Dealership holds ribbon-cutting

Hereford Buick-Pontiac, GMC Trucks, Inc., formerly Stagner-Orsborn, held a ribbon-cutting ceremony Friday to signal a name change, remodeling and reorganization. Principals in the dealership are pictured front center behind the giant scissors: Earl and Joy Stagner, John Stagner, and J.L. and Linda Marcum.

Hereford Hustlers from Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce and guests were present for the event, which was followed by refreshments during the day and drawings each hour for $100 in Hereford Bucks.

FATHERS AND SONS

"It is a dad's dream to have his family work with him. My son-in-law buys our commodities. The whole family is involved in the operation." Ed and Bob agree that the advantage of being a family business is living in close proximity to each other.

"We keep close because we all live in the same area," said Ed. "We get to see the grandkids and I see Bob and Rodney here everyday."

"I think being a family, they (Bob and Rodney) take more interest in their job. We don't disagree. Bob probably would like to, but he doesn't," he joked. "We all communicate very well together."

"We look forward to seeing each other everyday. I never dreamed I would be in a business that I enjoyed so much."

To make it easier on the family-business situation, the Barretts find it advantageous to leave the business at work.

"We don't discuss business outside of work," Ed said. "We've always tried to do that and it just works out better."

"Out here it is easier to take off when we need to," Bob said. "We know when we do everything will be okay."

"It is a warm feeling to fulfill the dream of having my family work with me," Ed said beaming with pride.

Hollis and Wes Klett have been working together for less than a year at Nutrition Service Associates.

"It is nice to have that time with Wes," said Hollis. "I feel I have a trust in my son as a confidant. He is one person I know I can trust."

The Kletts find it hard sometimes to separate their personal life from their business association.

"You have to separate your personal and business life," Hollis said. "We try to keep it at that point."

"It is hard to know when I'm on or off the job," Wes said. "Sometimes it's hard to know when he is my father and when he is my employer."

Hollis said it was a surprise and a delight that his son wanted to get into business with him after spending nine years in the Air Force.

"I think Wes may be at a disadvantage because he is the boss's son. I hope others will accept him for what he is and not the boss's son. I see what he can do and I am proud of what he can do."

Wes is still trying to please his father with his accomplishments.

"I enjoy doing a good job on a project he asked me to do," Wes said. "I like him being impressed with my job. It's a good feeling to be successful because of the guidance he has given me on a project."

Wes is glad to be able to work with his father and sees it as an opportunity to get to know his father again.

"When I was in the Air Force we didn't have much to talk about," Wes said of he and his father. "I think we get along better and are closer to each other because we have something to talk about."

Passing the farm on generation to generation is important.

Bill and Cory Walden are second and third generation farmers and hope to keep the dream alive.

"I see so many kids these days leave the farm to go to school," said

Bill. "These days the farmers are getting older and it thrills me that Cory decided to stay on the farm."

"I never considered doing anything else," said Cory. "I don't know what else I would do."

"I'm thankful I'm in a position where I get to work with my dad. My way of thinking may be different from dad's, but I'm always asking for advise."

"Cory and I do so many things alike that I don't ever have to worry that the farm isn't being taken care of," Bill said. "I enjoy seeing Cory everyday. At the end of the day we discuss what were going to do the next day and know where the other will be."

Working close helps build a special relationship between Bill and Cory.

"I'm just thankful dad chose the agricultural route," Cory said. "I know it has been hard for him. I'm thankful it will be passed down."

Carrying on the family business is important to all the fathers and they are all proud to be working in a close family relationship with their sons.

Shuttle mission continues for four astronauts

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) - Four of Columbia's seven astronauts will spend a dizzy week spinning in a rotating chair, pedaling exercise bikes and zooming sideways on a sled now that their shuttle is back on Earth.

Through the post-flight research, which continues today, scientists hope to learn more about the effects of zero-gravity during long space flights.

"If we as a nation decide to continue to put people in space and send them to planets, we need to understand what weightlessness does to them," said project scientist Mel Buderer.

The research required NASA to kill half the shuttle's 29 rats and many of its 2,478 jellyfish after Friday's landing at this Mojave Desert military base, said National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokeswoman Jane Hutchison.

"They can provide information we can't obtain from humans," she said. Jellyfish organs that control their movement are similar to parts of the human inner ear that control balance.

The astronauts and orbiter appeared in good condition after "a great mission," said space shuttle program director Robert Crippen. "Machines don't fly any better than that," he said of the shuttle.

Although there had been some concern that a broken seal might prevent the shuttle's cargo bay doors from closing tightly for re-entry, no problems developed.

Failure of the doors to close tightly could have caused the shuttle to burn up during re-entry.

Shuttle commander Bryan O'Connor, pilot Sid Gutierrez and mission specialist Tamara Jernigan flew home to Houston six hours after Columbia ended its nine-day, 3.8 million-mile journey.

"It's good to be home," Jernigan told a small crowd gathered in Houston for the trio's return.

Astronaut-physicians James Bagian, F. Andrew Gaffney and M. Rhea Seddon and astronaut-cell biologist Millie Hughes-Fulford remained behind for the additional tests. They won't leave until late next week.

The four astronauts will undergo blood, lung, heart and other tests at the Baseline Data Collection Facility - NASA lingo for a warehouse divided into small rooms containing various equipment.

Earlier samples of the astronauts' blood, urine and saliva were in fine condition despite troubles with refrigerator-freezers on the shuttle, Crippen said.

Besides the rotating chair, exercise bicycles and sideways-accelerating sled, the four astronauts remaining in California will endure "a rail test to see if they can walk on a narrow rail," said Ron White, NASA's program scientist for the mission.

Four will be inducted into CHOF

Four famed Western women will be inducted into the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame on June 28 at an induction ceremony and luncheon at the Hereford Senior Center.

Tickets for the luncheon are $15 per person and are available by calling the CHOF at 364-5252.

The luncheon and ceremony begins at 11:30 a.m. and will include black light trick roping by Joan Wells, 1989 Cowgirl honoree. Roberta Courtney Meyers of Taos, N.M., will give a dramatic presentation on each of the honorees' lives.

The 1991 Western Heritage honorees are Mary Ann "Molly" Goodnight and Georgia O'Keeffe. The 1991 Cowgirl honorees are Lynn "Jonnie" Jonckowski and Nancy Kelley Sheppard.

Here are biographical sketches on each of the honorees:

MARY ANN "MOLLY" GOODNIGHT

Molly Goodnight (1839-1926) was the wife of Col. Charles Goodnight, a name synonymous with enterprise, honesty, valor, chuckwagons, cattle trails, range management and the development of the beef industry in the United States.

A fourth-generation pioneer born in Kentucky, Molly was a Texan from the age of 14, except for a few years spent in Colorado. She had very little formal education, yet she taught school and built schools and a college. She bore no children, but she raised several and is widely revered as "The Little Mother of the Plains." She lived in simple, remote, isolated homes, yet she was famous for her hospitality and ability as a hostess.

She was a white woman in a bigoted era, but her friendships included black, white and red. She was as vulnerable to poverty as any woman but rose above those things to make her home a house of joy.

Molly was the first White woman to settle on the Texas High Plains. Phebe K. Warner wrote of her old friend "Perhaps the most unique work and that which reflects most vividly the depth and tenderness of her sympathy and the great forethought of her Creator was the gathering up of a few little motherless buffalo calves that had been left to starve and die because their hides were not worth the skinning by the heartless commercial hunters of the East who (almost) completely exterminated this original pride of the plains, the American buffalo..."

"That the future generations of Texas children might see and enjoy at least one feature of the plains, Mr. Goodnight told her husband and brothers if they would go out in the canyon and bring in some of those helpless little calves she would raise them by hand and try to preserve and perpetuate their species for Texas."

Molly Goodnight has been honorably credited with preventing the complete extinction of the buffalo through the determined development of the Goodnight Buffalo and Cattalo Park.

GEORGIA O'KEEFFE

Georgia O'Keeffe (1887-1986) was a pioneer in many ways, and was the 1977 recipient of our nation's highest civilian honor, the Medal of Freedom.

Born on a farm in Wisconsin, she chose the desert Southwest for her permanent home because it made her feel as if she "belonged" and she treasured the silence and privacy of its "wonderful emptiness." Author Edward Abrahms said, "the light coming on the plains, the title of more than one of her paintings, captured her imagination, and she returned to the wide-open desert again and again, both as a motif for painting and, eventually, as a place to live permanently."

Mark Stevens, in Vanity Fair in November 1987, said "Exchanging husband for solitude, city for country, and, in a way, Europe for America, O'Keeffe came to embody the pioneer spirit...she had all the right prejudices...she liked being alone, and much preferred land to people...O'Keeffe also looked the pioneer part."

In true pioneer fashion, Georgia hewed her own niche in the art world, building an enduring legacy. Recalling a crossroads in 1915, she said, "After careful thought I decided that I wasn't going to spend my life doing what had already been done."

In her formative years Georgia caught stirring glimpses of new frontiers in the world of art, frontiers both modern and abstract, with bold scouts breaking trail. In the best pioneer tradition, she joined and traveled with artists' caravans for a time, only to return again and again to her first love: the simplicity of nature, most beloved to her in common objects like flowers, rocks and bones. Her greatest works are sensitive portrayals of such objects.

Georgia wrote: "When I came to New Mexico in the summer of 1929, I was so crazy about the country that I thought, how can I take part of it with me to work on? There was nothing to see in the land in the way of a flower. There were just dry bones. So I picked them up. To me they are as beautiful as anything I know. To me they are strangely more living than the animals walking around--hair, eyes and all, with their tail twitching. The bones seem to cut sharply to the center of something that is keenly alive on the desert even though it is vast and empty and untouchable--and know no kindness with all its beauty. Wherever I go I have an eye out for rocks...Stones, bones, clouds--experience gives me shapes..."

LYNN "JONNIE" JONCKOWSKI

Jonnie Jonckowski is a tall, attractive woman athlete who possesses two world champion bull rider titles in women's pro rodeo, along with her selection by Cable News Network as "Woman of the 80s." Thirty-six years old, she makes her home on a country place near Billings, Montana, and exults in the prospect of joining her heroine and inspiration, Alice Greenough Orr, as a Cowgirl Honoree into the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center.

While consulting with Maynor Productions as they film her life story for release as a movie, Jonnie continues to rodeo and sometimes works as a model, rodeo spokeswoman, sports broadcaster and Hollywood stuntwoman. All the while she perpetuates women in pro rodeo. (See HONOREES, Page 5A)

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says if you think we're getting too much government, just be thankful we're not getting as much as we're paying for.

Found in a church bulletin: "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver. He also accepteth from a grouch."

"Now I know I'm getting old," the father said. "I was watching the Tonight Show with my daughter, and she asked, 'Who's that gray-haired guy filling in for Jay Leno?'"

Advertising in The Brand does pay! Just ask the First National Bank!

We struck a deal with the bank, on May 26, to advertise for 3 inches of rain in Deaf Smith County by June 10. The Brand guaranteed results, with FNB to pay the cost of the full page ad if it rained 3 inches or more, two-thirds of the cost if it rained two inches, or one-third the cost if we got an inch of moisture.

The Brand lucked out on the deal, since the official total at the KPAN weather station was 3.12 inches by the deadline, so the bank pays full price!

We understand Don Graham, FNB president, is accepting contributions from farmers and backyard gardeners for the bank's part in bringing the rains!

Of course the ad was published in a light-hearted vein, pointing out that no one other than a kind and loving God is capable of bringing the much-needed moisture.

An "awesome sight" is in store for about 40 million people when a total solar eclipse occurs July 11, and many millions more will be able to see a partial eclipse.

An education program is already underway to warn people about the dangers of looking at the sun with the naked eye.

An AP wire story last week in The Brand explained that this will be the longest solar eclipse for the next 140 years, and it will occur in a 160-mile wide strip stretching from Hawaii to Mexico. The last total eclipse that passed through Texas was in 1900 and the next won't be until 2024.

In a solar eclipse, the moon passes between the sun and earth, blocking out part or all of the light from the sun. At certain locations, like Mexico, this total eclipse will turn day into night with the brighter stars and planets becoming visible, and the temperature may drop a few degrees. The total eclipse will last up to seven minutes, and one of that length will not occur again until the 22nd century.

At no time during the eclipse will it be safe to observe the sun with the naked eye in the United States, or anywhere else where any part of the sun's surface is visible, warns an astronomical group.

As reported in the AP story, thousands of people will be traveling into Mexico to see the eclipse. Tourist reservations have been booked in Hawaii, Baja, Calif., and Mexico City for a long time. In Texas, Brownsville probably will offer the best view as 78 percent of the sun will be eclipsed. In Corpus Christi, 70 percent of the sun will be hidden at the height of the eclipse. More people will be viewing this than any other eclipse in history.

We'll be hearing much more about the awesome event before July 11!

Babbling Brooks

Why did God decide I would be born with Messy Desk Syndrome?

Only a few of us are afflicted with this illness, which is incurable. Many famous people suffer from this debilitating illness. Like the "Perfesser" in the comic strip "Shoe." And me. There are probably others.

My desk right now is pretty much a mess. There are unorganized stacks, cassette tapes, one calendar that says May 24 (it's June 13 as I write) and another that says June 12. Oh well, it's early in the morning, so it hasn't been June 13 for that long. For that matter, it hasn't been June that long. My calendar turning has been worse.

I have the "Cowgirl Hall of Fame" stack over here, with stuff I've typed up to run in the paper between now and the Rhinestone Roundup. Over there is Joe Weaver's library book. Over yonder is Mauri Montgomery's World War II book, which he'll get back as soon as I get Al Neuharth's book back.

Right under my hockey puck paper weight is a stack of stuff for this edition of the paper, unneatly organized and ready to go.

I've always had this affliction. I saw Jane Pollard last weekend. Jane is the wife of Frank Pollard, the pastor of the First Baptist Church of Jackson, Miss. They had a 100th anniversary deal at the First Baptist in Dimmitt last week and invited Frank, a former pastor there, to preach last Sunday. Frank baptized me, and though he's probably baptized thousands, he remembered me.

So did his wife, my reading teacher in the seventh grade. She probably remembered me because I had the most disorganized notebook and the messiest desk. I went to class one day only to discover that Jane had put my desk out in the hall. I had to clean it out before I could move back into class.

The messy desk and notebook didn't hurt my grade. I made an A. My messy desk started early in life. I can remember my Kindergarten teacher, Mrs. Unger (how come we remember the names of all of our teachers?), getting on me because of my messy desk.

Maybe someone out there has a cure. I've had a million suggestions (including "Clean This Desk Up Now" from employers) but they haven't seemed to help.

Here it is, another Father's Day. It just hasn't meant a whole lot to me since my own dad died 28 long years ago.

I remember the good times, and I've pushed the stormy stuff out of my mind. My dad was no saint, but that doesn't mean he wasn't a good man. My dad would give any stranger the shirt off his back, and did several times.

I remember one time when we were living in Arizona and were coming to Texas on vacation. This was back in the early 60s, back when service stations were just that. You could even get your water jugs iced--for free. We had pulled into a service station out in New Mexico, getting our old Mercury filled up, refilling the old window air conditioners with gyp water and getting our water jug iced. A black family pulled into the station, just wanting to get a fill-up and get their jug iced.

"We don't do that for your kind," the attendant said. They wouldn't even let him fill up his water jug.

"C'mere," my dad said. "You're welcome to some ice water over here." They came over and we shared some good, cold ice water with them.

It's a lesson that had a big impact on me. People are just people. My dad loved them all.

If your dad is still around, I hope you'll take a minute (or several) and give him the big hug he deserves. Thank him for all he's done for you. And thank him again, and again and again.

Then thank him one more time, for those of us who never got the chance to properly thank our dads.

When God created fathers . . .

(The following Father's Day feature by Erma Bombeck was first published in The Brand on June 19, 1977.)

WHEN GOD CREATED FATHERS . . .

When the good Lord was creating fathers, he started with a tall frame.

And a female angel nearby said, "What kind of father is that? If You're going to make children so close to the ground, why have You put fathers so high? He won't be able to shoot marbles without kneeling, tuck a child in bed without bending, or even kiss a child without a lot of stooping."

And God smiled and said, "Yes, but if I make him child-size, who would children have to look up to?"

And when God made a father's hands, they were large and sinewy.

And the angel shook her head sadly and said, "Do You know what You're doing? Large hands are clumsy. They can't manage diaper pins, small buttons, rubber bands on pony tails or even remove splinters caused by baseball bats."

And God smiled and said, "I know, but they're large enough to hold everything a small boy empties from his pockets at the end of a day. . .yet small enough to cup a child's face."

And then God molded long, slim legs and broad shoulders.

An AP news analysis

Bush scorns Congress' ability

By WALTER R. MEARS

AF Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - Send out for congressional pizza, President Bush was saying, and it probably will be delivered cold. That may be a taste of the 1992 presidential campaign.

Bush came up with the pizza test in defending an administration domestic agenda he claimed is ambitious and Democrats call just about invisible.

He concentrated his complaints on the frustrating habits of Congress; no names, not even of the party that controls the place. But the political message was implicit: Congress is Democratic, Congress is inefficient, voters may draw their own conclusions.

Bush said Americans do not understand "the complications and the inaction and the bickering" on Capitol Hill.

"But we cannot let Congress discourage or deter us from meeting our responsibilities," Bush said told about 1,000 guests on the White House lawn Wednesday night.

It was intended to put his domestic policy and philosophy on display. It also displayed a theme that may be part of his coming presidential campaign, playing to the sentiment against congressional incumbents that showed up last time, narrowing re-election margins and giving rise to the term limit laws.

Bush complained about the "hundreds of committees," endless debates, costly, complicated legislation, arguing that the country is going to have to work around Congress do get things done.

While he prefers foreign policy and has said so, Bush insisted that he does, too, have a domestic agenda. It irks him when people say otherwise.

People do. Democratic leaders were, before and after an address they dismissed as political gimmickry and Congress-bashing.

In his Persian Gulf victory speech, Bush had challenged Congress to pass a crime bill and a transportation bill within 100 days, which run out on Friday. Neither bill will make it by then; Bush said he was disappointed but not surprised.

While there were suggestions after the war that he used the momentum of victory to push new initiatives to deal with home front problems, Bush stuck with the limited lineup he'd already offered.

The president is, after all, a conservative. He'd oppose the kind of domestic initiatives some Democrats want, even if there were money available to pay for new programs. There isn't.

So the Bush emphasis is on measures less dramatic than Democratic proposals for national health insurance, middle-income tax cuts, recession relief.

The transportation bill is a revised renewal of an old program, and has to be passed by Oct. 1. Republicans have been involved in the delay, in a dispute over the highway aid formula.

The crime bill is contentious because of differences on the death penalty, criminal appeals, and now handgun controls.

"I wasn't asking the Congress to deliver a hot pizza in less than 30 minutes," he said. "That would be revolutionary for Congress. I only ask for two pieces of legislation in 100 days."

Elsewhere on his domestic front, Bush also is pushing an education reform program; while it is no bonanza he says grass roots Americans are starting to understand that just adding money in Washington won't fix what's wrong in the schools.

There's an administration energy plan, with the stress on expanding supplies, not on government mandated conservation to restrict demand.

In a pep talk to Senate Republicans a month ago, Bush said, "I am sick and tired of people saying we don't have a domestic agenda, because they've got their eyes closed or because they don't want to hear, because we've got a good one."

But the president prefers to deal with foreign policy and international matters, and he's said so.

When Bush went to St. Paul, Minn., on May 22 to promote his education reform plan, a schoolboy asked what he likes best about his job. "I love coping with the problems in foreign affairs," the president replied.

Then, as if reminding himself that it was a day for domestic programs, he added:

"We've got to do better in education, we've got to do better in fighting against drugs and crime. . . I like that part of the job, trying to do something that'll help somebody, trying to do something that will enhance the peace."

When the White House was negotiating the 1990 budget deal with the Democratic Congress, Bush said he wouldn't quarrel with the idea that he is more comfortable handling foreign affairs. He said there's more backing and less bargaining when a president is dealing with international questions.

"People really, basically, want to support the president on foreign affairs and partisanship does, in a sense, stop at the water's edge," he said. "Whereas on domestic policy, here I am with Democratic majorities in the Senate and Democratic majorities in the House, having to try to persuade them to do what I think is best."

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor,

It has been my privilege to serve in the honor guard at Sugarland Mall this spring for the "welcome home" ceremonies for the soldiers.

Each event shows the character of our city and county. Every song, every speech, every tribute paid to these men and women is truly deserved. All the above are emotional moments to be treasured by everyone.

The term "soldier" means a brave, skillful or experienced warrior, one who serves loyally in any cause. Young men and women, Army, Navy, Marines and Air Force, are the soldiers we salute. As one of the speakers said, "They were willing to give their lives for us."

From the Boston Globe, June 25, 1967: "In the end, laws which attempt to inculcate patriotism are doomed to fail. They are the work not of genuine patriots but of patrioteers--narrow mean who care too little for the values of individual liberty their country exemplifies. For true patriotism is a form of love, and love cannot be coerced. It must always be freely given."

Dear Editor:

I want to express my thanks to everyone at Deaf Smith General Hospital for the wonderful care they gave me during my recent critical illness. Their care was second to none.

Dr. Vinther was my physician and Hereford is very fortunate that this fine doctor moved to Hereford. I highly recommend our hospital. We need to use it so we can keep it open.

Sincerely,
Bonnie Manley

HONOREES

Only the intervention of a serious back injury kept Jonnie out of the 1976 Olympic trials. Although she is accomplished in many sports she prefers bull riding, for which she trains rigorously, running eight to ten miles and spending another three hours in the gym daily. Her prowess in the event has earned her the respect of pro rodeo competitors, men and women alike, perhaps an even higher honor than her world titles. While she can exult in the adulation of fans who are awed that a woman would even attempt to ride bulls, Jonnie knows the pros can't be fooled, and their praise is the only kind she truly takes to heart.

She started earning those bona fide compliments back in 1977, when she studied rodeo in a school taught by world champion pro rodeo cowboys Bruce Ford and Bobby Berger. Hesitant at first to accept a woman, they discovered her true grit as she made it all the way through the last ride, one of only 30 students to survive that long from an original enrollment of 106. She was rated second in the class.

As every top hand will tell you, physical fitness and conditioning are your best insurance policies against injury. Jonnie's body is amazingly hard and strong, but when 140 pounds and 1,600 pounds clash head-on, it's not hard to figure who will bend first.

Jonnie has been not only but also broken, skull to toe, and she's well-branded by scars, none of which has cooled her ardor for her chosen sport.

NANCY KELLEY SHEPPARD

Nancy Kelley Sheppard of Globe, Arizona, is a working ranch wife whose family tree contains four generations of Texas ranchers. She's a proud and extremely attractive grandmother, busy with art, mining and construction enterprises and the activities of cattle raisers and Democratic women.

Few people have realized that she was a nationally famous rodeo star in the 1940s and 50s. She started collecting accolades early. At the tender age of three, a Fort Worth beauty shop honored her as "The Most Beautiful Child With The Most Beautiful Hair." At nine, she made her first appearance as a trick rider and roper at a professional rodeo in California. She worked the Pendleton Round-Up, one of rodeo's "Big Four," at the age of 11.

Her rodeo career, begun in 1939, lasted until 1961. During that time Nancy starred at least once in most of America's major rodeos and often had return engagements. She performed from coast to coast, uniquely melding the difficult skill of trick riding and trick roping into her own specialty: the thrilling hippodrome stand executed at a run while simultaneously spinning a loop in each hand. In two decades of pursuing a reckless and dangerous profession, her only serious injury was a broken leg sustained when she tumbled into a grandstand observation pit.

Designing and tailoring her own stylish costumes, training her own trick riding horses, traveling multiple thousands of miles and thrilling literally millions of fans, Nancy Kelley became nationally known. She was interviewed on television, sought after by major Western wear firms as a model and consultant and offered a leading role with Republic Films. She had her own New York-based fan club and made celebrity tours of hospitals. In the 1950s her peers in the Rodeo Cowboys Association elected her as contract representative.

In striking contrast to her athletic skill and outdoor competence, Nancy is artistically creative and finds release in writing poetry and fiction, as well as turning the bits of Indian pottery she collects into framed works of art.

In addition to her numerous pursuits, Nancy Sheppard enjoys donating her time and expertise to help young people interested in horsemanship and roping.

'Bob Bankwagon' rolls through Amarillo streets

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - Amarillo residents look twice when they see the red double decker bus roll by.

Kids demand rides. Some adults ask for hot dogs or snow cones.

Those who ask for money, though, get served.

The First National Bank of Amarillo has opened Texas' only fully-staffed mobile branch, believed to be the world's only bank in a double decker bus.

"It's a functional bank as well as a moving landmark," said Don Powell, the bank's chief executive officer. "Some people look at it and don't know what to make of it."

"We had a guy come up and order a cheeseburger and fries the other day," said Margaret Ward, the branch's head teller. "They will catch on eventually."

The 13-foot-tall bus, nicknamed Bob the Bankwagon, takes three tellers and an armed guard on a daily tour of company parking lots, retirement homes, parks and other public gathering spots in Amarillo.

Customers walk or drive up to conduct business with the tellers or the automatic teller machine.

"We can cash checks, conduct deposits, withdrawals, everything that we do at a branch bank," said Millie Bingham, vice president in charge of marketing for First National.

Joseph Burbridge, a national bank examiner for the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency in Dallas, helped approve First National's application for a mobile branch bank.

"You wouldn't expect to find a double decker bus in the bank business. We handle all types of applications, but I have never seen anything like this," Burbridge said.

First National and a bank in Tennessee are the only two banks in the country with staffed mobile branches, he said.

First National bought the bus in 1985 for $30,000 from an import dealership in Virginia to use for promotions or chauffeuring important visitors to the Panhandle city.

But in 1987, the engine went kaput, just as the Texas economy was doing the same. Unable to justify the cost of a new engine, bank officials put the bus in storage.

With business better, First National this spring gave the 24-year-old bus a $100,000 refurbishing.

They created a plush but under-sized bank office inside. Counters along the walls hold 10-key adding machines, a mobile phone and a fax machine. They are attached with Velcro to avoid slippage.

There is also a computer linked to the bank's main office by microwave, allowing tellers to call up a customer's account information within seconds.

Two windows on the side of the bus enable customers to conduct walk-up transactions, while a window at the back is used for drive-up service.

If there's a demand for it, the bank will handle loan applications on the second floor, where there's a couch, two chairs, a kitchen and restroom.

"Investing in Bob shows prospective customers that we are progressive and willing to make the extra step to bring the business to them," Powell said.

"We are looking at this as a real money maker for us. We want it to be fun, but it is also serious business."

To let customers know the English-built bus did not simply end up in West Texas by making a wrong turn at the Atlantic Ocean, the bank is running TV commercials that feature the mobile branch and taking it to area fairs and parades.

The attention the bus has received prompted some of the bank's competitors to jokingly threaten to put tacks down along Bob's route.

But driving the bus is hard enough already. It is taller than most trees in Amarillo, its steering wheel is on the right side instead of the left and it won't fit just anywhere.

"We have to pick our parking spots carefully," said Jerry Polvado, a senior vice president for the bank. "We try and take the back streets to wherever we're going. Bob's no speed burner. If we ever get a traffic ticket, it will be for going too slow, not speeding."

The prairie wind is also a factor in maneuvering the bus.

"We try to point Bob into the wind," Polvado said. "A good strong gust of this West Texas wind kicks up from the side and you can feel the bus shake."

A Few Stolen Moments With Dad

No matter how old we get, it seems like the times spent with Dad are unique and special. There is something about Fathers — an instinctive something — that breeds a bonding unlike any other we experience in our lives. With Dad we share a certain pride in our accomplishments — from the short distance with no training wheels through the years' journey to graduation. Just as though it was yesterday, we can remember walks with him laughing all the way to the fishing hole, crying all the way to the altar.

On this Father's Day, First National Bank extends to you our wishes for a memorable day and a few stolen moments with the man you call Dad.

Hereford's Castillo signs with Odessa

Hereford's Teresa Castillo, the 1991 4A state champion in the 3,200-meter run, has signed a letter of intent to run track and cross country at Odessa College.

Castillo was also pursued by Arkansas and Angelo State, but Arkansas offered only to pay tuition, while Odessa will give her a full ride. "I couldn't argue with them paying everything," Castillo said. "Since it's a junior college, I thought I'd go there two years and transfer—maybe to Arkansas."

Martha Emerson, who coached Castillo in cross country and track at Hereford High School, said it was a good opportunity for Castillo.

"I think it's a good deal for her," Emerson said. "I know the coach (Liz Parke) down there, and she's really excited about having Teresa." In addition to the 3,200 title this year, Castillo finished third in the 1,600. She also went to three state finals in cross country in her career, finishing second in the fall of 1990.

Dodgers on streak; Astros rally again

By The Associated Press
President Bush and the Los Angeles Dodgers have a lot in common right now. They're both heavy favorites.

Bush was among the 39,041 at Dodger Stadium on Friday night as the Dodgers got another solid start from Orel Hershiser and a game-winning single from Lenny Harris with one out in the ninth inning to beat St. Louis 2-1.

It was Hershiser's fourth start since returning from surgery on his right shoulder.

The victory opened the Dodgers' lead over second-place Atlanta to three games in the National League West.

Hershiser gave up no runs and six hits in six innings, walking four and striking out two. He left with a 1-0 lead but Todd Zeile's RBI single off Tim Crews tied the score in the eighth.

Reds 4, Phillies 2

Tom Browning gave up two runs and seven hits in 8 1-3 innings for his fifth win in his last six starts as Cincinnati beat Philadelphia at Veterans Stadium.

Browning (9-4) struck out four and walked two in pitching the Reds to their fifth victory in the last six games. Rob Dibble got the last two outs for his NL-leading 17th save.

The Reds snapped a 2-2 tie in the eighth off Terry Mulholland (6-6).

Expos 2, Braves 1

Gilberto Reyes' run-scoring pinch single in the seventh inning broke a tie as Montreal beat Tom Glavine and Atlanta at Olympic Stadium.

The Expos prevented Glavine (10-3) from taking over the major-league lead in wins despite managing only five hits off the left-hander in seven innings.

Mark Gardner (2-3) gave up four hits in seven innings.

Astros 4, Mets 1

Houston roughed up New York relief ace John Franco for the second time this week as the visiting Astros scored three runs in the ninth inning to beat the Mets.

Franco gave up all three runs in the ninth inning on four hits to fall to 1-6. Mike Capel (1-1) pitched two innings of scoreless relief.

Cubs 7, Padres 3

Ryne Sandberg scored three runs and added a run-scoring double to help Danny Jackson win for the first time this season as Chicago beat San Diego.

Jackson (1-2) worked five scoreless innings, allowing three hits, in his second start since recovering from a strained left groin that kept him on the disabled list from April 20 to June 9.

The Cubs touched San Diego starter Andy Benes (4-7) for five runs and 10 hits in 4 2-3 innings.

Giants 3, Pirates 2

Willie McGee, who earlier extended his hitting streak to 18 games, homered with one out in the eighth inning to lift San Francisco over Pittsburgh at Candlestick Park.

McGee drove a 2-0 pitch from Zane Smith (7-5) over the right-field fence for his fourth homer of the season.

Francisco Oliveras (2-2) worked the eighth, striking out two, for the victory. Dave Righetti pitched the ninth inning for his seventh save.

Twins win 13th in row

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The top story in Minnesota this week is the U.S. Open golf tournament, for sure. But the Twins are making big news, too.

The Twins set a team record with their 13th straight victory Friday night, winning 7-0 in Cleveland.

Shane Mack hit a grand slam and drove in five runs and Jack Morris (8-5) won his fifth consecutive start. The Indians, meanwhile, were shut out for the third straight time, matching a club record and one shy of the major league mark.

Kent Hrbek hit a two-run homer in the third inning off Jeff Shaw (0-1).

In other games, Boston beat California 9-4, Texas topped New York 8-4, Toronto trounced Baltimore 9-1, Chicago defeated Kansas City 9-3 and Detroit downed Seattle 5-1. The Oakland at Milwaukee game was rained out.

Red Sox 9, Angels 4

Ellis Burks hit a three-run homer that capped a seven-run rally in the seventh inning and led Boston past California at Fenway Park.

Roger Clemens (9-3) allowed two earned runs on eight hits in his third complete game.

Stewart leads U.S. Open

CHASKA, Minn. (AP) - In all the mud and rain and craziness, Payne Stewart is sashaying around the U.S. Open without a smudge on his white stockings and barely a blot on his score.

Stewart's flamboyance, in vivid contrast to the three plain-vanilla guys chasing him from a stroke behind, is snapping the tournament out of its somberness.

In fashioning a 70 Friday to go with his opening-round 67, Stewart was less daring in his play than he was in his dress - eye-popping red knickers and cap, white stockings and blouse, white shoes with red trim and gold-tipped toes.

Volleyball camp nearing

Applications are still being accepted for the annual Lady Whiteface Summer Volleyball Camp to be held July 15-19 at the Hereford Junior High School gymnasium.

Girls entering the fourth-ninth grades are eligible for the camp, which will include mass drills; passing, setting, serving, hitting and digging skills development; and offensive and defensive concepts adjusted to each camper's skill level. There will also be team play, tournaments, and a grass tournament which is new to this year's camp.

He took the safe, smart route around Hazeltine National, the same approach favored by his main challengers - 1987 champion Scott Simpson, Corey Pavin and Nolan Henke - who tied at 138.

Pavin turned in the best round of the day, 67, after a sizzling 31 on the front nine.

This is a course of narrow fairways and deep rough that charges heavily for mistakes, as Seve Ballesteros, Curtis Strange and Lee Trevino found out by missing the cut.

Meanwhile, Jack Nicklaus bogeyed four of the first six holes to tumble to a 76-146, nine shots back

Prison stay rehabilitating ex-Carter star

By ANNE BELLI

The Dallas Morning News MIDWAY, Texas (AP) - The young man was quietly writing a letter in his prison cell when a guard making the nightly rounds stopped to stare.

"Derric Evans?" the guard asked. The former All-State and All-American high school football player looked up but said nothing.

"Derric Evans," the guard said, shaking her head. "You shouldn't be in there."

He knew that. Even if he didn't, there is always someone around to remind him. And nobody needs to remind Evans of the bright future he gambled away when he and some classmates at Dallas' Carter High School decided that armed robbery might be fun. They never took it seriously, never dreamed that they would get caught. They were wrong.

Nearly two years have passed since Evans and 10 buddies were sent to state prison. Not a day has gone by that he hasn't thought about what could have been.

Fame and fortune were within his reach. He likes to think they still are.

Evans, one of the most heavily recruited high school football players in the country in 1989, had decided on the University of Tennessee in Knoxville. A full scholarship and possible national fame awaited him. In front of television news cameras, the teen-ager flashed gold chains and a big smile as he signed his letter of intent while sitting in a hot tub.

Now he sits in a state prison cell, struggling to look forward, not back. "I just try to keep my spirits up," Evans said in an interview at the maximum-security Ferguson Unit north of Huntsville. "This is a challenge for me."

Just as he felt the day he was sentenced, the tall, lanky 20-year-old still believes that his term of 20 years was too harsh. Sent to prison on Sept. 22, 1989, by state District Judge Joe Kendall, Evans will not be eligible for parole until Aug. 15, 1994.

"I am bitter about that," he said. "My attitude sometimes is not that good. I'm not going to lie. Sometimes I'm just in a bad mood and I don't want anyone around me."

Evans said he vividly remembers the crowd of news cameras and reporters swarming around him and his mother every time they showed up at the courthouse for a hearing. Evans, a standout player for the state champion Carter Cowboys football team, was a particularly newsworthy subject.

He said he often wonders whether he might be free today, or at least facing a shorter sentence, if he had not been in the limelight because of his athletic talent.

"I didn't really think he (Judge Kendall) was going to send us to prison," Evans said. "But the media was watching. I think he felt he had to. That wasn't any deterrence. The crime rate's only gotten worse."

Evans said he thinks a touch of racism also may have played a role.

"We all would have gotten probation if we were white guys," he said, with a hint of anger in his normally quiet voice. "We were black guys. We all went to Carter and won a state championship. They all wanted a chance to get back at us. I am bitter about that, because it's true."

All that aside, however, Evans places the bulk of the blame squarely on his own shoulders.

"Most of the time I get mad at myself," he said. "I did this to myself. I blame myself. And I'll be the one that brings myself out of it." So instead of dwelling on the events that led to prison, Evans said, he has chosen to accept his time behind bars, make the best of it and plan for the future.

Just as when he was a senior, those plans still center on football.

As a star defensive back for the Carter Cowboys, he helped lead his team to the state championship in December 1988. Both on and off the field, he was known to be daring and proud. As a symbol of his speed, he once had a lightning bolt shaved on his scalp.

Evans felt invincible, he said. As a senior he was courted by college recruiters. He was voted most popular by his senior classmates. Even the faculty allowed him virtually free rein of the Carter campus and rarely disciplined him, he said.

"When I was out there, I wasn't taking life seriously," Evans said, gazing through the glass that separated him from the free world. "I was daring. I thought I couldn't do anything wrong. If I did do something wrong, I would always get out of it."

So when the idea of robbery entered his mind, the idea of getting caught never did, Evans said.

Football season was over and there was a lull in excitement. Evans overheard some of his teammates talking at school about how easy it was to commit a robbery. He and his best friend, Gary Edwards, decided to give it a try.

They started with the Taco Bueno at 4228 W. Camp Wisdom Road in southwest Dallas, not far from Carter High. That was May 18, 1989. Similar heists followed. The crime spree ended a month later when they were caught moments after holding up a video store.

Their arrests led to the unraveling of 21 robberies committed by nine current or former students from Carter

High and three from Hillcrest High School who lived in the same neighborhood. Evans admitted to taking part in nine of those stickups.

During the months of presentencing hearings that followed, one by one the youths told Judge Kendall that they had robbed for cash they really didn't need.

All the youths were from hard-working, churchgoing, middle-class families. None used drugs or even drank.

Each robbery seemed to get easier and more thrilling, the youths testified. They carried pistols, but they never loaded them. Some were fake. The boys rarely wore disguises and often called each other by name in front of their victims. A couple of times they giggled as if it were all a game.

"We never really thought about what we were doing," Evans said. "We never even thought about getting caught."

Throughout his first few months behind bars, Evans still couldn't believe that he was a prisoner.

"He would say to me, 'Get me out of here, Mama, whatever it takes,'" recalled Evans' mother, Peggy Evans. "Derric was so used to his freedom."

Evans says he has adjusted to prison. But the process has been torturous, he said. More than anything, he misses his family.

"I always miss them," he said. As the only child of a single mother, Evans admits that he sometimes was spoiled. His mother acknowledged that from the time he was born, her son was showered with attention by not only her but also all his relatives. "Everybody always wanted to be around Derric," she said in a low voice. "You know how they say sometimes you can care too much for a child? Everything he wanted, he got."

Now, each day, he goes to work about 3 a.m. in the prison kitchen, cooking and cleaning until 11 a.m. He goes back to his cell and naps for a few hours, then goes to the gym and lifts weights and plays basketball.

As somewhat of a celebrity among other inmates, Evans is regularly challenged athletically.

"Somebody always wants to beat me at something," he said. After his daily workout, Evans eats dinner, then goes back to his cell to read, pray and write letters.

He spends much of his free time thinking about a future career in football.

He said he admits that his chances of playing college football when he's paroled may be slim. Nonetheless, he's determined. And those who know him well say that when Evans sets his mind to do something, he usually does it.

"He's a winner," said Freddie James, his former football coach at Carter. "Derric doesn't like to be defeated. He worked hard at learning how to run that fast. He wanted to be the best."

"I think he deserves the opportunity to prove to the public that he made a mistake and now he wants to be different."

One of Evans' closest friends and former teammates agreed.

"If he gets out and he's still in pretty good shape, I think he'll be able to do it," said 20-year-old Jessie Armstead, now a linebacker at the University of Miami. Armstead said he and Evans keep in touch. If there were a way to speed up his friend's release, he'd do it, Armstead said.

"I look at Derric and I think he'll be better than me one day," Armstead said in a telephone interview from Florida.

That won't happen for at least three years, when Evans comes up for parole. Until then, Evans said, he'll simply take prison one day at a time.

Astros remain positive

An AP Sports Analysis By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - When Houston's losing streak recently reached six games, players were discussing ways of breaking the string.

One suggested a barroom brawl could break the ice.

"Nah, we'd probably lose that too," said second baseman Casey Candaele, the team's leading comic.

Laughing in the face of approaching disaster is among the tactics the Astros are using to get through a sad season that has them on a collision course with 100 losses.

The Astros broke training camp with the youngest and lowest paid roster in the major leagues and so far they've gotten just what they paid for as Houston is jockeying with Baltimore in the American League for the worst big league record.

But the Astros are blessed with youthful resiliency and the tenacity of General Manager Bill Wood, Manager Art Howe and assistant general manager Bob Watson, who have stepped like dotting parents to keep the youngsters' pulses beating evenly.

If the Astros do eventually emerge as contenders again, some kind of retroactive award should go to the trio for keeping the leaky ship on course.

Candaele, with his quick wit and Harpo Marx hairstyle, has the responsibility of keeping the lockerroom mood from becoming too somber but even Candaele's sense of humor has its limits.

Howe has been the epitome of confidence with an ever-present smile and a determination to find a shiny fender among the wreckage heap of another loss.

"We kept battling, we never gave up," is Howe's favorite nugget when the Astros have lost and not looked good doing it.

"Just one mistake cost us," he may say, even if that one mistake was a three-run homer in the ninth inning.

Howe trots out such phrases because he's one of the most cordial managers in the major leagues and it's not his style to take out his frustrations on the media.

But don't be fooled. Beneath that docile smile beats one of the most competitive temperaments in the game.

As a former Astros player, Howe once suffered a broken jaw, yet refused to go on the injury list and continued to play with his jaw wired shut.

"Sure it gets to you; nobody likes to lose," Howe said. "We're all competitive. I just feel it's all going to prove worthwhile if we keep working. I just hope I'm still around when it comes to an end."

So how much longer can the Astros charm their fans with their youth and their battling? When can they expect to see a team that will actually compete for the NL Western Division title?

"We're not giving up anything for next year," Wood said. "I don't look beyond the possibility of being able to do it next year."

"The biggest thing in my mind is that we've been in so many ball games this year and it doesn't take a baseball Phi Beta Kappa to project how with an improvement here and a fine tune there this club could improve itself greatly in the won-loss column."

Wood never played major league baseball but he is no less competitive than Watson or Howe.

"We're heartened by the direction we're taking, but when we lose a tough ball game, knowing we're going in the right direction doesn't lessen the pain any," Wood said.

"When you lose a tough one in the ninth, you hurt as bad as when you're in the pennant fight."

Watson, a former Astros player with a .295 lifetime batting average, has used his rich hitting background to assist hitting instructor Rudy Jaramillo.

He gives a pre-game impression that the best part of his working day is rolling up his sleeves, loosening his tie and demonstrating hitting techniques.

While the Astros maybe can compete physically, Watson said, "we don't always complete mentally because of our inexperience."

"That's a big part of management today, how you manage people and the different ways you have to go about it."

The Astros could look at their record on Monday - 20 victories and 35 losses - in a negative way. Instead, they point out that on the same date in 1990, a veteran team that was supposed to be a contender, was 22-34.

The Astros employ a psychologist to work with the players on handling the pressures of competing in the major leagues.

"He's the guy who makes sure that little voice everybody has inside of him is saying the right thing," Watson said. "It's the self-talk, that 'I have to do it' or 'I can do it.'"

"Those are different ways of going about doing the same thing but one puts more pressure on you than the other. We're trying to remove the pressure."

In a 1963 basketball tournament game, Bill Bradley, now a United States senator, made 16 free throws in as many tries.

Ag credit hearing set in Lubbock Farm bill changed, new wetland rules

U.S. Representative Larry Combest (R-Texas) brings the concerns of agricultural producers, lenders and agri-business owners before members of the House Agriculture's Credit Subcommittee during a field hearing in Lubbock on Monday at Texas Tech University.

The congressional hearing will be held at the Texas Tech Livestock Arena/Meat Laboratory building at Indiana Avenue located just off the Tech Freeway. The hearing to address agricultural credit concerns will cap a working visit by Combest that began with a news conference on Friday in the congressman's Lubbock office.

Monday's field hearing on agricultural credit provides an excellent opportunity for members of Congress to hear firsthand from the farmers, lenders and other West Texans interested in agricultural credit," said Combest. "The credit subcommittee is interested in how agricultural lending programs of the federal government have responded to the increased demand for operating capital. Subcommittee Chairman Glenn English has highlighted these concerns by scheduling his first field hearing on this topic in West Texas."

Monday's field hearing on agricultural credit provides an excellent opportunity for members of Congress to hear firsthand from the farmers, lenders and other West Texans interested in agricultural credit," said Combest. "The credit subcommittee is interested in how agricultural lending programs of the federal government have responded to the increased demand for operating capital. Subcommittee Chairman Glenn English has highlighted these concerns by scheduling his first field hearing on this topic in West Texas."

Combest noted the 19th Congressional District of Texas is the largest cotton-producing district in the nation as well as having one fourth of the volume of Farmer's Home Administration (FmHA) District includes some Panhandle counties experiencing a credit crunch now affecting farmers and ranchers.

All witnesses wishing to testify during the hearing should contact the congressman's district representative, Jimmy Clark in Lubbock by calling (806) 763-1611 or David Hartman in Combest's Washington, D.C. office at (202) 225-4005 prior to the field hearing. Witnesses must provide 10 copies of their prepared written testimony to the credit subcommittee.

In the interest of time, all oral comments will be limited to five-minute summaries, however participants may submit detailed testimony for the official record. Additionally, the subcommittee encourages interested persons who are unable to attend the field hearing to submit written testimony.

The Wetland regulations of the 1990 Farm Bill have changed, according to Bob Perry, district conservationist of the Soil Conservation Service in Hereford.

One of the most important changes involves the time frame when a person is in violation of Swampbuster provisions. As of Nov. 28, 1990, when a person converts (drains, dredges, fills or levels) a wetland for the purpose or to have the effect of making the production of an agricultural commodity possible, he or she will be subject to a fine plus loss of USDA benefits until the wetland has been restored, said Perry.

Persons who plan to convert a wetland for other than agricultural production (this includes things like roads or building construction) may be able to get prior approval so they will be exempt from eligibility and benefit losses. Perry said the prior approval means a person should complete an AD-1026 Form at the ASCS office. He or she will need to state their intentions on the form. At that time the SCS will approve or disapprove the proposal, depending on whether or not the proposal fits into a non-agricultural use and all needed permits have been obtained.

Perry said that if a person is planning any new construction in a wetland, he or she should contact the local ASCS or SCS offices prior to starting construction.

Moisture monitoring encouraged

Since availability of water is the principal factor that limits plant production on the Texas High Plains, it is important for irrigators to know exactly how much moisture is available in the five-foot root zone soil profile of their fields throughout the growing season.

Soil moisture monitoring devices, such as gypsum blocks and tensiometer, allow producers to determine when an irrigation is needed and the amount of water needed to refill the soil profile.

Gypsum blocks and resistance meters are the most commonly-used soil moisture monitoring device on the Texas High Plains. The gypsum block is made by casting an inch-long cylinder of gypsum around two stainless steel electrodes with lead wires.

Gypsum blocks are buried in the soil profile shortly after crop emergence. If a Producer uses an auger to dig the hole, four gypsum blocks can be installed in the same hole at one-foot intervals. If the producer uses a push tube or drive rod to make the hole, only one block should be installed per hole.

The lead wires from the buried blocks are attached to a wooden stake at land surface and coded to indicate the depth at which the block is buried. Most producers simply tie a knot in the lead wire which corresponds to the depth of the buried block. For example, one knot indicates on foot, two knots indicate two feet and so on. The blocks are 'read' by connecting the lead wires to a small, portable resistance meter which measures the electrical flow between the two electrodes.

The meter measures electrical resistance and displays it as a percentage of field capacity value. Electrical resistance and displays it as a percentage of field capacity value. Electrical resistance varies with the amount of moisture in the soil. A meter reading of "0" is dry and a "10" is wet.

Another soil moisture monitoring tool commonly used by High Plains producers is the tensiometer. These water-filled tubes have a special porous tip and a vacuum gauge which measures the soil water suction required for plants to extract water from the soil.

When soils are at field capacity, soil water suction ranges from two to five pounds per square inch (psi). As the soil becomes drier, more suction is needed to extract moisture. When soil water suction reaches 220 psi, the plant's permanent wilting point is reached and the plant dies.

Tensiometer measure negative soil suction up to 14.7 psi (100 on the vacuum gauge.) For example, a reading of 66 on the gauge means the soil is dry and the plant must exert almost 10 psi to extract water from the soil. A reading of 9.5 means the soil is wet and only about one psi is needed to extract water.

Tensiometer are best suited for higher water demand crops, such as corn and other vegetables. Tensiometer do not work as well when installed in fields with lower water demand crops, such as cotton and grain sorghum.

The key to successful use of soil moisture monitoring tools is taking frequent readings to track crop root development and soil moisture conditions at each foot in the soil profile and keeping careful records.

These "windows into the soil" help irrigators determine what is occurring in the root zone soil moisture profile. With this soil moisture data, producers can determine from which level water is being extracted from the soil and how much water has been used.

The High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, in cooperation with local Soil and Water Conservation districts, offers tensiometer as well as gypsum blocks and resistance meters for sale to irrigators within its 15-county service area.

Ten gypsum blocks cost $40 and the hand-held resistance meter costs $170. Tensiometer cost from $38.25 and $43.25, depending upon their length.

"Water Management Notes" discussing the use of gypsum blocks and tensiometer are available from the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, 2930 Avenue Q, Lubbock 79405 or call (806) 762-0181.

Bird owners warned, rare disease outbreak

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department is alerting poultry and pet bird owners to outbreaks of exotic Newcastle disease in Illinois, Indiana and Michigan.

The outbreaks have been confined so far to parrots initially purchased from an exotic bird dealer in Houston, Texas, said James W. Glosser, administrator of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

"If this disease enters poultry flocks, losses could climb into the millions of dollars," he said Thursday. "It is important to buy only those imported pet birds that have passed through USDA quarantine."

The agency said the disease is not a health hazard to consumers of poultry and eggs. However, people who work with infected birds can develop a mild eye infection.

Agency officials identified the disease after bird owners in Dana, Ind., and Beecher and Champaign, Ill., reported seven recently purchased "double yellow-headed Amazon parrots" became ill and died.

The disease also was confirmed in a parrot at a pet shop near Detroit, Mich.

New crop prospects look up

WASHINGTON (AP) - No miracle crop yet exists that will revitalize farmers and rural communities by suddenly being in huge demand as an industrial raw material.

But a report by the Office of Technology Assessment, a research arm of Congress, says possibilities could unfold in the future as more research and development is brought to bear. Meanwhile, opportunities do exist at relatively primitive levels.

OTA said using corn or other agricultural commodities as industrial materials "will not provide a quick and painless fix for the problems of agriculture and rural economies."

Farm commodities can "provide future flexibility" as needs arise, but many technical, economic and policy problems stand in the way, it said.

Some advocates for years have talked about new crops such as guayule as a source of rubber, and crambe as an oil source, as possibilities for American farmers who want to turn away from traditional crops.

And new uses are constantly being sought for some of the traditional crops, including corn and its growing industrial demand.

"Many of the new industrial crops and uses of traditional crops are still in relatively early stages of development," the report said. "Several years of research and development will be necessary before their commercialization will be feasible."

It said "changes in agricultural commodity programs, in addition to those already made, may still be needed to remove disincentives" for the production of many new crops.

One way might be a "two-step approach" to development being used by the European Community by first establishing a preliminary program to determine feasibility, and then following up later with a program to encourage commercial development.

OTA Director John H. Gibbons noted that industrial uses alone are not likely to revitalize rural America and solve the problems of agriculture.

"However, it is possible to provide domestic sources for many imported industrial materials, some of which are considered to be of strategic importance, and potentially to replace selected petroleum-derived chemicals," he said. "And some industrial uses of agricultural commodities offer potential to decrease certain types of environmental pollution."

Some new crops that have replacement possibilities include: buffalo gourd for petroleum or soybean oil; jojoba for sperm whale oil; crambe for imported rapeseed oil; and kenaf for imported newsprint.

Traditional crops and some potential industrial uses include: soybeans for adhesives and coatings, diesel fuel and ink; sunflowers for diesel fuel; and corn for ethanol, degradable plastics, road de-icer, super absorbents and coal desulfurization.

Other crop opportunities lie in the changing demographic patterns in the United States.

"Imports of Latin and Asian fruits, grains and vegetables have been steadily rising," the report said. "Many of these crops could be grown in the United States."

The report also cited flowers and other horticultural crops as a growing cash source for many producers.

CattleWomen name Hall as Father's Day CattleMan

Hereford CattleWomen members named Elmo Hall as CattleMan for Father's Day in the "Beef for Father's Day" annual campaign sponsored by the local organization.

Hall was born in Floydada and came to Hereford in 1946 with his parents Tom and Mintie Hall. The family leased farmland from the Dameron.

He served in the Navy in World War II. After the war, he returned to marry Kay Norman. They were married in 1952 and lived in the Walcott area for 35 years farming and ranching. He and Kay have four children, Kerry Monroe, Scott, Rhonda Nieman, and Don. They also have eight grandchildren.

In 1987 Elmo bought Western Feedyard east of Hereford. He ran cattle through the 3,000 head capacity yard until 1985 when he formed a partnership with his son Scott and Jim Perrin, also of Hereford, and purchased a 20,000 head yard known as Circle Three Feed Yard. It is located four miles west and two miles south of Hereford.

Hall is well acquainted with the Beef Industry. He is always willing to lend a hand on any Beef promotion and donates meat to Girlstown when called upon.

Hall says that the Texas Beef Industry Council ($1) Checkoff Program has really helped to advertise beef. As for the CattleWomen organization, Hall thinks the group does a good job and is eager to help promote beef for this area and the state.

He loves to eat beef and is sharing one of his favorite recipes.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Country star Dottie West attended the bankruptcy auction of her belongings shrouded in dark glasses and clutching a handkerchief to hold back tears.

"This is all pretty painful," the singer said Thursday, arriving about one hour after bids began on items ranging from an autographed guitar to a 1975 Fleetwood Cadillac.

About 300 bidders attended the event that culminated a bankruptcy petition West filed in 1990, listing more than $1 million in debts.

Porcelain busts of Elvis Presley and Marilyn Monroe went first, fetching $30 and $165, respectively. A guitar bearing West's signature brought $1,050.

Since June is National Dairy Month it's a good time to zero in on why calcium is necessary throughout life. An estimated 20 million people in the United States have osteoporosis. Almost one half of all women over the age of 50 have this condition to some extent.

Osteoporosis is a disorder in which the amount of bone in the skeleton decreases. Bones become weak and partly hollow. With time, they will easily break and the spine may become curved.

Low dietary calcium is one of the factors associated with increased risk of osteoporosis, a debilitating bone disease resulting in major bone breaks, fractures and curvature of the upper spine. Calcium is also needed for other bodily functions, such as enabling muscles, blood, immune and nervous systems to work properly. If there is not enough calcium available for these processes, calcium is borrowed from the bones, leaving bones weak and brittle and susceptible to breaks.

Health professionals agree that food sources of calcium are preferable to pill-form calcium because not only do foods contain a variety of other important nutrients, but also, an individual is less likely to consume excessive quantities of calcium from food than pills. In addition to being an important source of calcium, dairy products also contain other nutrients, such as vitamin D and lactose, which help improve calcium absorption. Dietary calcium such as dairy products are far superior to supplements. Foods such as dairy products also contain other nutrients, such as vitamin D and lactose, which help improve the body's absorption of calcium.

Although it is difficult to consume excessive levels of calcium from food, it is possible to get too much calcium from pills. In "Calcium: Food Sources and Costs", a report by Dianne Odland, home economist with USDA's Human Nutrition Information Service, milk products, including skim, low-fat, whole and buttermilk ranked first as products with the most calcium per dollar.

According to the National Dairy Board, other dairy products which yield as much calcium as one cup of fluid milk include 1 1/2 ounces of natural cheddar cheese, 1 cups cottage cheese, 3/4 cup homemade macaroni and cheese, one spear broccoli with cheese sauce, or one cup of yogurt.

It is easy to obtain calcium in the diet without drastically altering meal planning. In addition to dairy products, included enriched white bread or tofu manufactured with calcium sulfate. Fish with edible bones such as salmon, sardines or mackerel also high in calcium, along with leafy green vegetables like spinach, broccoli and Swiss chard. However, some of these vegetables also contain other components that can actually interfere with calcium absorption.

It is important to note that various other factors come in to play in the process of calcium absorption. Too much fiber, caffeine or alcohol inhibits the body's ability to absorb calcium. Sodium, too, increases the excretion of calcium by the kidney.

As they get older, most people tend to exercise less frequently. Unfortunately, being inactive makes the bones fragile. Staying active, if only by taking regular walks, can help. Even if you break a bone, you should increase your activity as soon as your doctor says you are able.

Doctors agree that weight-bearing exercises (walking, running, playing tennis) can help maintain bone density and thickness because it places physical stress on the bones. Like muscles, bones respond by becoming stronger. Exercise also increases blood flow to the bones so they can receive the bone-building nutrients that blood provides.

According to Dr. Myron Winick, director of the Institute of Human Nutrition at Columbia University, "exercise generates mini-electric currents within the bones which stimulate bone growth." Lastly, exercise changes hormonal balance, favoring the bone protecting hormone estrogen, which prohibits calcium from leaving the bone. (Postmenopausal women should consult with their doctor to determine if estrogen supplements are advisable.)

Instead of undertaking a specific exercise program, Dr. Winick suggest maintaining an active lifestyle, such as walking instead of driving, using stairs instead of escalators, standing instead of sitting. Eliminating smoking and alcohol consumption also may increase calcium absorption.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, and national origin.

The Covenant of the Flame by David Morrell begins the new book list this week. This towering novel of intrigue and violence centers around Texx Drake, a woman reporter who holds the key to an incredible 2,000 year old secret. Even though Tess is the daughter of a wealthy Washington family she is making in on her own as an investigative journalist.

Tess encounters the mysterious, gray-eyed Joseph, but before a more intimate relationship has time to blossom Joseph is found murdered. The evidence that surrounds the murder indicates a human sacrifice was made. Tess and New York City police officer Lieutenant Craig find the case surrounded by a cloak of secrecy.

Who was Joseph? Why was he killed? Fighting for their lives, Tess and Craig can trust no one and they find that anyone who tries to help is in danger of losing their lives.

Love and Desire by Joan Collins begins during World War II when people are fighting to survive the atrocities heaped upon them by the Germans and Italians. On the surface only the men in the gray and green uniforms sitting in the local cafes indicate that Paris is an occupied city.

Ines Juillard is a ravishing beauty with a dark sinful secret that she hopes will remain forgotten. Agathe Guinzberg is the would-be ballerina who was forced to hide in a Paris cellar to escape the Nazis, who someday wishes to fulfill her dream.

Dominique Du Frey is a teenage vixen who plays men as if they are "dominoes" not caring who gets hurt as long as she gets to the top. Then there are those from Hollywood: Julian Brooks, the British matinee idol destined to become the newest American heartthrob; and Hubert Croft, the successful Italian producer.

V.C. Andrews' new book, Secrets of the Morning, continues the riveting saga of tangled lies and a young girl's aching longing for happiness and a family to cherish her. Dawn can hardly believe her good luck, living in New York and pursuing her goal of becoming a singer. She is surrounded by people who appreciate her singing talent and like her just the way she is.

Michael Sutton, a new teacher, singing star and handsome man, helps Dawn discover a world of feeling she has never known, and promises a vision of music and romance forever. Then suddenly Michael disappears and Dawn is forced to return to Cutler's Cove, to lay bare the shameful truth buried for decades. Dawn will then be able to renew her love for Jimmy, her strong intense boyfriend, and build the home and family that has been their deepest heart's dream.

On June 17, 1972, five men broke into the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee at the Watergate office building in Washington, D.C. That even, and an attempted cover-up toppled Richard M. Nixon from the presidency. While much has been written about Richard Nixon's government and resignation Silent Coup by Len Colodny and Robert Gettlin is an "explosive new history of the fall of the president".

This book is the product of an extraordinary seven year investigation into the documents, the political and personal agendas that combined to destroy Richard Nixon. Some of the truths unearthed are: the president at war with the government of his own making; the military spy ring reporting to the Joint Chiefs of Staff that penetrated the White House while opposing Nixon's foreign policy goals; the presidential aide really behind Watergate, his own unauthorized intelligence operation, how he engineered the Watergate cover-up, lied to Congress and placed the blame on everyone but himself.

This is Living: How I Found Health and Happiness by Lynn Redgrave is her stunningly candid and inspirational account of her lifelong struggle to loose weight and keep it off. Lynn's weight problem began early. She would loose weight by starvation to gain an acting part, only to regain it in a "yo-yo" dieting cycle. Now she generously shares what she has learned, how she overcame the overeating to maintain an ideal weight by first calling Weight Watchers.

Abundant Life

BY BOB WEAR

Much is being said and written about the quality of life, and most of us desire the best possible quality of living. This means that we must be busy doing things to upgrade life, for ourselves and for others. This pertains to both the material and spiritual concerns of living. According to all reports, there are many undesirable conditions which are downgrading the quality of life for most folk. The poverty, the immorality, the crime, and lack of personal integrity in public and private human interactions; and a whole host of other things which are hurting us. It seems that we have become more concerned with what we are against than we are with what we are for. Of course, the wrong things must be opposed and corrected, but the right things must not be overlooked and forgotten.

With all of our doing, and all of our concern about what we think is wrong, we must not cease our efforts to upgrade life. There seems to be an alarming shortage of the positive and constructive thought and action which must be given greater prominence. Failure to do this creates a kind of emptiness, a vacuum. This is not what we need. All available information points to the fact that a life or a society which is not filled with and controlled by positive good will eventually be filled and controlled by undesirable, and unwanted views and actions.

We seem to be increasing our efforts to expose and eliminate all that is undesirable and incompatible with the best of life. This must be done, but we must remember that negative reformation is only partial. With the work of excluding alien and contrary views, we must apply strong portions of positive thought and action. In upgrading life, we must do more than fight subversion and degrading influences. We must be diligent in establishing and maintaining good qualities of right living.

Upgrading life is more than the absence of evil and faulty ideological viewpoints and practices; it is the upholding positive good.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your response to the person who wrote about the cat on the power pole showed your true colors. I couldn't believe it when you said no person should give his or her life to save a pet. Well, you are welcome to your opinion. Here's mine.

I have had a wonderful horse for 26 years. He is my best friend. I am also attached to my goldfish. Most people don't know that goldfish have distinct personalities. I'm devoted to these wonderful little creatures. If either my barn or my house were on fire I wouldn't hesitate one minute to risk my life to save my pets, and I'm not ashamed to admit it. -- Stan D., Danville, Ill.

DEAR STAN: You and hundreds of others. Keep reading.

FROM PORTSMOUTH, N.H.: I am nine years old. My name is Hope. I'm fed up with you. Don't you know that animals have feelings just like human beings? How would you like it if you were on top of a pole and people said you weren't important enough to save? Animals save people all the time. They also lead people who are blind and find people who are lost. They deserve to be helped no matter what and you should have said so.

PITTSBURGH: People are goofy. We have a good tree surgeon business and charge $70 a trip. You wouldn't believe how many calls we get from folks who ask us to get their cats -- and yes, their kites -- out of trees. When we tell them what our price is they yell into the phone, "We don't care about the price, just get out here and do the job. Our kids are crying their eyes out." So we go.

SAN JOSE: You pathetic, pampered, misguided ignoramus. The fact that you have such a big following proves that the majority of people are as dumb as you are. I am burned up over your statement that a human's life is more valuable than an animal's. Don't you know that we are all God's creatures?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a lieutenant with the New York City Fire Department. I have been with the department for over 18 years and several times have had to decline requests from people to rescue cats in trees or on power poles.

In today's environment of tight budgets and resource cutbacks, we do not have the units to devote to such missions. Can you imagine the public outcry if a fire erupted and we lost a life because we were tied up getting a cat off a power pole or out of a tree? Incidentally, the rescue of a cat in distress is not always successful. The sight of a ladder has caused more than one frightened cat to jump hundreds of feet to its death.

Land and certainly not least is the danger of the rescuer. A cat on a power pole is in a hazardous area. If the rescuer is not careful or is momentarily distracted, he could come in contact with a live wire. This could be fatal. Cats always manage somehow to get down on their own. Have you ever seen a cat skeleton in a tree? -- Patrick T. Reynolds, lieutenant, NYFD

Do you have questions about sex, but no one to talk to? Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teen-Ager," is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.45.)

Survey reveals facts about breech births

In about three out of 100 deliveries, the baby is in the breech position, with the feet or bottom in place to come out first instead of the head. While most breech babies are born normal and healthy, the risk of complications is higher with breech presentation. The expecting couple should know about these problems and possible solutions to be able to work with the doctor in making the best choices for a safe delivery. Most babies move around some during pregnancy but settle into a head first position three to four weeks before the due date. The doctor can usually tell if the baby is in a breech position by carefully feeling the mother's abdomen and uterus. If the doctor suspects a breech presentation, he or she will probably try to confirm the diagnosis using ultrasound, a test in which sound waves are used to create an image of the fetus on a screen. Sometimes a special X-ray test also is used. Once the doctor has determined that the baby may be born breech, you should discuss with him or her how this will affect the birth. Breech presentation can be associated with prematurity and certain complications of delivery, including difficulty getting through the birth canal and a prolapsed cord. Cord prolapse is when the umbilical cord slides to the bottom of the uterus and gets squeezed, slowing oxygen supply to the baby. Birth defects are also more common among breech babies, which may be the reason they have not turned properly before birth. Sometimes, the doctor can turn the baby to head down position before labor. This procedure, in which the doctor places his hands on the mother's abdomen and slowly pushes the baby around, is called external version. This maneuver usually succeeds, but sometimes, the baby shifts back into a breech presentation before birth. If the baby is still breech when labor begins, the doctor will decide what is the safest method of delivery. In many cases, cesarean delivery of a breech baby is safer than vaginal birth. Understanding the potential problems of breech birth if the doctor thinks your baby may be breech will help prepare you for the birth process and the possible last minute decisions that may be made. If you are aware of what may happen as you approach labor, you will probably feel more comfortable about the birth and have a smoother delivery. The Senate ratified the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo in 1848, ending the war with Mexico.

YOUR EYES

COMFORT AT THE COMPUTER

If you work at a video display terminal, you may have experienced headaches, burning sensations, itching, eye strain or other discomforts. They don't have to happen. With care, it can be more comfortable to work at a computer. There are two elements: your computer environment and your eyes. The screen should be adjusted so that the top is no higher than the operator's eye level and the bottom no more than 40 degrees below eye level. Glare can be distracting and uncomfortable. If there are windows in the field of vision, they should be shaded. A hood and antiglare filter on the screen will help, too. If you normally wear glasses for distance or near-vision correction, consider getting another pair for middle-distance work. It will enable you to see well while working at the correct distance from the screen. Full-lens, middle-distance glasses help avoid neck strain better than would an added middle-distance line on bifocals.

MRS. JOE BOB WILCOX
...nee Crystal LaComb

LaComb, Wilcox wed Saturday in Frio

Wedding vows were exchanged by Crystal Gail LaComb and Joe Bob Wilcox, both of Hereford, in Frio Baptist Church Saturday afternoon. The marriage ceremony was officiated by Vance Devareaux.

The bride is the daughter of William and Gail LaComb and the groom is the son of Stanley and Linda Wilcox.

The church altar was decorated with two spiral candelabra draped with English ivy and containing 30 white paradise candles. The unity candle was surrounded by baby's breath, white roses and miniature carnations. White satin bows adorned the pews.

Deana Resch served as maid of honor and the groom's father served as best man.

Serving as bridesmaids were Kerri Lang and Chari Suttle.

Tony and Scott Wilcox, the groom's brothers, served as groomsmen.

Guests were escorted by the bride's cousins, Chad and Chris Brummett.

The groom's nieces, Shayla Wilcox, daughter of Scott and Missy

Wilcox, and Brittany Wilcox, daughter of Tony and Kim Wilcox, served as flower girls. Weston Wade Wilcox, the groom's nephew, son of Tony and Kim Wilcox, served as ring bearer. Candle lighters were the bride's sister, Tina LaComb, and Adriana Villarreal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F Villarreal.

"The Rose" and "Up Where We Belong" were vocalized by Deana Resch. Accompaniment was provided by Carolyn Evers.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore the traditional white satin gown with a lace bodice encrusted with miniature pearls and fashioned with a scalloped lace collar, short puff sleeves, full skirt and a cathedral length train trimmed with miniature pearls.

In her hair, the bride wore a floor-length illusion veil embellished with white miniature pearls and silk ribbon. It was attached to the back of a headband accented with a white silk flower outlined with white pearls.

The bride's jewelry consisted of a pearl necklace given to her by Wanda Alshire.

She carried a nosegay bouquet of white roses, miniature carnations, and stephanotis cradled in a bed of baby's breath accented by white European lace and Picot ribbon.

Bridal attendants wore dresses of royal blue and carried long stem white roses.

Cande Robbins invited guests to register at the reception held at the church.

Cake was served by the bride's cousin, Sonja Satterfield and Missy Wilcox. Punch and coffee were poured by Tiffany Davis of Dimmitt and Kim Wilcox.

The three-tiered white bride's cake, which featured a flowing fountain beneath, was trimmed in royal blue.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Canyon, to attend the performance of "TEXAS", the bride wore a western pink and gray shirt, Rocky Mountain jeans, and black lace up boots.

The couple will make their home in Dumas.

The bride is a 1991 graduate of Hereford High School.

The groom attended Hereford High School and is currently employed by Bradford Trucking in Dumas.

Out of town wedding guests were from Dimmitt, Amarillo, Comanche, Sudan, and Millington, Tenn.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I had read that mayonnaise makes a good substitute for furniture polish, so I tried it on a low wooden chest.

When I realized I had been too generous with it, I left the room to get some soft dry cloths to wipe off the excess. I returned and found our big old tom cat happily licking it off. I just sat down on the floor and laughed while he finished his snack. — Mary Lou Nave, Longview, Texas

I'm sure he enjoyed his treat! Thanks for sharing your funny pet pal story with us.

If any of you have a funny or unique pet story you would like to share, I would love to pass it along to my other readers. Send them to Heloise, P.O. Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279. — Heloise

SLIPPING SLIP STRAPS

Dear Heloise: For years, I found slip straps a pain — they were always falling off my shoulders. I have pinned and complained until one day not long ago it dawned on me I had the simple, handy answer at my fingertips any time or place: bra straps! They sit firmly on my shoulders and to keep the slip straps from straying I simply pull them under the bra straps on each shoulder and, voila, anchored slip straps with no pins needed. — Peggy Dunn, Winter Haven, Fla.

PET FLEA COLLARS

Dear Heloise: Write your phone number on your pet's flea collar with an indelible pen! Animal shelters across the country have many pets that have a flea collar on, but no identification. — Sandra E. Brown, Asheville, N.C.

SEED SOWING

Dear Heloise: I bought some flower seeds that were very fine and I had a difficult time sowing them. When I poured them from the paper package they all fell out in the same place.

Do you have any suggestions for an easier method of planting? — Mariam Butler, El Paso, Texas

Our favorite gardener says to use an old spice shaker. Pour the seeds into the shaker and attach the lid.

Sprinkle them over each garden row to evenly disperse the seeds. Cover the seeds lightly with soil and get ready for them to spring up. — Heloise

Dear Heloise: I have a terrific hint for campers who need more room for supplies. A large plastic bucket with a cover can be used to hold canned goods, matches and a stack of paper plates. Also, use large wooden matches for camp cooking to help prevent burnt fingers.

Always check your first-aid kit for supplies, and if you forget your grill brush, crumpled foil will work just fine, so don't forget the aluminum foil. — V. Funk, Front Royal, Va.

PREVENT LINT ON GRASS

Dear Heloise: The vent connected to my clothes dryer is in the front of my home. Lint accumulates all over the grass, making it very unsightly. It has also killed a section of the lawn.

I got tired of cleaning the mess, so I put an old nylon stocking over it. It works great! When the stocking is full, I clean it or, if needed, replace it. No more mess, and the lawn is thriving. — Sara Bennett, Edison, N.J.

DOG'S DENTAL PROBLEMS

Dear Heloise: Last week I took my dog to the veterinarian and was told he had dental problems. I noticed he had bad breath and that's what led to the visit. The vet told me some important things to look for that might be signs that something is wrong.

If you notice your dog is having difficulty biting down, is rubbing his face on the floor, has unsightly crust formations on the teeth or has bleeding gums, it's time for a checkup. — Tanya Brice, Ft. Myers, Fla.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am trying to lose weight and inches. I'm 29, 5 feet 4 inches and weigh 160 pounds. I have cut back to an 800- to 1,000-calories-a-day low-fat diet. I do 40 minutes of aerobics five to six times a week and 20 minutes of toning exercise five to seven times a week. I have done the above for two weeks and have lost only 2 pounds.

Should I lose weight first, then do the aerobics and toning? I don't want to stay the weight I am and develop bulging muscles. I'd like to lose 30 pounds, then tone up.

DEAR READER: Better stick with a low-calorie diet and your exercise program together. Your calorie intake may be too limited and you may have trouble sticking to such a low-calorie intake.

You are losing a pound a week at present and that is the best way for a permanent weight loss. Rapid weight loss is usually a temporary weight loss.

Exercise while you are on a low-calorie diet helps to prevent the loss of muscle protein. Studies have shown that overweight women who exercise while dieting may maintain their muscles while losing body fat. But women who do not exercise lose muscle protein as well as fat.

The exercise program should involve all the muscles you want to keep firm and strong. That includes running, dancing and exercises that involve your legs. It should also include exercises for your arms and shoulders. Even facial exercises are important to maintain a good facial appearance. That helps to avoid that sagging appearance so common in crash dieting.

Read Special Report 91, Making Weight Control Work. I'm sending you a free copy. It will help you follow a program that lasts and won't harm you. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/91, P.O. Box 787, Gibbstown, NJ 08027-9908.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 787, Gibbstown, NJ 08027-9908. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

"We Care"

John Gilliland

Charles Watson

The statement, first you must learn to live with yourself, before you can live with others, seems to be so true. We need to look into ourselves for answers, before we look to the judgments of others. Asking ourselves, to be self-reliant, strength and confidence, and also to be responsible for our own actions and words. When we make a mistake in judgement, we have learned a valuable lesson that hopefully will not be repeated consciously. A English proverb states: "A quiet conscience, can sleep through thunder." A settled conscience is very valuable to us. It helps us to learn right from wrong and to get along with others.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

One Parable and Two Paragons

Once upon a time, there was a certain man who sold hamburgers at a little corner cafe. He made the burgers from 100% ground beef and served them on the freshest of buns. He topped his burgers with premium pickles, marvelous mustard and classic ketchup. He kept the little cafe spotlessly clean, and always greeted his customers courteously. Business was good.

The man put some small ads in the newspaper and added a larger sign. Soon, the cafe became overcrowded at mealtimes, and the man moved into a larger store. Business was good.

The man opened a second store and soon a third. He made the ads bigger, the burgers better and kept the stores cleaner. The customers were treated like royalty. He opened more stores. Business was good.

As the number of stores grew, the hamburger entrepreneur felt he should take on a partner. He found a highly educated financial manager and brought him into the business.

The new partner was anxious to show his expertise. "The economists say a recession is coming," he said. "We must be ready for it." The new partner slashed the advertising budget, reduced the size of the burgers and added a little filler. He kept the buns a little longer and purchased less expensive condiments. "We must reduce labor costs," said the partner and laid off part of the staff.

The service grew a little slower and the stores were not quite so spotless. However, the new partner proudly pointed to lower cost. If recession came, they were ready.

Gradually, business slowed down. "I knew it," said the partner. "The economists were right. Recession is coming." Business grew worse.

One at a time, the stores were closed until only one remained. The partner left the business to accept a good job with the government. The burger entrepreneur managed to keep a single store open. Every night, when he closed the store, the man was grateful that he had taken on a partner before the recession. Otherwise, he might have lost it.

Surviving A Slow Economy

Obviously, the hamburger entrepreneur in the opening illustration didn't get good advice from his "educated" partner. We asked two local entrepreneurs how they approach a recession economy.

"I wouldn't cut advertising," said Ron McVean. McVean is a 27-year-old McDonald's franchise owner/operator. His Amarillo store is one of the newest and best-managed in Texas. McVean added this thought in advertising, "The best time to express your message to the consumer is in a recession."

Consistent and service are two words that McVean uses a lot. "My advice to other business owners is to be consistent in your operations, consistent in the quality of your products and consistent in providing good service. Service is the single most important aspect of our business operation."

Don Carper agrees. Carper is the owner of Doodles Hamburger Stores, Inc. Doodles offers a nostalgic atmosphere to complement their sandwich menu.

Carper suggest that you keep cool when the economy slows. "Instead of getting panicky during a recession, you have to get positive," Carper said. "You must give good service, deliver a quality product and maintain a consistent image."

"It is certainly a challenge to keep your prices stable with the increasing cost of food products and labor," he added, "but quality, service and value are essential. We value our customers and we work hard to provide them with good food, good prices and a friendly, unhurried atmosphere."

Last week, I enjoyed lunches in these two restaurants. Although the two businesses are very different, there are many similarities. Both facilities are spotlessly clean, even during the peak rush hours. The crews are friendly and courteous, and the owners spend time "face-to-face" with their customers. Business is good.

Strong healthcare sector not cause for joy

NEW YORK (AP) - Throughout months of generally dismal labor force reports, one sector has defied the trend and remained strong. A bright spot in what has been a very cause for joy? It depends.

Health services is the sector. Employment in this area of the economy has been expanding, and it is expected to continue doing so. In the past month, for example, 30,000 jobs were added.

Analyzing and explaining that strength, Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, commented that "health services has been one of the few bright spots in what has been a very widespread recession."

Not everyone would agree with her that it is a bright spot, though they too might be happy for those who found jobs. Some see the growth of health services as further evidence of a segment of the economy out of control.

In the past two decades, for example, increases in health care costs have exceeded the rate of general inflation, year after year. Each year health care consumes a greater portion of the gross national product. It defies restraints.

To many observers of the economy, it would have been better for everyone had those jobs been created in manufacturing, where huge losses have occurred, or in construction, which lost more than 500,000 jobs since May 1990.

It would have pleased certain economists more if, rather than in health services, the jobs had been found in industrial machinery, instruments, aircraft, paper or chemicals, all of which continued to lose jobs through May.

To them, any increase in health care statistics is further evidence of a part of the economy that is growing at the expense of the whole economy, of a bureaucracy, of a sector in the clutches of the devil inflation.

Health care has become the great growth industry of our times, but its growth, the critics argue, too often has been a manifestation of outrageous costs, bad management, and the employment of technology for its own sake.

They contend that had some of that money been invested in more productive industries it would have resulted in economic expansion, in greater wealth for everyone and money left over for spending on sensible health care.

The growth of health care, therefore, is controversial to some people, not a cause for satisfaction or celebration. Something must be done to control its growth, they say, but nothing so far seems to have worked.

One consideration critics of health care growth tend to overlook is that not all those new jobs were simply additions to a system gone wild. Some may help tame the beast.

Some of that job growth referred to by the commissioner is the result of an amazing entrepreneurial effort to tackle rising health-care costs. Challenges arouse the entrepreneurial spirit, and health care is loaded with challenges.

New companies, innovative rather than cast in the old bureaucratic mold, have vigorously and enthusiastically attacked costs. Some monitor corporate health-care plans. Others offer pharmaceutical services and controls. Many offer home-infusion therapy, allowing patients to be released early from hospitals.

They comprise one of the latest growth industries. Many of them already have demonstrated their ability to cut costs. Some of them are already highly profitable. Shares in some of them are popular and rising.

What portion of the employment increases result from these creative new companies, which are attacking the cost problem, and how many are a consequence of bureaucratic growth, isn't clear from the statistics.

But it is very clear already that rather than being part of the problem, some of these new companies have ideas, disciplines, techniques and procedures that offer hope for a solution.

NEW YORK (AP) - Actor Nicolas Cage, saying he was getting soft, bald and stagnant, has taken to the road in the style of Beat Generation writer Jack Kerouac.

The star of such movies as "Moonstruck," "Raising Arizona" and "Wild at Heart" retraced some of Kerouac's steps in a Los Angeles-to-New Orleans trip that he wrote about for the July issue of Details magazine.

Country Porch Makes Relaxing Easy

COMPACT PLAN ALLOWS FOR MAXIMUM USE OF SPACE

FEATURE HOMES

BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

The rocking chair porch provides a sheltered entrance for this country style ranch. The activity room flows into the combination kitchen and dining room. A fireplace is included. The kitchen has lots of cabinets and the bay window in the dining room allows plenty of light.

There are three bedrooms, each with good closet space for a home of this size, and two baths. The master bath features a double vanity, recessed garden tub, separate shower, and vaulted ceiling.

A laundry room has doorways to the carport, the backyard, and the dining area; and extra storage cabinets are shown. A dining stair is located in the central hall for access to attic storage. A double carport and storage room completes the floor plan.

Crawl space or concrete slab foundations are available.

The country exterior is finished with horizontal siding, 12-lite shuttered windows, and multiple roof breaks.

This is a computer generated plan. The plan is Number 293. It includes 1,300 square feet of heated area. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information, write W.D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Rapidly increasing human populations combined with fast travel times may create ideal conditions for new epidemics, says National Geographic.
