Thomas? You took them away.

Do it again, Lord. Do it again.

You changed Daniel from a captive into a king's counselor. You took Peter the fisherman and made him Peter an apostle. Because of you, David went from leading sheep to leading armies.

Do it again, Lord, for we need counselors today, Lord.

We need apostles. We need leaders.

Do it again, dear Lord.

Most of all, do again what you did at Calvary.

What we saw here on that Tuesday, you saw there on that Friday. Innocence slaughtered. Goodness murdered. Mothers weeping. Evil dancing.

Just as the ash fell on our children, the darkness fell on your Son. Just as our towers were shattered, the very Tower of Eternity was pierced. And by dusk, heaven's sweetest song was silent, buried behind a rock.

But you did not waver, O Lord. You did not waver. After three days in a dark hole, you rolled the rock and rumbled the earth and turned the darkest Friday into the brightest Sunday.

Do it again, Lord.

Grant us a September Easter.

We thank you, dear Father, for these hours of unity. Disaster has done what discussion could not. Doctrinal fences have fallen. Republicans are standing with Democrats. Skin colors have been covered by the ash of burning buildings.

We thank you for these hours of unity. And we thank you for these hours of prayer.

The Enemy sought to bring us to our knees and succeeded. He had no idea, however, that we would kneel before you. And he has no idea what you can do.

Let your mercy be upon our President, Vice President, and their families. Grant to those who lead us wisdom beyond their years and experience.

Have mercy upon the souls who have departed and the wounded who remain. Give us grace that we might forgive and faith that we might believe.

And look kindly upon your church.

For two thousand years you've used her to heal a hurting world.

Do it again, Lord. Do it again.

Through Christ,

Amen.

May God bless and keep you; May He make his face to shine upon you, and be gracious to you; May the Lord lift up his countenance upon you, and give you peace.

Among The Neighbors

by Helen Fisher

The Sheriff's Association publication for this quarter carried an article and photograph at the Annual Awards dinner in Corpus Christi regarding the annual Greg McFarlin-Max Banks Lawman of the Year Award.

The photograph was of Kaye McFarlin presenting the award, with R.L. and two other officials also pictured.

The annual award includes a pistol, a plaque and $500 given by the McFarlin family. It was established in memory of nine-year-old Greg McFarlin, son of Kaye and R.L. Max Banks was added to it on behalf of investigative work done by Sheriff R.L.

The Lawman of the Year Award is given to a law enforcement officer for outstanding work during the past year, rendering service above and beyond the call of duty.

This year's recipient was Lt. Larry Pope of Val Verde County. He was recognized for his outstanding contribution to the community, to the State, and to the Nation. He was responsible for solving the murder of a 13-year old-girl in Val Verde County and apprehending the culprit. Pursuant to his investigative skills, Lt. Pope discovered the killer had murdered approximately 70 persons throughout the United States.

Adrienne Simpson, daughter of Lenis and Holly Simpson spent a recent weekend here. She is a freshman at SMU, and is now well-settled in Dallas. Adrienne was an outstanding student at Spearman High School and seems to be on the same level in college. She was recently elected to the Freshman Class Council.

Her parents had just concluded a weekend visit to the campus as there was a reception and barbecue for the parents of Freshmen. The Simpsons enjoyed festivities, as well as the football game.

Sympathy is extended to Dorothy Nollner in the death of her mother, Bernice Gibbs. Services were on September 27 in Ft. Worth. Mrs. Gibbs had been a resident of Hansford Manor for the last two years. Recently she had been critically ill and hospitalized in Amarillo.

Jo Nell and Claude Sheets had guests from Friday through Sunday. Their daughter and son-in-law, Ann and Dan Reynolds came from Arcadia, OK for a pleasant weekend.

Three Spearman couples enjoyed a recent weekend at Canton Lake, near Canton, OK - Jeanie and Edwin Pearcy, Francis and Hoyt Biles, and Nordeen and Robert Cochran.

The ladies enjoyed the boat rides, relaxing, driving in the area, but are not interested in fishing. The men had great fishing until a strong weather front blew in. Their catch was excellent and included nice bass, crappie and catfish.

The wives thought the lake might have whales in it - after hearing the men describe the ones that got away. One husband must have been mistaken when he thought he overheard a wife say that fishing is just a jerk at one end of the line waiting for a jerk at the other end.

The ability to stretch the truth differs among people. For instance a short-armed fisherman isn't as big a fibber as a long-armed one!

The Sunday Amarillo paper Listed the results of the cutting horse contest held there last week. It was limited to 5-6 year old non-pro stock.

The results listed Hadley Reed, 6th; A.D. Reed, 12th; and Dan Pearson, 14th. In the Junior Class-Tatum Rice placed 7th.

His younger brother, Tarin 12-years-old, did not enter as he is recovering from a broken leg.

The leg had both bones broken and an ankle chipped in August at Sheridan, Wyoming - not on horse-back but in a golf cart. He, his father, Boyd Rice, with a friend and his son were fishing and used a golf cart for transportation. On their return it over-turned on a curve. Tarin was caught in some part of it which caused the breaks.

He is recovering and recently had the third cast - this is a walking boot cast and it is expected that it can be removed in three weeks.

Weather for week of September 24th through 7 a.m. on October 1st: the highest temp was on both the 26th and 27th at 92 degrees; the lowest was on the 24th at 44 degrees.

No moisture.

A Tribute To A True Conservationist

On September 6, 2001 a dedication was made in memory of Mr. Ben Upchurch near the Loyall and Ginger Turner home west of Spearman on Highway 15.

Upchurch's 68 years of conservation service was commemorated with a sign being placed at a Living Snow Fence, located on the Turner farm, where Upchurch assisted in establishing and maintaining the site. Upchurch passed away on February 8, 2001. He was known by family, friends and coworkers as a steward of the land. Thirty people were in attendance at the ceremony to honor this man they deeply admired.

The Hansford County Soil and Water Conservation District (SWCD) board members Keith Lamb, Elmo Dahl, Robert Novak, James Dunninghoo and Chairman, Willard McCloy were present to show their gratitude and give some testimony on behalf of Upchurch for the conservation service that he invested throughout his life. His work was described as a diligent effort in helping to protect our precious natural resources and maintain our quality of life we enjoy today. Others present to compliment his service and acknowledge his accomplishments were Mrs. Marion Upchurch, USDA-Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) employees, SWCD employees, Loyall and Ginger Turner and close friends.

Upchurch was a Texas native and started his conservation career in 1933 with the Civilian Conservation Corp. (CCC). He was later hired by the Soil Conservation Service (SCS), now the USDA-NRCS, in 1942.

He and his family relocated to Moore County, and from that time on he conducted conservation work in Moore, Ochiltree, Hansford, Hutchison and Sherman Counties. He retired from SCS in 1985 only to continue his conservation efforts working for the Hansford County SWCD. Upchurch retired from the Hansford County SWCD in 1996, but he remained involved with conservation by volunteering his time through the NRCS and SWCD.

NRCS, Natural Resources Manager, Rick Harrell said, "Mr. Upchurch had a mission in life to provide conservation service to help private landowners and operators protect their soil, water, wildlife and related resources." Upchurch earned his credibility as a leader in conservation from his years of experience. Many people that knew him agree that he considered "Conservation" to be more than a job.

The Living Snow Fence was one of many conservation projects Upchurch helped complete. The trees and shrubs were planted on the north side of the road to manage blowing snow, act as a living screen and enhance wildlife habitat. It consists of two rows of Rocky Mountain Junipers and two rows of shrubs that are Skunkbush Sumac and Nanking Cherry.

Each row is parallel and measures 880 feet long. One of the landowners, Loyall Turner said, "The planting was a complex operation and the organization was carefully managed." Approximately 25 people assisted with the preparation and planting of the trees. Upchurch was among those who planted the species, and he maintained the site by hoeing weeds and watering the trees to acquire the establishment. The Living Snow Fence project was a partnership between the Hansford County SWCD, USDA-NRCS and the Texas Forest Service.

Joe Vanderburg, NRCS-Soil Conservation Technician said, "Ben was inspired to achieve so many conservation accomplishments because of his love for farming, and although he never personally farmed, his conservation work kept him closely connected to the land."

Upchurch was unknowingly a mentor to many individuals, he made a profound impact on their lives and the land around them.

The Spearman Lynx traveled to Sunray Friday night to open up district play in 6-2A against the Bobcats. I was a little nervous about this game, especially at half-time, but the Lynx came out the second half and took care of business as they rolled over the Sunray Bobcats 27-6. Sunray will be a contender in the district because they do have a good team. The Lynx were not going to be denied this Friday night. Spearman goes to 3-1 on the year and 1-0 in district play.

The first score of the night came as Spearman capitalized on a Sunray mistake. The Bobcats lined up to punt on their second possession from their own 46 yard line and tried to fake it, but the Lynx stopped them short of the first down at Sunray's 48 yard line.

Kevin Beedy connected with Colton Miller on 3rd and 13 and that moved the ball down to the Sunray 22 for a big first down. The Lynx converted on 4th and 2 from the 12 as John Brock picked up another big first down to keep the Lynx alive. Finally, on 3rd and 2 from the 3, Brock ran up the middle for the score with 10:09 left in the 2nd quarter. The PAT kick by Eduard Vasquez was good and the Lynx led 7-0.

The first half was a defensive battle as both teams had a hard time moving the ball, until late in the 2nd quarter. Spearman had to punt into a breeze and Sunray got the ball on the Spearman 37 yard line with 1:07 left before intermission. On 3rd and 1 from the Lynx 27, Sunray's Landon Morton broke loose up the middle and rumbled 27 yards for the TD. The PAT kick failed and the Lynx led at halftime 7-6.

The Lynx have been a second half team so far this year and this game was not any different. They came out in the third quarter and took control of the game. Sunray started their first possession of the second half at their own 29. On 2nd and 8, J. D. Shufeldt hit Sunray's quarterback Kyron Trussell causing him to fumble and Marty Miesner recovered at the Sunray 28. A few plays later, Brock ran up the middle from 5 yards out in the third quarter and took control of the game. Sunray started their first possession of the second half at their own 29. ## From Across The Sea

Editor's Note: The following was written by Gina Gillaspie, Executive Vice-President of the Spearman Chamber of Commerce. Gina and her husband Brian were enroute to Dallas from Paris, France on Tuesday, September 11th. This is her account of the events of that week.

I have always imagined that our lives are much like a stained glass window in progress and that during the course of it, the odd colors and jagged pieces that might not make sense at the time will come together at the end to evidence a beautiful and magnificent work of art that is ours alone - our life. Sometimes it may be hard to understand exactly why certain things happen or certain roads are taken, but when viewed from above and through God's eyes, it surely all makes sense. I have realized that it is not for us to question, but instead to accept the responsibility of choosing our colors wisely and when mistakes are made, to continue the work, and also to realize that our fellow man is creating along side us.

That is why really, this trip to Paris and Rome did not begin with a plane ride over there. It really began much earlier than that.

The trip began with a year's advance planning and saving. Finally, we were on our way to a long awaited vacation of three days in Paris and three days in Rome. We were amazed and awed at the beauty, the structure, and the age of the places we visited. Interestingly, we noticed in Paris that Americans were not the most important things in the life of Parisians. In fact, it seemed as if they could really care less if we were there or not. Everything there was little - the cars, the sidewalks, the streets, and certainly the hotel rooms. In a city of 10 million people who seemed to all smoke and wear black, it was quite obvious that we were tourists and even more so that we were Texans. On to Rome for three days of more of the same in a different country. When we were rearranging the contents of our luggage, we realized that we had left one of our shopping bags filled with gifts and cameras in Paris. This was our tragedy and we spent several hours trying to contact the café that we knew it must be at. Finally, we were able to reach them from an Internet café. We made plans to pay the gentleman to mail it to us. Who knew there was a real tragedy ahead? Who knew that our trip was about to become something we would never forget - for reasons that had been in the making for a very long time.

We flew back to Paris on Tuesday, and were to fly on to Dallas. Everything was according to schedule and we looked forward to having the long flight to look at our books from the Louvre, the Colosseum, and discuss all that we had seen and done. It was a wonderful experience that we were so grateful for and enjoyed so very much, but we were ready to get home. We missed the kids, we wondered about our fish in the pond, we even missed our work.

The flight was uneventful and I was surprised by how empty the plane was. It held 250 passengers, but there were many empty seats. In fact, we moved to the center aisle so that we could have the whole row to stretch out. We would be home before you knew it. Our car was at the Dallas airport, and we planned to stop and see Tracy and her family on the way, as we had not allowed enough time before.

The intercom came on and the pilot in his definite French accent, reported: "Due to circumstances beyond our control, the airspace in the US has been closed and we must return to Paris." We had been traveling nearly 3 hours and were about halfway over the Atlantic. "What?!" "Return to Paris?!" Is that really ALL he was going to say??? Of course you could hear a roar from the passengers as we all began to talk about what in the world was going on. I said to Brian, it must be bad; it must be very, very bad.

Before we reached France, the pilot warned us that the sound we were hearing was the releasing of jet fuel because we were too heavy to land. At that time, we began to think that maybe something was wrong with the plane and they weren't going to tell us until we had landed safely. It was very strange how everyone accepted that that was the way it was and just quietly carried on.

Upon our approach, two of the stewards picked up their telephones at the same time. We were close enough that I had a very good view of their faces. I intently watched the one closest to my side and could tell by the look in his eyes that he was listening to something that when we all heard, would prove dramatic. He looked directly at me too. He knew I was American, and I remember thinking "he knows more" - his face, his eyes, are serious and sad? Scared? Something - what???

In a few moments, we landed and again the pilot, "Ladies and Gentlemen, I am sorry to inform you that there has been an act of terrorism in the United States. The World Trade Center has been crashed into by a hijacked plane, and also the Pentagon." For some reason, the Pentagon made it all seem so much more horrible, even though I knew how many lives must have been lost in New York. There were many shrieks, tears, voices, oh my goodness, how could this happen? What does it all mean?

The stern and cold faces of the Paris we left were replaced with a true and heartfelt compassion that I would see again and again.

I bowed my head in prayer on the plane and tears streamed down my face as I realized the magnitude of what we had just heard. Then it hit me. I told Brian that I feared they had used our own planes in America. It made sense. That's when I thought I might be ill as I realized that Grace or Clay could very possibly be victims. They both fly for different airlines, and both flew in that area at times. (Clay is living in Dallas and is based in Boston. His regular flight is the Boston-Las Angeles flight. He was off the day of the attack, but was on-call. This past Saturday, Clay again flew the Boston-Las Angeles flight. Grace was originally based out of Baltimore and flew the Northeast often. She has since moved to Orlando and still flies all over the U.S. This past weekend she flew to Rhode Island. The day of the attack, she was in Indianapolis.)

The girl next to me was almost in hysterics. She seemed as though she might be Norwegian and had broken English. She was much taller than I, but laid her head on my shoulder and cried that her best friend worked at the Trade Center.

We were led to Area 8 and told that we would all be taken to a nearby hotel. We waited in line for what seemed hours and finally told that we were on our own. It was just something less than chaos but the eerie calmness proved we were all in shock. We tried unsuccessfully to use the pay phones. One girl had been able to get through with her cell phone and spoke to her mother who verified that indeed, American planes had been used and not just one plane had hit the WTC, but two, and the Pentagon, and also a plane in Pennsylvania had been hijacked.

While waiting, many prayed. Again, the French airport personnel were so very kind and helpful. The airport was swarming with military. They were reporting traffic jams, no taxis, no hotel rooms - there were many I wondered about - would they be ok? I felt so grateful to not be alone.

We took a taxi back to the Hotel Burgundy that we had stayed in previously. They had one room left. We were so glad to find they had CNN - we had not even bothered to turn on the TV before. I knew that most laughingly thought how "sad" to be stranded in Paris. But it was. We were not stranded in Paris, - we were stranded away from home. We tried repeatedly to call home while watching the terror unfold before us. Finally, Brian reached the bank and told them we were OK and found that Grace, Clay and Sally were OK, too.

Each day we called the airlines to check the flight status. It was very frustrating as we were told different things each time. At the very beginning, they told us it might be a week before we could leave. We were realizing this might be the case. We did try to go see some other museums that we had not had time to see the first time. We did go back to the café and pick up our package, we did try to enjoy Paris again, but our hearts were at home and we were just so sad.

Finally, the day came that we might be able to leave. We tried Air France and someone finally told us that no foreign carriers were allowed into the US even though we had been given confirmation numbers more than once. We found a flight on Delta that would take us to Atlanta and from there; we would rent a car and drive. We knew quite possibly that was the best we could do, and we were not about to complain.

We arrived at Charles de Gaulle at noon. Our flight to Atlanta left at 2:40 p.m. and we had allowed plenty of time for baggage search and all we knew might occur. The airport was crazy - people, luggage, everywhere. We didn't even know where to stand in line. But I looked up and there before my eyes was a flight to Houston that left at 12:40 p.m. The gates were to close at 12:10. I approached a couple standing there and must have had a very desperate look on my face. I asked if there was any way possible that we might be able to get on that flight. She was beautiful, he was handsome. I remember them being dressed differently than the rest, and they were both very calm among the activity and noise. She looked at him without saying a word, he looked at her, winked, and said to me, "It's possible." At that moment, a bell tolled; it was the time for 3 minutes of silence that our country had asked for. She put her finger to her lips and with a sound motioned, "shhhhhh" - I bowed my head and prayed and again, the tears fell from my eyes for the lives that were forever changed. It was then that I realized the freedom we had. Our technology was superior, we lived in a country that was so apart of us that it went where we went - we had the freedom to pray anywhere and anytime we wanted. When I looked up at her, she had the kindest look in her eyes and smiled a very sad smile. That moment was profound.

The handsome uniformed man motioned to Brian to raise the gate and go through. We proceeded past at least a hundred people that had more than likely been standing there for hours, and it seemed as if they didn't even see us. We had 5 minutes! A seat at one computer suddenly became empty. The lovely woman went to the chair and began typing our information in and weighing our luggage. In Brian's amazement, he kept asking her questions. He apologized and said that it was just he'd been told so many different things. She just smiled. We were on! Not only were we flying to America, we were flying to Texas - and in less than 15 minutes of our arrival at the airport! It was a miracle. I looked her deeply in the eyes and told her she had no idea how grateful I was for what she had done for us and that I would never forget her. As we made our way through customs and x-ray search, I looked up and saw the couple presenting their badges and going past the gate. They disappeared into the crowd.

Our flight was completely booked and it landed in Houston with applause for the captain as he came over the intercom and said "God Bless America and welcome to Texas!"

The long drive back was sprinkled with the uplifting sight of banners, flags, and American pride in every town we went through. Back at home, Brian called his parents. Kathy told him that their church had called a prayer vigil on Tuesday evening, as did many area churches. She also told us that they had prayed for us and for our safety. Brian told her the story of our luck getting on the flight to Houston and about the couple who had helped us. She said, "Oh, that must have been the angel I asked God to send to you." At that moment, the whole thing came into perspective; we had witnessed divine care on our behalf. A community's concern, a church's responsibility, and a mother's earnest prayers. They had made a difference in the way this story played out. I still can't believe how simply it worked, yet how complex it was to have worked the way it did.

Only by looking back was I able to recognize that indeed, Kathy's prayer had been answered and God had sent us a couple of angels. Funny, most everything could be logically explained - but I choose to believe that even if they really were real people and not angels, they had been chosen at that moment in time, only for us, to answer a prayer in our behalf.

Until that moment, I never thought about the fact that WE were the ones being thought about, missed, and prayed for. By those who loved us, by those who liked us, by those who knew us, and perhaps by those who didn't do any of those things.

The one thing that I did begin to notice as I watched the news from my home, is how President Bush quoted the 23rd Psalm in one of his addresses, how the news anchors used the word "prayer" and "unity" and other words that might imply a religious persuasion.

One more thing, Brian and I have taught the 4th and 5th grade Sunday school class at the Methodist Church the past two years. One of the things we felt important was to make these young students aware of the fact that prayer is important - it means something to those we pray for, and it works. Each Sunday, we discussed those who might need our prayers within our community and even outside of it. Everyone signed a letter that included Ephesians 1:16 and a brief message that we had called their name in prayer. Those letters were sent out each week. It was wonderful to hear the voices of those kids and witness their innocent belief. If nothing else, I knew it would make a difference in my life and in Brian's too.

Sometime last year, we decided that our country was definitely a thing we should remember; so weekly we sent a letter to our President at the Whitehouse to let him know that his leadership was something we prayed for. They never expected that he would respond, but this Memorial Day, a letter from the Whitehouse and a photo of President Bush arrived at the Methodist Church. In all, he sent three, two to the church and one to our home. Each letter thanked us for "keeping him in our thoughts." He advised us to "study hard" and "go to school." I explained to the class that our constitution required a separation of church and state and that I felt President Bush really meant more than his letters implied. Even so, it is truly amazing that in his country of nearly 300 million, and in all the correspondence that he receives, he would acknowledge the fact that a handful of 4th & 5th graders from Spearman, Texas would hold him up in prayer.

This says a lot about who and what this man stands for. This says a lot about what God thinks about the prayers of His children.

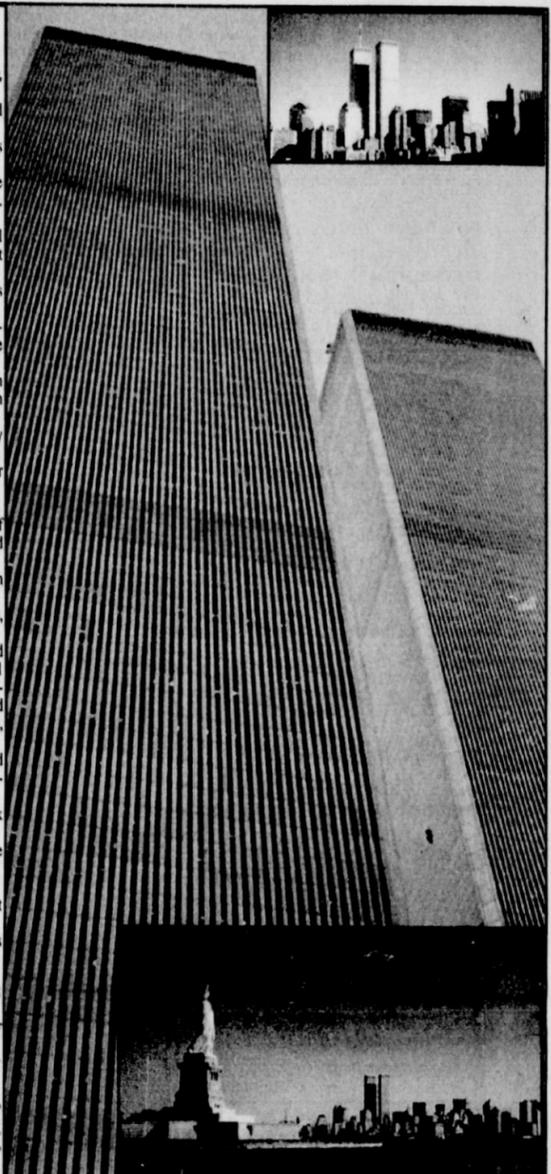

We Texans have all witnessed our governor, a slow and polite Southern gentleman, grow into a world leader in a world crisis - perhaps it is through the hearts and voices of the children right here in Spearman, Texas that have lifted President Bush to travel a path in which he understands that his leadership must include God's presence and guidance and he must be brave enough to claim it - to all the world.

After The Attack

Editor's Note: The following was written by Allison Girvin, an ABC news employee in New York City. It is her thoughts about living in New York City in the aftermath of the terrorist attacks.

I was blow drying my hair on Tuesday, September 11th when my roommate burst into the bathroom to tell me a plane had crashed into the World Trade Center. Like the rest of the world, we watched in amazement as the second plane flew into the second tower. Being in the news business, we threw on clothes and left immediately for work, knowing this was going to be a long day.

Meghan and I live on the Upper East Side of Manhattan. We work on the Upper West Side. Getting to work Tuesday morning was a challenge. Public transportation had been shut down and the park was closed so we had to walk. It took about an hour and a half to get to work, and in that time I was able to witness the initial reaction of this city to the terrorist attack.

The streets of Manhattan at 10 a.m. on Tuesday morning were unreal. Thousands of people were on the sidewalks. They had been told by their bosses to go get their kids and go home. But because there was no public transportation, these people had flooded the streets. Normally that would create a lot of noise-- but not that day. It was silent. The only sounds you heard were sirens from all the emergency vehicles heading downtown. Sirens and radios. People were crowded five and six deep around cars parked on the streets listening to the radio. And no one said a word. It was absolutely unreal.

I spent the next few days basically living at work (and I must say I am very proud of the news coverage all the networks produced). When I did leave, I walked around a city that was pretty much shut down. They say New York City is the city that never sleeps. We slept last week. Stores were closed, ATMs didn't work. Shops put up signs in the window saying, "Closed indefinitely due to the tragedy." The few people you did see on the streets acted about as un-New Yorkish as you can get. They smiled. They made eye contact. They spoke in hushed tones. One man grabbed my arm (something that normally I would most definitely not appreciate) and looked into my eyes and just asked me "are you ok?"

There was white ash everywhere. It looked like it snowed on the City. Even uptown where I live, you could smell the burning fires. We shut our windows and turned on the air conditioning to try to flush out the stench of smoke. Downtown it's even worse. I know you've heard a lot of people say over the last week that the pictures don't do it justice. They are right. The dirty, sooty, cavernous hole filled with mangled steel and glass and debris that makes up the World Trade Center is unbelievable. It's a lot larger in person. The WTC sat on 16 acres alone. The buildings in the blocks around it make up dozens more. All the windows are blown out of the buildings that are still standing. You look at "Ground Zero" and really think there can't even be bodies to pull out of the wreckage. Down there the rescue workers warn you not to stand in one place too long. The ground is still so hot that the soles of your tennis shoes will melt. That's what they are dealing with.

The worst part of this tragedy is the people who lost friends and family. They walk around with pictures pinned to their shirts of their loved ones, hoping people who pass them on the streets will recognize the photo. The makeshift memorial in Union Square is incredible. Thousands of candles fill the entire park. Every fire station you pass from 110th Street all the way down to Battery Park has a mound of flowers and candles and cards out front. It's really quite amazing that even in the wake of a huge crisis a city of more than nine million people can pull together the way New York has.

On Friday morning I called a driver to take me to JFK Airport. I had a plane ticket to fly to San Diego to attend a party for my dad being held in honor of his latest academic achievement-- getting his doctorate. My brother and sister managed to make it out of St. Louis and I was determined to get out of NYC despite the fact the air space over New York and New Jersey was closed. When I arrived at JFK in the torrential rain, the police wouldn't let me out of the car. So I told the driver to take me to LaGuardia. After seven hours at the airport with about ten other cynical New Yorkers who simply refused to believe the airspace would actually stay closed (and dozens of US Marshalls in fatigues with guns bigger than me), I managed to get on the first plane to leave the City in three days. It was one of two planes leaving LaGuardia that day in order to be repositioned. There were about 10 people on board, most of whom were airline personnel.

As we taxied down the runway the pilot got on the intercom and told us he thought we were very courageous to be on this airplane. The flight attendant finally gave up trying to serve the few of us drinks. Her hands were shaking so badly she was spilling soda all over the place. Finally, about 24 hours after my day started, I managed to get to San Diego. I made it to the party. It was great and I was really glad to be there for my Dad. Then I came back to New York.

By Tuesday, one week after the attack, the City had returned to a semblance of normalcy. The subways are running again. The park is reopened. Aside from the pictures on TV, the solemn faces on the streets, and the army brigade up and down 5th Avenue, life looks the same. But, of course, for many here, it isn't the same. Once the smoke clears for good and the bodies are all recovered, New York will have to face the reality of a terrible economic forecast. No one quite knows yet what this attack will do to our city long term. In the meantime, there are still long lines to donate blood. There are still collections circulating to help the recovery effort. And there are still the lingering smells of smoke in the air.

I wonder if New York is a changed place. If the people will forever be quieter, softer. My cabbie yesterday handed me a little American flag when I paid my fare. He told me he was from Bangladesh and had a cousin who died in the WTC attack. He said he will hand out the American flags until the day he stops driving a cab. And that makes me a little bit sad. Cabbies are supposed to cuss at you in foreign languages when you start arguing about the fastest way to get to TriBeCa from the Upper East Side. They aren't supposed to hand you little American flags.

Yet, life goes on. And life in New York is no different. Mayor Giuliani has been fabulous. He told people to open their stores and go back to work. And they did. The Mets played last night. Shows are playing on Broadway. I am going to an Irish Pub Crawl tonight.

New York will recover. We may never go back to the way we were, but we will go forward to a new and better place. One thing is for sure, any doubts I had about living here (which were few to begin with) went down with the Twin Towers. In the last week and a half I have seen a city that knows about courage, strength, and compassion. There's no place like New York City. There never has been, and there never will be.
