NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The woman telephone caller told Policeman Jack Hunter she wanted to speak to "Detective Muffler," whose name was on a traffic ticket she had received.

property. The injunction prohibits him from allowing water to leave his fields.

The state laws under which the water district operates states that the district officials can stop an individual's irrigation well if he is found to be wasting water.

DODSON SAID that the district directors have been very concerned about flagrant abuses of conservation laws, but have been reluctant to use their authority to prohibit the use of a well.

The law has never before been tested in court, but has served, Alkin said, as the basis for new legislation in several states where lawmakers chose to base new conservation laws on the Texas statute.

Mrs. Norwood, the landowner in the case, joined the water district in the action to seek an injunction against Jones. Her attorney appeared during the hearing to report that she was ill, and their testimony substantiated only the ownership and lease agreement of the land and wells involved in the case.

Jones was not ordered to stop using the well, only to stop running irrigation water off the land. Due to the apparent willingness to comply with the court order and desires of the water district, Alkin said he doubted that the case will ever come to trial.

ADDITIONAL LEGAL action in which the water district may become involved in the future could stem from the continued pollution of irrigation water in its underground reservoir. Alkin said that a number of letters have been mailed to oil companies, which are using surface salt water pits to dispose of the waste fluids from oil wells, asking them to stop the practice.

District hydrologist W. L. Broadhurst has recently expressed the opinion that many irrigation wells have been polluted with salt from such pits. Farmers in Cochran, Hockley and Lamb Counties have experienced this trouble.

Allowing such materials to enter and pollute an underground water reservoir is clearly prohibited by law, Alkin said. He added that it is hoped that the water district's requests for remedial action will solve the problem without the need for legal action.

a portion of land east of the city limits. When this area was still a rural area we built lines to service the homes and businesses in the area at a cost of several thousand dollars. Our headquarters building was also in the area. Over our protest the area was annexed and our property added to the city tax rolls. We then applied to the city for a franchise to continue serving the area in which we had a large investment and were denied that franchise. Now, when the city purchased the land for the airport, we had another investment in lines serving several wells on the land. We were asked to take out those lines and we did at our own expense. At the same time we asked to be allowed to serve the airport when service was needed. We asked that favor because the

The public school enrollment came very close to matching the 2,446 pupils forecast on the basis of school census reports by school administrators. A 10 per cent increase in the student body, which is usually experienced here during the first two months of school, will send the total from Friday's 2,437 to well over 2,600 students.

The Hallmark of Circulation Value

In the same way that STERLING on silver signifies a standard of known value, so is the A.B.C. emblem a symbol of integrity for the circulation of newspapers and periodicals. It means that circulation so identified is measured according to the rules and standards of the AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS.

The A.B.C. is a cooperative and non-profit association of 3,450 publishers, advertisers and advertising agencies. Organized in 1914, these buyers and sellers of advertising brought order out of advertising chaos by setting up standards for paid circulation and establishing rules and methods for measuring, auditing and reporting circulations.

Therefore, the work of the A.B.C., of which this newspaper is proud to be a member, provides you with a direct and valuable service. You can buy advertising as you would make any other sound business investment — on the basis of well known standards, known values.

At regular intervals one of the Bureau's large staff of experienced circulation auditors makes a thorough audit of our circulation records. The results of this exacting audit show: How much circulation we have; where our circulation goes; how it was obtained; and many other facts that you need in order to know just what you get for your advertising dollars. This audited information is published by the Bureau in easy-to-read A.B.C. reports which are available to our advertisers on request. Ask for a copy of our latest A.B.C. report.

Trainer Finds Whales Willing Water Students

PORTUGUESE BEND, Calif. — Can you imagine a whale dancing rock 'n' roll style? Or high jumping, weight lifting, shaking "hands" and "singing"? Teaching a leviathan to perform these and other feats is a cinch, says a young animal psychologist named Kent Burgess. All it takes is a police whistle, a small mountain of cut up squid, and endless patience.

Blond, 30, from Hot Springs, Ark., Burgess is head trainer for Animal Behavior Enterprises. His specialty is building animal acts, primarily for use at tourist attractions and in advertising.

Burgess' current assignment is at Marineland of the Pacific, a big oceanarium where he has built a porpoise show into the No. 1 draw and is now coaching a couple of whales as rivals.

THE TWO FEMALE black pilot whales, only ones in captivity, are "very smart" pupils. In a mere 10 days Bubbles, larger of the two at 13 feet and 1,500 pounds, learned to jump seven feet out of the water and retrieve a life ring on cue.

Burgess is using the same technique on the whales he has used successfully on porpoises, rabbits and chickens — the psychological principle of reinforcement. Basically, it consists of rewarding the performer for a job well done. The reward: a morsel of its favorite food.

Here's how the system actually worked on a young porpoise named Patty, who had absolutely no previous stage experience. After being captured and becoming accustomed to life in a king-sized aquarium she was given one day a small life ring. Porpoises being naturally playful, it wasn't long before she was nudging it around with her nose.

Burgess, at pool's edge, started tooting a police whistle each time

Patty's nose touched the ring. Then he'd immediately toss her a hunk of mackerel, caviar to a porpoise. In no time at all, Patty was associating a nudge with the reward of food.

The whistle? It's used to speed the association. He can toot it quicker than he can toss a mackerel, and when Patty hears it she knows instantly that she's on the right track and a goodie is on the way.

Next, Burgess waited until Patty stuck her nose through the ring. Quick toot. Mackerel. Same next time the nose was rigged. Patty got the idea. Thereafter, no more rewards for nudges.

ULTIMATELY PATTY, ring on nose, flicked her head. The ring sailed through the air. Hooray! Whistle. Toot. Patty was "throwing." No more mackerel for nose ringing. Henceforth, it took a throw to get a fish.

And so it went. Burgess put a backboard and netted hoop at pool-side and finally Patty, after graduating from a life ring to a ball, swished it through. She was playing basketball.

Porpoises, says Burgess, are "smart as dogs, maybe smarter. I'd rate them somewhere between a dog and a chimpanzee."

Whales, he continues, are just as smart as porpoises and should be able to do any trick a porpoise can do, within physical limitations. A whale, for instance, couldn't learn to throw a ball because its neck is too thick and inflexible.

Bubbles now is learning to rock 'n' roll, shake hands, and sing. To dance, she swims like a pirouetting ballet dancer, shimmying at the same time. To sing, she expels air in such fashion that a tuba-like tone is emitted. Her singing is not yet in great demand. Her wages consist of 70 pounds of squid a day.

IN TRAINING—Bubbles, a 13-foot pilot whale, leaves the water to clear a wooden beam suspended above the water by cables. According to the trainer, whales are just as smart as dogs.

Burgess says he can train any kind of animal if he knows "what it eats, how much, and how they take it."

He has a wife and three children in Hot Springs. "But I can't train those kids. I leave that to my wife."

3 Truck Collision Injures Hereford, Amarillo Drivers

Billy Boatman, 33, was slightly injured Thursday night when the truck he was driving was involved in a collision with two other trucks, a mile north of Canyon on U. S. Highway 87.

Boatman, a driver for Plains Fertilizer of Hereford, received cracked ribs and a bruised chest when his truck collided with a skidding Panhandle Gravel Co. truck driven by Oscar Fry, 35, of Amarillo. Fry was injured in the crash.

Fry's gravel truck then was hit by an asphalt truck driven by Donald Ray Gipson, 27, of Colorado City. Gipson was not injured.

Boatman told Lowell Sharp, co-owner of Plains Fertilizer, that he was coming back to Hereford from Pryor, Okla., with a full load of anhydrous ammonia at the time of the crash.

The collision occurred on a narrow, wet highway being used while the Canyon-Amarillo Expressway is being constructed.

Boatman said his vehicle and the asphalt truck were both going south and the gravel truck was headed north. Boatman had noticed the gravel truck passing vehicles and then saw it slide in front of him, Sharp said.

The gravel truck was hit in the front in both collisions, according to Highway Patrolman Gilbert Ray. After the crash, a gas tank on the gravel truck caught fire but was extinguished by the Canyon Fire Department.

The ammonia truck was a total loss, according to Sharp.

Boatman and Fry were taken to Neblett Hospital in Canyon for treatment and Boatman was released Thursday night.

PARIS — Paris has 7,500 hairdressers, and to a man, they all love to talk.

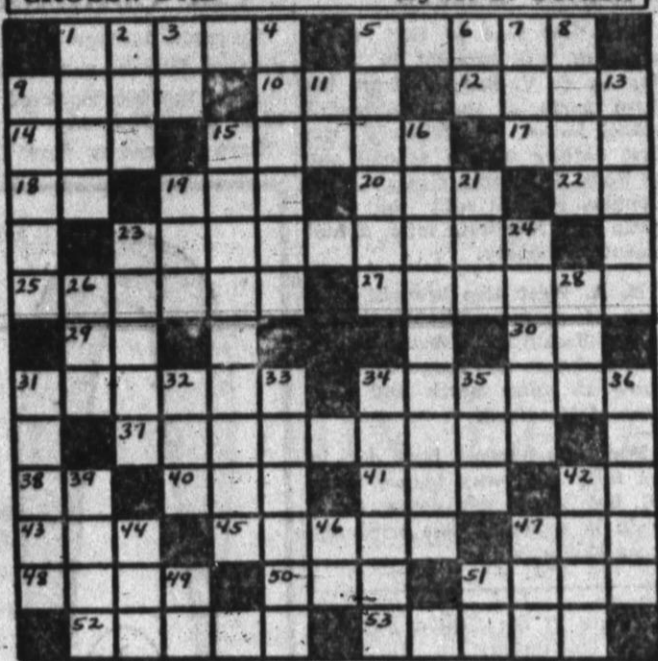

Any woman who can get into and out of a French "Salon de Coiffure" in under a half-day deserves a medal.

Frenchwomen clients apparently love it. They come prepared to settle in, often accompanied by a poodle and/or a chatty friend, who fills in the gaps when Monstieur is busy with another customer.

For their five dollars, average price of a shampoo, set and perfume rinse, they get several hours of entertainment as well as a hair-do. Stacks of fashion and movie magazines are dumped on their laps by the "shampooists," but these are opened usually only under the drier, where conversation becomes impossible.

Some 100 Paris hairdressers have banded together in a syndicate of "High Coiffure" to indicate their superiority, but perversely some of the city's most celebrated hair stylists refuse to join.

Camp to indicate their desire to purchase one of the low cost lots. Persons whose names are on the list, Finlan noted, will have first choice in selecting their home sites. The lots are generally 50 by 120 feet in size, with the exception of a few larger lots located on corners and in sections of blocks where the streets curve.

The real estate man said that he has been encouraged by various persons during the past two years to undertake the development of a low cost housing area for Latin-Americans.

HIS SUBDIVISION PLAT proposal was approved recently by the city commission. While the development will be outside the city limits, Hereford's charter provisions met Wednesday morning with members of the Deaf Smith County Commissioners Court to discuss plans for farm to market roads in 1958. No other persons were reported to have been present. County Judge Homer Henslee said that none of the discussion is to be made public at this time.

vides that any real estate development project within five miles of the city must have the commission's approval. Certain minimum standards regarding width and location of streets, alleys and other service provisions are established for such developments.

Finlan said that natural gas, electricity and telephone service will be available through utility companies. Water for the area will come from private wells, with existing irrigation wells seen as a possible source.

There are no immediate plans for hardsurfacing roads in the subdivision area. The proposed hardsurfaced road from the Labor Camp to Highway 51 would lie just north of the Finlan Subdivision.

The development of a subdivision for Latin Americans is the first such project in the Hereford area. Since the establishment of the Labor Camp for migratory workers over a decade ago, many Latin Americans have become permanent citizens of the area.

Street Project Has Exceeded Expectations

The city's street paving project has "gone over" much better than anyone could have expected. City Manager Dudley Bayne reported to city commissioners during their meeting Wednesday night. The city officials' session, which was called following the postponement of Monday's regular meeting, also saw the okaying of a zoning ordinance, approval of the engineers rolls on four additional blocks of paving and a change in the plans for lighting of Highway 51.

Bayne also reported on progress being made in working out a complete insurance program for the City of Hereford.

Paving-work had begun on all but two blocks of the original paving project, involving about three miles of city streets, approved by the city commissioners early this summer. Bayne said that approval of assessments on the two remaining sections of the proposed paving were expected soon.

After learning that no property owners have expressed objections to the addition of blocks on Ave. A., W. Second St., Ross Ave. and Bradley St., the commissioners approved the engineers' assessment rolls for those four new blocks of paving. Potet Construction Co. will be the contractor on the work.

The recommendations of the zoning commission, which had approved a request from the First Baptist Church to rezone part of their Sixth St. property from C to E, won unanimous approval from the city officials.

The commissioners reconsidered their decision to put 32 fluorescent lights along Highway 51, now undergoing widening and paving within the city limits, after hearing new recommendations from the Southwestern Public Service Co. They okayed installation of 50 color corrected mercury vapor lights on the street after determining that type installation would result in more light at about the same costs as would have been paid for the fluorescent lights.

Baptists Select Joe H. Rucker To Fill Vacancy

Joe H. Rucker, presently minister of education, Trinity Baptist Church, Lubbock, has accepted the position of education-music director at the First Baptist Church of Hereford, according to the Rev. Howard Scott, pastor. He will arrive here Sept. 16 to take over the vacancy left by Bob Lawrence who left May 15 to ranch near Salida, Colo.

Rucker will live here with his wife and three daughters in a home provided by the church at 505 Sampson.

A graduate of McMurry College, Abilene, and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth, he is 40 years of age.

voted out of the drive because it plans a fund drive of its own on Heart Sunday. It may be reinstated if it agrees to drop its own drive.

Virgil Hennen is chairman of the committee and members are Townsend Douglas, Dub Reeves, L. L. LeGrand, Frank Bezner, Hilery Aven and Mrs. Cecil Williams. Bezner was not present at the two meetings.

THE COMMITTEE met with representatives of each group individually and considered each request separately.

The Boy Scout request was cut from $6,000 to $3,500 because its plans included spending part of the money in bringing a salaried Scout executive to Hereford to administer a proposed combination of Deaf Smith and Randall Counties district.

Maurice Teague and W. J. Hiatt, executives of the Llano Estacado District, and Joel Hodges and Fred Cunningham of Hereford represented the Scouts. Members of the committee decided a full-time man isn't needed in this area and allotted the $3,500, which is more than Scout fund drives have been netting here.

LITTLE LEAGUE'S request was upped to give some money for the Peeewe League which is for boys who fail to make Little League teams.

Hodges, chairman of the L.L. said the League needed $500 a year to put away for new uniforms and $200 for insurance and franchise expenses. He said the league is almost self-supporting.

The committee agreed to increase the Athletic Club's request by $500, saying the Club reaches boys of all ages and benefits the whole community.

The Athletic Club will spend its money for new equipment, Guy Lawrence, president, said.

Dan Johnson of Amarillo and Lloyd Sharp of Hereford represented the Salvation Army and requested $3,000 on a 15-month basis. Johnson said the Army had been getting about $2,400 in Hereford from tambourine collections and "War Cry" sales.

BURGESS CUTS EARLY MILO

The first load of 1957 grain sorghum was brought in Tuesday by C. V. Burgess from his farm north of the Progressive school house. He followed the first cutting with a second one on Sept. 5. Pitman Grain's John Douglas Pitman said that the grain was Norghum milo, a fast maturing variety.

B. A. West also brought in a load of grain on Sept. 5. His grain, Martin milo, tested 14 per cent moisture and came from his place 13 miles north and four west of Hereford.

The milo harvest isn't due to get fully underway before Sept. 30, but some additional early grain is expected this week by grain handlers.

participate in the United Fund it stopped solicitations in Hereford on Aug. 1, losing, Johnson said, five of the best months in the year. Johnson said next year, the budget would be less. He asked that the Army be allowed to sell special Christmas and Easter editions of the "War Cry."

Ben Childers, president of the United Fund, commended the committee on its work and said he sees no reason why the recommendations would not be approved by the board.

Childers sat in on the committee's meetings.

Invitations to make a request for money from the United Fund were extended to the Cancer Fund, March of Dimes and Boys Ranch, but the three groups declined to participate.

Since officers were elected last April 16, Mrs. Dyalhia Benson has replaced Mrs. Maurice Tannahill as secretary and Hub Homer, chairman of the executive and campaign committee, has moved from Hereford and his successor has not been named.

Childers said the Fund would seek as many monthly pledges as possible and solicitation would be on an individual basis. Woodrow Wilson is general campaign chairman and will be in charge of organizing and directing actual collection of contributions.

FALL APPETITES take to stuffed potatoes — well flavored, hearty and full of surprises.

Add crab meat, mushrooms and cheddar cheese to them as we do in this recipe and — along with a crisp green salad — they will make a sumptuous main course for a ladies' luncheon.

What else goes on the menu? If you want to be elegant, you can start your luncheon with crescents of melon served with paper-thin slices of ham. The ham should be Italian prosciutto, Smithfield or Westphalian; but in a pinch just plain baked ham will do.

These two courses will be so filling that for dessert we suggest your very best bar cookies with tea or coffee.

BAKED POTATOES—With a stuffings that's full of surprises.

BAKED POTATOES WITH CRAB STUFFING

Ingredients: 4 medium-large baked potatoes, 1/4 cup butter or margarine, 1/4 cup heavy cream, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/8 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon finely-grated onion (and juice), 1 cup grated sharp cheddar cheese, 1 can (6 1/2 ounces) crab meat (drained and picked over and flaked), 1 can (3 ounces) chopped broiled mushrooms (drained).

Method: As soon as potatoes are cooked through and come out of the oven, cut in half lengthwise and scoop out all the pulp; be careful not to break skins. Put potatoes through a ricer or mash smooth. Meanwhile heat butter and cream over very low heat until butter melts; beat into potatoes. Stir in grated onion, 2/3 cup grated cheese, flaked crab meat and drained mushrooms. Pile into potato shells and sprinkle with remaining 1/3 cup grated cheese. Bake in moderate (350 degrees) oven until cheese melts and potatoes are very hot through — about 20 minutes. If you want the tops browner you may run potatoes under the broiler for a few seconds but watch carefully. Makes 6 servings.

ing. It is a time waster for both the talented student and the less able student."

"Three or four minutes of class time remained after Beberman had finished his explanation of variables (a term, incidentally, he studiously avoided). In my day we would have sat there and fidgeted, eager to shake off the irksome straitjacket that mathematics was 30 years ago.

BUT THESE KIDS are in no hurry. To them math is, as Beberman says it should be, "a delightful experience."

A little girl's hand shoots into the air and she asks to play "I'm thinking of a number."

Again, in my day, if we played it at all, "I'm thinking of a number" would have been a fairly boring procedure — something like "2 plus 10, times 4, divided by 6, what is it?"

Not here. Beberman reels off, for these seventh graders:

"Negative 6, times negative 4, plus the square of 1.2, plus the absolute of negative 40, divided by negative 5."

Hands in the air again. Most of their owners have the answer. "Let's do it again, Mr. Beberman! Let's do it again!"

But the bell rings. Reluctantly, if you can believe it, the children fold up their notebooks and troop out.

We return to the bungalow office for lunch (hamburgers) with Page and Miss Gertrude Hendrix, teacher coordinator for the project.

Lunch over, Beberman asks: "By the way, how are you in mathematics?"

"I fell off the sled," I tell him, truthfully, "when I hit long division in the fourth grade."

"Well," says Beberman, "let's see."

He pulls his big pad toward him again, tries me on a few warm-up problems, then announces:

"Within 10 minutes I can have you doing a problem that many students of sophomore calculus have trouble with."

I sweat during the next 10 minutes but in the end Beberman writes something that I couldn't even have read before then:

$$3 < \frac{y+1}{8} < 8$$

It translates: "Three is less than the absolute of Y plus one, which is less than eight."

"And what values of Y," Beberman asks, "make this true?"

Without much trouble, although it's too involved to go into here, I am able to tell him that the statement becomes true when Y is replaced by a numeral for any number between (but not including) two and seven or between minus four and minus nine.

Why have I understood it? Because Beberman has explained everything in simple terms and made sure I understood what job the letter Y performed. Chances are you could have done as well — or better if you're any good at arithmetic.

Does this kind of math instruction pay off?

Educational foundations are pretty hard headed, and one of them, the Carnegie Corp., after watching the Illinois project since 1951, decided last year that it does.

It put $277,000 into the project because it believes the method "will produce more students interested in mathematics, and better mathematicians among those who go to college."

Four other schools in Illinois are using it, and one in Missouri. Two Massachusetts schools and two more in Illinois, are to join them.

Kappa Iota Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority will feature a course of study on "Conduct-Expression and Purpose" in programs for the coming season, it was announced at the first meeting of the year held Tuesday evening in the Hereford State Bank Friendship Room.

Mrs. Labray Ballard gave the opening program on "Introductions." Mrs. D. R. Johnson, president, presided over the business meeting when the budget for the year was reviewed and adopted and projects were discussed and

Some of the projects are providing toys for the children's wing at the Deaf Smith County Hospital and replacing toys when needed, making cash donations to the United Council of Church Women, and to the Boy Scouts. A cash donation was also voted to the state project which includes a hospital in Austin.

Hostesses were Mesdames Bob Brotherton, Max Stipe and Guy Cornelius Jr. Refreshments were served to Mesdames Carl Hollingsworth, T. M. Cox, A. E. Hod-

O'Connor Missed NBA Award; Gets Last Hurrah in New Rule

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — There are two names that everybody in and near the publishing field is being extra careful not to mention these days, but I'd like to tell you what they are:

Wright Morris and Edwin O'Connor.

They are estimable persons, the former from Wayne, Pa., the latter from Boston. Morris has written a lot of novels, O'Connor has written two, each had one published last year and each in its way was very good:

O'Connor's "The Last Hurrah" won the Atlantic fiction prize, and Morris' "The Field of Vision" was National Book Award winner.

The reason they are so hush-hush is that they symbolize two kinds of writing, and two kinds of publisher aspirations, both of them recently subject to some long-winded discussion. O'Connor is the able and worthy but extremely popular sort, Morris only the so-so popular sort but at the same time, in the opinion of this writer as well as an impressive list of other critics, the one who deserved to win the NBA palm.

An argument has been going on among representatives of the three sponsors of the invaluable National Book Awards: The American Book Publishers Council, the American Booksellers Assn. and the Book Manufacturers' Institute.

Some people regret that the award didn't go to O'Connor, and a considerable part of their argument is, he was more popular, would have attracted more public attention to the book business, and would have kept cash registers ringing longer.

During the summer hardworking, earnest representatives of the book industry's three branches have fought over this matter, all under the chairmanship of Eleanor Kask, of World Publishing.

Some of them say: It's our money that goes into this award, we want a direct return on it, why honor a book the public doesn't take to when there are good books that will sell?

Others reply: It's our reputation that's at stake, we want a direct return on it, we tarnish or diminish something if we hedge. We have given the awards in fiction, nonfiction and poetry to the "most distinguished" volumes, and if we qualify that, some people are going to interpret it as meaning that we want to pick "the most distinguished work from among the potential best sellers."

The most serious attack on the Morris award comes from book-sellers. Polled by Publishers' Weekly, about 100 out of the 400 who got the questions replied, and took in general three attitudes:

That the choice of the Morris was "literary snobbery;" that it was possible to pick books of "high merit that will also sell;" and that on the other hand there was justification for the Morris award regardless of sales.

As one member of the NBA committee explained to me, "This doesn't mean that we want the award to go to a 'Peyton Place.'"

Just the same, it looks as though those who want some of the popularity and saleability of "Peyton Place" to rub off on the next winners — the fiction award lies at the center of the dispute — would have their way. Instructions to the juries have been broadened. The book industry and its awards committees have loosened up on the term "most distinguished" in a way that amounts to an invitation to be a little less fussy. If I understand correctly, they imply that a book, paradoxically, might be too good for an NBA award; and they aim not so much to deep-dish as to widen the area of choice.

Juries for the next awards were announced this week:

Fiction: Francis Steegmuller, Mrs. William W. Johnson, William Maxwell, Van Wyck Brooks and Albert Guerard.

Nonfiction: Arthur Holly Compton, Richard Hofstadter, George N. Shuster, Agnes Rogers Allen and Whitney North Seymour.

Cleaning is an Art... at Lawrence Cleaners

Dry Cleaning, a process of cleaning wools and other fabrics without the use of water, is taken for granted by most of the American public, but when you mention Dry Cleaning to Wayne Lawrence, owner of Lawrence Cleaners, you're speaking of a subject that is "close to his heart."

Wayne became associated with a local cleaning plant over 12 years ago, (immediately after his discharge from the armed forces) and worked for that establishment until the 10th of November 1954 when he purchased his present business at 138 N. Main.

"Dry Cleaning is probably one of the least understood businesses today," Lawrence stated "and we'd like to give you just a peep at what goes on inside a cleaning shop."

Actually, the process of cleaning clothes is not particularly complicated, but must be carried out with great care to prevent damage to delicate fabrics.

First of all, every piece of clothing to enter Lawrence Cleaners is pre-spotted to assure that all hard-to-remove substances such as grease, lipstick, graphite, printers ink, etc. are spotted-out by hand before the clothes are placed in the washing tumblers. These articles are then washed with Stoddard Solvent, a petroleum product developed especially for cleaning shops. It replaced naphtha years ago due to the fact that it will not ignite easily and is safe to use.

Next, the clothes are placed in a drying tumbler to spin dry. All remaining Stoddard Solvent is removed by steam heated air.

Again the clothes are spotted to remove any spots that might remain after the washing. And, of course, last but not least, the clothes are pressed, finished, and delivered to your door.

All this takes place in less than 24 hours after your cleaning has been picked up at your home, or delivered to the shop. Other services of the shop include the cleaning and blocking of hats, cleaning of gloves, suedes, etc.

The cleaning plant is operated by Wayne and Mrs. Lawrence, with the help of Mrs. John Hall and Mildred Welty, both expert pressers and finishers.

Lawrence Cleaners is also the agent for "Royal Tailors" tailor-made clothing.

Drop in at your earliest convenience, whether it's on business or just for a friendly visit. You'll find you're always welcome at Lawrence Cleaners, where "cleaning is an art."

Stripes Starred in Italy

HOUSEPARTY DRESS — That's what Baldini's yellow and white striped outfit is meant for, as shown in recent fashion openings in Florence.

ITALIAN SUIT—This is the new look by Guidi—a wool trowleur in red and gray stripes, with easy-fitting jacket, orange velvets and hat.

DAYTIME COSTUME—This ensemble by Falconetta of Florence is made of green and beige striped wool and silk, with hat of same material.

FLORENCE — Italian fashions for fall are as different as the designers who make them. Practically every current silhouette is seen in the collections in Florence and Rome — the barrel skirt, the sack silhouette, the unbelted waistline, the uneven hemline, the floating draperies, the tight pants, the big-collared sweaters, the egg-shaped coats, the panels, the tunics.

One thing stands out, and that is the fondness of many designers for stripes in beautiful and original fabrics. In fact, the excitement of Italian fashions stems principally from the magnificent and unusual array of fabrics, from silks rich enough for an empress to wools soft enough for a baby.

Winter Planting Well Underway

By MAX SCHRADER

The winter planting season is now well underway. Looking back at what has happened to many fine stands of grain sorghums this past season emphasizes the need for using as much of our rainfall as possible.

We have observed many dryland crops the past few months that really needed only another rainfall to make. Good stands were secured on our early heavy rains but they started running out of moisture when it was most needed.

It's easy to second guess and say what might have occurred. In many localities had all the moisture received been utilized it still may not have been enough to make a crop. There are many fields, however, that would have come through had the most been made of the rainfall received.

Contour farming is the most easily applied water conserving practice. This practice alone can often make the difference between making or losing a crop. At times we receive more moisture than we can use, and if allowed to run off it means this same moisture will be sorely needed later in the season.

Hay Fever Is Really Misery

IT'S: HER POINT OF VIEW

By BETTY BABIONE

HELLO AGAIN, and a special sympathetic greeting to fellow hay fever sufferers. 'Tis that time of year when that demon malady hits a peak, and the accompanying symptoms accelerate from the nuisance stage to utter misery.

But if you're among the multitude of unfortunates who have to go about the day's activities equipped with Kleenex, eye drops, inhalers, assortment of pills and capsules etc., etc. — then I don't have to tell you. During this season of the year, hay fever replaces the cold as the most common ailment. And ain't it the very dickens?

WHILST ON the subject of allergies: Victims of hay fever and asthma should cease smoking for at least two months. This bit of incidental intelligence was picked up by a reporter at the annual meeting of the American Medical Assn. According to this great scientific assemblage, abstinence from cigarettes (along with treatment for allergy) may benefit many patients.

Wonder what their opinion is concerning cases where persons suffered more acutely from hay fever or asthma before they took up the nicotine habit than afterward.

At that, it is one more idea to cause distress to the cigarette manufacturers — poor souls.

GUESS EVERYONE has done all their vacation traveling by now. At least, all families with children of school age have settled again in the old routine.

Tina and Roy Clark and their boys barely made it back from Corpus Christi in time for the opening of school. It must have taken expert managing by Tina, what with the usual problem of clean clothes immediately upon return from vacation.

The Clarks had a rather unique experience on their trip in as much as they took along their two Siamese cats. The cats, it seems, found car-riding a trifle "disturbing." But no more than did Roy, as he endeavored to steer the vehicle while said feline animals were jumping over the steering wheel or perching on the dashboard. He thinks the kitties will be staying home next trip.

The W. S. Fluitts are still aglow over their recent trip abroad. Mrs. Fluitt comments that the food was simply scrumptious everywhere they went, and the hardest thing about coming home is that now cessive terraces are needed to break up the concentration of water. Terraces and contouring provide an easy means of making each rain return an equal amount in crop production.

she has to lose weight. I imagine the pleasures of the trip were worth it tho.

YOU MIGHT know the mention of food would bring something else to mind, but have you tried the recipe for apple pie that is being talked about these days? The interesting thing about it is that there is nary an apple in it.

I dropped by Irene Boardman's one morning this week, and she was trying out the recipe. To be sure, it looked just like a big, golden brown, apple pie. The necessary ingredients are staples you usually have on hand all the time and, according to Irene, it is a very simple pie to make. Tastes good, too.

Am constantly amazed at the capabilities of Winona White! On the day she and her family were to leave for Colorado Springs, and in the midst of packing and preparation (of which, traveling with small children takes considerable) Winona was also looking after a friend's small children. Some people would be frantic, but Winona took it calmly in stride and the Whites left for the mountains on schedule.

"LONG TIME, no see" may be a trite expression, but it was certainly appropriate when Marvel Corley and Frances Matthews recognized each other in the hall at Alkman School Tuesday. Once upon a time, (the girls decided it was about 15 years ago), they had known each other at Happy. The Clifton Corleys have lived in Hereford for several years. Frances and E. L. (Red) Matthews and their four children moved recently to Hereford from Arkansas.

I don't know just what my own reaction would be if a drunk man (to put it rather crudely) came crawling through the window of my house some dark night. It would cause excitement to say the least. Robert and Mary Frances Lemons handled the situation with courage and dignity (and a shotgun!), but I wager it was enough excitement to last them a while.

DOCTOR STRESSES MOSQUITO DANGER

Waste Water: Public Enemy

The danger posed by surface lakes and other places that may serve as breeding places for encephalitis-carrying mosquitoes is detailed in the current edition of The Cross Section, a monthly publication of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District.

The information contained in the publication indicates that surface lakes are the prime source of mosquitoes, and shows just how widespread is the Culex tarsalis variety — the insect identified as carrier of the sleeping sickness virus.

Complete text of the article follows:

THROUGH THE PAST years, we have stressed the importance of conserving irrigation waste water, commonly referred to as "tail-water." We have presented information about the increased costs to the irrigator when he produces more water than is needed by the crop being watered. We have tried to present facts concerning our underground reservoir — how the water is being mined in a manner quite similar to a gold or coal mining operation, and how, consequently, we need to make wise use of every gallon of water pumped so that the economy of the South Plains will be prolonged and future generations left a portion of the bounty which we enjoy.

If none of the reasons for conservation or economics of water impress you, then perhaps you will at least be interested to know that your "tail-water" may one day be directly responsible for serious illness or death in your own family.

We have been concerned over the increase in the South Plains of the disease encephalitis (sleeping sickness) for some time now and as a result of this concern have interviewed a medical authority concerning a possible relationship between encephalitis and irrigation.

DR. CHARLES A. FIGFORD, Director of the Lubbock City-County Health Unit, has spent considerable time studying this relationship and was most kind to give us the latest information available on the subject.

According to Dr. Figford, the primary manner in which a person contracts the disease encephalitis is by being bitten by an infected mosquito of the Culex tarsalis variety. Furthermore, the Culex tarsalis mosquito is the most prevalent variety which is found in our South Plains area — about 44-65 per cent of all the mosquitoes are of this variety. The favorite breeding grounds of the mosquito in our country, according to Dr. Figford, are the many playa lakes. In fact, 75 per cent of all our mosquitoes incubate in these playa lakes. Other breeding places are surface pools, irrigation, road ditches and stream margins. From 6-17 per cent of all mosquitoes are produced in ditches along roads.

Tests have shown, states Dr. Figford, that waste irrigation water accounts for 45-87 per cent of the total mosquito production in the Southern High Plains. Practically all of the remaining production is caused by surface runoff from local rains.

HOW CAN WE AID in the battle against the mosquito and ultimately against encephalitis?

Dr. Figford suggests that each person who might be guilty of contributing "tail-water" to a road-ditch or playa lake discontinue the practice immediately. This is the only means of being assured that the mosquito will not reproduce. If the playa lakes fill with runoff water from local rains the best mosquito remedy is to get rid of the lake water as rapidly as practical, in less than 10 days if possible. Mosquitoes need about 10 days in which to reproduce. The lake water might be removed from the surface by means of a recharge well, through which the water could be drained into the underground reservoir. This would make the water available for beneficial purposes at a later date and would also eliminate a breeding place for the mosquito.

Dr. Figford states that where mosquito production cannot be eliminated by water conservation measures then a certain degree of control may be maintained by chemicals; however, this is a very poor second choice. It should be pointed out that any cotton insecticide will keep mosquitoes under control if applied regularly to the surface of ponds or lakes and in marshy areas. No special formula is needed — merely use any cotton insecticide in the same manner you would normally apply it to a crop.

Dr. Figford advises that 262 cases of encephalitis were reported on the South Plains in 1936 and that most of these cases occurred in heavily irrigated counties.

There is not even one man who irrigates in this area who would take a gun and intentionally kill himself or another person, and by the same token there should not be even one farmer who would intentionally allow his irrigation water to escape into a lake or depression and thereby make available a breeding place for a mosquito as deadly as a gun-wielding killer — the encephalitis virus carrying Culex tarsalis.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

THIS HIGHLY EFFICIENT small house crowds a lot of living into 801 square feet. Clever division makes it possible to place kitchen, dining and living rooms in the front of the house without creating a crowded effect. The design is Plan PL33AP by Samuti Paul, architect, 89-51 164th St., Jamaica 32, N. Y.

II CORINTHIANS 4:16 — "So we do not lose heart, though our outer nature is wasting away, our inner nature is being renewed every day." (RSV)

This indeed marks the difference in the spirit of the Christian facing the ravages of disease or the aged follower of Christ as he faces the lessening of his physical vigor and that of one not undergirded by strong Christian faith. It is not merely a matter of gritting your teeth and bearing the hardship bravely, but discovering the secret of inner strength.

No doubt you have had the experience of visiting one ill with a chronic or even incurable disease and discovered that there was such a spirit there and instead of helping the invalid by your visit, you were helped by her. This spirit comes from a trust in God that those who walk intimately with Christ alone possess. Much as vigorous health is desirable, possession of an inner reserve of the spirit born of a deep-seated faith is even more worthwhile.

Shortcut To Perfect Manicure

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Beauty Editor
If you'd give yourself a professional manicure, never take a short-cut on work that will not show. That's the advice of a professional manicurist whose manicures are known to look lovelier longer. She recommends a simple step-by-step routine, and says a good manicure will take only a few minutes longer than a casual one.

The first job is to condition the nail surface to which polish will be applied. That's the only way you'll get a smooth polish finish.
Remove every trace of the old polish with a sterile cotton ball moistened with polish remover. Hold the cotton on the nails until the polish softens. Then wipe it from the base to the tip. Work neatly, so you will not smear polish on the skin around the nails.

When you have shaped the nails with the file and pushed back the cuticle with the wide end of the orange stick, give the nails a good scrubbing with a stiff brush and soapy water. Rub each nail vigorously with the towel when you dry your hands. The scrubbing and towel rubbing should whisk off dead cuticle that might prevent a smooth polish and cause chipping.
Buffing the nails has been revived both by those who wear polish and those who do not. It provides the smoothest base for the polish.

PROFESSIONAL POINTER—Watch your manicurist if you'd learn how to give yourself a good manicure. Remove all the old polish with a cotton ball before you begin the manicure.

A good buffing method is to stroke from base to tip and from tip to base. That way you'll be sure to buff the entire nail. If you stroke across the nail, you are likely to buff only the raised center. The professional manicurist reminds us.
Give nail polish plenty of time to dry at room temperature. Heat will serve to keep the polish soft, and an electric fan used to dry it may only result in polish blisters. It's a good idea to do one hand and let it dry. Then do the other. That way if an emergency requires the use of your hand, at least one will be free.

Dead Sea Scrolls Now on Display

By ERIC GOTTGETREU
JERUSALEM — What the Magna Carta is for Englishmen and the Declaration of Independence for Americans, the 2,000 year-old "Seven Scrolls" seems to have become for the children of Israel.

History-conscious Israelis see one more moral title to their reborn home in the seven parchment scrolls found 10 years ago in a cave near the Qumran ruins on the shores of the Dead Sea. The documents, oldest copies extant of Bible fragments and apocryphal Hebrew literature, are now being exhibited for the first time publicly in an underground vault of Hebrew University.

Day in, day out, old and young queue up in the basement of the Hebrew University's new Senate building. Full of awe they enter its tiny treasure chamber where the priceless scrolls are now on show together with the earthen jars in which they were stored.

In the vault, a temporary depository for the scrolls until a special "Shrine of the Book" has been built on another site of the campus, the parchments are in glass vitrines. The subterranean room itself is protected by specially thick walls, an iron door, a permanent armed guard and insurance of one million dollars.

Though only part of the Hebrew scrolls could be deciphered — some are easily readable but for others the help of infra-red rays is needed — their contents are regarded by almost all scholars as of momentous importance. The number of scientists now working on their theological, historic or linguistic interpretation here in Jerusalem and at many other universities in the world may well exceed a hundred.

ON DISPLAY—Here are three of the famous Dead Sea Scrolls, now on public display in an underground vault at Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

Prof. Benjamin Mazar, President of Hebrew University, hailed the scrolls as "the greatest discovery of our age offering miraculous evidence of a great spiritual movement and enabling us to hear the echo of Jewish life in Israel 2,000 years ago." A recent university publication describes them as another material testimony of "Jews who lived and worked in the Land of Israel two millennia ago, loved and studied the Scriptures, cherished the dream of a perfect society based on a cooperative mode of living, used the Hebrew language to express the whole span of human experience, from lyrical sorrow to political and military concepts."
The scrolls were written in ink — some obviously in very bad ink. Damp and vermin also have had an adverse effect on them, so that many pages cannot be restored at all which, it is feared, may also go for many of the scrolls and fragments found during the last few years in 10 other caves in the Qumran area — finds which are now in the Rockefeller Museum in the Jordan administered section of Jerusalem and therefore not available to Israel restorers or scholars.
Many laboratory tests of the scrolls and fragments of the cloth in which they were wrapped before being put away, as well as the scholarly examination of the contents of the texts themselves, seem to show that they were written not later than during the second half of the first century of the Christian era. In fact the Qumran monastery was destroyed in the great anti-Roman revolt of 70 A.D. and at that time the scrolls had already been put into their jars and the jars into the caves.

MADISON, Wis. — Two salesmen from Monroe found that a little mower will go a long way. A prospective buyer here told John Kleier and LaVerne Lehman that he would buy a single-seat power mower from them if it was good enough to come all the way from Monroe under its power — a distance of 50 miles. The two men, working in relays, drove the mower here in one day. "That was the equivalent of 4 years of mowing," Lehman estimated.

They made the sale.

Presbyterian Church Is Scene of Simpson-Nelson Marriage

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN Church was the scene of the 7:30 p.m. wedding Saturday of Miss Louise Simpson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin L. Simpson of the Jumbo Community, and Joe Nelson, son of Mrs. H. C. Nelson of Dimmitt.

The Rev. Russell Wingert performed the double-ring ceremony before an altar arranged with jade palms in the background and tall baskets of white gladioli, large chrysanthemums and baby mums. Altar vases held white baby mums and wedding tapers burning in seven-branched candelabra gave accent to the twilight scene.

Mrs. O. C. Renfro of Dimmitt presented a short concert of nuptial selections while guests were arriving and accompanied Mrs. M. L. Simpson Jr., sister-in-law of the bride, who sang "Indian Love Call," "Through the Years" and "The Lord's Prayer" in conclusion of the ceremony. The traditional wedding marches were used for the processional and recessional.

Mrs. Virginia Hartman, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. W. D. Adams of Albuquerque, N. M., Mrs. Herbert Burnham and Miss Regene Reynolds of Lubbock. The matron of honor wore aqua taffeta fashioned with fitted waist styled with round low neck, bracelet length sleeves and fullskirt accented by a peacock cummerbund. Bridesmaids' dresses were fashioned of peacock taffeta with aqua cummerbund, identical to that worn by the honor matron. All wore hats of net and hair braided to match their dresses and carried lacy old-fashioned nosegays of sweetheart rosebuds shading from pale pink to deep rose.

Candlelighters were Monadell Hunter, cousin of the bride, and Janie Nelson, sister of the bridegroom. They wore rose taffeta dresses with bonbon cummerbunds, and carried their candles in nests of pink rosebuds.

Bob Anthony of Dimmitt was best man and ushers were Norman Nelson of Dimmitt, brother of the bridegroom, Bob Byrd of Claude and Kenneth Holder of Amarillo.

THE BRIDE was escorted and given in marriage by her father. She wore a traditional bridal gown of Chantilly lace and satin styled with fitted bodice having a portrait neckline framed with lace

Her only ornament was a single strand of pearls. The bridal bouquet was a cascade of shell pink rosebuds and stephanotis centered with white gerberas, detachable for the going away corsage, with white satin streamers.

The bride's mother wore a two piece dress of copenhagen blue crepe with navy accessories and a corsage of deep rose sweetheart rosebuds. The bridegroom's mother wore a black and white tweed crepe with black and rose accessories and a corsage of rose sweetheart roses.

BEFORE AN improvised altar in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Thomas, 322 Ave. J, Miss Christine Thomas was united in marriage with Roy Evans, son of Mrs. Ethel Riley, 230 25 Mile Ave., Sunday Sept. 1 at 3 p.m. Russell Ingalls, minister of the Church of Christ, performed the double ring ceremony in the presence of close friends and relatives.

Blue and white gladioli arranged in wedding baskets and flanking tapers were used for the setting and recordings of wedding music were played including "I Love You Truly", "Smiling Through the Years" and "These Foolish Things."

Mrs. Claude Hicks was the bride's only attendant and Billy Evans served his brother as best man. Mrs. Hicks wore a pale blue dress made similar to that worn by the bride and carried a bouquet of pink feathered carnations. ## Anna Ruth Rouser Marries Ellison Williams Saturday

IN A DOUBLE-RING ceremony read at twilight Saturday evening Sept. 7, in the Kress Baptist Church, Miss Anna Ruth Rouser of Kress became the bride of Ellison Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Williams of Hereford in rites solemnized by the Rev. John M. Ferguson. The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rouser of Kress.

Vows were repeated before the altar banked with greenery and tall baskets of white chrysanthemums. Lighted tapers in branchied candelabra gave soft illumination for the scene.

Traditional wedding music was presented by Misses Janelle Mundy of Canyon, and Donna Ramsey of Plainview, vocalists, who sang "Whither Thou Goest" and "Because" and Miss Ramsey sang "The Lord's Prayer" in conclusion of the service. Mrs. Nell Mundy accompanied the vocalists and played the traditional wedding marches.

Miss Mary Rouser, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Benji Rouser, Judine Young, and Clydene Terrell and Nella Neis of Plainview. Beverley Rouser was junior bridesmaid.

ALL OF THE attendants wore Nile green chiffon gowns fashioned over matching taffeta, and carried colonial bouquets of white chrysanthemums tied with Nile green satin ribbon.

Candlelighters included Cleve and Rick Rouser of Sunray, George Phillips of Oton, cousins of the bride, and Jay Thornton of Tulla, cousin of the bridegroom. Glenda Phillips, cousin of the bride, served as flower girl and the rings were carried by Pat and Mike Phillips, also cousins of the bride.

Jerry Jarnagin was best man and groomsmen included Travis Bynum, C. A. Rouser, Larry Johnson, Tommy George of Muleshoe and Gary Williams, junior groomsmen.

THE BRIDE was accompanied to the altar and given in marriage by her father. Her wedding gown designed by her mother of white Chantilly lace, and nylon net. The moulded lace bodice featured a portrait neckline and came to lily points at the hands. Her voluminous skirt of net was dramatized by appliqued flowerlets of lace and the waist length veil of illusion was edged in matching lace scallops. A close-fitted headpiece encrusted with seed pearls and sequins held the veil in place and she carried a single orchid showered with love-knotted streamers. For something old the bride wore the wedding band worn by the bridegroom's grandmother, which was also worn by his mother, and carried out the "something blue and a penny in her shoe" custom.

For her daughters wedding Mrs. Rouser wore an aqua blue dress of cotton lace over matching taffeta with white hat and corsage of white sweetheart roses. Darlene Riley and Donna Ramsey presided at the punch bowl and Sandra Latta and Beverley Rouser distributed tiny net bags of rice. Wanda Rouser was at the guest book of names.

Thelma McMinn Author of School Counseling Book

Miss Thelma McMinn has spent most of her life, thus far, in the study and teaching of music. Now she has written a book on school counseling. She taught public school music in the elementary and secondary grades of Hereford Schools and for the remainder of her 15 years of teaching in the local schools she held the combined position as instructor in high school English and junior and senior high school choirs and ensembles.

Later she went to Tulla as director of the Tulla school choirs and music instructor in the elementary grades, and then to Dimmitt where she taught high school English in the public schools.

For the past two years Miss McMinn, has not been teaching because it became necessary for her to be at home with her mother who is not well. For awhile she had a small class in piano but that did not wholly satisfy her lifelong ambition to be of service to young people through teaching.

She already held a B. A. degree with a double major in public school music and piano and a double minor in English and French, a master's degree with a major in education, a special certificate issued by the state department of education in both public school music and piano and was one of seven Texas teachers to compile a new course of study for public school music in 1936. She began to search for a different field, and having worked with the Texas classroom Assn. for supervisors, counselors and curriculum specialists, she became aware of the need for school counselors to assist students in realizing their maximum potentialities.

She began the study of counseling and her interest grew out of all proportion especially with the final course in research. The result: her two-volume book "Counseling - The Gateway to Better Pupil Adjustment" containing information for both counselors and students. Volume 1 entitled "An Overview of the Counseling Service" describing the scope and aim of student personal work, counseling procedures and general pattern and principles of counseling. Volume 2, entitled "The Study of the Individual" discusses each tool and technique, both major and minor, used in the counseling process.

With the completion of 24 hours of specialized study, Miss McMinn was issued a counselors certificate by the Texas Education Agency in Austin for her work done at West Texas State College and The Amarillo Center.

Just now Miss McMinn's plans are incomplete. Her main desire is to serve either as a teacher-counselor or as a full time counselor in an accredited school system. Copies of her book will soon be available to the public.

Vows Are Read in Frio Church

Miss Shirley Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Martin of Dimmitt, and Jimmy Jones of the Frio Community, were united in marriage in a ceremony performed recently in the Frio Baptist Church with the Rev. B. H. Baldwin officiating.

The church was decorated with greenery and yellow roses. Miss Frances Zetsche provided wedding music.

The bride's attendants were Miss Betty Jones as maid of honor and bridesmaids Joyce Martin and Jane Jones. All wore pastel blue dresses made with low neckline and full skirt. Accessories were in white.

Walter Vogler was best man and Eugene and Godfrey Baldwin served as ushers.

The bride chose a blue and white street length dress of acetate and cotton fashioned with three quarter length sleeves and small collar. Her accessories were in white and she carried a white Bible covered with tiny red rosebuds tied with stephanotis and satin streamers. Mothers of the couple wore blue dresses with white accessories.

Following the wedding a reception honoring the couple in the church Fellowship Hall. Assisting with the house party were Mesdames D. F. Yandall and Mrs. Owen Andrews.

U A W Pleased with Progress Toward Assured Annual Wage

By DWIGHT FITKIN

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers Union believes it is well on its way toward the goal of a "guaranteed annual wage" for hourly paid workers.

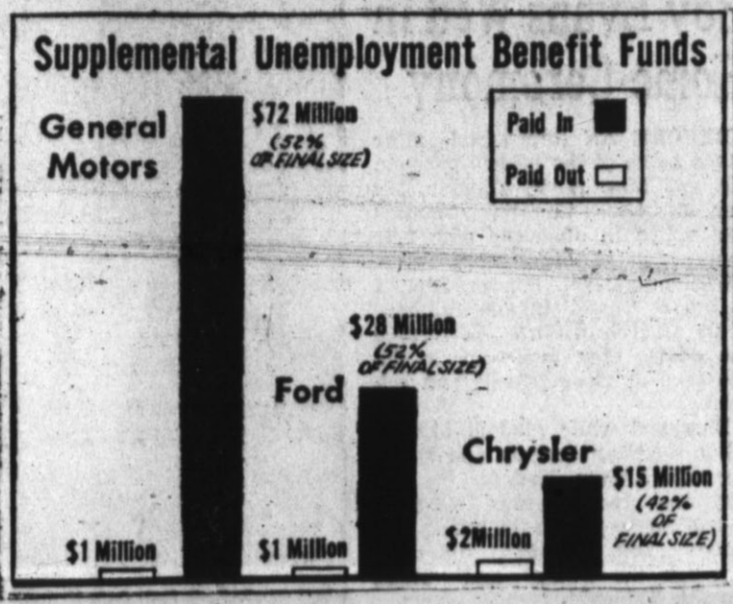

There is a definite glow of satisfaction at UAW headquarters over the way the union's Supplemental Unemployment Benefit plan, known as SUB, has worked out so far.

To make possible this form of "guaranteed wage," General Motors, Ford and Chrysler have for the past two years been paying into SUB trust funds five cents an hour for each hour worked by an employe. During layoffs, the funds are used to supplement state unemployment payments.

The first payments from these funds were made in June of last year.

THE UAW says the funds have been steadily building up and already are big enough to provide bigger benefits. The union believes it erred on the side of conservatism in agreeing to some of the limitations negotiated in the 1955 contracts.

Under present agreements, a laid off worker is eligible to receive 65 per cent of his normal take-home pay during the first four weeks of a layoff and 60 per cent for the next 22 weeks, provided his seniority and the amount of money in the trust fund meet certain requirements.

The amount of money coming out of the SUB fund depends on the level of state benefits. For instance, a laid off worker in Michigan can get $43 from the state and $8.68 from SUB. In many other states where state benefits are less, the SUB payments would be larger. For Ford workers, the union estimates the average weekly SUB layoff benefit has been $15.

THE UNION says the trust funds weathered the layoffs caused by shutdowns in the auto industry a year ago and will be in a much better position to pay out benefits this fall if there are extended shutdowns due to model changeover or production cutbacks.

At the present rate, the union says the trust funds should reach about $400 per worker two years from now. When that happens, barring major layoffs, benefits probably could be financed by interest from the funds and companies could cease paying in 5 cents an hour.

According to the union, at the end of May the GM trust fund stood at 72 million dollars and was rising 2 1/2 million per month; the Ford fund had 28 million and was climbing one million a month; the Chrysler fund was at 15 million and adding between $750,000 and one million dollars a month.

THE UAW contends that SUB already has had a stabilizing effect on employment in the auto industry despite sizable layoffs this year and in 1956.

The Michigan Employment Security Commission is inclined to agree. The agency's research director, Norman Barcus, says SUB "undoubtedly is a stabilizing factor." Auto industry spokesmen, however, question SUB as an important stabilizing factor.

The UAW says 27 states now permit simultaneous payments of SUB and state unemployment benefits. It says 18 states this year have raised unemployment compensation benefits.

Four states have barred what the union calls "integration" of SUB with state benefits. They are Ohio, Indiana, North Carolina and Virginia.

The union is centering its political efforts particularly on industrial Ohio and Indiana in an attempt to win full legal acceptance for SUB.

How To Get Pop To Do Dishes

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

If you want to lure the man of the house into the kitchen at dish-washing time, dry making him a handsome he-man apron from some of the decorative printed linen dish towels available these days.

Some of the best textile designs of the market are turning up on dish towels nowadays, and it's simple as falling off a log to use them in many ways — for aprons, place mats, cafe curtains or even casual skirts.

The modern dish towel, in fact, is almost too pretty to use for drying dishes, so local sewing center experts suggest you take them to your sewing machine to whip up items for gifts, bazaars or for your own use.

A couple of gay, decorative aprons can be made in practically no time — one for your husband, one for you. His apron is made by simply sewing cotton twill tape on the dish towel to serve as neck-band and ties. Choose a bold design of green and white scallions on a black ground for this one — he'll be so proud of it he'll be meek as a lamb when you lead him to the dishes in the sink.

For your apron you might choose a dish towel with a striking corn-on-the-cob design. Pleat across the long way of the towel and secure with a double row of stitching. Knot the ends of a length of white cotton cord and whip across the top of the apron. That's all there is to it.

The newest dish towels, made of a special blend of cotton, rayon and linen, measure 20 by 30 inches. This is a perfect size for kitchen cafe curtains, place mats and various other things, including aprons. Outstanding designs available in department stores include red strawberries on a pink background, colorful vegetables in baskets and many other bright and whimsical motifs.

Of course, you can always use the towels to dry the dishes, too.

Let Kids Make Rules for Family Car Trip

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M.D.
AP Newsfeatures

Let's face it — most children are not very good travelers. Long hours in the back seat of the family car are a boring experience for active youngsters. This boredom is likely to be relieved by wrestling and rough-housing.

Until the children are in their early teens, don't take long car trips. They won't remember much of what they see and you will remember most the family ructions, not the beautiful countryside or the historic sites.

But sometimes a long car trip is necessary. In this case plan well. Without plans, you may wish you'd stayed home.

Here are a few suggestions.
1. Let the children help plan. Let them take on some responsibility for seeing that all goes well. Draw up a few rules with full participation of the children. Maybe the oldest child can write them down and keep the list in the glove compartment for references when needed. One of our lists ran something like this:

"No swearing — this applies especially to Daddy."

"Allowances 25 cents per child per day of trip. Cannot be spent for anything to eat."

"Thermos jug to be kept supplied with cold drinks — mother's job. Each child will have turn at selecting the kind of juice."

"No wrestling — this applies to you-know-who."

2. Have things for the children to do in the car. Car games are a necessity. Select these with care. A magnetic checker board is wonderful. A magic slate offers many possibilities. Small cars and dolls are always good. Now and then a guessing game in which the whole family takes part is fun.

Children who can laugh with their parents have fewer tantrums and fewer troublesome episodes. Laughter doesn't cure everything, but it helps.

3. Start early and stop early. Get going at six in the morning or even earlier. The kids will be groggy and likely go back to sleep. The roads are almost deserted in the early morning so you can get a big stretch of country behind you before the youngsters are up to anything. In the midafternoon you can stop for the night and give the children time to play.

4. Plan some picnic meals. Eat at regular times — hungry children get very crochety and so do grownups. Stop early enough in the afternoon to visit a supermarket and buy materials for a picnic supper.

If the weather is hot, be very careful of any food you carry in the car. Food spoils quickly in hot weather — and a family epidemic of food poisoning is not recommended as part of the fun.

Get where you are going as quickly and smoothly as possible. Don't prolong the traveling unless you have some truly unusual youngsters who really enjoy the going as well as the getting there.

In the wettest year in Texas weather history (1900), rainfall averaged 42.17 inches.

Materials with low cost of maintenance are finding increasing favor with today's home buyers and home builders. Used on both exterior and interior surfaces, they accomplish several goals simultaneously: They save money. They add new beauty to the house. They sharply increase the house's resale value.

Masonry materials have been used for years on the outside of the house and their advantages are well known. Not as well known are some of the new materials now available for interior finishes. Old materials, used in different areas of the house, also can provide variety and fresh interest for the imaginative home builder.

SOME of these materials may be costlier in the initial investment. But over the years they more than make it up in lower maintenance costs.

Further, it is possible to select surfaces on which only small amounts of the costlier materials are necessary, providing a something-added appearance to a wall without much additional cost.

Take a wall in which a fireplace or large bay window is located. The remaining wall space can be covered with bricks, stone or colored concrete blocks — adding interest and variety to the room. Should you prefer wood, vertical paneling or sheet plywood are suitable. New wall materials also include plastic-coated plywood, plastic-coated fabrics and sheet plastics in various forms, color and designs.

For exterior surfaces, a variety of masonry products can be utilized. Aluminum siding is a new exterior surface, more expensive than other exterior materials but easy and cheap to maintain. It resembles white clapboard and sometimes, too, is used to modernize old houses. It can be installed directly over old clapboards.

Other new exterior surfacing materials constantly are appearing in the form of pressed hard boards and similar materials.

HERMAN H. YORK, a prominent architect and designer of small houses, frequently uses a variety of materials on exterior and interior surfaces to add fresh interest to certain areas.

"With a little imagination," York says, "many rooms and space areas can be changed from a monotonous four-wall-alike treatment to one of interest. A change of material on one wall of any room can focus attention in that direction."

The advantages of using variety in a new house were summed up by York:

"The home buyer can make his house more interesting and attractive by the use of several materials for interior finish. If intelligently used, with this added attractiveness, he will reduce the maintenance costs. The end result will be a house with a higher resale value because it has something to set it apart from others."

Here are some ideas for achieving this variety:

Use wood cabinet work as closet partitions, wainscot walls in den and recreation room, use wood or masonry from floor to underside of balcony areas in split-level houses or beneath stairways. Ceramic tiles can be used for

Exemplar Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, Opens 1937-38 Season on Tuesday

XI Epsilon Alpha Exemplar Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority held its first meeting of the new club year in the home of Mrs. J. B. Pool Tuesday evening. Mrs. Ed Johnson, president, presided.

During the business session plans for the coming year's activities were discussed and the plans were made for the Area Beta Sigma Phi convention which will be held at the Jim Hill Hotel September 29.

Mrs. Pete Guinn was named civil defense chairman and Mrs. R. J. Cramer was appointed alternate delegate to the City Council. Delegates are Mrs. J. B. Pool and Mrs. Ronald Babione.

Mrs. Ronald Babione gave a forward look at new year books telling of the course of study which will be built around the fireplace hearths and children's play areas, floor tiles (asphalt, vinyl, linoleum, rubber, etc.) in recreation room, powder rooms, lavatories and nurseries. Cork may be considered as flooring in many rooms.

THERE ARE A number of ways to lower the cost of maintenance over the years. These include:

Use more "open planning" in your house designs. It not only adds dramatic effect to the living areas but it also eliminates a number of costly partitions.

Use larger glass areas on exterior walls. This will reduce the amount of wall surfacing materials needed for the house.

Plan built-in furniture as a part of the house. This not only reduces the initial cost of furnishing your home but it also sharply cuts the cost of maintaining the walls against which the built-in furniture stands.

Use plastics in planning the illumination of your house. This can reduce the need for ceiling finishes where "luminous ceilings" are used. In such cases, the entire ceiling becomes a lighting fixture.

On floors and in rooms which get a lot of use — children's rooms and recreation rooms — use ceramics and plastics. They're durable and easy to clean — and, therefore, cheaper to maintain.

Memories of a Summer in the University of Mexico

(Editor's Note: Martha Heard returned Sunday, Sept. 1 from Mexico City, where she has been studying for six weeks at the University of Mexico.)

By MARTHA HEARD

In Mexico I floundered into the Mexico habit of putting off until tomorrow worse than ever, so instead of bringing you a report direct from Mexico City, I will bring you some memories I have.

First I will tell you about attending the University as this was the reason I went to Mexico. There were 823 who enrolled for the Summer Session for Foreign Students. (The regular students go from March to December.) We came from all over the United States with an abundance from California and Texas, but a surprising number were from New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, also a few came from Haiti, Cuba, France, Germany, etc. At first we were the center of attention as the Mexican boys lined the halls to stare and make comments undecipherable to the foreign ear. As time passed, we began to fit in and made friends easily with our exceptionally friendly neighbors.

Classes ranged from Spanish Conversation to History of Mexican Art. Most dealt with the Mexican or Spanish phase of a subject so that we could learn firsthand. Naturally I know more about the classes I actually took so I will tell you something about them.

Modern Mexican Literature dealt with the works of the more outstanding Mexican writers of the 20th century. The problem which Mexico faces is that so many of her people can't read or write that the literature isn't widely read even though there are some authors who compare favorably with our best modern writers. As the professor states, "Those who can write have nothing to say and those who have something to say can't write. Mexico is trying to educate her people, but she has a long way to go." Advanced Grammar and Conversation, too, sounds dull, but it wasn't! In fact I was so fascinated by the method in which grammar was presented, that I couldn't even daydream. Everyone in the class was alert in order to grasp all that was being presented to us. The other class was History of Hispanic American Literature.

The professor with his Castilian accent livened up this subject. (He must have been the only one in Mexico City who didn't know about the earthquake until the next morning when he casually opened his newspaper to read "Tumbler." Even then he thought it must have occurred somewhere else.) The course dealt with all the important writers of Mexico and Latin America since the discovery of the New World. It familiarized us with the writers, when they wrote, how they wrote, and about what they wrote. We could see the various trends in style and how it compared with the rest of the world's literature being produced at the same time.

These are some of the classes which were very popular: Living Spaces, which dealt with the types of dwellings in which the people live; Mexican Folk Dances, which taught the various colorful regional dances; History of Mexico, which became more real when one was in the same surroundings where the historical events had occurred, and Mexican Art, which compared the works of the famous Mexican artists. Classes were very informal. The teacher generally arrived when he pleased, casually greeted the students, lit a cigarette and began his lecture. Of course, each teacher conducted his course in a different manner. In one class there were only four of us and by the end of the semester we were well acquainted with the various aspects of each other's social life. We even visited the professor while he presented his television program.

The spirit of the summer school was wonderful. We were one big family though we had come from totally different environments. The Mexicans were like cousins whom we had come to visit who wanted us to see and do everything and to grow to love their country as much as they did. By the end of the summer they had accomplished this.

Most of you have probably seen pictures of the University. It doesn't look as if a place such as this could possibly be. The amazing architecture was the accomplishment of about 50 of the country's leading architects under the direction of President Aleman. (His statue towers over most of the buildings looking surprisingly like Stalin.) The buildings are designed to represent Mexico. The most outstanding structure is the huge Olympic Stadium which is shaped like the mouth of a volcano. When there is a football game, the noise of the cheering crowd rises as the sound of an erupting volcano. I like the swimming pool best. I'm sure it's the biggest and nicest pool in the world. Though one wears a sweater walking over to the pool, he isn't uncomfortable swimming, as the water is slightly heated. When he becomes tired, he can lie on the cool, green grass and watch the boys do gymnastics, or the divers from the big boards, or the water ballet class, or the water polo teams, or the players in the nearby handball courts.

I always thought Texas Tech had done a good job placing the buildings far apart so that it takes a good half hour to walk from one end of the campus to the other, but the University of Mexico beats this. It's delightful to look out over huge stretches of green between buildings, but the loveliness wears off as one hikes the distance. There is also some difficulty in getting accustomed to the unevenly shaped rocks planted between sidewalks. Luckily each school has all its classes (even a cafeteria) within one building.

While one cannot help admiring the beauty of the buildings and the work that it must have taken to accomplish the breathtaking effect, it is always surprising to SOCIAL SECRETARY Mrs. Tom Burke confers with Argentine Ambassador Mauricio Luis Yadorola on a point of protocol.

Social Secretary Aids Argentines in Capital

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — The social secretary is a luxury for an ambassador and his family, says Mrs. Tom Burke — but a necessary one. Mrs. Burke has just taken a job with Argentine Ambassador and Mrs. Mauricio Luis Yadorola.

Social life in this nation's capital needs a special interpretation, says the Chilean — born wife of a former State Department official. "Protocol is rather elastic here as compared with the restricted social customs of other capital cities, like Buenos Aires, London, or Rome."

"Any person, even a newcomer, who has money and the ability to entertain can make the grade. In other places, before you make the grade, such attributes as family background, talent and education are considered. Washington is different in this respect even from New York, Boston, San Francisco and Pittsburgh."

Mrs. Burke, a talented hostess and musician, who was educated in France and speaks French and her native Spanish fluently, has lived in the capital 23 years. She has been active in promoting good feeling and knowledge among women's organizations of North and South America and is now serving her third term as president of the Pan American Liaison Committee of Women's Organizations. This is her first job as a social secretary. "A first precept of the social secretary is to keep the ambassadorial family informed of the diplomatic ways of 'arranging life here,'" she told me. "Having been the wife of a State Department man so long helps. The job calls on you to instruct or help or advise on calling procedures, on different arrangements involved in arranging receptions, dinners and other functions, whom to accept as guests and whom not to accept, as well as the recognized protocol."

The likeable Yadorolas, who have seven children and 16 grandchildren, are accompanied by their two attractive younger daughters, Maria Cristina, 18, and Angelica, 21, both of whom have teacher's degrees. Their four sisters are all married to army men, and their brother is a lawyer in the ambassador's law firm.

Mrs. Yadorola speaks no English. The ambassador is perfecting his, and his two daughters are assiduously learning their ABC's by attending a language school daily with him.

After their lessons the girls visit with Mrs. Burke to chat for an hour in English. Sometimes the ambassador joins them.

Questions Tell Maturity of Young Lovers

AP Newsfeatures

Psychologists have been airing the view that marriage is not for the immature youth, that the largest step in your life should be taken with firm feet on the ground. "Well, how do I know whether I'm immature?" many girls inquire, and a good question, too. They feel that if they are capable of holding a summer job, baby sit and do the family cooking when parents go off to the movies, they should be able to handle their own finances, children and keep a man alive with their cooking.

But marriage involves coping with a personality, and a girl who has not "grown up" for all her years, may still be immature in her dealings with people. One way to size up whether you are the "spoilt" type who'd find it difficult getting along with a man is to analyze your relationships with family, friends and classmates, people with whom you spend a good deal of time. You may still be too young-at-heart for marriage if you:

1. Feel you "just cannot live without" something your parents cannot afford to buy you.
2. Pout at meal time if you do not get the outside cut of roast beef or the drumstick of the turkey.
3. Get angry with a friend who

"But Can It Be Found In The Bible?"

People often indignantly demand that Catholics prove their teaching from the Bible.

The Bible is their "rule of faith" and they argue that every man has the right and ability to discover for himself, by his interpretation of the Bible, what he must believe and do in order to be saved.

We do not question the sincerity of these people and we applaud all who strive earnestly to understand and observe the Scriptures. But—are they right in calling the Bible, privately interpreted, the sole source of Christian teaching?

"Hold the teachings that you have learned," wrote St. Paul, "whether by word or by letter of ours" (2 Thess. 2:15). He refers to Christian teachings, some oral, some written, and demands that all be received.

Christianity did not begin with the Bible. It began with the coming of Christ. The Lord instructed His Apostles to "go forth... teach all nations"—and to insure that His truths would always be maintained, Christ established His Church, "...the pillar and mainstay of the truth" (1 Timothy 3:15).

The last part of the Bible... written by St. John... was not completed until 60 years after the Crucifixion of Christ. There was no Bible in anything resembling its present form until nearly 400 years after Jesus had died on the Cross. And the widespread distribution of the Bible as we know it today was impossible until the invention of printing, some 1400 years after the Savior's death.

By what "rule of faith" did the millions of Christians live during those 1500 years?

The answer is, of course, that the teaching of the Church was the rule of faith for the Christian world. And St. Paul reminds us that Christianity consists of "one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism" (Eph. 4:5). "God is a God of peace, not of disorder," St. Paul said further (1 Cor. 14:33).

Yet today we have nearly 300 different religious denominations, all calling themselves Christian... all professing the Bible as their rule of faith... and all differing to some extent or another in their understanding of what the Bible means. Could Christ have left a "rule of faith" that would permit such confusion? Would He have left the interpretation of His Word to the fallible and changing judgments of men—when our very souls depend on a correct understanding and observance of the things Christ has taught us?

Because it certainly does matter what a man believes, we invite you to examine the rule of faith of the first Christians—a rule that is still maintained by the Catholic Church. Because the Bible is God's Word, and because He gave it to us for a purpose, we invite you to see what this purpose is. An interesting pamphlet on the correct use of the Bible, will be sent to you free, in a plain wrapper. And nobody will call on you. Ask for Pamphlet No. KC-13.

Are You Sure You Want a Paris Dress?

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

The fall fashion circus is over in Paris. The buyers are back home. And the editors are just as confused as the public.

It happens every spring and fall, when Americans rush to Paris by the thousands, to be on hand for the opening gun signaling the start of another fashion furor. Papers headline advance reports of knee-high skirts or disappearing waistlines or the banning of bosoms. It all makes good reading and better conversation.

Then, when the tumult and shouting have died down, members of the haute couture say they didn't really mean to eliminate the bosom or lift skirts above the knees. American buyers bring back the Paris models they have bought and turn them over to designers for "inspirational ideas" — and when the new trends reach the U. S. public they have turned into wearable, discreet, strictly American clothes.

It's all in the spirit of good, clean fun. The French haute couture gives the Americans a good show for their money. Nobody expects the more bizarre Paris styles to be reproduced exactly for the American public. And if the average customer doesn't take all the uproar too seriously no harm has been done.

This fall's Paris styles have been described variously as "eunysacks with diamonds," "glorified barrels" and "shareless bags." Nobody really gets offended at these frank expressions of opinion by the more outspoken American fashion writers.

PIERRE BALMAIN—This white dacron-and-silk satin evening suit was inspired by Marlene Dietrich, it is said.

CHRISTIAN DIOR—This may look like a relic of the 1920s, but it's really Dior's latest cocktail dress, made of velvet-dotted rayon net, with long torso line and short, full skirt, flaring from hipline, over flesh-tone petticoats.

PIERRE CARDIN—Here is the barrel skirt and the lasso neckline in a dress of beige orlon-wool-rabbit blend.

B. B. Breedings Are Hosts to Relatives

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Breeding are Comdr. and Mrs. Gary W. Collins and daughters Ann and Gena of Santa Barbara, Calif. Comdr. Collins (retired) is the brother of Mrs. Breeding.

The Collins family drove here from their home in California after having visited Grand Canyon and other national parks. They entered their son, Winslow, in the New Mexico Military Institute at Roswell. Miss Gena Collins will be a house guest of her aunt for several days before returning to California where she will attend Marymount School for Girls at Santa Barbara.

After leaving here, Comdr. and Mrs. Collins will drive to Boston where they will enroll Ann in Pine Minor at Wellesley, Mass. They will then go to New York in time to sail on the Queen Frederica Sept. 14.

They will disembark at Athens and spend several weeks cruising around the Greek Islands, in the Adriatic, Sicily and Southern Italy. They will return to California on Dec. 20 for their children's holidays, after which they plan to travel in Mexico and Central America.

Until the Collins' arrival here in Hereford, they had planned to have their children join them for the Christmas holidays in Switzerland, where they had previously gone for skiing at Christmas. However, it was learned here that Ann had been nominated to make her debut at the Debutante Ball at the Coral Casino. The ball is an annual social affair held by the Music Academy of the West.

Comdr. Collins, a graduate of Amarillo High School, said it had been almost 30 years since he had been in Hereford.

The "Nine O'Clock Gun" has been booming nightly on that hour in the Norfolk and Portsmouth, Virginia Navy Yards for 90 years.

Bride-Elect Is Given Shower

A group of hostesses honored Miss Elaine Waldrop, bride-elect of Wayne Stagner, at a shower courtesy given recently in the home of Mrs. Jimmie Allred.

Colors of gold and bronze were featured at the refreshment table which was laid with a brown organdy cloth and centered with gold and bronze chrysanthemums. Gold streamers extending from the floral piece revealed the wedding date, "September 14 at Pottsboro."

Standing with Mrs. Allred to receive the guests were the honoree and her mother, Mrs. E. V. Waldrop of Pottsboro, Mrs. Owen Stagner, mother of the prospective bridegroom, and Mrs. Fritz Christman, aunt of the bride-elect.

Donna Jean Stagner and Marilyn and Marlene Legg presided at the serving table and Elaine Wagoner and Lois Christman registered the guests. Mary Ann Young, Mrs. Jerry Murphy of Denton, and Clydene Allred entertained with informal piano music during the calling hours.

Hostesses making up the house party were Mesdames E. W. Young, Lowell Sharp, S. B. McLallen, Tandy Legg, Marlin Gilliland, D. C. Kinsey and Frank Watson of Portales, N. M.; Jack Kirksey, L. L. LeGrand and B. E. Roberson.

UNTRUSTED FRIENDS

DALLAS (AP)—Regional Postal Director George Gray had the buck passed to him for the solution to this little problem:

The postmaster of a small West Texas town which uses combination locks on its postal boxes reports that an elderly lady patron has her neighbors pick up her mail. The clerks have to hand them the mail, a time-consuming and seemingly unnecessary procedure.

Finally, the postmaster suggested that the elderly woman teach her neighbors the lock combination.

"My goodness," she replied, "I couldn't possibly do that. I don't trust them."
