Sisters find that giving is getting

By KAY PECK
Staff Writer

It's a home, a place where its residents can go for rest and the mutual support of those who share that home.

There are no children's toys lying scattered on the living room floor nor a "Mr. and Mrs. So and so" nameplate over the mailbox. Despite these absences, in many ways it's more of a home than most traditional residences. It is a caring haven for those who live there. Is there a better definition for home?"

Some might think of it by a more traditional name: convent.

Sister Mary Jean Ferry stilles a hint of amusement when asked if the residence she shares with Sister Mary Nolen and Sister Theresa Gleeson should be referred to as a convent.

"This is more like a home," she said.

Women who care

Sister Mary Nolen (left), Sister Theresa Gleeson (center) and Sister Mary Jean Ferry (left) are an important part of the ministry of San Jose Catholic Church. The three women live and do much of their work in the San Jose Mission located in the Labor Camp southwest of Hereford.

And it is. One need only step across the threshold to know that the Christian love, which the three nuns share with the people of Hereford, comes home with them at night. The furnishings are inexpensive yet comfortable, and the three-bedroom abode is decorated in simple good taste.

Shelves of books line one wall in the living room. The titles tell of different projects and religious studies with the occasional novel thrown in, giving a hint of the sisters' personal tastes.

It's not the books nor the occasional painting nor the coffee mugs hanging on the kitchen wall which give the place its personality. The simple home has taken on the same air of quiet peace which marks the three women who live there.

The nuns, members of the Order of the Sisters of the Blessed Virgin Mary, are currently in their fifth year of working with the San Jose Catholic Church in Hereford. They live on the second floor of what, at one time, served as a hospital clinic in the Labor Camp southwest of Hereford.

"This place (the Labor Camp) was once alive with 300 families," Sister Mary Jean said.

Today, only 107 residences are water service customers at the camp. During the 1940s, the Labor Camp was established by Hereford Labor Camp, Inc.--a group of vegetable growers, shippers, farmers and merchants--in an attempt to provide housing for the thousands of migrant workers drawn to Hereford during vegetable harvests.

The first buildings at the camp came from barracks moved from the prisoner of war camp, located four and a half miles southwest of Hereford. Those barracks were intended as temporary structures when they were first built to house Italian POWs during World War II. Forty-six years later, many of those structures are still in use as homes and apartments.

As its name implies, the Labor Camp was originally established to serve as temporary housing for migrant workers. Many of the workers came to Hereford and then ceased to be migrants. Little by little, residents of the "camp" purchased their own piece of property and converted the barracks into homes or built or moved in new structures.

Although the "camp" has become a permanent neighborhood, the activity and population is not what it was during the heyday of the Labor Camp. At one time, the San Jose Mission was a thriving ministry including a school and a hospital clinic.

A maternity clinic where Dr. Lena F. Edwards worked in the early 1960s is now an abandoned skeleton. It is difficult to imagine that about 500 babies were born there during Dr. Edwards' years in Hereford. The structure seems too humble to have housed the work which would earn Dr. Edwards a Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor.

Although migrant workers still travel to Hereford to work at various agricultural labors, there are no longer the thousands of transients who once made the Labor Camp a hub of activity. As the flow of migrant workers ebbed, so did the ministry and the use of facilities at the San Jose Mission.

When the three sisters first arrived, most of the buildings had been practically abandoned. With the help of parishioners, the sisters have cleaned, repaired and placed facilities back in service.

The hallways of the school are again filled with the sound of children's shouts and laughter during sessions of religious instruction held there every Wednesday and Sunday. About 300 students fill classrooms throughout the extensive school building. The sisters and their assistants have an ongoing project of cleaning and repairing unused rooms in order to provide space for the many classes. Revitalization of the San Jose Mission is not limited to the school. The mission church is alive again with the beauty of religious services. A single mass is conducted there each Sunday.

The sisters work as a team with Father Joe Bixenman and Father Darryl Birkenfeld in the ministry of both the mission and the church at 735 Brevard. The nuns meet with the two priests and four lay deacons at least once each week in a staff meeting.

Primary librarians love work with kids, teachers

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

A school librarian was once one of those persons whose main job was to check books in, check books out, and shush children when they were making too much noise.

"They don't have shushing class any more at librarian school," said Janice Bell, librarian at Tierra Blanca Primary School. "We don't do as much hushing and shushing as we used to do."

Bell, Gaye Maclaskey (at Aikman) and Wanda Nall (at Northwest) are librarians at the three public schools serving Kindergarten-through-third grade students in Hereford.

In fact, they're not librarians; they are highly-trained media specialists who must have almost as many hours in specific library science over the basic bachelor's degree that they almost qualify for a master's degree

All three hold master's degrees. They must also pass a special test to receive a librarian endorsement on their teaching certificates.

Before they became media specialists all three were "regular" teachers, but found that being a media specialist allowed them to stay in a career field they liked but without many of the structures and pressures that classroom teachers face.

"As a librarian you avoid a lot of the paperwork that other teachers have to take home with them," Maclaskey said. "We work hard all day long but you don't have to take things home with you as often as teachers do. It gives you more free time with your family. There are still some pressures but I enjoy this much more (than regular classroom teaching)."

Besides helping children find books and checking the books in and out, the primary school media specialists are kept busy with teaching aids for teachers. Bell and Maclaskey also head up the computer programs at their schools.

Technology has been the biggest change over the years," said Bell. Not only do they deal with computers, but video tapes have replaced many film strips and movies, and cassettes have replaced reel-to-reel tapes.

"But even with all of the technology, nothing replaces reading," Bell said.

They also work with teachers and students in preparing for tests like the TEAMS and others, and other projects.

"We have a lot of special curriculum support activities in the library," Nall said. "We have special projects that support and expand the curriculum."

"The activities we do are an extension of the classroom activities. When children actively participate they tend to better remember; therefore, I use the discovery approach to learning with hand-on activities."

The projects can range from watching chicken eggs go from just out of the nest to just-hatched chicks, live toads, a tadpole and an ant farm at Northwest to a special project being done at the three primary schools and two of the three intermediate schools, West Central and Shirley.

Applications taken for CSF

Applications for assistance from the 1989 edition of the Christmas Stocking Fund will be accepted beginning Monday at the county Red Cross office, 224 S. Main. Applications will be taken from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays until Dec. 13.

The Christmas Stocking Fund is a community-wide holiday charity aimed at helping the less fortunate during the Yule season. It is administered by an anonymous volunteer committee.

The local Red Cross office assists the charity by handling applications, and The Hereford Brand serves as the collection point for donations to CSF. The newspaper and KPAN Radio help promote the charity.

Those applying for assistance will need to show proof of Deaf Smith County residence, such as a driver's license, rent or utility receipt, or voter registration card which indicates an address within the county.

If applicants are requesting assistance with a specific bill, they should file the bill in order to provide information on account numbers, amount due, etc.

Fund raising for CSF will formally begin after Thanksgiving, but The Brand will accept donations anytime. The CSF committee is hoping to post a fourth consecutive year of record setting donations to the charity. Last year, the CSF total hit the $16,000 mark, surpass ing the totals from the previous two years.

Community involvement in the project hit a new high last year, too, as local schools and businesses conducted canned food drives for the project.

This year's efforts are beginning with a "Can the Bulldogs" drive being conducted by the Deaf Smith County Child Welfare Board at Friday night's football game with Borger. Fans are asked to bring a can of food to be donated to the CSF.

Hereford schools will again participate in canned food drives for CSF during December. School drives in 1987 and 1989 netted large quantities of food for CSF and allowed the community's young stars to have a part in the charity.

Lupe Chavez of Hereford has formally announced his candidacy for the office of Deaf Smith County Commissioner (Precinct 2).

Chavez is the juvenile peace officer in the county. He announced his intention to the Hereford Brand last week.

Chavez, who will be running on the Democratic ticket, is making a second attempt for a commissioner's post after losing by a handful of votes to County Commissioner John Stirling (Precinct 1) in the Precinct 1 Democratic primary and runoff last year. Chavez and his family have since moved to a new location within the city, making him eligible to run for the Precinct 2 position.

Official filing for the 1989 commissioner's race will be open from Dec. 3 through Jan. 2, with the primary election slated for March 13.

"People in Precinct 2 as well as in the community have asked and strongly encouraged me to run for county commissioner," Chavez wrote in his announcement stating that he would be running for office.

"I feel I could be an asset to the commissioner's court and help contribute to the betterment of Deaf Smith County," Chavez said.

Chavez, who is a graduate of Wayland Baptist University, is very active in community service. He is currently serving as chairman of the Deaf Smith County Red Cross board of directors.

He is also a member of the Deaf Smith County Executive Program Council, the St. Anthony's Caring and Sharing ministry; the San Jose Knights of Columbus and the Hereford Lions Club.

Troy Don Moore is the current Precinct 2 commissioner.

Prairie Justice: Scarlet Letter

EDITOR'S NOTE: Convicted and imprisoned twice for a crime he says he didn't commit, Bobby Templin waited for the opportunity to tell his story outside the restraints of a courtroom. In the final installment of "Prairie Justice," Templin professes his love for Rhonda, gives his version of her death and challenges the motive behind her parents' investigation of the case. As he seeks parole, they are no less relentless in their opposition to his freedom.

He appeared that morning in starched jail whites and with his dark hair closely cropped. He was neatly dressed and had gained no weight, and despite a hint of prison pallor, he looked better in person than in any of his photographs.

The low-slung prison unit was his photographs. neither imposing nor menacing but mostly a somber gray gash in the lush green woodlands of East Texas in the spring of 1989.

Speaking through a phone from behind a thick glass partition, Bobby said first and foremost he did not murder his pretty young wife 13 years ago in Rotan and he welcomed the opportunity to tell his story free from the constraints of the witness stand.

"I'd get on TV and talk for two hours if I thought it would soak in with everyone," he said. "I'm not going to do that."

He spoke forcefully and often persuasively.

Despite his philandering, he said, he was very much in love with Rhonda and it was genuine grief that accounted for his unusual behavior in April 1976.

"My wife had just died," he said. "This was my childhood sweetheart, okay? I'm still not over it. Despite what people believe, it's going to be a lifelong thing."

Bobby said he sensed Norbert Schlegel's distrust almost at once.

"He and his wife started asking questions. I froze because they were pretty strange questions. I really didn't

Bomb came from work, research and luck

EDITOR'S NOTE: The atom had long been a conundrum for scientists and chemists. Then Albert Einstein put his signature to a letter delivered to Franklin D. Roosevelt on Oct. 11, 1939, and the U.S. government became involved. The world hasn't been the same since. This is the first of two articles based on a new Associated Press book, "World War II: A 50th Anniversary History" telling how this came to pass.

Scientists had been making increasingly revealing probes for years into the atom, something they posited but could not see. Scientists in France, in Germany, in Italy, in Denmark, in Britain, in America.

By SID MOODY

Associated Press Writer

The atom tantalizingly bared its secrets like a fair dancer. A little bit here. A little bit there.

In what today seems like the Dark Ages, the quest after the atom was a conundrum for physicists and chemists. Science for its own sake. Then, just 50 years ago, governments became involved. The quest became, possibly, a question of survival.

Survival because one of those governments was Adolf Hitler's Germany. The others were Great Britain and its immediate allies, the United States. The atom made its debut at Franklin D. Roosevelt's White House in October 1939. Nazi Germany put government information research a month earlier, a few days after it ignited World War II by invading Poland.

The landmarks to the atom's path to 1939 were often banal, typical of the untypicality of science. A dark drawer in Paris. A traffic light in London. A goldfish pond in Rome. A stroll in the snow in Sweden.

The major players were Nobel laureates. The walk-ons include a small boy on a street corner in Long Island. The Columbia College football team. A novel. Another book called "Mein Kampf."

PART 1 of a two-part series

BEGIN WITH URANIUM.

A black product called pitchblende was a byproduct of coins made from silver mined since 1519 in a valley named Joachimsthal in today's Czechoslovakia. From this byproduct in 1789 Martin Heinrich Klaproth, a German chemist, extracted a grayish metal and named it uranium. Uranium became useful in coloring ceramics.

Then, in 1896 in Paris Henri Becquerel was experimenting with the newly discovered X-rays. He left a photographic plate with some uranium salts in a drawer to await a sunny day. To his astonishment he found the salts left a vivid impression on the developed plate. This prompted Marie Curie and her husband Pierre to investigate radiation, eventually discovering radium in pitchblende.

Meanwhile, a prodigious talent from New Zealand named Ernest Rutherford had arrived in England to peel away at the atom like a man eating an artichoke. He chose an obscure cultural evening in Manchester in 1911 to make an important announcement.

The atom, he had decided, was a miniature solar system. At its core was a compact nucleus. This opened the possibility that the core could somehow be targeted to explore its secrets.

Much of the earlier pursuit of the atom was experimental, one scientist's trial, error and resolution leading to another's in a sort of chain reaction.

The other avenue was theoretical, hypotheses promulgated to be proven out by experiments in the lab. On this avenue the German-born Albert Einstein stood all but alone. His 1905 theory of relativity with its profound analysis in 9,000 words of time, light, gravity and matter forever changed the world of physics. Its formula of E equals mc² was to forever change the world beyond the ivory tower as well.

Einstein said his theory was the result of thought, his own, while freely acknowledging the past work of predecessors. He did not foresee where that thought - the energy potential of a mass equaled its weight times the speed of light squared - might lead.

In 1921 he turned aside an inquisitor who wanted to make an atomic weapon based on his fatal formula.

"Its foolishness is evident at first glance."

Rutherford was to jokingly suggest in 1903 that if a proper trigger could be devised, the atom "could make this old world vanish in smoke." But for most of his life he insisted the idea of energy from the atom was "moonshine."

Then in 1908 Max Planck, the German theoretical physicist who formulated the quantum theory, said that while the chance of obtaining the atom's latent energy was "extremely small only a decade ago, it is now in the range of the possible."

Enter the novel and the traffic light.

Herbert George Wells was a prolific novelist, a pioneer sci-fi futurist, a socialist on his own terms and a gadfly who nonetheless had meat on his mental bones.

Wells often wrapped his personal forecasts of the future in the garb of the latest scuttlebutt from science.

Leo Szilard, a Hungarian and one of Wells' many admirers, intruded on the reclusive Einstein as a physics student in Germany. He earned a Ph.D. in a single outburst of insight and subsequently teamed with Einstein on a number of patents, most having to do with domestic refrigeration.

Szilard went to England to introduce himself to Wells with the idea, unavailing, of licensing his books in Central Europe. The young scientist felt a personal calling to rescue the world from itself through a brotherhood of its best and brightest. While faling with Wells, Szilard filed away in the drawers of his memory an apocalyptic preview from Wells' 1914 book, "The War of the Worlds," which forecast catastrophic destruction by atomic bombs.

When the American Ernest O. Lawrence invented the cyclotron in 1930, which permitted firing subatomic particles at Rutherford's nuclei, Szilard had already applied for a patent on a similar device a year before. In any case, it was a new tool, something the Americans were particularly good at inventing, to look more deeply into the atom.

In 1932 Rutherford's lab in England identified the uncharged atomic particle, the neutron. Science now had a bullet to fire at the nucleus of the atom without electrical interference from its satellites.

As science edged closer to the heart of the matter and the immense power Einstein had postulated that lay there, its practitioners were motivated by scientific venturing with slight thought of other consequences. An atomic bomb?

In September 1933 Rutherford reiterated "moonshine" at a public seminar and was quoted in a report of The Times. (Privately Rutherford cautioned the War Office "to keep an eye on the matter.")

Also in that paper had been a review of Wells' latest book. As it happened, one of the newspaper's readers was Leo Szilard. With his usual prescience, he had seen where the anti-Semitism of "Mein Kampf" was leading Germany and left the day before emigration fell under Aryan restrictions.

On a dark, lugubrious day in that September of 1933, Szilard went for a walk. At one point he stopped for a red light near the British Museum. But his mind kept on motoring. Wells' atomic bombs, Rutherford's moonshine, flipped through his mind as did thoughts on chemistry.

There were such things in chemistry as chain reactions, but they curtailed themselves eventually. But what if a Rutherfordian atomic nucleus could be split by one of Lawrence's cyclotrons? Would the nucleus release other neutrons to hit other nuclei and so on in a chain reaction to release Einstein's postulated energy?

Thus the chain reaction of a scientific mind while waiting for a light to turn green.

In time Szilard would apply for a patent on an atomic chain reaction. Not for the money. No, the purpose was to insure a safer and better world. He was concerned about "disasters" which might occur if "certain powers might attack this country."

Secrecy was alien to science where new-found knowledge is a torch passed from one lab experiment to another for the greater good of all. As Isaac Newton said of the process, he had been able to see so far only because "I have stood on the shoulders of giants."

One such giant of physics between the world wars was Enrico Fermi, an Italian physicist of magnetic charm and such infallibility he was nicknamed "the Pope." Born in 1901, he had been engrossed in physics since adolescence when he bought two old books on the subject and read them through at once - in Latin. An experimenter known for exquisite precision, he could also ad-lib with what was on hand, at one point using a goldfish pond to moderate neutrons he bombarded all the elements with.

Uranium responded exotically, resulting in a new element for which Fermi won the 1938 Nobel prize. But he had seen so far and no farther.

Fermi took his family with him to Stockholm to receive the prize. They kept right on going to the United States. Laura Fermi was Jewish.

Hitler's anti-Semitism brought many of the world's top physicists together --in the United States

Unwittingly, the sinister anti-Semitism of "Mein Kampf" made an incalculable contribution to the development of the atomic bomb. At a stroke, Hitler's Aryan laws barring universities to Jews reduced Germany's physicists by a quarter, Szilard had fled Germany and so had his countrymen, Edward Teller and Eugene Wigner. As the "Hungarian Conspiracy," they would be an instrumental trio in the crucial year of 1939.

An Austrian Jew had forecast the diaspora: "The French would pray for the victims, the British would organize their rescue, and the Americans would pay for it." In the end, the Axis paid for the flight of Jewish science from Europe.

In Denmark, Niels Bohr, a rugged theoretician who excelled at soccer and transcended in physics to become a national hero, was a clearinghouse of atomic information as well as a haven for emigre Jewish researchers.

One of those who escaped to Copenhagen was a young physicist, Otto Frisch. His aunt, Lise Meitner, a chemist, continued working at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute in Berlin. As an Austrian she was not subject to

SISTERSPlace of worship

The San Jose Mission church building continues to serve the people of Deaf Smith County after better than a century. The structure was originally built in the community of La Plata where it served as the county courthouse. It was moved to Hereford in 1898.

LIBRARY

At the five schools' media centers, students are learning what a million is by saving tabs from aluminum cans. Each school is collecting the tabs in chains that are being placed on specially-built collection stands at each school library. When each school collects 200,000, all of them will be combined to show what a million of something really looks like.

Their day is a much more structured than that of a media specialist in a secondary school, where students come and go throughout the day. Instead, they know when certain classes will be coming in.

"We do not have many discipline problems with the children," Maclaskey said. "As a rule these children love to come to the library. They behave because they like to be in the library."

"We try to make the library a place for discovery," said Nall. "A good library program is essential for every grade, every ability level, every child."

"The best part about where we are," Maclaskey said, "is that we can see children come in when they are in Kindergarten not able to read at all and see them progress to where they can and want to read. That makes everything fun."

"The wonderful thing about being a team is that we all work together," Sister Mary Jean said.

Although each person has an area of responsibility, the entire staff provides cooperative support. They work in cooperation with the extensive aid provided by parishioners.

The nuns work in individual "areas of ministry" with each one responsible for a specific area. Sister Theresa oversees most of the adult religious education. Sister Mary coordinates the youth ministry.

"I'm the one who belongs to all the organizations out in the community," Sister Mary Jean said about her responsibility as the social outreach coordinator.

Sister Mary Jean's office is, more or less, the car she uses to travel to her ministry in the hospital and the jail. She is also a frequent representative in local service organizations such as the board of directors for the Hereford Outreach Center of the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center of Amarillo.

The contribution of the three nuns is not limited to a list of tasks or jobs which they are assigned to do. In many ways, what the sisters contribute most is not what they do, but what they are. The love and respect they have earned at San Jose is apparent in the smiles elicited by the simple mention of any one of their names.

Irene Orta's eyes shine with affection as she speaks of "la jefa" (the boss) in reference to Sister Mary Jean. Mrs. Orta is a key worker in the food bank and clothes closet maintained at the mission.

The sisters are there for the people. They share their burdens and their pain, their hopes and fears. It is a load which could break a person standing alone. Wisely, the sisters do not stand alone.

"We start the day with prayer every day," Sister Mary Jean said.

The sisters depend on God, and they depend on each other. They live the communal lifestyle of their order which includes sending a large portion of their salaries to the mother house and the sharing of possessions and funds within their home. The giving to one another does not end with material possessions.

"It's not just sharing our money. It's sharing ourselves," Mary Jean said.

Veterans Day 1989

By
Miles S. Epling
National Commander
The American Legion

Today, the United States is experiencing a remarkable time of peace and decreased international tensions. Whenever that happens, it is easy to forget that the peace we enjoy, the freedoms we take for granted, and the liberties we treasure so much have been guaranteed for more than 200 years by men and women who have served with honor in the uniform of our country.

They are honored every November 11 — Veterans Day — a holiday established by Congress. Each of us needs to pause on this Veterans Day weekend to think about what service to our country means. We do not honor only those who died for their country — although we surely do honor them. The purpose of Veterans Day is to celebrate the part of our national character that has motivated millions of our best and brightest young men and women to put their national lives ahead of their personal ones.

Few countries in the world could ever staff a military without a draft or other form of compulsory service. The United States has since the mid-1970's.

Few other countries can look at an all volunteer force with the pride this country does. As citizens we rest assured that the military is there, and when they are needed, they will serve.

It is, perhaps, our faith in our defense that causes us to forget that the country's sons and daughters are serving without much fanfare in spots from Maine to the DMZ in Korea. They serve aboard aircraft carriers and at remote missile locations every day and night. The fact that we are able to devote our time and attention to our peaceful pursuits without much thought to their service is a sign that they are doing their jobs well.

In wartime this nation has a great tradition of appreciating military service. Now that we do not have the horrible specter of war threatening so much, should we not feel the same?

Our veterans have paid for our security with their toil, their blood, and sometimes their lives. By our observance of this Veterans Day, let us show our acknowledgment and appreciation of their service and sacrifice.

Topic: tennis shoes!

BY JAMES ROBERTS
.Editor-Publisher, Andrews County News

If in the next couple of months, Congress is forced to raise the limit again on the national debt, it probably can be traced to tennis shoes.

It won't come as much of a shock to most modern-day parents that the tennis shoe business will top $4 billion this year—that's billion, not million.

To us old-timers, we have to question the sanity of a nation whose consumers troop to 23,000 athletic footwear stores to plunk down four billion dollars on something that used to retail for $1.95.

We thought one of our sons had lost his upstairs marbles when he laid down $39.95 for a pair of tennis shoes. Little did we know!

Tennis shoes are like a lot of women—they've come a long way, baby!

We remember when tennis shoes provided that intermediate stage between the summertime barefoot spread and the close encounter of hard shoes or boots in the dead of winter.

Tennis shoes of our day were simple affairs of canvas tops and thick slabs of rubber soles. They lasted a couple of months, smelled after the first week like a wet poodle in a storage closet, and in appearance resembled a cross between a limp dish rag and a swollen cow chip.

The tennis shoe of yesteryear was clunky, smelly, unsightly, unprotected, unloved and took days and days to break in before falling apart. The good ones were worn by athletes, the remainder by grade schoolers.

But no longer. Now the lowly tennis shoe has gone uptown with prices to match. Today's athletic shoes—and even grandma is athletically inclined nowadays—are constructed of soft, garment leather. Inside the shoe is a soft, spongy liner, made of polyurethane, which cushions the foot and gives the wearer greater protection against injury.

They've made the shoes so comfortable that they have become all-purpose shoes for the general public. And they're specialized—one type for walking, another for jogging, another for the gym, still another for the tennis court, another for the deck, and one special shoe designed for the man or woman who is thinking about exercising but doesn't.

And they've gone high-tech—with prices to match. One company features a shoe that contains plastic tubes of air as cushioning. It's called "encapsulated air" that provides an "energy return." We don't understand the terminology but we do understand the price: $110.

Another company will introduce an athletic shoe this Christmas that contains an air pump on the tongue—automatically pumps air to the sole of the shoe when the wearer's foot moves against the tongue. It'll sell for $169.95.

We suppose a nation that no longer has lye soap, feed-sack underwear, or nickel candy bars ought to expect—and plan for—$169 tennis shoes.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

I would like to say thank you to all who contributed to the success of Red Ribbon Week (Drug Awareness Week) Oct. 22-29.

A big thanks goes to Lope Chavez for the hours of assistance in coordinating events. Thanks to the business who donated candy distributed by the PALS entry in the Homecoming parade and other businesses and organizations who helped with various events.

Thanks to all those who bought and wore ribbons during the week stating that they were proud to be "drug free." A big thanks goes to St. Anthony's youth for decorating the park with red ribbons, and to the HHS Student Council and PALS members for keeping ribbons displayed throughout the school year to remind us all that our community cares.

I hope the awareness and genuine concern exhibited during National Drug Awareness Week will fill our hearts and minds and light a fire within our community to battle the problems associated with drugs.

Sincerely,
Dianne Rowton

SAVE ME FROM THE SAVIORS

I am tired of being saved.

Seems like everywhere I turn someone is trying to save me from something. The last shuttle launch had to fight through court because someone was trying to save us all from a disaster that had so little a possibility of happening it was laughable. The space probe had some plutonium on board and these folks just knew it was going to get us all. No amount of reassuring helped. The basic premise of some of these folks is that no matter what is said it is a lie. I do not mind protest but some of these are getting ridiculous.

I think we should not mistreat animals. Now there are groups raising Cain about using animals for medical research. If one of my grandchildren becomes ill and the medicine that heals the child came from work done on a monkey, these folks better not parade in front of my door. I have a cat that needs to have some research done on her.

I watched a television show that was supposed to debate the abortion issue. Who is it TV's version of a debate is always a group of folks sitting around interrupting one another? This show featured a lady who is one of the top spokespersons against abortion. No matter which side of the issue you are on this lady was scary. She said this is how it is to be, period, and there could be no other answer and no compromise. There will be no abortions for any reason and they would never give up until it was their way.

The issues do not scare me. The scary thing is, these are single-dimension people. They are so honed into their one issue that they cannot see anything else. I think it is dangerous to be single-dimensional. The test of true intelligence is the ability to hold conflicting opinions and still function. It is getting harder and harder to find folks who can function, and that is scary.

I need to be saved from all of those who want to save me.

Warm Fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Ag Controversy Shows Need for Changes

Agricultural Commissioner Jim Hightower has dismissed criticisms about his use of funds, calling them political attacks.

That's precisely part of the problem. The way this office is set up now, it's impossible to shield it from politics. This controversy should again show the benefits of making the agricultural commissioner appointed instead of elected ...

But as it is now, Hightower is answerable only to the voters who may or may not get the full story about this controversy and who may or may not have any interest in agriculture.

The present system actually works against electing someone with the interests of Texas agriculture at heart. City voters outnumber rural voters, and city voters usually don't have the same interests as farmers.

Self-Inflicted Wound

Nicaragua's Daniel Ortega has a way of unlimbering his weapon and putting a round through his foot. His calling-off of the truce in his country, and broad hint that elections promised for February won't take place after all, is the latest example. He's trying to blame the United States, but that won't wash. It seems obvious that Ortega simply is ducking out on the idea of free elections. Naturally enough, a clamor has gone up in this country for the restoration of military aid to the Contras. Doing that would fall into Ortega's trap. The United States should continue its humanitarian aid to the Contras until elections are conducted and Ortega lives up to the peace agreement - seeking a unified Hemisphere approach to his ouster if he does not.

Wright Cashing In On 'Public Disgrace'

In most places, the wages of sin is death. On Capitol Hill, the wages of sin is suitcases full of cash.

Consider ex-Speaker of the House Jim Wright: The House ethics committee charged him with 69 violations of House rules, most of them concerning creative ways for acquiring income. Consequently, he quit Congress to duck out of the public eye.

However, Wright in retirement has shown amazing resiliency. He now travels for fees ranging from $10,000 to $15,000. He's signed a book contract, also for a generous amount. He serves on corporate boards as a director, and he is paid to "consult."

All of which has doubtless made his purchase of a new $400,000 home in Fort Worth's swanky Miramar neighborhood a little less wrenching.

This may seem distasteful, but it's hard to blame Wright for responding to the uncensored demand of the free market.

But now comes word that in addition to a generous pension, Wright, courtesy of taxpayers, gets $120,000 in office expenses annually, three paid aides, $67,000 in office supplies and free mailing privileges - some $200,000 a year for the rest of his life.

What Wright did last June used to be called resigning in disgrace. Nowadays, it's just a good career move.

- San Antonio Express-News, Monday, Nov. 6

The last increase - from $3.10 to $3.35 - came in 1981 as the Ronald Reagan era began.

Since that time, consumer prices have gone up more than one-third; if the minimum wage had kept pace, it today would be at $4.79.

The compromise provides for an increase to $4.25 by 1991 for the 4 million workers who labor at minimum wage.

Such an increase should help the working poor, but by no means provide a complete answer for them.

A subminimum wage provision of the compromise is narrowly enough structured to provide a helpful experiment ...

In supporting an increase in the minimum wage, we have pointed out the necessity of coupling it with an earned-income tax credit for the working poor.

The tax credit is widely supported in Congress, and legislation in that area should emerge from Congress as well.

We welcome this first step toward helping those who labor near the bottom of the wage scale.

Texas, Talk Taxes

Should Texas have a personal income tax? Them's fighting words, and according to polls, 80 percent of Texans answer them with a resounding "No!"

But not Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who raises some very good points in favor of such a tax - points which must be considered by any rational citizen. If the answer, after due consideration, is still "No!" at least it will be based on knowledge and thought, not on a knee-jerk fear.

Hobby presents his case by noting that Texans cannot deduct their current state taxes from their federal income taxes. If we financed the state with income taxes, then we could deduct them, as most residents do in other states. But as it is now, Texans are getting had.

He further points out that our current means of raising funds for the state are outmoded, unfair, and no longer reflect what we do and how we do it. Property taxes are hard on the poor. Franchise taxes are not equal among various types of businesses.

But the bottom line is the bottom line. After some taxes are reduced or abolished and an income tax is instituted, would you end up paying more or less? That depends.

Limit Forest Clear-Cutting

Although the U.S. Forest Service recently announced a shift in national policy that would provide more protection for old-growth forests, the practice of clear-cutting Texas forests is likely to remain. The practice, which exists in four East Texas national forests and along the Rio Grande Valley, should be reduced or eliminated in favor of more reasonable forest management efforts ...

U.S. Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, has introduced a bill in Congress to limit clear-cutting to 10 percent of any national forests. This bill may have a hard struggle ahead, but deserves support.

The management of forests does not have to include massive destruction.

know what to say to them. They had just lost a daughter."

But it was not until a November 1976 phone call that Bobby realized the extent of the Schlegels' suspicions.

"Norbert said I should go ahead and confess to the murder," Bobby recalled. "If I didn't, he was going to see that I was indicted and prosecuted...and put in the electric chair."

"I was pretty stunned."

He admitted he lied to Rhonda's parents about the work-related problem that prevented the trip to Shamrock that weekend. But he claimed neither he nor Rhonda wanted to go and he merely contrived the story as an excuse.

Recalling the events of April 11, 1976, he said he returned from work that morning and he and Rhonda talked and listened to music on the stereo. After deciding to go to Abilene, he showered and left to get gas.

Rhonda stayed behind to get ready.

There was no radio in the bathroom. He said he bought gas, probably "made the drag," smoked a cigarette and returned home about 30 minutes later.

He said the first thing he noticed was that the stereo music was turned off.

"I didn't think anything about it at the time. I went through the house calling for Rhonda. I got no response. The last place I checked was the bathroom."

The door was ajar, he said, and the first thing he saw was the extension cord lying across the vanity.

"It was dark. The vanity was a light color, so it caught my attention."

Bobby said he saw Rhonda and the radio in the bathtub and immediately unplugged the extension cord. Her rigid body fell limp. He said he carried her to the living room because there was no space in the bathroom or hallway.

Her body felt "clammy," he said, and he covered her with a blanket or a sheet before calling the hospital.

Bobby recalled being hysterical and claimed that much of what occurred that day was hazy and disjointed.

He did remember the phone call from the justice of the peace, but said Susie Martin misinterpreted his reaction. He was not worried that an examination would turn up evidence that he killed his wife.

Instead, he said, he honestly doubted Norbert Schlegel would "appreciate" an autopsy on Rhonda and neither did he: "I didn't want these things performed on her."

After the autopsy was performed, Bobby said he, "like everyone else," was curious about the results, and that's why he slipped away and placed the call that Sunday evening to Dr. Jarrett Williams in Abilene.

Bobby said he could understand how Rhonda, reaching behind her for a towel, could accidentally have pulled the radio into the bathtub. But he could not explain how she came in contact with the exposed wires of the extension cord as she did.

At any rate, he agreed with his attorney Charlie Scarborough that it was not the fractured scraps of circumstantial evidence that led to his downfall, but his sexual misadventures. Small-town jurors denounced his lifestyle by convicting him of murder, he insisted.

Bobby figured he made few friends in Rotan or Roby by divorcing Melanie in 1980 and none at all by running off thereafter with another man's wife.

In effect, Bobby now maintained that rural Texans in and around Rotan could overlook his affair with Melanie in 1976 but could not accept the fact that he would leave her and their daughter to skip town with another man's wife.

"All of a sudden, I was a terrible scoundrel, which I'm sure I was. But I went from being accepted by the community to being bad in the eyes of the community."

Simply stated, he traced the origin of his problems to the divorce from Melanie, his second wife.

YOUR EYESHOW WELL DO YOU SEE?

Normal vision is made up of two parts:
• Central vision which is used to look directly at objects;
• Peripheral vision which supplies a general awareness of what you see to the right and left of you.

Clear central vision by itself is not adequate. You may be able to watch TV and read a book, but you may have trouble walking around new surroundings or down stairs. Driving a car may be hazardous.

When peripheral vision is okay, but central vision is impaired, you can walk around safely, but your facility to read or recognize faces is reduced.

Disease is the primary cause for the loss of central or peripheral vision that is uncorrectable. Uncontrolled glaucoma damages peripheral vision; macular degeneration affects central vision. The macula is the area of cones in the eye responsible for central vision. There are other causes, too.

Your central and peripheral vision will be checked during a professional eye examination.

It troubled Melanie, he said, that much of their income was used to pay bills incurred during his marriage to Rhonda. There was never money left over.

"That got to Melanie pretty badly. There was a lot of pressure and tension...and things finally crumbled."

Bobby said the marriage was a mistake to begin with, but that Melanie had insisted. They had resumed their liaisons the summer after Rhonda's death but Bobby considered the relationship more sensual than serious.

"I had no intention of marriage, no intention of anything..." he said. "But Melanie's a persistent little girl, very melodramatic, and I finally gave in. It was the lesser of two evils."

With a sad smile, Bobby conceded: "I have a severe woman problem, I know. Dramatic, as a matter of fact."

Whether or not Bobby's troubles began with his divorce from Melanie, he readily amended that theory to include Rusty Carroll's election as district attorney.

"Rusty Carroll hates my guts," Bobby said. "He knew he could get an indictment at that time because of the community, the mood in that county. If I'd stayed married to Melanie, I'd still be in Rotan and there never would have been an indictment."

But what of Wanda Kiker's devastating testimony about his purchase of the radio?

"I still don't understand that, but I do have an opinion," Bobby said.

"This sounds like an excuse, but you need to understand that this is a very small community and that was a very big event. Everyone wanted a part of it. It was the gossip of the time. What happened? Who did it?"

He labeled Mrs. Kiker's testimony "very incriminating" but added:

"Think about this...If you were going to plan a murder, would you travel 10 miles away, to Roby, to buy your murder weapon? Or into Abilene where nobody knew you?"

"And if I'm supposed to be so intelligent and so calculating and clever, does it make any sense to walk in that store and carry on a conversation with that lady and describe myself and my wife?"

"If I'm buying a murder weapon?"

And, if guilty, why submit to multiple polygraph tests?

Bobby volunteered that the $10,000 insurance money could be considered a motive, but he said Norbert Schlegel insisted that he apply for it and then later cited it as evidence to be used against him.

Bobby could not explain the testimony about "plugging up dogs" but said as a youngster he might have told his cousins anything "when they were 5 or 6 years old."

Still, he added, it sounded strange that the cousins had identical recollections of a purported conversation 15 years earlier.

Stranger still was Bobby's insistence that the Schlegels' vendetta against him was most likely a coverup for parental guilt.

"I have to say I really don't think Mr. Schlegel believed I killed Rhonda," Bobby maintained, no doubt aware that Norbert and Jaye Nell would dismiss such a theory as perversely hilarious.

Bobby pointed out that the Schlegels insisted early on they had raised their children to know better than to take a radio into the bathroom with them. But maybe not.

"Through the years, I've thought about it quite a lot. In the death of a child, if a parent believes anything they did was directly or indirectly related to the death, they're not going to accept it."

"And I don't blame them. Somebody needed to take the responsibility off that parent. I don't have any animosity toward the Schlegels. I understand what they are doing," he said.

"But they're wrong, plain and simple."

Bobby said it took Norbert Schlegel five years to get him indicted, but his father-in-law's retaliation would have been swift and "more severe" if he truly thought he had killed his daughter.

"Five years is a little long to sit back and hope something happens," Bobby said. "He got what he wanted. His pursuit was effective. But what's going to happen when I'm legally out?"

"He's worrying about that. I have to worry about that, too."

Bobby said his greatest regret was his extramarital affair with Melanie.

"If you single one thing out, that's it. I would never have the affair again. No way."

And back then?

"She was a very accessible, attractive, young girl," he said. "Very warm. It was springtime, and one thing led to another and we became involved. Totally..."

"This woman could make me feel something no other woman could. But I didn't kill for her. I didn't have to."

He said he knows people think he killed Rhonda only to resume his affair with Melanie: "That's the way it looks and that's the way it's been painted up. But that's not the way it was."

Bobby said his biggest mistake was the extension cord.

"When I look back on it, if the extension cord had been spliced properly, or not even spliced, just thrown away, then Rhonda would still be here."

The way Bobby tells it, the extension cord was accidentally mangled during a party at his home one night. He said he rolled a beer keg across the floor and severed the cord, leaving the wires partially exposed.

"I picked it up and cut it in a couple of places, put it back together, rolled it up and put it up on an appliance that was by the back door."

And then forgot about it.

"There's so much you don't have control over," he said almost wistfully. "You can't change things. One of my basic regrets was not really knowing which direction to take. Not being wise enough."

"Not that I'm a real wizard now, because I'm still making mistakes. But I do hope I have better judgment...I've got my vices, but I'm not quite as bad as they make me out to be."

"I'm no angel, but I didn't kill Rhonda."

In April 1989, a member of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles interviewed Bobby, checked his prison record and issued what is known as "tentative parole approval."

As customary, the board alerted trial officials and lawyers of its pending action.

On May 5, a three-member panel withdrew that approval.

"Something came in to change their minds," explained a spokeswoman for the board. "I can tell you we did receive protests. I can't tell you who they came from."

At least one such scarlet letter came from Norbert and Jaye Nell Schlegel, who opposed parole in no uncertain terms.

They provided board members a history of the case and a record of Bobby's marital and romantic strife and urged them not to be swayed by his "Ted Bundy" charm.

The Schlegels said they worked within the system for 11 years to obtain justice and that not one but two juries convicted Bobby and twice assessed 99-year prison terms.

They pointed out that Rhonda has "no reprieve from the death sentence" imposed by Bobby and declared:

"Any early release would be a betrayal of this justice, not only to Rhonda and those that loved her, but also to the 24 impartial jurors who, after hearing all the evidence, including Bobby's defense and personal testimony, sentenced him to the maximum time in prison..."

In withdrawing its approval of parole, the board ruled that Bobby must remain in prison at least until August 1990, when his case next comes up for review.

Thirteen years after their daughter's death, the Schlegels had played their scarlet trump card.

Herd takes Bulldogs for walk, 42-21

By SAM W. WALLER
Sports Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces on Friday wrapped up the second playoff see for District 1-4A with a 42-21 win over the Borger Bulldogs in the Herd's home finale at Whiteface Stadium.

The win moves the Herd to 7-2 on the year and 6-1 in district play while Borger, whose slim playoff hopes died with the loss, fell to 4-5 and 3-4.

"This is very satisfying," Herd coach Don Cumpton said of making the playoffs. "I guess it's the first time in modern history that Hereford's gone to the playoffs two straight years. This is the fifth trip in the '80s, but never have we gone two straight."

"It was a great team effort," he added. "Those kids really got ready to play and knew what they had to do."

The game started out like two teams were fighting for a playoff spot as the Herd moved the opening kickoff 62 yards in nine plays and the 'Dogs responded with a three-play drive covering 46 yards to tie the game before it was six minutes old. The 4:07 the Herd held the ball to start was the only possession by either team lasting more than three minutes the entire half.

Hereford picked up most of its yards on the ground in the opening drive with tailback Matt Bromlow picking up 21 yards on four carries, including two yards for the score, while fullback Greg Urbanczyk added eight yards on two tries.

Bromlow finished with his seventh 100-yard game of the season, gaining 152 on 23 rushes and a pair of touchdowns as well as hauling in two passes for 35 yards and a score.

Urbanczyk enjoyed his most productive game of the year, finishing the night with 82 yards on 19 carries and three touchdowns.

"It feels great," Urbanczyk said of his performance. "Three touchdowns. I told Bromlow I was going to be tied with him tonight and I sure got it."

Cumpton attributed the number of Urbanczyk's carries, which was as many as the big junior had in the Herd's last three outings combined, to Borger's defensive alignment.

"Greg had a great game," the Herd mentor said, "running and blocking. That's the first time we've played against a seven-man front in two or three weeks where we could get him the ball."

Quarterback Jason Walterscheid kept on an option for 18 yards in the drive and hit Bromlow with a pass in the flat that went for 15 yards on third down. Hereford converted eight of 15 third downs on the night with three of the plays going for scores.

But the Bulldogs showed they weren't about to be run out of the stadium when Eric Jarrett returned the Herd kickoff 44 yards to the Herd 46-yard line. Fullback Lamar Tillmon picked up 15 yards on the next two plays before the Bulldogs surprised everybody by coming out in the shotgun formation on first down at the Herd 26. Quarterback Chad Brown hit a wide-open Matthew Lee for the score and Peter Zetterstrom's kick tied the score with 6:20 left in the opening period.

it real good. I wasn't that antsy at all with our secondary play after we made some adjustments and got to where we needed to be. We wound up picking off two or three."

But before those adjustments were made the Bulldogs struck for another scoring pass from the shotgun.

Urbanczyk posted his first score on the first play of the second quarter to cap an 82-yard drive that was aided by Walterscheid's completion to Russell Backus for 54 yards, and the Herd defense had Borger facing third-and-11 at the Bulldog 22 after the kickoff.

That's where Brown pulled out the shotgun again and hit Lee over the middle for what turned into a 78-yard score.

Herd defensive back Chris Tardy said the play came at a time when the secondary was still trying to get a grip on the 'Dogs' offensive scheme.

"We were playing a nickel at that time," he said. "Jason Lueb was supposed to get the outside man and I was supposed to get deep third and George Madrigal had deep third."

"I saw the man go to cut across the flat and Jason was going out with him. I guess Jason was waiting for a curl pass and I went to the flat and the receiver got past George. It was just a lucky break."

After an exchange of punts, Hereford blew the game open with touchdowns on its last three possessions of the half. The Herd took Jason Kramer's punt at its own 45 and went the distance in six plays. Hereford split the ball-carrying chores evenly between the fullback and the tailback. Urbanczyk gained 22 yards and Bromlow 33 plus the score from 12 yards out.

Borger went with the shotgun again after the kickoff, but Brown missed on all three passes to force another punt by Kramer. Keyes admitted that staying with the formation failed to produce results.

"We got a little greedy and they made some good adjustments on the sideline," he said. "We started to come back and we'd had so much success I thought we'd stay with (the spread formation) for another series. Then we had the interception and then it got to three minutes to go in the half and I thought we needed to stay in it some more when we probably should have stayed with our running game.

"We ran the ball better than we thought we could," he added. "We didn't know (coming into the game) if we could run on them."

Hereford took over at the 50-yard line and scored on the sixth play of the drive on Urbanczyk's two-yard dive. Walterscheid and Backus hooked up for a 20-yard gain and Bromlow advanced the ball 14 more before a pass interference penalty in the end zone set up Urbanczyk's score.

Hereford's defensive adjustments showed up even more on the first play after the kickoff when Tardy intercepted Brown's pass at the Borger 47. The Herd offense took advantage of the opportunity, going in for the score in eight plays. Walterscheid found Backus twice for 29 yards, but the drive nearly stalled after a holding penalty and a sack left Hereford with third-and-goal at the 20.

Things started out even worse on the play when Walterscheid, who was looking to the right side, was spun around and nearly sacked again. Suddenly facing the other side of the field, the quarterback lofted a pass to Bromlow, who was bouncing off the defender and official and still managed to make the catch while falling into the end zone.

Borger came out firing from the shotgun again, but, after a completion for minus yards and a sack by Brian Wagner and Burt Noland, Miguel Casas picked off Brown's desperation pass on the last play of the half.

The Bulldogs looked to be going back to their ground game at the start of the third quarter, but Jarrett fumbled at the end of a 24-yard run and George Madrigal recovered at the Hereford 37.

Bromlow and Urbanczyk combined for 43 yards to the Borger 20 in the next four plays before another holding penalty pushed the Herd back.

Walterscheid found Backus for 19 yards on second-and-20 and converted the third down with a five-yard completion to Jonathan Haney to the 1-yard line to set up Urbanczyk's touchdown. Eddie Cantu's sixth PAT of the night and his 15th in a row over three games gave Hereford a 42-14 lead.

Jarrett almost nullified the final Herd tally when he ran the kickoff back 96 yards to the Herd 2-yard line missing the touchdown when Tate Smith's desperation dive clipped a heel just enough to knock the speedster off balance.

A procedure penalty moved the Bulldogs back to the 7 and the Hereford defense allowed only Jarrett's six-yard run in four downs.

Keyes said the stand by the Herd did more than hurt the Bulldogs' chances of getting back into the game.

"It hurt me a bunch," he said. "We got a penalty in there. I believe we would have put it in if we hadn't gotten the penalty."

"You can't ask them to do it any better than that," Cumpton said of the defense's effort. "And the reason we did was because of Tate Smith's tackle on the kickoff. That might have been

Herd heart overcomes Bulldogs' shotgun start

More and more football teams are employing a one-back offense. They call it a shotgun, or a run-and-shoot.

They run down the field and score a lot, and the other team says "shoot." Just ask SMU, or several other teams, about Houston's run-and-shoot.

Borger's Bulldogs became one of those teams employing a one-back offense on Friday night in a 42-21 win for the Hereford Whitefaces. It was the first time the Bulldogs had shown that offense this year, and for a while, it worked.

"I didn't expect it," said defensive tackle Aaron Savage. "We hadn't seen it in any of their films. We were able to adjust to it pretty quickly. They would double-team both of us (Savage and fellow tackle Brian Wagner), then we got into 'ones' (playing closer together on the line, between the guard and center) and they could only double team one of us. When we did that, we got a couple of sacks and put a lot of pressure on them."

"They couldn't run the ball on us much. When they got into that offense, they broke a draw on us a couple of times, and one time the trap got a few yards."

The busiest fingers for the first half belonged to the scoreboard operators. A quick summary of the early part of the game would be: Hereford TD, Borger TD, Hereford punt, Borger punt, Hereford TD, Borger TD. It was 14-14 before all the dishes were washed from the sophomore stack supper.

But Hereford's offensive explosion continued, while Borger's slowed. Hereford scored three more touchdowns in the first half to take a 35-14 lead into the dressing room.

"We got worried there for a while at the beginning," Savage said. "But we adjusted, and the secondary adjusted to the way they were throwing the pass, and it was all over."

The defense played hard and had to stop them, but it kept us going because we knew we had to score a bunch to beat them," said offensive lineman Benny Gonzales. "We just had to keep jumping on them, and we finally put them away."

"I guess Borger thought they would surprise us on defense a little bit because they jumped into a 6-1, but we had been working off and on against that all year so it wasn't any problem for us to block against that."

With the win, the Herd is in the playoffs. It's the first time in many years that the Herd has made back-to-back trips to the playoffs, and the fifth time in the 1980s the Herd has earned a trip into post-season play.

"This feels great," Savage said. "We've been working for this since the seventh grade, and we're there."

"I think this is a better feeling than last year because a lot of people didn't think we could do it," said Gonzales. "Last year's team had a lot of talent, and this year's team made it all on heart. We have come together as a family this year, and I think we're closer this year than we were last year."

"I am real satisfied with this year's team," said Hereford coach Don Cumpton. "I don't believe there were a lot of people in the area that thought we could be in the playoffs."

"We graduated 40 lettermen off of last year's team. We came out here with 10 lettermen and a bunch of folks off the sophomore and junior varsity teams. We got beat by Palo Duro and Estacado, and we had a chance to fold our tent."

"It is satisfying to watch a team like this grow and mature and develop. They have done over and above what we have asked of them, and if they continue to do that they could play for several more weeks."

"This is a bunch of ol' kids that are not real big, not real fast, and a lot of them are playing hurt, but they all have a lot of heart. Heart means a lot: It can carry you a long, long way in this sport."

Girls hoops starts new era

By SAM W. WALLER

The Hereford Lady Whitefaces will be in a learning process when they take the floor Tuesday for their season opener against Denver City at the Texan Dome in Levelland.

The game was originally scheduled as a varsity-JV doubleheader, but Denver City asked to cancel the junior varsity contest when its band qualified for the state marching contest, leaving the Fillies with only four JV players. The varsity teams will tip off at 6:30 p.m.

The Lady Whitefaces will be led by first-year coach Dickie Faught. Faught comes to Hereford from Brownfield, where he directed the Lady Cubs to the 1988 Class 3A state championship and tutored All-American Cheryl Swoopes.

Faught said it may take some time for his new team to come together, but he hopes it won't be long.

"I'd like to get as soon as possible," Faught said, "but it's one of those things where you've got to give the kids time to try and understand what we're trying to get. It takes a little bit of time to learn something new and we're going to be as patient as we can."

Faught added that the holdovers from last year's team should give the Lady Whitefaces a boost at the start of the season.

"We think we've got some pretty good athletes," he said, "and the majority of the kids who are on the varsity basketball team were in offseason, so that gave them a bit of head start."

"We think everybody has a good attitude and is pretty much ready to go. Maybe we'll start coming together pretty early."

Faught said the varsity will rely on its seniors and depth to be successful.

"I think our strengths include good senior leadership," he said. "We've got some outstanding senior players and they'll provide us with some needed leadership. We've got a strong nucleus of inside players and it's complimented well because we have a pretty strong ball-handling team. We've got a couple of good outside shooters."

"Overall, we've got strengths in most of the areas. The weakness will come from learning the new system and getting a good team attitude. Hopefully, we'll learn real early what it's like to be a winning team."

"Sometimes if a program hasn't won a lot for a few years, the kids don't know what all it takes to win - the sacrifices that have to be made. We're trying to get that over to them right now, talking to them every day about it. It just depends on how hard our kids are willing to work in practice and how well they adjust to a new coach and a new system."

Faught said the Herd's available talent will fit well into his system, which will prevent changing the basic areas of his program.

"Our basic overall system will be the same (as at Brownfield)," he said. "We'll make little adjustments here and there for the strengths of our kids. But the basic offense and the basic defense and the press and those kinds of things will be the same because I think we have good potential players in each one of those spots. Our system is one we believe in and we adjust our kids to it."

Faught added that such an adjustment will begin at the entry level of the girls program with the seventh grade teams.

"We'll teach everything the exact same way in stages from seventh grade on up," he said. "I think if you're going to have a strong program year in and year out, that's the only way to get that done. The powerhouses like Canyon, Levelland, Nazareth, Sudan - the good girls teams all have a system starting in seventh grade."

"We're really going to stress the fundamentals. In junior high, what we want to stress more than anything, even winning and losing, is learning the proper fundamentals. By the time they get to high school, if they have good fundamentals, we can put them in an offense and a defense and win with them."

As for winning at the beginning of this season, Faught has made that a little harder by scheduling non-district opponents such as Palo Duro, Tascosa and Clovis, N.M. as well as entering the prestigious Texas Basketball Festival to be played over the holiday break in Kerrville.

"I believe in trying to play the best competition we can play," he said, "and in this part of the country in girls basketball we have a lot of state champions."

"We try to play lots of real good non-district people to get ready for district. We try to play some tough people and, hopefully, that will help us on down the road."

Faught added that, from what he's seen, the Herd may well travel that road this year.

"I've seen a lot of the teams in this district play," he said, "Levelland, Estacado, Dunbar and I think we match up real well talent-wise with a lot of those teams with the exception, maybe, of Levelland. They're going to be good every year, year in and year out."

"I think we're going to match up real well and I think we can compete in this district."

as good as I've ever seen. It was just an individual effort. That guy (Jarrett) could outrun him 15 yards in a hundred-yard dash, I promise you. But Tate caught him."

However, the Herd couldn't manage a first down, though after taking over just inches outside the goal line and Bromlow got off a 40-yard punt.

A clip on the return and another procedure call on first down pushed Borger back to its own 40. From there, Brown hit Jason Owen for 16 yards and Tillmon ran for 15 more on the next two plays to set up Jarrett's 29-yard scamper for the final touchdown of the night.

The teams traded four punts over the next 11 minutes before the Whitefaces mounted a drive to the Bulldog 17 where they ran out of downs.

Borger made one last stab as Brown attempted to throw from the spread on 10 consecutive plays. The Dogs gained 58 yards on five completions to the Herd 10 before Noland and Wagner teamed for another sack. A pair of incompletions turned the ball over on downs and the Herd subs ran out the final minute.

Cumpton lauded the offense, which rolled up 475 yards in the game, for its best game of the year.

"I thought Jason (Walterscheid, 11 of 17 for 192 yards) had an excellent night throwing the ball," Cumpton said, "and without an interception. I thought he really stood in there and threw well."

"Of course, all our receivers did a good job," he added. "Backus (six catches for 133 yards), Haney (two for 15), (Brett) Confer (one for nine) and Bromlow all caught the ball well."

"And our offensive line played good. Freddy Martinez is out and Benny Gonzales didn't play in the second half. You've got to give credit to kids like Edward Castillo and Charles Romero for coming in there and spelling them and for doing a heckuva job."

On clinching a playoff spot before the end of the regular season, Cumpton said it will provide more time to prepare, but the Herd cannot afford to overlook next week's game with Dumas.

"This game puts us into the playoffs," he said, "so next week's game is unimportant in that respect. It's important for momentum, but it's unimportant as far as we are going to be playing in the playoffs."

Cumpton added that, depending on circumstances, some players nursing nagging injuries may do more watching than playing against the Demons.

"We'll just play that by ear," he said. "We definitely are beat up. Real bad. We've got a bunch of kids bungled up. We'll just see how it goes next week and see what we need to do."

"We definitely want to beat Dumas, but we definitely want to have a chance to win the next one, too. So if a kid is questionable, we might limit the playing time on some of them."

SWC basketball back on the rise

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNIE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Southwest Conference basketball used to be an afterthought. It was barely something to do between football and spring football. Real men weren't caught indoors in shorts and tennis shoes.

But Abe Lemons at Texas, Eddie Sutton at Arkansas, Guy Lewis at Houston, and Shelby Metcalf at Texas A&M changed all that. Those guys recruited, proved they could bench-coach a little, and, yes, could play the referees like a fiddle.

Then along came Gerald Myers at Texas Tech and Jim Killingsworth at Texas Christian to give the league some more credibility.

The conference has never won a national title in basketball, but Baylor once got to the Final Four and Houston got there three times. Arkansas made it once, coming in third. Texas won a National Invitational Tournament under Lemons, who eventually ran into a political buzz saw and went back to Oklahoma.

Now, we've got Tom Penders at Texas, Nolan Richardson at Arkansas and Pat Foster at Houston inheriting winning traditions, plus Moe Iba at Texas Christian - all young coaches with good national reputations. And that's not to mention holdovers like Metcalf and Myers plus up-and-comers like Rice's Scott Thompson.

We've got Gene Iba at Baylor and John Shumate at Southern Methodist, trying to bring the league up to the level of the Atlantic Coast Conference, the Big Ten and the Big East.

Richardson and Penders have brought big-time fastbreak basketball to the SWC, and the up-tempo style is a big favorite with the fans and players. It also seems to be paying off in the win columns.

We've got Myers, Iba and Metcalf, coaches who prefer fundamental, half-court, set-it-up basketball, talking like they may turn up the speedometer. Metcalf did in the second half of the 1988-89 season, and the Aggies became exceedingly pesky, fighting their way to the semifinals of the SWC Post-Season Classic.

The SWC is on the verge again of becoming competitive with the nation's collegiate basketball powers. The pick-it-line:

ARKANSAS - There's no team in the league as deep as Richardson's Razorbacks. The return of the SWC teams are beginning to keep home-grown talent within the borders, landing top junior college players and finding an occasional European who can fit into an academic-athletic setting in the United States.

HOUSTON - The Cougars are still suffering disappointments like the loss of Larry Johnson to Nevada-Las Vegas. Johnson was a big star in the recent University Games, and the junior college transfer could become one of the best players in the country for the Runnin' Rebels.

Penders has been very, very good for the SWC's reputation. His Eastern style of run-and-gun basketball has the Longhorn fans packing the Super Drum again in Austin. He's popular with the television network executives and that's always a big plus in getting league games on the national airwaves.

All in all, it should be a fun year with the SWC getting three or four teams into the NCAA playoffs.

The pick-it-line:

TEXAS - The Horned Frogs have added a freshman guard, Ray Kelly, and freshman forward Bart Beasley, who could make TCU the sleeper of the year. Watch Iba's Frogs.

SMU - Shumate will have to get a big year from inconsistent Reginald Muhammed for the Mustangs to make any noise in the league race.

Baylor-Gene Iba had just one conference victory last year and should get more than that this season but it's going to be a long haul for the Bears to rebound to respectability.

'Pokes go for win No. 2 in rematch with Cards

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) - Dallas linebacker Eugene Lockhart guaranteed Cowboys' victory the last time they played Phoenix.

Instead, the Cardinals won 19-10 at Texas Stadium on Oct. 29 and Lockhart then vowed celibacy until Dallas snapped its nine-game losing streak dating back to Dec. 11, 1988.

The drought ended with last week's 13-3 win at Washington, but Cowboys cornerback Everson Walls said no one is making any predictions for Sunday's NFL game here between Dallas (1-8) and Phoenix (4-5).

"If I did guarantee it, I wouldn't put me and my wife's sex life on the line," Walls said with a laugh. "In 1986, I think we lost six out of seven games and it was hard to handle, but it was in the second half of the season. This one was about the worst thing I've ever gone through since pee-wee league."

First-year Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson is hoping his team has turned the corner and is headed back to respectability.

"The mood is good this week. The players have worked hard all year long and the win at RFK gave them relief. It built some confidence and now they can see some progress," Johnson said. "But they understand there's still a lot of work to be done and there may be some rocky roads still ahead this season. We have a long, long way to go and we'll see what happens."

Phoenix, which surprised everybody by winning its first two games on the road this season, has been decimated by injuries, losing 16 starters since Sept. 10.

Eight players got hurt in last week's 20-13 loss here to the New York Giants, including three Pro Bowlers-wide receiver J.T. Smith, tackle Luis Sharpe and special teams captain Ron Wolfe.

In addition, quarterback Gary Hogeboom injured his throwing hand.

Hogeboom's right hand around the knuckles still is bruised and swollen and he said he can't grip the ball as hard as he'd like, but expects to start against Dallas.

"The basic problem I have is taking the snap from center as far as pain is concerned," said Hogeboom. "Other than that, it feels pretty good."

Hogeboom, a former Cowboy who has missed one game this season with an arthritic right elbow, has completed 147 of 256 passes for 1,843 yards and 10 touchdowns with 13 interceptions.

He also has been sacked 22 times, seven by New York last week.

Johnson hasn't decided which of his rookie quarterbacks he will start - Troy Aikman or Steve Walsh.

Aikman, who is 37-of-85 for 515 yards and one touchdown with six interceptions, has been sidelined since fracturing his left index finger Oct. 1.

Walsh has started the past five games and completed 108 of 215 passes for 1,349 yards and five touchdowns with nine interceptions. He has thrown only two interceptions in his last 108 passes and tied a club record with 49 pass attempts in the last game against Phoenix.

"We will decide our starter on who will give us the best chance to win," said Johnson. "I just want the best player for Sunday's game. We're playing a team that beat us on our home field two weeks ago."

Cardinals coach Gene Stallings said his team still has hopes of making the playoffs and can't afford to look past the Cowboys, who have not allowed a touchdown in the last nine quarters.

"I don't think we can take anybody lightly," he said. "Every week I worry. But I think we're still in the hunt and we're not out of anything by a longshot. If we win this game, they'll be a lot of teams bunched up in the middle" of the NFC East standings.

"We still got a great chance at a wildcard," Hogeboom said. "It's going to be tough, but we're doing all we can to get to the playoffs. Nothing's impossible."

The Cowboys lead 33-20-1 in a series that began in 1960, but the Cardinals will be looking to complete their first season-sweep of Dallas since 1970.

A crowd of about 45,000 is expected at 74,724-seat Sun Devil Stadium for the 3 p.m. CST kickoff.

suspended Ron Huery makes the Hogs dangerous and legitimate top ten team.

TEXAS - There's not a better one-two guard punch in the country than Travis Mays and Lance Blanks. If Penders can get more consistent inside play, the Horns might be too hot to handle.

HOUSTON - The Cougars have added a 7-footer (Alvaro Teheran, who transferred from Houston Baptist) and another tremendous junior college star (Carl Herrera of Jacksonville Junior College) for inside muscle. This could be Foster's year if the injury jinx doesn't strike the hard-luck Coogs again.

TCU - The Horned Frogs have added a freshman guard, Ray Kelly, and freshman forward Bart Beasley, who could make TCU the sleeper of the year. Watch Iba's Frogs.

TEXAS A&M - Metcalf keeps finding those hot junior college prospects. He couldn't have found a better one than forward David Harris of Mississippi County Community College. Freshman forward David Petersen of St. Louis Park (Minnesota) also could help. Aggies have excellent guards, and watch out for their up-tempo pace.

TEXAS TECH - Myers is quietly putting together a contender that's a year away from being ready to compete for the title. Sophomore Will Flemons, who sat out last year because of Proposition 48, could make an impact.

RICE - The Owls play smart, and teams not taking them seriously are in 1989 vegetable harvest bigger than 88's crop

WASHINGTON (AP) - Total U.S. vegetable output this year is up from the drought-reduced 1988 production, an Agriculture Department report said.

The overall increase is due mostly to a 29 percent boost in processing vegetable tonnage and a 3 percent larger potato harvest.

Potato voting begins

Voting is underway through Nov. 27 at the Deaf Smith county Extension Service office and at extension offices throughout the region on whether or not to continue a federal marketing order for potato growers in the area.

High Plains potato growers requested the U.S. Department of Agriculture to conduct such a referendum.

To be eligible to vote, growers must have produced potatoes from Nov. 1, 1988 through Oct. 31, 1989.

Agriculture secretary Clayton Yeutter would consider terminating the order if both of two conditions exist: if fewer than two-thirds of those voting in the referendum favor continuing it, and if growers of less than two-thirds of the volume of potatoes produced by those voting in the referendum favor continuing it.

The marketing order was established a few months ago following a referendum last year.

Most potato growers in the region should have received a mail ballot and voting instructions. Those who did not receive a ballot may obtain one at the Extension office at the courthouse in Hereford.

Study: better rural transportation needed

WASHINGTON (AP) - Shortline railroads, bus service, feeder airlines and maybe a ferry or two could be possible under long-range strategy mapped out in an Agriculture Department report on rural transportation.

But massive new federal aid to help finance such ventures? None was mentioned in the report. Cooperation at all public and private levels was urged as the key to transportation development.

Martin F. "Buzz" Fitzpatrick Jr., head of the department's Office of Transportation, which issued the report Wednesday, said the findings and recommendations were based on regional meetings going back two years and a national conference in Omaha, Neb., in Aug. 1988.

"From the very beginning, this initiative has been a cooperative activity involving a wide range of public and private agencies seeking

Production of processing vegetables is estimated at nearly 15 million tons, while potato output is estimated at around 370 million hundredweight. The output of fresh vegetables in 1989 is expected to be up 1 percent; mushrooms, 14 percent; sweet potatoes, 7 percent; and dry edible beans, 29 percent.

Despite the strong increase in U.S. vegetable production, the value of U.S.

vegetable imports is expected to be up about 5 percent to a record level, the report said Wednesday.

"Growth in imports during 1989 stemmed from continued strong prices at the wholesale and retail levels, and continued strong consumer demand," the report said. "Most of the imports are fresh vegetables, which are brought in during the winter months when U.S.

production is limited to the southern states."

Per capita use of total vegetables rose to an estimated 336 pounds in 1988, up one pound despite drought-reduced domestic supplies. In general, increases in fresh vegetables, potatoes and mushrooms offset declines among processed items.

Fresh vegetable use reached 100 pounds per capita for the first time because of larger use of lettuce and onions, the report said.

Potato use rose from 49 pounds in 1987 to 55 pounds in 1988. This gain can be attributed entirely to large carryover stocks of fresh potatoes," the report said. "Use of frozen potatoes dropped 4 percent to 44 pounds as record exports reduced the domestic supply."

Hitler's Aryan laws. She was born in Vienna in 1886 and became only the second woman there to earn a doctorate. She was accepted for further study at KWI on the proviso that as a woman she never show her face above her lab in the woodshop in the basement. A pretty but shy young woman whose love in her life was science, she accepted such exile.

She formed a long and close partnership with Otto Hahn, also a chemist. He was a handsome, gregarious outdoorsman. During World War I he had worked on the dark side of chemistry—helping with Germany's poison gas detachments. He justified it as a means, however murderous, of saving more lives by shortening the war. The thought was not original with wartime scientists, then or later.

Although they never even lunched together, Hahn and Meitner were a close team, talking over their work on the atom's mysteries on long walks, walking having played an inordinate role in the atom's deciphering.

When Hitler's troops marched into Austria in 1938, Meitner lost her immunity. She hurriedly packed to leave for Holland. Heinrich Himmler, head of the SS, had closed the border to fleeing scholars. Meitner tried to look composed as soldiers examined her passport. The soldiers passed her over the border. Unaware, they had let a genie out of a bottle.

Back in Berlin, Hahn continued bombing uranium, now with Fritz Strassmann. In early December of 1938 Hahn wrote Meitner, now in Sweden, that something most unusual had happened. He and Strassmann had found after one experiment that the uranium seemed to have divided into two isotopes of barium whose weight did not quite duplicate the weight of the original target. Although Hahn had a good idea of what had happened, he asked Meitner for her thoughts. And wished her a "bearable Christmas."

Meitner was spending the holiday with friends near Goteborg. There she was joined by Frisch, whose father was still interned in the concentration camp at Dachau following the anti-Jewish pogrom of Kristallnacht.

On Christmas Eve, Frisch wanted to go cross-country skiing. Meitner said she would walk along. Frisch feared she couldn't keep up. Oh yes, she could. Meitner insisted. She wanted to talk with Frisch about Hahn's news.

They sat down on a log and began sketching with a piece of paper and a pencil Meitner had in her purse. She vividly remembered years ago hearing Einstein lecture on his theory of relativity and how the E equals mc² evolved.

She made the calculation of what the loss of weight in Hahn's two barium isotopes had been compared to the uranium in terms of Einstein's formula. The weight loss corresponded perfectly with the energy that would be produced.

Hahn and Strassmann had split an atom. Energy was released. A new door had opened on the possibility of a chain reaction.

Just after the New Year Meitner cautiously wrote Hahn that "perhaps...such a heavy nucleus bursts."

On Jan. 3, 1939, Frisch, back in Copenhagen, began outlining what the news from Germany had been and his discussion about it with his aunt.

Bohr's rapid mind raced ahead of his words.

"Oh, what idiots we have been!" he said slapping his forehead. "This is just as it must be!"

Bohr was due to leave in four days for a stint at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, N.J. He asked that a blackboard be installed in his stateroom aboard the ship.

He had some noodling to do about atoms as he crossed the Atlantic. A scientist from the Old World was bearing some startling news to his colleagues in the New.

NEXT: The scientists write the president.

Stowers, Seiver exchange nuptials Nov. 4 in Friona

During a wedding ceremony illuminated by candlelight, Penny deShae Stowers of Friona became the bride of Billy Seiver of Hereford Nov. 4 in First United Methodist Church of Friona.

Officiating for the marriage was former Hereford resident, the Rev. Buster Grigg, pastor of First Baptist Church in Diboll, Texas.

The bride's parents are Jackie and Peggy Stowers of Friona and the bridegroom's parents are John and Melody Seiver of 231 Juniper, Hereford.

The bridal couple exchanged nuptials in front of three large brass candelabra holding white tapers. Flanking either side of the arch candelabra were two side brass tree candelabra holding 21 candles and two nine-candle brass spiral candelabra. Pews were marked by all-white illusion net bows.

Alisa Trimmell served as the bride's matron of honor and best man was Brad Mason.

Bridesmaids included the groom's sister, Brooke Seiver, and Carol White and Shelly Salyer. Groomsmen were the bride's brother, Gary Stowers, and Michael Berend and Chad Maupin.

Guests were escorted by the bride's cousin, Karl Gerner, and the groom's cousin, Kirk Mullenix.

Serving as flower girls were Ashley Smiley, daughter of Mitchell and Kim Smiley, and Kristen Butman, daughter of Jerry and Cindy Butman.

Carrying rings were Beau Barnett, son of David and Jana Barnett, and Marc Wells, son of Rob and Ronna Wells.

Candles were lit by the bride's brother, Greg Stowers, and Brie Wall.

Accompanied by Sherri Taylor and Adabeth Smith, who played the organ and piano, respectively, Debbie Reeve vocalized "Only God Could Love You More", "Household of Faith" and "To Me". Given in marriage by her father,

MRS. BILLY SEIVER
...nee Penny Stowers

the bride was attired in a formal-length designer's gown of white satin and Swiss embroidered lace. The Sabrina neckline was adorned with lace, sequins and seed pearls that flowed onto the fitted basque satin bodice. A deep V-shape back with delicate buttons accented the gown's back. The fitted point sleeves of satin featured lace appliques outlined in sequins and beading. The gown's natural waistline fell gently into a full satin skirt and the cathedral-length train was outlined completely by scalloped lace at the hemline. Cutouts of lace appliques embellished the full chapel train.

The bride's white satin hat was decorated with silk flowers, lace, miniature seed pearls and a pouf illusion veil. The two-tiered embroidered veil was fingertip length and was dotted with delicate seed pearls.

She carried a white bridal bouquet of roses accented with mini carnations, baby's breath, greenery and white satin and pearl streamers.

In keeping with bridal tradition, the bride's dress was something new; and penny minted on her birth date, something old; and a garter, something blue. She also carried her grandmother's handkerchief.

Carrying out the bride's color scheme of white and green, bridal attendants wore emerald green satin tea-length dresses fashioned with V-shape backs and fitted bodices. Each carried a long stem white bridal rose accented with baby's breath, greenery and tied with white satin bows.

Rachel Clark invited wedding guests to register at the reception held in the fellowship hall of the church.

The bride's cake was served by the bride's cousins, Denae Reeve and Jana Barnett, and the groom's cake was served by the groom's cousins, Ronna Wells and Cory Ott.

Punch was ladled by the bride's cousin, Sherri Whitten of Bryan, and coffee was poured by the bride's cousin, Tamara Gerner of Post.

The all-white bride's cake was placed on a table flanked by brass candelabra with matching serving pieces. The bride's table was covered with a all-white lace cloth as was the groom's serving table which featured his German chocolate cake.

Leaving for points of interest in New Mexico, the bride wore a winter white pant ensemble and a white bridal rose corsage.

The couple will make their home in Friona.

The bride, a 1988 graduate of Friona High School, is self-employed.

Jones, Watson wed Friday in Angel Fire

In a picturesque mountain setting at Angel Fire Baptist Church in Angel Fire, N.M., Karen Jo Jones of Amarillo became the bride of Carl Dewayne Watson, also of Amarillo, Friday evening.

The wedding was officiated by the Rev. Dann Masters of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Paul and Martha Jones of Route 5, Hereford, and the bridegroom is the son of Faylon and Nancy Watson of Clarendon.

The church was decorated with greenery accented with antique satin bows and roses.

Tawana Richardson, the bride's aunt, served as matron of honor and best man was Tony Kuhn of Altus, Okla.

Guests were ushered by the bride's brother, Brian Jones.

Jamie Leigh, the bride's daughter, was junior bridesmaid.

Kim Stevens of Canyon played "Bridal Chorus Lohengrin," "The Wedding March" and "Mid-Summer's Night Dream."

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a tea-length candlelight satin dress fashioned with a Victorian lace collar and long satin sleeves adorned with lace at the cuffs. The bodice featured yokes of lace and the straight skirt, attached to a fitted waistband, was designed with three flowing flounces at the back which fell to the hem-length. The back of the dress, which formed a V-shape neckline, was covered with delicate lace and was highlighted with satin covered buttons.

The tulle veil with pencil edging formed a pouf at the back of a candlelight satin hat applied with beaded alencon lace, lily-of-the-valley and sprays of pearls. French veiling formed the blusher.

She carried six candlelight roses tied with candlelight ribbon streamers.

The bride's heirloom jewelry included her maternal grandmother's antique engagement ring and pearls.

The matron of honor was attired in a tea-length forest green taffeta semi-fitted dress designed with a V-shape back neckline, long sleeves with gathered caps and a peplum marked with a belt accented with a bow.

The junior bridal attendant wore a matching forest green taffeta dress fashioned with a dropped waistline, adorned with a bow, and a balloon skirt.

Each attendant carried a burgundy rose bud.

The dinner and reception was held in the home of the bride's parents at Angel Fire.

The bride's cousin, Sonia Barnett, served cake, and punch and coffee were poured by Wanda Cobb of Hereford.

The two-tiered bride's cake was decorated with candlelight and burgundy roses and was placed on a table covered with an antique lace cloth.

The couple will make their home in Amarillo following a wedding trip to Santa Fe, N.M.

The bride attended Hereford High School and is employed at Tascosa National Bank of Amarillo.

The bridegroom, a graduate of Clarendon High School, is an Allstate security guard at Tascosa National Bank of Amarillo.

Thomas Edison had a bright idea. And his simple invention is so marvelous that the world has yet to come up with a better way to illuminate our lives.

Like all the great inventions, a gas furnace is simple, reliable, and has stood the test of time. It does its job so well that no one has invented a better way to keep your home snug and warm year after comfortable year.

Electricity is great for lights and other small appliances. But an electric heat pump just can't do the job your gas furnace was designed to do. Never has. Never will.

Enlightened folks know that for comfort and efficient home heating, the most effective invention ever made is a natural gas furnace. Period.

STATELY ENGLISH TUDOR PLAN WITH SHELTERED ENTRANCE

BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

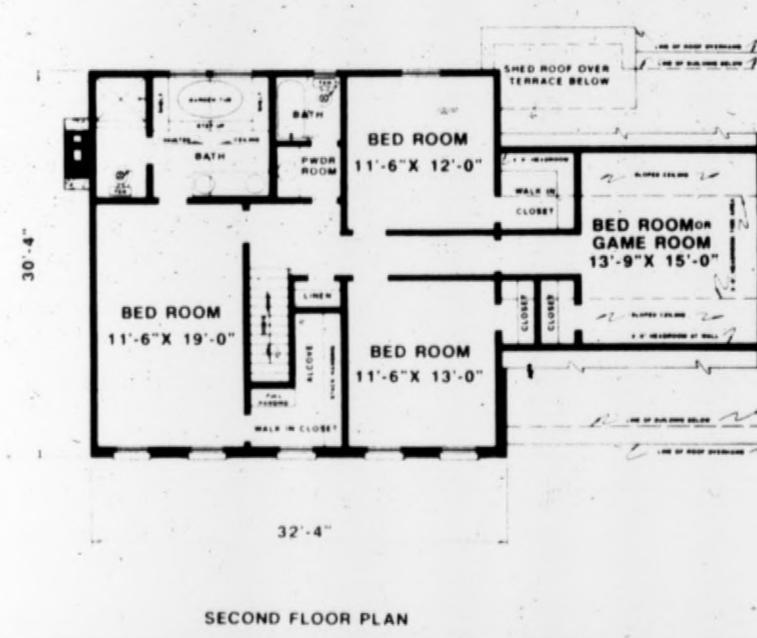

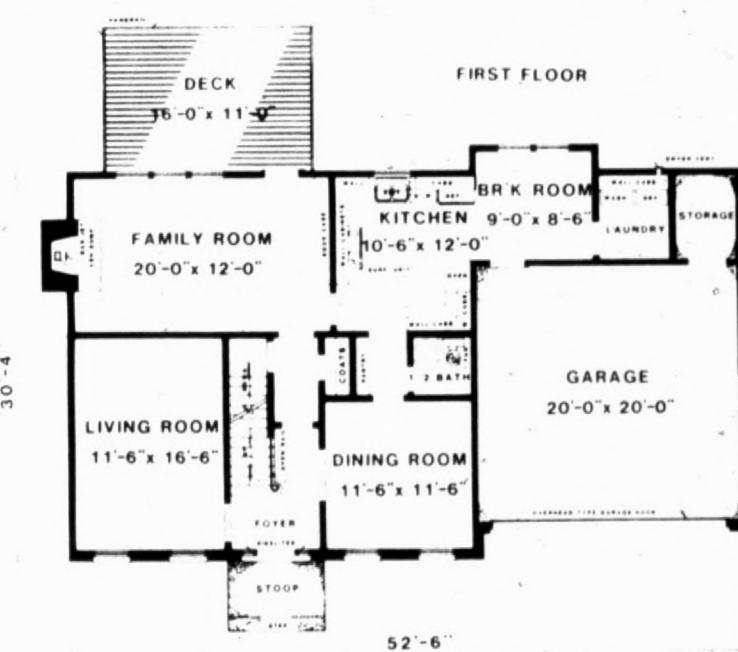

A unique slanted roof covers the arch-top entrance to this fine English Tudor Design. The open foyer with open rail stair separates the large formal living room and dining room. Just to the rear is a spacious family room which has access to the sun deck and kitchen. The L-shape kitchen is designed for convenience and the breakfast room is located at the rear of the double garage, access to which is here also. A separate laundry room is provided keeping wash day mess closed off. The basement stair is located under the stair to the second floor.

There are three large bedrooms upstairs, the master bedroom suite extending the full depth of the house and including a compartmented bath with both a garden tub and separate shower and commode area. The gigantic master bedroom closet is walk-in and L shaped to fully utilize space available. A central bath services the remaining bedrooms, one of these being endowed with a walk-in closet. If you so desire, a game room is provided beneath a slope ceiling and included in roof area over the garage. This room may also be utilized as a bedroom.

The plan is Number 2369 B. It includes 2,397 square feet of heated area. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information write to W.D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been troubled ever since I read the letter in your column from "Westchester Dilemma," whose fiance insists on inviting a friend who has AIDS to their wedding.

You replied, "Good grief, girl, where have you been the last two years? On the moon?" You told her most emphatically that the AIDS virus cannot be transmitted by using the same fork, drinking out of the same cup, sneezing over the table or giving someone a congratulatory kiss.

A few months ago our church gave away pamphlets informing us that the public is being intentionally misled about AIDS by homosexuals who are scattered among key professional groups: scientists, physicians, medical editors, journalists, lawyers and politicians who don't want the truth known.

The church pamphlet went on to say AIDS can be transmitted (in addition to the obvious ways) by kissing, coughing, sneezing and bloodsucking insects, mainly mosquitoes.

To be truthful, Ann, I am inclined to believe what the church says rather than what our government tells us, after all the deceit and covering up in Washington. I really do think that the bride who wrote has something to be concerned about. Will you please reopen the subject? -- Rockland, N.Y.

DEAR ROCK: I fail to see how anyone, in or out of Washington, could profit by misinformation on AIDS. After all, we are all in this thing together.

Here are the facts, as stated by one of the world's leading authorities, Dr. Anthony Fauci, head of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

There is no evidence that the AIDS virus is spread by any means other than the following:

1. Sexual contact with an infected homosexual or heterosexual.

2. Receiving infected blood during a blood transfusion. (This is exceedingly rare since all donated blood is screened for antibodies to the AIDS virus.)

3. Sharing needles that are contaminated with infected blood.

4. An AIDS-infected mother to her child during pregnancy, and by breast feeding when the mother is infected. (The latter is rare.)

Dr. Fauci said, "To date, there is no evidence that AIDS is caused by coming into contact with the HIV virus found in tears or saliva or by mosquito bites."

Harvard Medical School Alumni Bulletin from an article by John R. Lauerman:

"As 1989 draws to a close, it has become clear that these last 10 years will be remembered as the AIDS decade. More than 100,000 Americans will have been diagnosed with the acquired immune deficiency syndrome since 1980, and more than 50,000 of them will have died. Meanwhile it is estimated that 1,000 more people in this country are infected every day."

"The first bulwark of defense against this killer is preventive education, but it can help only those who can read and will heed the warnings. Among the high-risk intravenous drug abuser population, which is the fastest-growing group of AIDS patients in the United States, educational efforts are often frustrating."

We must not become discouraged. We must continue to press Congress for additional funds for research and education so we can wage a massive assault on this devastating disease.

Thanksgiving foods among best

Turkeys and the trimmings for Thanksgiving meals are the best food buys of November, according to a food marketing expert with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Dr. Dick Edwards, economist in food distribution at Texas A&M University, said consumers will be able to get their turkeys at a bargain, but some will have strings attached.

"The lower the price, the greater the restrictions will be," Edwards said.

He said turkey prices at about the 59-cents-a-pound level will have no restrictions on the amount of purchase required to qualify.

"To get a 29-cent per-pound

New officers elected at club meeting

New officers were elected when the Draper Club met recently in the home of Toni Vaughn. Officers for the new year were Carmen Rickman, president; Sherrie Blackwell, vice-president; Vaughn, secretary and reporter; Johnnie Messer, council delegate; Mary Beth Messer, treasurer.

President Carmen Rickman called the meeting to order and the T.E.H.A. prayer was recited. The hostess read "The Song of the Lazy Farmer" for opening exercise.

Wilma Perkins and Argen Draper were welcomed as visitors.

SUPERMARKET LAUNCHES 'FREQUENT SHOPPERS'

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) - Like the airlines' frequent-flyer programs, a Des Moines supermarket has introduced a "frequent-shopper" plan that utilizes smart-card technology to keep track of shopper purchases, reports MIS Week.

The program awards points to shoppers for grocery purchases, and the points are redeemed for brand-name catalog merchandise.

According to the management information services journal, the smart card allows shoppers to accumulate points each time they deal, the restriction will be a $50 to $75 minimum purchase. You can get a free bird with a $200-$400 purchase level requirement, but this amount can be accumulated during a three-to-four-week period," Edwards said.

"So, if a free turkey appeals to your budget, watch food ads early in November, since this type of purchase program must start early in the month," he said.

Edwards said better turkey prices generally are found at Thanksgiving than at Christmas, so prudent shoppers may want to buy several turkeys this month if they have freezer space.

He said the second best food bargain of November will be

The council and financial reports were given by Johnnie Messer. Members are to take baked items to the bazaar Nov. 11 and everyone was reminded of the vest seminar. Anyone interested should contact Beverly Harder at 364-3573.

Members had a surprise baby shower for Mary Beth Messer and Perkins won the door prize.

The shopper's current point total is then shown on a color video screen and increases as corresponding items are purchased.

In addition to redeeming points for a wide variety of gifts including jewelry, audio-visual equipment, toys and home accessories, the smart card can also be used for financial services, including electronic check clearing and direct debit-and-credit card functions.

Who Needs God by Harold Kushner is a book that shows us how religious commitment can make a great difference in our lives. He shows us how faith can enrich even the most fulfilling lives as it creates new sources of strength and comfort for all of us. Who Needs God speaks to the hopes and longings of anyone who has ever needed to make sense of life and has wanted to make a difference in the lives of others, who have felt guilty, lonely, afraid or empty. This book is written for those who asked why we need more than the commandment to be nice to each other, and it is for all the intelligent, thoughtful people who have trouble believing that religion could be important to somebody in the twentieth century.

Religion begins with a sense of reverence, the recognition of God's greatness and our limitations. That is why there are no atheists in foxholes and few atheists in hospitals. It is not because people are hypocrites, ignoring God when things are going smoothly and suddenly discovering Him and pleading piety when they are in trouble. It is not just a matter of turning to God out of fear. There are no atheists in foxholes because times like those bring us face to face with our limitations. We who are usually so self-confident, so secure in our ability to control things, suddenly learn that the things that matter most in our lives are beyond our control. At the limits of our own power, we need to turn to a power greater than ourselves.

Who Needs God is a powerful book that everyone should read. Kushner is the author of When Bad Things Happen to Good People.

Smart Medicine by Bruce Hensel, M.D. is a book about doctors and medicine. Smart Medicine tells everyone how to choose the best doctor, the best hospital, the best medical insurance, and understand which medical tests you do and don't need! Dr. Bruce Hensel is the medical and science reporter for NBC News in Los Angeles, the co-host of the television show Health Fax, and the former medical host of USA Cable's number-one national show Alive and Well.

Dr. Hensel's book is life-saving, packed with up-to-the-minute, state-of-the-art information, and hundreds of tips and procedures. For instance:

WHO CAN CUT YOUR EMPLOYEE TRAINING COSTS IN HALF?

There are hundreds of jobless people in the Texas Panhandle who want to work. The problem is, they lack the skills necessary to get the jobs that are available.

Now there is an organization that shares the cost of training when a business hires and trains the jobless. It's called the Panhandle Job Training Partnership, and it will pay up to 50% of the cost of on-the-job training.

If you're in business, the next time you need employees, call the Panhandle Job Training Partnership. We'll recruit and screen applicants to your specifications. You decide which to hire. Once their training begins, we'll reimburse you for up to 50% of their training costs. And when the training is completed, you can receive tax credits for wages paid to trainees who become long-term employees.

The Panhandle Job Training Partnership is a local organization directed by local people. Virtually any business, large or small, in the Texas Panhandle can participate.

To find out how much you can help your business when you help the jobless, call the office nearest you.

Ultimate Prizes by Susan Howatch is the third book in her sequence of novels that started with Glittering Images and continued with Glamorous Powers.

The narrator is Neville Aysgarth. Driven by memories of his impoverished childhood, he has learned to seek worldly success. The novel takes place in 1942, when he is a archdeacon and privileged aide to the Bishop of Starbridge. Aysgarth is sure to attain a great place in the church's hierarchy.

Aysgarth met Dido Tallent, the darling of the society gossip columnists, and a fellow guest at one of the Bishop's wartime dinner parties. When she asks him to become her spiritual adviser, he constructs a masterfully rational reason why he should agree. But it only masks his true identity. And then he finds himself in the web of deceit that his obsession with Dido has created.

On the brink of personal and professional ruin, in an agony of fear and guilt, he comes face to face with the demon he has hidden behind his clerical calling for more than 20 years. Entering upon a painful journey into his dark past, he begins to move toward the one true ultimate prize of his life-survival.

Stephen King's new novel The Dark Half is about Thad Beaumont. Thad is a writer, and for a dozen years he secretly published novels under the name of "George Stark" because he was no longer able to write under his own name. He even invented a slightly sinister author biography to satisfy the many fans of Stark's violent best sellers. Now Thad is healthier and happier and starts to write as himself again. He no longer needs George Stark, so with nationwide publicity, the pseudonym is retired.

In the small town of Castle Rock, Maine, where Thad lives with his wife and kids, Sheriff Alan Pangborn ponders the brutal roadside murder of a man named Homer Gamache. When Homer's pick-up truck is found, the bloody fingerprints of the killer are found all over it. They match Thad Beaumont's exactly. Pangborn pays the Beaumont's a visit with hard evidence in hand, and suddenly he too is thrust into a dream so bizarre that even his sharp mind can't make sense of it. At the center is George Stark, Thad Beaumont's dark half, impossibly alive and relentlessly on the loose, a killer that destroys everyone on the path that leads to the man who created him.

As Stark approaches, to contend with the escalating horror, Thad reaches deep inside his own mind to mount a defense.

Here is The Dark Half, a tale of terror so real and fascinating that fans of Stephen King will find themselves squirming in the terror, and loving every minute of it.
