Romance is in the air

Area writer to tell personal story at Friends of Library open house

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

After making the leap from high school teacher to published historical romance writer, an Amarillo woman is looking for a new world to conquer: mainstream novels.

Jodi Koumalats, whose pen name, Jodi Thomas, may be familiar to many Hereford readers, will bring her personal story to the annual Friends of the Library open house Thursday at 7 p.m. at Deaf Smith County Library. During the evening, a "Library Family of the Year" will be announced and officers of the library support organization will be elected.

The meeting is open to the public, reminded Rebecca Walls, librarian. Membership in Friends of the Library is not necessary to attend.

Thomas is making her second appearance at a Friends of the Library event. She had published two novels when she first appeared but now has eight to her credit and a ninth on the way.

Writing with an historical background requires Thomas to spend much time in research before she sits down at her computer.

"I usually take about six months to research the time, location or incident in a book, before writing," she pointed out.

Family vacations often have been planned with her research in mind, said Thomas. The result is a pair of sons who have had a heavy dose of history through the years.

"Both boys love museums and history," she added.

Thomas spent 15 years in a high school classroom, teaching courses in family relations, before she jumped full time into writing.

"When it changed from a hobby to real, I went through a period when I was a little shaky," she laughed.

She hadn't told her students at Amarillo High School that she was writing historical romance novels.

Tell me about it

Rebecca Walls, left, Deaf Smith County librarian, seems to be asking Jodi Thomas to reveal the plot of one of her historical romance novels. Thomas will be the guest speaker at the annual Friends of the Library open house Thursday evening.

With encouragement from her husband, Tom Koumalats, she plunged into book-writing with enthusiasm. "I guess I've always had a loose grip on reality," joked Thomas about her decision. But, there was no second guessing and she's never regretted the decision. Her first novel was published in 1988, after she had been writing for five years. The floodgate opened after the initial publication and there were four published in 15 months. Besides the research necessary for the historical romance genre, the hours spent in the actual writing can build rapidly. A paperback of about 300 pages takes 100,000 words entered into her computer. Thomas combines a love of history with an understanding of people to put the most into her novels. She also has an idea of her audience. "Research shows that 93 percent of the romance novel readers are women and they are educated women," she said. "They have one or two years of college, a full life and enjoy reading," continued Thomas. Although most of her books have a setting in Texas, her latest, Forever in Texas, is the first to feature the Panhandle of Texas.

The pioneer community known as "Saints Roost" figures in the book released last September. Nowadays, Saints Roost is known as Clarendon. An award-winning author, Thomas stays ahead of the game with an exacting professional schedule. Usually she's involved with at least four books at a time. "Now, I'm signing my eighth book, proofing the ninth, writing the 10th and researching No. 11," she explained. No. 7, To Tame a Texan's Heart, was a December 1994 release and took the "Rita," the

Emergency plea OK'ed by Clinton

By TERRY WALLACE
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) - With prospects for rain uncertain over much of Texas, President Clinton relented, on part of the state's plea for an emergency declaration.

The president on Friday declared an emergency in 21 counties in North, Central and East Texas, allowing federal equipment and crews to be deployed to high fire risk areas to help in the event of fires.

The declaration superseded a fire suppression grant approved Thursday by the Federal Emergency Management Administration, which allowed the state to obtain reimbursement for 70 percent of its firefighting costs.

The emergency proclamation allows reimbursement for 75 percent of the costs.

Gov. George W. Bush has estimated the state is spending $300,000 to $400,000 a day fighting the fires.

"We went ahead and recommended to Washington that we upgrade to an emergency declaration in order to be able to pre-deploy some more equipment from the (U.S.) Forest Service, FEMA and whatever else we need," said Buddy Young, FEMA Southwest regional director.

The counties specified under the proclamation were Angelina, Bell, Bexar, Brown, Cass, Coryell, Dallas, Denton, Fayette, McLennan, Montgomery, Palo Pinto, Rusk, San Saba, Taylor, Tarrant, Tom Green, Travis, Tyler, Wise and Wichita counties.

Young said the emergency could be extended to other counties by officials in the field, in consultation with Washington.

"In order to do the things we need and have more flexibility, we went ahead and upgraded to the emergency declaration," he said.

Young said it will be up to the state to tell federal officials what equipment is needed and where.

"It depends on advice from the forest service and the state as to what they actually need to be able to deal with these fires," he said.

But the thing most needed is rain, and forecasts for sere North and Central Texas counties offered no prospect of precipitation until after the weekend.

"If the weather stays dry, this could go on for another month," Young said.

Help also was coming from out of state. Tennessee sent 15 firefighters and six fire plow units, and seven firefighters left South Carolina with state equipment.

Officials have instituted a ban on outdoor burning across about a fourth of the state. They also warned of automobiles sparking dry grass and motorists tossing cigarettes or matches from vehicles.

The State Division of Emergency Management said Friday that 2,912 blazes had consumed 79,000 acres in the first seven weeks of 1996. Agency spokeswoman Jo Schweikhard Moss cautioned that for every fire reported, eight go unreported because local jurisdictions can contain them without help.

Tests run in Austin on Friday were alarming, Young said.

"It was amazing how dry and flammable this grass and brush is," he said. "There's absolutely no moisture in it at all."

The wildfire situation continues to change. Firefighters extinguished the last of a 16,500-acre grass fire near Poolville, 35 miles west of Fort Worth, that injured at least 49 people and destroyed more than 50 buildings, authorities said.

"I don't know that we've ever had a situation this critical," Young said in a Friday night conference call.

T.W. Peacock, a retired aerospace worker, was issued a citation charging him with reckless damage and destruction of property, a Class C misdemeanor punishable upon conviction by a $500 fine.

The Parker County man, a retired General Dynamics worker, said he was burning trash in a barrel Wednesday morning when the flames spread.

In Central Texas, civilian and military firefighters continued to battle a 15,000-acre blaze at Fort Hood in Coryell County.

Competitors set for annual Spelling Bee

County schools have held elimination contests to determine participants in the annual Deaf Smith County Spelling Bee, which is scheduled Friday and Saturday in the Heritage Room at Deaf Smith County Library.

Twenty-five contestants will vie for honors in the county bee, with the champion advancing to the Regional Bee on the West Texas A&M campus April 13.

Tan Nguyen, 14, Hereford Junior High, will be seeking his third championship. Erin Louder, 13, Community Christian School, is also scheduled to compete after taking runner-up honors last year.

The local junior bee, for fourth and fifth graders, will be held Thursday beginning at 3 p.m. The senior bee, for sixth graders and junior high students, follows on Friday at 3 p.m. The junior bee champion will also compete for the county championship.

Speedy Nieman, county bee director, announced that local sponsors will provide awards for the winner and runner-up in each division. Awards valued at $100 will go to the county champion, and $50 to the runner-up. The junior champ will receive a $50 award and the runner-up will get $25.

Award sponsors include Hereford State Bank, FirstBank Southwest, The Hereford Brand, Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union, Deaf Smith Electric Co-Op, West Texas A&M Telephone, and Gibson's.

Bera Boyd will be the pronouncer again this year. Brand staff members Becky Camp and Shelly Schilling will be judges.

The county bee champion cannot have passed the eighth grade nor be 16 years of age before the national finals May 26. The number of entrants for each school is based on enrollment and/or number of school bee entrants.

The Regional Bee is sponsored by The Amarillo Globe-News and WTA&M. The Globe-News provides the winner and one parent with airline tickets, plus meal and hotel expenses, to the national contest in Washington, D.C. There will be prizes for other top finalists.

The spellers scheduled to participate:

- SENIOR BEE
 - Hereford Junior High--Tan Nguyen, Brigham Brown.
 - Bluebonnet--Michael Rhyne

FBI arrests ex-NSA clerk for spying

By AMY WESTFELDT
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - At the height of the Cold War in the mid-1960s, Robert Stephan Lipka - then an Army clerk at the National Security Agency - would play chess in a park with a Russian named Ivan.

Nearly 30 years later, another Russian asked Lipka if the name "Rook" meant anything to him.

Lipka - not knowing his questioner was an undercover FBI agent - said yes.

The admission led to Lipka's arrest

Friday on charges of selling the country's most classified secrets to the former Soviet Union for cash, including reports for the White House and U.S. troop-movement data during the Vietnam War.

Rook, a chess piece, was Lipka's code name when he spied for the Soviets from 1965 to 1974, according to his arrest warrant.

Prosecutors wouldn't elaborate on what documents Lipka sold, but Assistant U.S. Attorney Barbara Cohan said he had access to "the highest secrets of the U.S. government at that time."

"You only had to look at what was going on during 1965 to 1967 to infer what those secrets were," Cohan said.

An FBI affidavit disclosed that Oleg Kalugin, former chief of KGB foreign counterintelligence, described Lipka's spying without mentioning his name in the book "The First Directorate," published in this country in 1994.

"This young American handed over a significant amount of material to the KGB," Kalugin wrote.

Kalugin said his NSA mole used the money he had received from the KGB to pay for his college education.

Lipka, 50, a coin collector and gambler, went to Millersville University after leaving the army, receiving a bachelor's degree in 1972.

He was arrested Friday morning at his home in Millersville, Pa., just after his two children left for school. His wife, Deborah, a postal worker, was picked up by agents at work later.

A heavyset man who walks with a limp, Lipka was taken before a federal magistrate. Three times, he asked to speak to the head of the NSA and the NSA director of security. "I don't know any of the people named in this complaint," he said.

Lipka was charged with conspiracy to commit espionage and U.S. Magistrate M. Faith Angell ordered him held for a hearing on Wednesday. According to the FBI, Lipka told an unidentified witness in 1966 and 1967 that he was selling NSA material to the Soviets. Lipka stole the information by photographing NSA documents with a camera the Soviets had given him and hiding documents in his shirt or wrapped around his leg, the witness told the FBI.

Lipka would drop the documents in the woods of Rock Creek Park near Washington, every four to six weeks, for the three years he worked at NSA, Cohan said.

Lipka told the witness he received $500 or $1,000 cash for each delivery. The FBI did not identify the witness, but said the person was given immunity and is cooperating.

The New York Times today identified the witness as Lipka's former wife, who told authorities about his alleged espionage in 1993. The couple divorced in 1974, and the Times said it was not known why she waited nearly two decades to turn in her former husband.

The Times said it could not reach the woman, identified only as Patricia.

Shortly after his ex-wife went to authorities, a federal agent posing as a Russian military official met with Lipka four times in 1993. Lipka admitted to spying, telling the agent he had broken ties with the Soviets because he had been underpaid, the affidavit said.

Early voting turnout light during first days

Early voting in the March 10 party primaries was anything but crowded last week in the office of Deaf Smith County Clerk David Ruland.

From the opening bell Wednesday until Friday afternoon, 38 Democratic voters marked their ballots and only five Republicans cast votes.

Democratic voters will decide one Deaf Smith County contest, between Sheriff Joe Brown and his challenger, Fidel Reyna, as well as several judicial races.

In a race for U.S. Senator, four candidates are vying for the chance to challenge a Republican in next fall's general election.

In the Republican primary, there are no Deaf Smith County contests, but voters will choose a nominee for U.S. Senator. The incumbent, Phil Gramm, has withdrawn from the Presidential race to concentrate on his senate seat. He has two opponents.

Early voting will continue until 5 p.m. March 8 in the courthouse.

Ruland, who serves as vote registrar as well as county clerk, reports that 9,269 Deaf Smith County residents have been registered to vote in the primaries.

Local Roundup

Commissioners' Court to meet

Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court will consider implementing a no-burn policy for the county during a meeting Monday, beginning at 9 a.m. Other items on the meeting's agenda include advertising for bids for county public officials and law enforcement insurance for 1996-1997, consideration of mutual assistance agreement with surrounding counties for emergency response, approval of a personnel policy committee and advertising for a library assistant in Deaf Smith County Library.

Hospital board sets two meetings

Special meetings of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District board of directors have been called for Monday and Tuesday. The board will meet with the hospital's medical staff Monday at 6 p.m. to discuss possible building and remodeling projects at the hospital. The board will meet again at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday to consider the 1994-95 audit report, and to hear a presentation from First Southwest Co. on alternatives for financing a proposed building and remodeling program.

HISD sets action session

The Hereford ISD board of trustees will meet at 6 p.m. Tuesday for its monthly action meeting. The session will be in the school board room, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue and it is open to the public. In addition to the consent agenda, general reports, professional organization reports and the personnel report, there is a six-item action agenda. Items for action are: a vote on school policy dealing with access to records, a funding request for the Aquatic Center, the Language Science program, a proposed construction project at Bluebonnet Intermediate School, worker's compensation insurance and a request for use of Whiteface Gym.

NASA puts off deployment of tethered satellite

By MIKE DRAGO
Associated Press Writer
SPACECENTER, Houston (AP) - Computer problems forced NASA today to delay by one day the release of a satellite on a 12.8-mile tether from space shuttle Columbia.

Mission Control told the astronauts aboard Columbia that managers wanted to wait until Sunday to unroll the half-ton metal ball, in order to better understand the sporadic computer trouble. The satellite was supposed to have been released this afternoon on the end of a cord as thin as a boot lace.

The computer problems cropped up Friday as the astronauts switched on satellite experiments. The crew, with help from engineers on Earth, resolved the trouble this morning, but NASA decided it was prudent to wait an extra day.

Once extended, the tethered satellite is supposed to generate electricity as it sweeps through Earth's ionosphere and magnetic field. Such devices could be used one day to provide power for a space station.

The seven crewmen, who arrived in orbit Thursday, spent much of their first workday trying to fix two computers needed for the experiment. The effort appeared to have paid off Friday night, but one of the computers malfunctioned again.

"You guys have really been earning your pay," Mission Control told the crew.

To ensure that all of the experiments are done, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration extended the 14-day mission by a day.

The computers worked fine on the tethered satellite's first flight - in 1992 - but the rest of the experiment flopped. Because of a protruding bolt, the tether got stuck on its reel when the satellite was only 840 feet out.

The $443 million U.S.-Italian experiment proves to be tricky - and risky - once the deployment starts.

All sorts of crises are possible: A micrometeorite could sever the tether, for instance, requiring a fast getaway by Columbia to keep the cord from wrapping around the shuttle. The satellite could also start to swing or bob out of control.

The seven American, Italian and Swiss astronauts have trained for all sorts of emergencies and can cut the satellite loose if necessary.

Clinton likes uniforms for children in school

By LAWRENCE KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) - Drawing on the politically popular themes of fighting crime and strengthening families, President Clinton today championed the idea of requiring youngsters to wear school uniforms as a means of instilling discipline and order.

Pointing to a rash of youthful crimes across the country, Clinton said, "School uniforms are one step that may be able to help break this cycle of violence, truancy and disorder by helping young students to understand that what really counts is what kind of people they are, what's on the inside."

To underscore his point, Clinton was to visit Jackie Robinson Academy, a public school in the Long Beach Unified School District, which boasts it was the first in the country with a mandatory uniform policy in all elementary and middle classes.

Clinton also signed a directive instructing the Education Department to distribute a manual on school uniforms to all 16,000 school districts in the United States. He said it would provide a road map for schools to adopt a uniform policy but that Washington was not telling anyone what to do.

In the Republican response to the radio address, South Carolina Gov. David Beasley said that while the "new Bill Clinton" was promising changes such as smaller government and welfare reform, "the old Bill Clinton" was standing in the way.

"That's why we don't have a balanced budget plan that protects senior citizens, cuts taxes for families and balances the budget in seven years," Beasley said.

Calling on Americans to debate and analyze the differences between Republican and Democratic positions, Beasley said: "It is now clear that real change - the change that Americans are demanding - cannot come so long as the president stops it."

The president's initiative does not offer any federal aid for purchasing school uniforms. That cost is left to the schools and parents.

Clinton announced his proposal on his 22nd visit as president to California, a state crucial to his re-election hopes. He'll be back in California again early in March in advance of the state's presidential primary.

Before flying home today, Clinton also was stopping in Seattle, his second visit to Washington state in 10 days. It has a primary election March 26, the same day as California.

In his weekly radio address, Clinton said Long Beach's school uniform policy has paid off by cutting school crime, reducing fights and discouraging students from bringing guns to class.

Clinton briefly mentioned the school uniform program in his State of the Union address to Congress last month. Today was his full rollout of support for the idea.

'Strike Force' brings muscle, message to evangelistic meet

"Strike Force International," a group that combines evangelism, motivational speaking and displays of strength, is set to appear in Hereford at 7 p.m. Sunday through Wednesday at the Bull Barn.

The group, sponsored by Hereford Ministerial Alliance, features internationally-known athletes who demonstrate feats of strength such as seen on "Wide World of Sports," ABC's "World News Tonight," and "The World's Strongest Man" contest.

Admission to each evening's Strike Force program is free.

Keith Craft, leader of the team, preaches after the team demonstrates such feats as bending steel bars in their teeth, breaking 12-feet of ice with the head, ripping telephone books in half, and crushing five feet of concrete as it bursts into flames. Craft, who was recruited two years ago by the Dallas Cowboys, also breaks out of steel handcuffs.

"These feats of strength are a tool we use to get people's attention," explains Craft. "We then speak a powerful message of hope, presenting the most important thing about our lives--our relationship with Jesus Christ."

The Strike Force group also performs at school assemblies. "We encourage young people to take a stand against drugs, alcohol, suicide and immoral sex," Craft said. "Our evening programs are much bigger and we perform more exciting and daring feats."

For more information on the programs, call 364-8303.

Forsaken Delaware primary was shunned by candidates

By THERESA HUMPHREY
Associated Press Writer
DOVER, Del. (AP) - What if a state held a primary and nobody came? Not even the candidates.

That's what's happening today in Delaware during the nation's second presidential primary.

Not a single candidate is coming to the state for 11th-hour handshaking to boost his candidacy heading into contests next Tuesday in Arizona, North Dakota and South Dakota, followed by South Carolina next Saturday.

Multimillionaire publisher Steve Forbes was the lone Republican contender blitzing through Friday, crisscrossing rural southern Delaware, trying to revive his sagging presidential hopes.

None of the other top-tier candidates campaigned in Delaware. They wanted to avoid offending New Hampshire officials, who wanted a one-week break after their leadoff primary Tuesday.

As expected, turnout appeared to be low as only a trickle of voters went to the polls after they opened at 7 a.m. At the fire hall at Rehoboth Beach in Sussex County fewer than 20 people cast ballots in the first two hours.

Charles Hayes, 43, a financial management system specialist, said he voted for Lamar Alexander because of his position on abortion. "I think women have freedom of choice and others seem to want to take that away."

Jack Hyde, a 65-year-old retired lawyer, cast his ballot for President Clinton on the Democratic ticket, saying, "there's a crazy man running against him," fringe candidate Lyndon LaRouche.

A poll conducted Wednesday and Thursday by Louis Harris and Associates Inc. showed Sen. Bob Dole with 32 percent support among the 401 likely Delaware Republican voters questioned. The poll, which had a 5 percentage-point margin of error, gave Pat Buchanan 21 percent. Forbes was third with 19 percent and Alexander had 16 percent.

Forbes predicted he would do well in Delaware because his theme of restoring control and opportunity to the people was taking hold.

Asked why the message didn't sway voters in New Hampshire, where he finished a distant fourth, Forbes said, "I spent too much time talking about the broken promises of my opponents and not enough on my message."

"We're concentrating solely on my message, so that's why I think we're gaining support again," he said.

Basil Battaglia, state Republican Party chairman, said Forbes' efforts could only help energize voters.

"It's got to work, I would think," Battaglia said.

Police, Emergency Reports

Emergency services reports for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. Saturday contained the following information.

HEREFORD POLICE
A 59-year-old male was arrested in the 900 block of East Park for public intoxication.

A runaway was reported in the 400 block of Avenue B and in the 200 block of Avenue F.

Harassment was reported in the 300 block of East Fourth. Domestic disturbances were reported in the 300 block of Avenue K and in the 300 block of Avenue I.

Class B criminal mischief was reported in the 700 block of La Plata Drive.

Disorderly conduct was reported in the 200 block of Avenue F. Class A criminal mischief was reported in the 400 block of Long Street.

Officers issued 18 traffic citations. One Class C theft citation was issued in the 1100 block of West Park.

FIRE DEPARTMENT
Volunteer firefighters were called out at 10:44 a.m. to a grass fire three to four blocks west of the Catholic Church on West Park Avenue. Firefighters were called out at 3:51 p.m. to a wreck rescue at Park Avenue and Avenue I.

ROMANCE

highest award given by Romance Writers of America at the annual convention in July 1995.

Thomas has awards from Panhandle Professional Writers and Oklahoma Writers Federation, and earned five star ratings for two novels.

She insists that characters in her novels are fictional although traits she's observed in real life may appear. Thomas tries to connect with her historical sites. "I want to walk the land," she said.

A graduate of Amarillo High School, Thomas earned bachelor's and master's degrees from Texas Tech. She also has post-graduate work in her field from Texas Woman's University.

Even though she has enjoyed success as a writer of historical romance novels, Thomas still misses the classroom.

"I really do miss the students," she said. "But, creatively, I'm so much freer than I was as a teacher."

Thomas believes that she set a positive example for the students she met at AHS.

"In 15 years, I feel I helped a generation to become better," she declared.

Thomas will share her experiences with Friends of the Library and offer some advice for those who are interested in a writing career.

"The first thing I would say is to spend at least three months to become computer literate," she said.

"Next, I'd suggest that you read everything you can on how to write. And, third, you should write every day, in a 40-hour week."

Her own special regimen requires her to write about three hours every day. She estimates that she spends six to nine months completing a writing project.

By the time she's finished writing a book, she usually is ready to start another, keeping the cycle intact.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Considering what I had read in the newspaper and heard by word of mouth, I went to the school board meeting Tuesday night expecting to see a meeting of the Hatfields and McCoys. Was I ever surprised and thankful!

Mr. Charles Lyles, principal of Aikman, gave a fantastic summary of "The Quality School" program that he is implementing. Every parent should visit Aikman, walk down the hall with Mr. Lyles as he explains and shows the accomplishments the students are making. With the enthusiasm he and the teachers have, it will definitely make an astonishing impact on Hereford.

It is wonderful to hear the plans, changes, and additions being made in the school system. The school board and the superintendent did an excellent job answering questions that were brought forth. I was thrilled to see so many leaders working together for the future of Hereford.

I went away pleased with what I saw and heard. Yes, I want to say a big "Thank You" top each school board member and to Dr. Greenawalt for being excellent watchmen of our children, buildings, funds, etc.

I think it is time for us to "First of all that supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving thanks be made for all men, for kings and all who are in authority that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all Godliness and reverence." I Timothy 2:1.

Papers hit cyberspace, but few make money there

By ELIZABETH WEISE
AP Cyberspace Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - When a computer expert asked a room full of newspaper executives how many of their papers were online, most raised their hands.
 When she asked them if they were trying to figure out how to make money at it, every hand in the room shot up.
 "Let's face it, the audience is still really small," said Esther Dyson, chairwoman of the Electronic Frontier Foundation.
 But the scramble for that audience is intense. This week's Interactive Newspapers Conference in San Francisco was full of papers eager to jump on the digital train before it left the station. Exactly where it was taking them was still a question.

 "The media has built up the hype so that advertisers and papers think it's cool. Right now it's not profitable, but it's important to get onto it now so that when it takes off, you're not left behind," said Colin Phillips, co-publisher of Editor & Publisher, an industry magazine.
 About 12 percent of the nation's newspapers have an online presence, double the number online only a year ago, said Phillips. But only about 20 are making a profit, and the margin is so pitiful, they wouldn't bother if online service wasn't such a hot button these days, he said.

 "There's been this sort of imaginary horse race in the newspaper industry over the last year," said Elizabeth Osder of The New York Times.
 "Two years ago the question was whether to partner with an online service or go it alone. Then here comes the Web and everybody can get online... Now there is this frenzy to go online and there are a lot of hack jobs out there."
 Online news may still be in the research and development stage, but newspaper executives surveyed by Editor & Publisher said they felt they needed to be online "to remain the number one information source in my region."

Some experts say it's not going to be news at all that determines the winners and losers, but papers that can create a sense of shared community. Publishers should be looking to talk radio as their model, Dyson said.
 "You're going to need to get people actively involved, because that's what's going to get people there. If they're participating they're going to have much more loyalty than if they'd just been sitting on their couches."

 One problem facing newspapers is that just sticking a print product online won't get people excited. But analyst Allen Weiner of DataQuest doesn't think the technology is in place yet for the kind of multimedia pictures and sound everyone is waiting for.

 "The combination of bandwidth and computing power isn't there yet. A 486 (computer) and a 14.4 modem won't do it. We won't be there until 1998. The question is, what are these people going to do in the meantime?"

NEW YORK (AP) - It might seem strange that a nation built on immigration should forever debate whether immigration is good or bad, but that is how it has been - and will be in election-year politics.
 To expect political debate to clarify the issue is probably too much to expect, and maybe it's not the goal either. Votes are, and that brings up some politically important considerations.
 The first is this: The greatest percentages of foreign-born people are in states with significantly high electoral votes - in California, Florida, Hawaii, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York and Texas, for example.
 Moreover, the percentages of foreign-born in all these states but Massachusetts rose between 1960 and 1990, most markedly in California, Florida and Texas, any one of which could be a pivotal state.
 To strike the proper rhetorical balance in such states will take all the political skills of candidates, especially since the issues involved can affect voters very personally, emotionally and financially.
 The second consideration involves a clarification that hasn't yet been made by candidates. In determining whether or not immigration is desirable, a distinction must be made between jobs and overall economic impact, to wit:
 Statistical studies tend to challenge the popular wisdom that immigration leads to greater unemployment. At least one study, prepared for the Alexis de Tocqueville Institution, suggests immigrants create as many jobs as they take.
 This study, by Ohio State University economists Richard Vedder and Lowell Gallaway, and the Cato Institute's Stephen Moore, concludes "immigrants are more likely to be a part of the solution, not the problem."

But another perspective is offered by George Borjas of the National Bureau of Economic Research, who finds immigration causes a "serious and substantial" redistribution of wealth from labor to capital.
 Stated simply, "users" of immigrants - producers or manufacturers - benefit from the competition for jobs, while native workers who compete for jobs with immigrants lose out, a situation at the heart of the issue.
 He estimates workers lose $133 billion a year, while "users" gain about $140 billion. On balance, this means native U.S. workers and taxpayers benefit by about $7 billion a year, or about $30 per native individual.
 To use such reasoning in a paper delivered to academic economists might provoke an interesting discussion, but to use it in political debate could be deadly, subject to instant destruction by one anecdotal tale of woe.
 The despair, anger, frustration and destruction accompanying job loss, and the ruin that massive layoffs can mean to specific areas (even if the national economy booms) is a subject voters can understand and react to.
 Politically, it is hardly the kind of issue to be dealt with through cold statistics. It is real, not abstract. It involves human beings rather than numbers. It is a matter demanding understanding, not further study.
 As such, any deep discussion of the jobs-immigration issue, along with the related social problems, is likely to remain in the realm of economics rather than politics. Politics demands that issues be simplified.
 It doesn't mean, however, that those who defend immigration aren't without weapons. They too have anecdotal evidence, and lots of it. About immigrant entrepreneurs, scientists, educators, doctors - even politicians.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Lawrence Schiller, who worked with O.J. Simpson on his jailhouse book, "I Want to Tell You," has a new book in the works with the working title, "Post Mortem."
 Schiller, who collaborated with Norman Mailer on the Pulitzer Prize-winning "The Executioner's Song," got Simpson's close friend, Robert Kardashian, to give him a series of exclusive interviews.
 Kardashian was at Simpson's side in the days after Nicole Brown Simpson was slain along with her friend Ronald Goldman. Simpson left from Kardashian's house to begin his infamous odyssey in a Bronco.
 "It doesn't take a point of view on Simpson," Schiller said recently. "It doesn't rehash the evidence. It's about the people... The only answer we're going to find to this mystery is within the characters. Was it within O.J.'s character to commit this crime?"
 In spite of Schiller's close relationship with Simpson, the acquitted murder defendant will not be among those offering his opinion.

NEW YORK (AP) - Christopher Reeve says his sex life still soars.
 In an interview with CNN's Larry King, Reeve, who suffered a crippling fall last May, said his "beautiful, extraordinary" wife, Dana, makes him feel "like a high school senior."
 Reeve's cheerful revelation came in response to King asking whether he can still have sex. Seated in a ventilator-equipped wheelchair, he appeared on King's Wednesday night telecast.
 The stage and screen star best known for his four Superman films also confessed he misses acting.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says a kind and thoughtful husband never sends his wife to the store with enough money to buy more groceries than she can carry.

There is no such thing as government money--only taxpayer money.

It's not long until April 15--a time to count your blessings, and then send them to the IRS!

The resignation of Mike Carr as executive vice president of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Friday came as a surprise to many in the community. Carr announced he will join John and Gary Stagner in forming a new Buick-Pontiac dealership here.

As C of C President Tommie Weemes said Friday, the position of Chamber manager is one of "the hardest jobs in Hereford, requiring a special person to handle the stress and workload."

One reason for that evaluation of the position, I suspect, is that the chamber manager has a lot of bosses. Not only is he working for about 500 chamber members who fund the operations of the organization, but many non-members also try to tell him how to do his job.

Another reason is that many people don't realize all the things that are involved in the job. And, he has one office manager and one parttime secretary. The rest of his work force is composed of volunteer committee members. If they don't do their job, there's not much the chamber manager can say.

Carr has served as chamber manager for 18 years, probably a record tenure in the job. While many folks think he will be hard to replace, it's no secret that others were happy to hear about his resignation.

Carr, however, doesn't dwell on the negatives. He knows you can't please all the people all the time. "It's been a very rewarding experience," says Carr. "I've had the opportunity to work with some great people, and I will treasure those times."

Every community has a few soreheads who sit around and criticize everything that is going on in a community and every person who is involved in those events.

We ran across a "Dirty Dozen" list that might help these folks keep their little worlds intact. Here are the top 12 ways to help a town go downhill:

1. Live in the past and talk about how things used to be.
2. Attend no meetings of any kind. Keep relying on rumors for the source of all your news.
3. Bad mouth city and other local leaders and don't get involved in making the town a better place to live. Be sure to criticize the way "they" are doing things.
4. Remind others at all times of the cold winters, hot summers or terrible sandstorms. Point out that people must be rugged to enjoy life in such conditions.
5. Forget about saying thanks or patting anyone on the back for a thankless job well done.
6. Buy things out of town or from mail-order catalogs. Ignore the firms that are first to come forth with donations for worthy causes.
7. Stay away from the schools and don't support any youth activities.
8. Remember that all kids are delinquents; all businessmen are crooks, and that nothing good can be said about your hometown.
9. Keep on saying, "This is the way it's always been. We can't do it differently."
10. Forget the meaning of the word "volunteer" and declare that one person can't make a difference.
11. Above all, always be skeptical, cynical, and negative about anything that is meant for the betterment of the community.
12. Forget about your town's heritage and past accomplishments.

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

For the next eight and a half months, our senses will be bombarded with the most non-sensical rhetoric known to humankind. Words from the mouths of politicians bear little resemblance to truth and honor.

History tells us that dirty campaigns are nothing new. But in the past did candidates slam their own party opponents the way they do today?

As one who basically is apolitical, there's a doubt in my mind that I can endure all these months of political speechifying and commercials. Of course, political campaigns are a boon to certain media.

Do national television networks make up for all the programming flops and attendant lower revenues with the humongous amount of political commercials?

Being from a generation that barely knew Franklin D. Roosevelt was merely a president, not a king, my introduction to another world came hard. FDR won four elections handily, the last only months before his death.

No one knew his successor, one Harry S. Truman. That was the genius of Roosevelt -- he kept the underlings a secret from the world. But Truman proved to be a tough bird. He firmly believed his slogan "The buck stops here" and was not afraid to take on his political enemies.

Truman's only campaign for the nation's top job was against his predecessor's last opponent, Republican Thomas E. Dewey. The whole world knew the haberdasher from Missouri couldn't beat the slick New Yorker.

Sometimes, though, an unusual twist plays a psychological role in politics.

There were those who simply didn't like the looks of Dewey. His hair was coal black and he wore a black mustache. Some thought he had a sinister look about him. But others in those early post-war years were less kind -- he looked like the world's ultimate badman, Adolph Hitler, they said.

Without the pervasive influence of television, there were no programs that gave vote results before the votes were counted. But, the political commentators and pooh-bahs forecast an easy victory for Dewey.

While votes were still being counted, a prominent newspaper declared Dewey the winner in the election, ran a story with his picture on the front page of an early edition. Somewhere there may be copies of that paper worth a lot of money. A radio commentator told his audience that the rural vote would hand the election to Dewey on a silver platter.

As the night wore on, there was considerable face-washing, removing the egg that splattered all over the faces of these astute beings.

The fact is the third-party candidacy of Strom Thurmond, who bolted from the Democratic party, hardly fazed the Democrat's win. Truman collected 303 electoral votes to Dewey's 189 and Thurmond's 39.

Since my history memory is somewhat lacking, I'd hate to enumerate Truman's accomplishments. But he had the courage to buck Brother Stalin and saved Greece from Communism. His secretary of state promoted a plan that gave countries rebuilding from World War II money to recover.

For some of Truman's detractors, his most notable unaccomplishment was his firing of General Douglas MacArthur from his position as head of the U.S. and U.N. troops in Korea. What a hue and cry went up when MacArthur, the WWII hero of the Pacific war, came home to receive the homage he believed his due.

Truman didn't seem to flinch, though. Now for a personal note. I was too young to vote when Truman and Dewey squared off. I didn't much care who won but I kind of felt like many others. Dewey just didn't look very trustworthy.

Almost 15 years later I had occasion to see Mr. Dewey, standing no more than 20 feet from him during a ceremony in a courtroom in New York City. The black hair and mustache had turned silver. Very distinguished looking.

It went through my head that he overcame his appearance too late to do his political life any good. I think I would have voted for him at that time, on looks alone.

Remember when you got your report card?

Remember when you were a kid and your report card came in? If you were little, you simply ran home with it and gave it to Mommy and Daddy.

As you got older and knew how to interpret grades a little better, you knew a little better what Mom and Dad's reaction would be when that report card got to the house.

Some kids were given incentives for making good grades -- you know, 50 cents for each "A," a quarter for each "B" and nothing for lower grades (or one lick with the paddle for each "D" and two licks for each "F").

We didn't do incentives -- as children of school teachers, my siblings and I were simply EXPECTED to get the best grades possible in school.

For the most part, we did a pretty good job scholastically. I must confess that I was the first one of us to fail a class when I didn't make it through chemistry class.

(Of course, that was before the strict attendance policies of today, so I missed quite a bit of class for long lunches and simply "forgot" to turn in homework on other days).

Out of the Blue

That was not a very pleasant report card to take home. Otherwise, I don't remember too much trauma associated with report cards, either my own or those of my sisters and brother.

When I got to college, my report card was replaced by a transcript. Because my parents paid for my college education, I had to show them my grades.

Again, the reports for my freshman year were not very pleasant (poor marks based on too much science and math and too little initiative!), although in later years I buckled down a lot and my grade-point averages climbed to a fairly respectable level.

Now that I am grown, I have a daughter in her first year of school.

Thanks to changes in the HISD kindergarten report card, we received our second report card ever last week (they only do report cards the second, fourth and sixth six weeks, with conferences the first and fifth and a campus report the third).

Instead of a small folder with "Excellent," "Satisfactory" and "Unsatisfactory," this report card uses phrases such as "exceeding expectations," "developing at expected levels" and "needs help" (or something like that).

It also is a large, three-fold brochure that assesses emotional development, physical development, intellectual development and tells me what letters she's learned in class.

By virtue of attending all school board meetings, I remember when the new report card was presented. We were told it was designed to be more informative to parents and better show them how their children performed in class.

I'm sure it is, but something inside of me still remembers when I could compare grades with my friends, gloating over who had the most "excellent."

It just doesn't sound the same: "I got six 'exceeding expectations' in intellectual development, two in muscle development and four in emotional development. How did you do?"

But then, I guess that's the price you pay for progress.

An AP news analysis

Buchanan left GOP field very foggy

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) -

Appropriately enough, a dense fog shrouded New Hampshire after the mixed message voting that left the Republican campaign for the White House just as murky.

And suddenly, the rush to an early GOP decision on who'll face President Clinton seemed less certain than before. One senior Republican suggested that the GOP field might, improbably, deadlock and wind up in a contest at the national convention in August.

Such was the impact of Pat Buchanan's one percentage point victory over Sen. Bob Dole - with Lamar Alexander close behind them - in the first of the presidential primaries.

That leveled lineup will be tested, and sorted, in a burst of primaries that will head West, then South, then back to New England on March 5, to New York two days later and back to the South again.

It is the equivalent of a national primary, and the battered Dole still has the strongest organization and healthiest treasury for the costly road and television show.

"Organization's not going to count very much out there because nobody's organized in 50 states," Buchanan argued.

But they'll be organizing against him; the party hierarchy is aligned with Dole, and sees the conservative commentator as a wild card whose campaign, let alone nomination, could damage Republican prospects in the fall.

It did four years ago, when he doggedly challenged George Bush. Buchanan guessed that with Dole's lineup of endorsements - three more senators signed on the day after his narrow New Hampshire defeat - the Senate leader will be his long-term rival for the nomination.

Gov. William Weld of Massachusetts said Dole has the residual strength to win nomination. "There are a lot of states like Ohio and New York where it's going to be difficult for anyone to compete with Senator Dole in terms of delegates," he said.

Alexander said he should, and will be, the finalist against Buchanan. He added a term to the campaign vocabulary: Buchananism.

"If he were the nominee, he would be a terrible burden for our party," Alexander said, and could cost the GOP control of Congress.

Dole, in North and South Dakota, where he must win next Tuesday's primaries - held along with Arizona - called Buchanan a fringe candidate. "It's mainstream versus extreme," he said.

Buchanan reveled in it all, saying he had the establishment in a panic, and that people he used to dine with are calling him names, determined to stop him. It meshes perfectly with his populist, anti-Washington argument.

The assumption had been that on or before March 26, when California holds the biggest of the primaries, the Republicans would know their nominee. "I think it is still likely, but not certain," Haley Barbour, the Republican national chairman, said in a CNN interview. "It's just a lot less likely than people might have thought a month ago."

A former Senate leader, Howard Baker, ventured the idea of the first contested convention since 1952. But with 42 primaries to go, that's almost impossible. There's been such speculation before, usually about divided Democratic contests, but the nominees emerge from the primaries.

This time, with Clinton unopposed, Democrats were happy to watch the GOP infighting. Sen. Chris Dodd, the party chairman, said it was fun to see the other side brawling after all the campaigns in which Democrats did it.

An equally confounding New Hampshire primary verdict 32 years ago helped stir the same kind of right-left Republican battle. That was the 1964 primary in which an absent, write-in, non-candidate, Henry Cabot Lodge, won over Sen. Barry Goldwater and New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller. They had campaigned all winter, and it wasn't even close.

Then, too, the argument was over extremism: the eastern Republican rap on Goldwater. But in those different times, there were only scattered primaries; GOP activists dominated delegate selection and Goldwater had their support.

Rockefeller struggled all spring; in the end, Pennsylvania Gov. William Scranton took up belated candidacy in a futile attempt to stop Goldwater and pull the party back toward the center.

This is no replay, and Buchanan is no Goldwater. The Arizona senator was "Mr. Conservative," with a movement behind him, before that campaign began.

Buchanan's emergence is a feat of the television age; he's never run for any other office.

"We are taking back our party," Buchanan said. That once was a Goldwater line. The former senator, incidentally, endorsed Dole in this campaign.

Austin American-Statesman on President's Day: One of the deprecations of the 1960s was the annoyance, lamented at the time but now largely forgotten, of Public Law 90-363.

Passed in 1968 and put into effect three years later, it gave America the Monday federal holiday we accept as traditional today.

If the nation had continued to observe Washington's original birthday, which is a day before Lincoln's, both could be celebrated easily without this unsatisfying neither-birthday we now mark as President's Day.

Amarillo Daily News on school board members: Few government decisions have a greater impact on our daily lives than those relating to education.

They affect our children's curriculum and property taxes their parents pay to support our schools. These are at once social issues and pocketbook issues. Who sets the policies? School board members.

The U.S. Department of Education has set aside this week to recognize the work of school boards across the country. Today, more than ever, we ought to tip our hats to the men and women who commit themselves to the educational quality of our schools.

Think of it. This is grass-roots government at its most elementary form. School board members often are our neighbors. We sit next to them during worship. We talk to them across the back fence. Sometimes we even accost them at the grocery store, questioning why they voted to allow this or that textbook; sometimes we demand that they justify increasing our taxes.

What do school board members get in return? Certainly not the money, they volunteer their time.

This is not a contradiction to urge citizens to seek public office while recognizing the good work and dedication of those who already serve. Instead, it is a recognition of the difficulties that school board members face while making important decisions that provide the framework for our public schools.

And they do so often with little expression of support or appreciation. With that, we simply say to school board members willing to step up: Thank you.

USS Oklahoma survivors still seeking memorial

By TIM TALLEY
Associated Press Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - It took just seven minutes for Japanese torpedoes to scuttle the mighty battleship USS Oklahoma and send it to the muddy bottom of Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

More than 50 years later, survivors are still haggling over plans to erect a memorial to the stricken ship and the more than 400 officers and sailors who went down with her.

"This memorial should have been up long ago," Oklahoma survivor Paul Goodyear said.

Goodyear, 77, of Casa Grande, Ariz., is one of a group of survivors who have broken away from the USS Oklahoma Association over complaints of foot-dragging with the state on plans to erect a monument in Oklahoma City to their fallen shipmates.

"We lost a good number of our fellows," said Oklahoma survivor Bob Carlson of Minnetonka, Minn. "We want plaques with the names of all of these fellows that were killed."

But state officials said the association has been working with them for three years to build the USS Oklahoma Memorial at the Veteran's Memorial near the state Capitol.

"I don't know that there's anybody who's questioning what we're doing," said Bill Pitts of the Oklahoma Historical Society. "There's just a question of where to put the names. It's going to be done. We have the list of names."

But Carlson, 76, said the Oklahoma's survivors don't care whether the names of the dead are inscribed on a marble plaque, a ship's bell or the Oklahoma's anchor, which is already on display in downtown Oklahoma City.

"It doesn't matter to us, as long as we can put these kids' names up somewhere to memorialize the sacrifice that they made," Goodyear said.

USS Oklahoma Association officials said the survivors' complaints are unfair and demean the memories of the shipmates whose lives were lost at Pearl Harbor.

"We have been trying to put this thing together rather quietly," said Al Ellis of Hemet, Calif. "What's happening at the present time, to me, is disgusting."

Plans are in the works to renovate an exhibit about the 29,000-ton battleship and display letters removed from the ship's stern that spell out its name.

"We hope things work out right," Pitts said. Officials hope to dedicate the memorial in May 1997 - the 50th anniversary of the ship's loss in the Pacific Ocean.

The Oklahoma was raised almost two years after the Pearl Harbor attack and sold for scrap. Stripped of its armament and superstructure, the ship was being towed to San Francisco when it slipped beneath the surface for the last time.

"I was tickled to death when I heard it had sunk," Goodyear said.

"I would rather see it at the bottom of the ocean where it belongs rather than turned into a bunch of razor blades. I thought it deserved a better end than that."

The Oklahoma was among the first ships crippled during the Pearl Harbor attack and it suffered the second highest death toll. More than 1,000 men died aboard the Arizona.

Goodyear said he has contacted relatives of 140 of the victims. And he said there are 375 relatives on his roster including mothers, fathers, wives and children. Only 35 of the dead were ever identified.

"We're trying to locate the relatives of these fellows who were killed," Carlson said. "We've spent a lot of time, a lot of effort and a lot of money finding them."

"I don't think the people in Oklahoma think we're serious about this thing," Goodyear said. Members of the splinter group have launched their own efforts to erect a monument.

"It has become very important to me," Carlson said. He said he plans to travel to Oklahoma City next month to discuss the memorial with state officials.

"It is not the association that is doing this. It's the survivors that are doing this -- the splinterheads," Goodyear said.

Ellis, 73, is paymaster of the USS Oklahoma Association. And he bristled at suggestions by some disgruntled survivors that the group has been financially mismanaged.

"They in effect accused me of misuse of funds. That is definitely not so," Ellis said. The association and the Historical Society are seeking donations to help pay for the memorial.

Ellis said the group has been working with Oklahoma officials to secure a ship's bell that will serve as the focal point of the memorial.

"We have been looking for a ship's bell for the last six or seven years. We've looked all over," Ellis said.

The Oklahoma's bells were dislodged when it keeled over during the Pearl Harbor attack. They were not recovered when the ship was righted and they did not turn up during subsequent dredging.

"As far as we know, those bells are probably 50 or 60 feet in the mud where the Oklahoma turned over," Ellis said.

The group has secured a promise from the curator of the Naval Museum in the Washington, D.C., to provide a large bronze bell for the memorial.

"We intend to take measurements of it as soon as it arrives in Oklahoma City and have a bronze strip placed on the outside that will give the dates of the Oklahoma," Ellis said.

The battleship was launched in Camden, N.J., on March 23, 1914, and was christened by Lorena Jane Cruce, daughter of then Oklahoma Gov. Lee Cruce. It was commissioned on May 2, 1916, in Philadelphia.

Advisory panel says PYtest safe

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer
GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) - A breath test that can diagnose ulcer-causing bacteria in just 10 minutes needs one more study to prove it works as well as it promises, a government panel decided Friday.

The Food and Drug Administration advisory panel said the PYtest - for H. pylori bacteria that cause millions of ulcers - was safe despite using mild radiation. And panelists said it appears to diagnose the bacteria as well as the invasive tests patients now undergo.

But that evidence came from just one study of the PYtest, because a confirmatory trial was too flawed to use, the panel decided. Without that confirmation, Americans should wait a little longer for the PYtest, the panel said.

"This is a test that's needed and one that will be useful," said Dr. Thomas Burks of the University of Texas. But without confirmatory evidence, "I cannot recommend approval."

The FDA is not bound by advisory committee decisions but usually follows them.

Dr. Barry Marshall, the Australian scientist who in 1983 discovered that bacteria and not stress cause most ulcers, expressed disappointment but told panelists he will get the confirmation they want.

Some 20 million to 30 million Americans will get ulcers at some point in their lives, and up to 5 million take ulcer medication every year.

The vast majority are caused by H. pylori, a bacteria that infects some 30 percent of Americans. The World Health Organization also has declared the bacterium a top carcinogen, responsible for many cases of stomach cancer.

Not everyone with H. pylori will get sick, but the National Institutes of Health recommends that patients be treated with antibiotics to eradicate the infection. The question is how to diagnose it.

Most doctors diagnose ulcer patients through an endoscope, a tube inserted down the patient's throat into the stomach, through which a piece of tissue is pulled to test. A blood test can detect the body's immune response to H. pylori, but doesn't tell if the infection is current or old.

So Marshall 10 years ago began developing a breath test, named PYtest and studied by TriMed Inc. of Charlottesville, Va. A similar test already is sold in Europe.

Patients swallow a capsule containing carbon-14, a mildly radioactive isotope that reacts with an enzyme present whenever H. pylori is in the stomach. Carbon-14 is naturally present in the environment, and the amount in PYtest provides no more radiation exposure than someone would get from drinking 15 glasses of orange juice or a fraction of that absorbed from one plane flight, Marshall said. FDA radiation experts agreed.

H. pylori infection makes patients' stomachs contain an enzyme called urease. Carbon-14 reacts with urease to form particles in carbon dioxide that the patient exhales. By testing exhaled air, caught in a balloon, the PYtest diagnoses infection.

Beepers gaining popularity among school students

Special 'language' allows teens to communicate with each other via pagers

By BRUCE NOLAN
The Times-Picayune

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - It's fifth period in any high school. Afternoon is slipping under the lullaby of a pitiless droning about the Missouri Compromise. Suddenly a student near the front jolts awake and shifts in his desk before his face quickly resettles to nonchalance.

Outside, a half-hour later, he discreetly fishes from his pants pocket the beeper whose noiseless, seven-second vibration aroused him from whatever Henry Clay did to earn the thanks of a grateful nation.

Its window reads: 143 222.
Yes! She loves me.

It's beeper-talk.
Boosted partly by working parents who like the security of an electronic tether to their children, but mostly by an indefinable cachet, beepers are becoming very important in teen culture.

Pink beepers and red ones. Purple beepers and beepers that glow in the dark. Fluorescent beepers.

And no-beep beepers that vibrate to signal an incoming message, the better to hide them from school administrators, who for the most part - and with some reason - view beepers as an instrument of drug dealers, and a threat to their students.

It started two years ago, when an expensive business-only tool suddenly became cheap, said Marlene Manthey, a Radiofone executive.

Retailers began seeing teen-agers at their counters, parents in tow.

Beepers go for as little as $19.95 for a used one. But most companies require an adult to sign the contracts committing them to buy about $90 a year in usage fees, Manthey said.

Half the time the parent was interested in a beeper to keep tabs on junior. And the other half, Manthey said, the parent was going with the flow.

"Ninety-five percent of my friends have them. And 90 percent of them have them in school," said Jessica Silvey, 17, a high school junior. "You need a beeper so friends can keep in touch; if something's going on, you don't want to miss anything."

Of course, beepers entered an unexpected growth market a few years ago when they became the capitalist tool of enterprising drug dealers who made their rounds on pay phones. They became viewed as sinister devices.

In response, most school systems formally banned them on campus and at off-campus events such as dances. Today their campuses are officially beeper-free.

Officially.
"I can think of maybe 75 people right now wearing them," said Jeff Jones, a senior at McMann Magnet Secondary School in New Orleans. "About half my friends wear them. There must be hundreds walking in the halls."

"It's not about selling drugs," said Jancisha Wester, 15. "It's just about having them. You know, kind of a fad thing."

Beepers are buried in pockets and concealed under baggy shirts. Clipped backward to the inside of waistbands. Stuffed inside backpacks and purses.

At many schools, beepers are an accepted secret between students and administrators. To have it go off in class is to lose it, but nobody runs surprise shakedowns.

"The teachers know you have them, but it's like, 'So long as it doesn't go off in this class, I don't care,'" Jones said.

Operationally, just the basic function will do. There's no need for a nationwide pager that spits out weather and stock market quotes. Just one that beeps and vibrates and displays the number a caller has punched into the phone.

But colors are nice.
"If you're under 15 you want this one," said Rick Celentano, of Celentano's World of Beepers. "It glows in the dark."

At Celentano's, seventy-five percent of his beeper-accessory business goes to teen-agers.

"Now if you're between 15 and 17, you're going to want one of these." Out come the purple and teal beeper covers.

"And if you're between 17 and, say, 27, it's black. Because see, now you're paying attention to your clothes, and black goes with anything."

With so much communications capability, how much communication is going on?

Donald Seeger bought his 15-year-old son, Chad, a beeper, and said he rests easier because of it.

"I just like to know I can get him with a telephone call, no matter the time or where he is," Seeger said.

But, after a while, weird stuff began appearing, Chad said. "I'd be out and get these strange calls. I'd have to stop and return them, and I'd never heard of any of these people."

More than that, sometimes the numbers in the beeper window aren't even phone numbers - or they're phone numbers plus others.

Some friends use codes when they are calling from an unfamiliar phone. The code - 222 or 007, for instance - identifies who's calling.

Most codes are unique among friends; a few are universal, like a phone number ending in 911: Call me right now.

Other codes: Among some, 143 means "I love you." 15 is "sorry." 07734 means "hello." Turn it upside down and see.

Others are words less appropriate. "There are books of codes," Celentano said. "I can't keep them in stock."

Listen to Cheston McDonald, an 18-year old senior. "I have this obsessive friend whose just-as-obsessive boyfriend lives in Mississippi," she said. "She's forever beeping him at like 2 a.m. with a message, 'I love you.'"

Those three wonderful words: 1-4-3.

Artist's home gallery lacks stuffy museum atmosphere

By CATHY FRYE
The Odessa American

FORT DAVIS, Texas - Dinner guests invited to Bill Leftwich's home might be a bit reluctant to sit at his table.

For just as soon as the sturdy wooden chairs are pulled out, it would be impossible not to feel a twinge of guilt for resting one's posterior on what many people would consider pieces of art.

The dozen or so chairs surrounding Leftwich's massive table are padded with smooth leather on which he has tooled intricate portraits of well-known Indians.

"It's saddle leather," he says, rapping on one of the chairs and grinning at the way a visitor winces. "And it's stout," he adds in a reassuring tone, pointing out that he's been sitting on this furniture for 25 years.

But it isn't just the chairs that would prompt many a wary parent to instinctively grab at children's straying hands.

Leftwich's adobe home - which he designed and built about 14 years ago in Fort Davis - is filled with any number of potential targets for the proverbial bull in a china shop - or an out-of-control toddler.

The artist is unfazed, however. His 14 grandchildren have never posed a threat to any of his creations. Even if something were broken, "we'd just throw it away," he says nonchalantly. Never mind that collectors of his artwork include Ronald Reagan, U.S. Rep. Henry Bonilla, country singer Michael Martin Murphy and former Gov. Bill Clements.

Despite the detailed bronze sculptures, oil paintings and leatherwork that occupy much of the wall and shelf space, Leftwich's home gallery doesn't have the intimidating or stuffy atmosphere found in many art museums.

Instead, members of a senior citizens group staying at a nearby ranch wander from the gallery into the living room, unabashedly asking Leftwich's wife, Mary Alice, for a complete tour of her home. As they roam from room to room, the tourists gawk not only at Leftwich's artwork but the adobe structure's design.

Leftwich - who has studied at art academies in Texas, New Mexico and England - also has a rather extensive background in architecture.

Among his designs, some of which date back to the 1960s, are a rodeo arena in New Mexico, the campus master plan for Lubbock Christian University and the Western Heritage Center for Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene.

Leftwich, 72, spent two years building his home - dubbed the Adobe Hacienda Gallery - after he and his wife decided they wanted an adobe structure like the one they occupied in Mexico.

Much of his home was built with materials from old railroad tracks and odds and ends that Leftwich scavenged while in Mexico.

The supporting beams in his living room are telephone poles that once stood along the Southern Pacific Railroad lines. A center beam running across the ceiling came from an old railroad bridge. And the table in his living room was made from a 200-year-old wooden door - with a keyhole that would have accepted only an extraordinarily large key - that the artist brought back from Mexico.

In the bathroom, towels hang from stirrups and rusty horseshoes.

Throughout the rest of the house, woven rugs, which actually are saddle blankets, have been tossed onto a brick floor.

By the time a tour of Leftwich's hallwayless home is finished, it's easy to figure out what cultures have played the most prominent roles in both his life and his art. Even his simple attire reveals much of his background.

The lanky artist is wearing a denim shirt tucked neatly into unfaded jeans. The lined pewter vest he wears stops just above his waist, which is encircled by a gaily colored Mexican belt.

Leftwich, whose unlined face betrays his age, is of Indian descent. Soft-spoken and sharp-featured, he has pearl-gray eyes and silvered hair. The artist even possesses the cleft chin mandatory for any cowboy featured in old Hollywood westerns.

And Leftwich has worked as a cowboy on many Texas ranches. He also has been a park ranger, farmer, draftsman, free-lance author, smelter, construction worker and agronomist.

But no matter what his current occupation, Leftwich always has made time for his art, which usually focuses on Indians, Mexico, the Southwest and the military. Even when he wound up in Mexico for several years - working as a livestock commissioner in a battle against hoof-and-mouth disease - he used his spare time to draw comical sketches of his exploits there.

These drawings later were used to illustrate some of his books, which also are displayed at the gallery.

Leftwich has been drawing, sculpting and painting since he was 6, picking up various skills and techniques at fine arts schools in Dallas and San Antonio. He joined the U.S. Army in 1942. When World War II ended, the young serviceman remained in England, taking art classes at the Shrivensham American University.

"I studied while I was waiting to go home," he recalls, looking down at the pointed toe of the boot on which his weight rests. "I had fights with British soldiers at night, and I sculpted during the day."

When he returned to America, Leftwich earned a degree in animal husbandry at Texas A&M University. Each summer, he left College Station in search of temporary jobs. And that's how he stumbled across Fort Davis.

Our $60
mammogram could save you
just money.

When breast cancer is found and treated early, a woman has more treatment choices and a better chance of returning to a healthy, happy life. The physicians and staff at St. Mary Family Healthcare Centers encourage you to have a screening mammogram if:

- you are over 40 years of age
- you are over 35 years of age with a family history of breast cancer
- it has been at least a year since your last mammogram

To schedule an appointment, or to learn about Bosom Buddies, a breast cancer support group, call the Joe Arrington Cancer Research and Treatment Center (JACC) in Lubbock at (806) 796-4700 or (800) 764-5222. The total cost for a screening mammogram is $60. You will also receive a personal complimentary gift and valet parking is available. All mammography technologists are A.R.R.T. certified and JACC is A.C.R. accredited and F.D.A. approved.

Put that remote down and read a book about TV

NEW YORK (AP) - Just tear your eyes off the television screen for a moment and you'll find more books out there about TV than you can shake a clicker at.

Recent TV literature includes guilty pleasures like "My Life in High Heels," wherein Loni Anderson tells the world her "WKR" co-star Gary Sandy was a real love machine. Yikes!

Or you can bury yourself in the official companion volume to "Friends," or the latest by America's Talking host E. Jean Carroll, frightfully called "A Dog in Heat is A Hot Dog, and Other Rules to Live By."

Or you may choose to get a bit more serious with any of a half-dozen other new tomes.

Just in time for the presidential election season three new books explore how TV affects the process.

"Hot Air: All Talk, All the Time" (Times Books) is an informed look at the different genres of blabber-casting, with chapters ranging from "Daytime Dysfunction" to "Toe to Toe with Ted" (that is, "Nightline's" Koppel).

Written by Washington Post media reporter Howard Kurtz, "Hot Air" is anything but, as it builds a case for a growing dilemma.

"As the talk show culture has exploded," Kurtz notes, "the national conversation has been coarsened, cheapened, reduced to name-calling and finger-pointing and bumper-sticker sloganeering."

With the current presidential race, nothing could be more timely than "Going Negative: How Political Advertisements Shrink and Polarize the Electorate" (Free Press).

The product of extensive research by political scientists Stephen Ansolabehere and Shanto Iyengar, "Going Negative" substantiates what too many of us feel on our own: Negative political advertising often wins over uncommitted voters ... to None of the Above.

These nonpartisans, the authors write, "find politicians, politics and government distasteful; political advertising simply sounds like more of the same."

"Breaking the News: How the Media Undermine American Democracy" (Pantheon) has gotten much attention from the press it targets. And for good reason.

Author James Fallows draws many conclusions, among them that the news media are sorely out of touch with the public's interests and needs. As a result, he declares, the institutions covered by the media suffer.

Current practices of journalists

"affect the future prospects of every American by distorting the processes by which we choose our leaders and resolve our public problems," Fallows writes.

Many viewers define "TV history" as a CBS series after 13 weeks. Three more new books take viewers back ... back ... even further back than "Courthouse" and "Dweebs."

In "The Box: An Oral History of Television, 1920-1961" (Viking), Jeff Kisseloff has assembled a fat and highly readable account of TV's early he says. As a college student, Leftwich worked as a park ranger in Big Bend National Park. He also toiled leather for a saddlery company in Alpine.

The craggy mountains, straining upward to puncture the sky with their pointed peaks, appealed to him, Leftwich explains.

Even after he graduated, Leftwich and his wife made frequent visits to West Texas, drawn there by its desolate beauty.

"We picnicked here on weekends. And after the kids all left home, we bought 10 acres."

The Leftwiches' unplastered adobe home sits off a road directly across from the Stone Village Grocery in Fort Davis.

years, as voiced by witnesses that include veteran comic Jack Carter, Barbara "Leave It To Beaver" Billingsley, CBS' Dr. Frank Stanton, director Arthur Penn and hundreds of others never really heard from - until now.

"Zworykin, Pioneer of Television" (University of Illinois Press) zeros in on the Russian-born scientist in his first-ever biography.

Mind you, author Albert Abramson is careful not to anoint Vladimir Kosma Zworykin as "the father of television."

Despite its out-of-the-way location, tourists manage to find the gallery, relying on directions given to them from locals.

And even those who haven't yet visited the Adobe Hacienda Gallery probably have seen Leftwich's work. His murals, bronzes and books can be found throughout the Southwest at national parks, museums and art galleries.

And the number of projects ahead of him seems to be increasing, his wife tells the elderly tourists. Leftwich grins broadly as he eavesdrops on her candid remarks to the group.

"He has definitely been working. But it keeps him out of trouble."

Abramson, himself a retired television engineer who now works as a consultant and free-lance writer, calls Zworykin "the single most motivating force behind the system of television that is in universal use today."

He also reports that Zworykin, who died in 1982 one day short of his 93rd birthday, had no television set in his Princeton, N.J., study, and had often stated that any TV's best feature was the "off" switch.

One of Zworykin's laments was the lack of cultural programming on the Tube. In "The Vanishing Vision: The Inside Story of Public Television" (University of California Press), James Day traces public TV's often-troubled past.

It "has lived in crisis, uncertain of its future, ever since its awkward birth in 1952 as educational television," Day writes. "Then, as now, it was an aberration."

A past president of National Educational Television and WNET-New York, Day describes the current state of public television as a Byzantine bureaucracy with fragmented leadership and a short leash held by a wary Congress.

"Only by going back to its hobbled start at the hands of a grudging government," Day writes, "can we understand what it is, why it is and what it has the power to become."

Chapman, Heat shock Bulls

By The Associated Press
Heading into the biggest game of the regular season, the Chicago Bulls and Orlando Magic took divergent paths.

The Bulls, perhaps looking ahead to their game with the Magic on Sunday, fell 113-104 at Miami, even though the Heat suited up the minimum eight players Friday night. "The way we played, it was very evident we didn't come out mentally prepared to play," Michael Jordan said. "You have to respect everybody in this league every time you step on the court. I'm not sure we did that tonight."

The Magic won 115-102 at Milwaukee despite Shaquille O'Neal's foul trouble. They weren't looking ahead at all.

"I was real happy with the way our guys came out tonight," Magic coach Brian Hill said. "I was a little worried about this one coming in."

The Bulls, with the NBA's best record (48-6), play host to the Magic (43-14) Sunday. Neither team has lost at home this season.

"It's going to be a highly televised game and an important game for both of us," O'Neal said after scoring 17 points in 24 minutes. "We know if we want to make it to the playoffs we have to go through Indiana and Chicago."

Heat 113, Bulls 104

Miami used deadly outside shooting, with Rex Chapman tying a career high with 30 points on 9-for-10 3-point shooting.

The Heat tied a team record with 15 3-pointers and built a 26-point lead late in the third quarter, then withstood a charge by the Bulls.

"Nobody's more surprised at this than we are," Chapman said. "If we come out and lay down for them, we could have gotten beat by 100 points."

Magic 115, Bucks 102

The Magic got out to an early lead that allowed them to rest their starters for Sunday.

Anfernee Hardaway led Orlando with 19 points, and the Magic's three other starters - Horace Grant, Dennis Scott and Nick Anderson - all scored in double figures while playing just 28 minutes apiece. Hardaway played 31.

Anderson had 16 points as the Magic led from the start to win their sixth straight since the All-Star break.

Van Baker led Milwaukee with 25 points and reserve Marty Conlon added 18.

Spurs 112, Kings 105

At Sacramento, David Robinson scored 34 points as the Spurs handed the Kings their ninth straight defeat. Robinson enjoyed a big first half, scoring 21 points.

Both Mitch Richmond and Olden

Polynice scored 23 points for the Kings. Brian Grant added 21.

Lakers 114, Mavericks 88

With Magic Johnson on the bench with a pulled calf muscle, six players scored in double figures, led by Cedric Ceballos' 27 points.

The visiting Lakers, earning their eighth consecutive victory and 12th in their last 13 games - they're 9-1 with Magic back on the roster - toyed with the Mavericks. Dallas' only bright spot was a league-leading sixth triple-double by guard Jason Kidd, who had 17 points, 10 rebounds and 12 assists.

Suns 110, Raptors 105

At Phoenix, Wesley Person scored 25 points and Elliot Perry 20 as the Suns evened their season record (26-26). They have won 12 of their last 17.

Damon Stoudamire had 13 of his game-high 29 points in the fourth quarter and added 10 assists to give him his 25th double-double of the season for the Raptors.

Timberwolves 94, Pistons 93

At Minneapolis, Isaiah Rider scored 26 points, including the game-winning free throw with 0.4 seconds left.

Tom Gugliotta had 13 points, eight assists and eight rebounds and Kevin Garnett had 12 rebounds for the Wolves, who traded Christian Laettner and Sean Rooks to Atlanta for Andrew Lang and Spud Webb on Thursday.

Grant Hill had 22 points and 13 assists and Allan Houston added 24 points for the Pistons, who battled back from a 20-point first-half deficit.

Pacers 102, 76ers 95

At Indianapolis, reserve Antonio Davis grabbed a career-high 16 rebounds and scored 12 points as Indiana handed the 76ers their sixth consecutive loss.

Rik Smits had 18 points as Indiana had seven players in double figures, while Vernon Maxwell topped Philadelphia with 20 points.

The Pacers held a 62-38 rebounding advantage as the 76ers fell to a league-worst 10-42. Philadelphia's Derrick Coleman sprained his right ankle in the third quarter.

Hornets 100, Bullets 94

Kenny Anderson kept the Hornets had as he scored 22 points, extended Charlotte's winning streak to a season-high five games.

Larry Johnson had 18 points on 8-for-9 shooting for the Hornets.

Washington has lost three straight and nine of 10. The Bullets have dropped four straight at USAir Arena, a season-high.

Hawks 108, Knicks 97

Stacey Augmon, starting in place of Steve Smith (twisted ankle), led Atlanta with 24 points at New York. Mookie Blaylock added 22, Craig Ehlo 18 and Grant Long had 17 points and 15 rebounds.

Christian Laettner, acquired Thursday in a four-player trade with Minnesota, had 12 points and seven rebounds in 24 minutes.

The Knicks, playing without Patrick Ewing (sprained ankle), got 26 points from John Starks, one shy of his season high, and 24 from Anthony Mason, who made his first 10 shots.

HHS boys' golf team leads tourney

The Hereford boys' golf team led a tournament in Fort Stockton after totaling 320 in Friday's round.

Hereford was 10 strokes ahead of Fort Stockton at 330. Ozona was third at 333 and San Angelo Lakeview was fourth at 336. The two-day tournament includes 19 teams.

Hereford's Keith Riley shot a 75 to tie for the lead in the medalist race. The other Herd golfers are: David Sims, 79; Jeremiah Baros, 82; Justin Griffith, 84; and David Farr, 89.

Harvesters handle EP Parkland

The smothering defense of the Pampa boys' basketball team turned a four-point game at halftime into a 79-48 rout of El Paso Parkland Friday night in Seminole.

Pampa, the District 1-4A champion, was playing its first playoff game after a bye in the first round.

Rayford Young poured in 25 points for the Harvesters. Coy Laury added 14 points and grabbed 17 rebounds.

Pampa (29-3) awaits the winner between Sweetwater (28-3) and Burkburnett (25-8), which were to play Saturday.

The Randall boys, the 1-4A runner-up, were to play El Paso Jefferson Saturday night at Odessa College.

The Canyon girls, the champs of 1-4A, were to play Cleburne Saturday afternoon in Abilene.

In Class 1A, Nazareth boys' and girls' team both won. The No. 1 ranked girls beat Allison, 55-21, in the first round of the Region 1-1A Tournament in Levelland. They were to play Spur Saturday morning for the chance to move into the regional finals.

The Nazareth boys beat Spade, 73-54, in a bi-district game. Also in Class A bi-district, Adrian defeated White Deer, 54-48.

Drexler faces surgery

HOUSTON, AP - The Houston Rockets already were struggling for decent playoff position without Magic Eric. Now they'll have to make do without Clyde Drexler, too.

The Rockets said Friday that Drexler, who has been nursing a sore right knee, will have arthroscopic surgery early next week and miss an undetermined amount of time.

"All I can do is be angry about it," Drexler told the Houston Chronicle. "The key is to get it taken care of as soon as possible... Hopefully, everything will work out and I'll be back as quickly as possible."

Team doctor Bruce Moseley said the surgery will be to clean up any possible loose cartilage and look for ligament damage.

The recovery time for arthroscopic surgery can vary from three to 12 weeks. It could be much longer if there are problems with Drexler's anterior cruciate or medial collateral ligament.

Rockets officials did not make a prognosis for Drexler's return. The playoffs begin April 25.

Already without Elie, who isn't expected back before April because of a broken bone in his right forearm, Houston might be in danger of facing the same playoff gauntlet as last year.

If they don't beat the Los Angeles Lakers at The Summit Saturday night, the two-time defending champs would drop to fifth place in the Western Conference. Last year, they started the playoffs No. 6 and never had the home court advantage.

"It's going to be tough without Clyde," said Hakeem Olajuwon. "But as long as we get our injured players back before the playoffs, I think we'll be OK. In the meantime, it will give other players a chance to step up and do the job."

The likely fill-ins for Drexler will be Sam Mack, Tim Breaux and newcomer Jaren Jackson. It's also possible that point guards Eldridge Recasner and Sam Cassell will be on the court at the same time more often.

Wizards battle over name

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) - The NBA contends that allowing Washington's NBA team and Fort Wayne's minor league baseball team to share a nickname shouldn't cause confusion.

After Bullets owner Abe Pollin announced that his team's new name would be the Wizards, Fort Wayne Wizards owner Eric Margenau said he was considering suing for copyright infringement. Fort Wayne is the Minnesota Twins' Class A farm team.

"On one hand, I'm flattered that they would choose a name that we thought was an excellent name, but the bottom line is: That name is our property and we'll protect it just like any other piece of property we have," Margenau said.

But Peter Land, director of marketing for the NBA, said he doubts the Fort Wayne team can claim sole right to the Wizards nickname. Other teams - including the San Francisco Giants in baseball and the New York Giants in football - have shared the same nickname without problems, he said.

Kittles apologizes for abuse

By DAVE IVEY
 Associated Press Writer
 VILLANOVA, Pa. (AP) - Kerry Kittles won't get a proper Villanova curtain call because he made improper phone calls.

The leading scorer on the nation's fourth-ranked team was set to become the Wildcats' career leading scorer Sunday in a nationally televised game against No. 3 Connecticut at a sold-out Spectrum.

But on Thursday, the NCAA suspended the senior swingman for Villanova's last three regular-season games for unauthorized use of a school telephone credit card.

Kittles, the 1995 Big East Player Of The Year, can get the 14 points he needs to surpass Keith Herron's school scoring mark (2,170) at the Big East or NCAA tournament. But the next game he will play in the City of Brotherly Love will be in the NBA.

"I'm totally embarrassed for letting down Villanova University. I hope my teammates, coaches and the fans can forgive me for being so selfish. I'm truly sorry," Kittles said Friday.

"I knew what I was doing was wrong," he said. "I've learned that you have to abide by the rules. I hope that someday I'll regain your trust. I'm human, things happen."

The 6-foot-5, 180-pound New Orleans native didn't say who he had been calling. Athletic director Gene DeFilippo said there were a "significant number of calls over several months."

DeFilippo refused to say how much the charges totaled, but said Kittles and his family repaid the debt in full. He added that legal counsel had advised him not to discuss the specifics of the investigation.

The school self-reported the violation of the NCAA rule that reads: "It's not permissible to allow student-athletes to use a credit card or telephone for personal reasons without charge or at a reduced cost."

DeFilippo said he was made aware of a possible infraction on Monday, met with coach Steve Lappas and Kittles on Tuesday morning and then called the NCAA and Big East. DeFilippo wouldn't say who had informed him.

Baylor hires Stanton as AD

WACO, Texas (AP) - Six months after the NCAA closed the book on a scandal that rocked Baylor University's basketball program, Tom Stanton, a 46-year-old business executive, takes over the school's athletic program.

Baylor's 10-member Faculty Athletic Council made the selection Friday. Stanton, who played basketball and baseball for the Bears, was chosen to lead Baylor's athletic programs from scandal to the Big 12 Conference.

Stanton got the job upon the endorsement of his longtime friend, Baylor president Robert B. Sloan Jr. There was no national search; no one else was interviewed.

He succeeds Dick Ellis, who announced Feb. 2 that he would step down effective May 31.

Stanton, a 1972 Baylor alumnus who spent 22 years with Word Inc., an international Christian communications company.

The scandal resulted in criminal convictions of some former coaches.

"That's in the past, and we can't do anything about that," said Stanton, a one-time point guard who led Baylor in free-throw shooting in

No. 10 Vanderbilt whips Lady Ags

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Sheri Sam's 20 points led four double-digit scorers as No. 10 Vanderbilt roared past visiting Texas A&M 97-78 Friday.

It took less than four minutes for Vanderbilt (20-5) to take an early 15-6 lead.

Paige Redman scored all 12 of her points in the first-half on 4-of-5 shooting from 3-point territory and Sam added 10 points and 7 rebounds to help the Lady Commodores grab a 52-35 halftime lead.

Vanderbilt's lead grew to 83-53 after Na'Sheema Hillmon hit a short jumper midway through the second half.

Sam finished with 20 points, seven rebounds, and seven assists, while freshman Nettie Respondek added a career-high 15 points. Mara Cunningham scored 13.

Lana Tucker led Texas A&M (16-10) with 19, while Lisa Branch added 18 points and 10 assists.

the 1970-71 and 1971-72 seasons. "What we can do is begin the healing process and make sure that we are going forward on all fronts."

"When I use the words honesty and integrity and values, I am talking about making sure we run a clean, highly professional athletic program that people can look at and say these people are doing it right and doing it ethically." Improving women's athletics, intensifying marketing and promotions for all sports and ensuring compliance were among the top priorities of the new athletic director. Stanton, who hadn't negotiated a contract as of Friday, joined Baylor in July 1995 as director of athletic marketing promotions.

Catron County fighting trend to remove cattle from forest

By RICHARD BENKE
Associated Press Writer
DIAMOND BAR RANCH, N.M.
(AP) -- Catron County ranchers say there's a trend toward removing cattle from the Gila National Forest, and the county plans a federal lawsuit to fight it.

Removing some cattle is just fine with environmentalist Susan Schock, director of Gila Watch.

"We have sued in federal court to reduce cattle numbers on the Diamond Bar Ranch. Gila Watch has sued for compliance with federal laws," says Schock.

The Diamond Bar overlaps the Gila Wilderness and Aldo Leopold Wilderness.

The ranch is "one of the most potentially biologically diverse - potentially the premier wilderness area," Schock says. "It's just thrashed by cattle. It would just break your heart to see how degraded this area is."

The Forest Service has ordered rancher Kit Lancy to cut cattle numbers on the Diamond Bar from the nearly 1,200 now permitted to about 300.

Forest Service officials insist their aim is not ousting cattle but managing the land.

"It's not like we're trying to regulate somebody out of business, but it's designed to achieve certain resource objectives that are expected on public lands," says Steve Libby, Gila staff officer for range, wildlife and watershed.

Congressional Grazing Guidelines are clear: "There shall be no curtailments of grazing in wilderness areas simply because an area is or has been designated as wilderness, nor should wilderness designations be used as an excuse by administrators to slowly 'phase out' grazing."

Reductions are allowed as part of normal management processes, the guidelines say, but: "It is anticipated that the numbers of livestock permitted to graze in wilderness would remain at the approximate levels existing at the time an area enters the wilderness system."

For the Diamond Bar, that's 1980 and 1,188 head.

In the 1800s, permitted numbers ranged up to 2,500. After 1900, usage averaged around 2,000 through 1934 when allotted numbers began to drop.

This month, the Forest Service rescinded part of its management plan that would have allowed Lancy to build stock tanks to maintain current Diamond Bar grazing levels. Lancy says that action would knock him down to 300 head permanently.

"If we comply with what they tell us to do, it'll definitely bankrupt us," Lancy says. "It'll cost three counties tax money."

Rancher Matt Schneberger, vice president of the Gila Permits Association and Lancy's neighbor, says the Forest Service is ruining Catron County.

"It's rural genocide," Schneberger says. "They'll rip the heart out of our community before they'll admit they're wrong."

Also affected would be Grant and Sierra counties.

Lancy says the Forest Service objective is to remove all cattle from his ranch.

"It's very obvious. Like I say, if we adhere to their decision, we're out of business. It goes back to the bank."

Catron County Manager Danny Fryar, who runs 58 cattle on a Gila permit, agrees the trend is cattle removal.

"The laws are on the books and they're not complying with them," Fryar says of the Forest Service.

Catron County is preparing a lawsuit similar to one recently upheld by the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Fryar says the appellate court ruled the impact on Catron County must be considered under the National Environmental Policy Act, or NEPA, in federal land management decisions. That lawsuit had been filed against the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Fryar says about 15 other ranchers' permits are being renewed at the same time, and all are unhappy about Forest Service terms.

"I think it starts with the Diamond Bar. If they're able to manipulate their desires there on that allotment, what's to stop them from going right through the county?" he says.

"That's the direction they're headed." If Catron County loses its Gila ranches, it would be a double hit for a county that lost nearly $500,000 in annual revenue when its logging industry folded four years ago amid environmental challenges involving the Mexican spotted owl. Fryar says his own logging business died.

About 36,000 cattle graze in Catron County, down from about 44,000 in 1990, Fryar says.

But Schock contends the number of cattle grazing on Forest Service permits in the county has increased by 650.

The county gets about $4 a head in property taxes, Fryar says. In 1990, that brought in nearly $200,000. In 1996, it might come to less than $150,000 toward the county's $1.15 million budget, Fryar says.

"We have a pretty small tax base here to start with, and cattle are a big part of that," he says. "Our total revenue from property tax is only $480,000."

Local officials have even discussed disbanding Catron County and merging it with another county, he says.

Fryar says he's encouraged by the 10th Circuit ruling. He says the next lawsuit will be similar, except the defendant will be the Forest Service instead of the Fish and Wildlife Service.

"It feels good to know the courts aren't going to back up these federal agencies on NEPA. It means Fish and Wildlife is going to have to consult the county."

"When they come to us and include us in the planning, that's when you'll see it'll be done a little bit differently," he predicts. "They'll have to consider our culture, customs and economic stability."

Swine show, sale scheduled

The 1996 Chester White, Spotted, Duroc and Yorkshire National and Southwestern joint type conference will be held at the Panhandle South Plains Fairgrounds Swine Barn in Lubbock on March 7-9.

There will be 400 head of registered boars, open gilts, and bred gilts exhibited at this event (expected from 18 states).

Performance figures will be furnished on all boars. Interstate health certificates and pedigrees will be furnished on all animals.

Each breed will have separate show and sales. The Spotted sale will be held March 8, and the Chester White, Duroc and Yorkshire sales will be on March 7.

For more information contact Dan Parrish at (309) 691-0151.

Dust, dust, dust

Farmers around the Hereford area are getting ready for spring planting, as temperatures warm and the seasons prepare to change. However, a dearth of rain the past several months has left fields susceptible to blowing dirt. Forecasters have predicted windy conditions all this week when winds are to be from the north at 10-20 mph.

Emergency farm loans offered by FSA

Applications for emergency farm loans for damages and losses caused by prolonged and continuous drought, late freezing temperatures, and hail, which occurred from Jan. 1-Sept. 5, and continuing, are being accepted at the Farm Service Agency (FSA) office in Hereford.

Deaf Smith County is one of 6 in Texas recently named by Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman eligible for loans to cover part of actual production losses resulting from the damages and losses caused by the prolonged and continuous drought, late freezing temperatures and hail.

Applications for loans under the emergency designation will be accepted until Oct. 9. Delays in processing and possibly over into the new farming season.

FSA is a credit agency of the U.S.

Department of Agriculture. It is authorized to provide disaster emergency loans to recognized farmers who work at and rely on farming for a substantial part of their living.

Eligibility is extended to individual farmers who are U.S. Citizens and to farming partnerships, corporations or cooperatives in which the U.S. citizens hold a majority interest.

New Mexico Agricultural Expo to be held

Roosevelt County is gearing up for the New Mexico Agricultural Expo Feb. 27-29, with more than 250 exhibitors scheduled for the event.

Trade Show hours will be from noon until 5 p.m. on Feb. 27, and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Feb. 28 & 29.

The opening night will feature the Farm/City/ENMU Banquet, Feb. 27 at 7 p.m. in the Campus Union Ballroom.

Baxter Black, cowboy humorist, will be on hand dispensing wit and wisdom about cowboy life.

Tickets are now on sale for $20 advance purchase and $23 at the door.

Seminars and demonstrations will include a hands-on workshop on range cow body condition scoring, livestock handling equipment demos, animal health product and equipment demos, and a seminar in commodities futures and contracts marketing.

Orin Bares, three time winner of the Texas Championship Sheep Dog Trials, will give training seminars for stock dogs. Times for all seminars will be detailed in the Ag Expo guide book.

Traditional chuckwagon meals will be offered by the Hammond Chuckwagon and Jerry Slaton, chuckwagon cook.

An antique tractor pull competition will be added to this year's expo.

For more information about any New Mexico Agricultural Expo event contact the Roosevelt County Chamber of Commerce at 356-8541 or 1-800-635-8036.

Coyote becomes nuisance to Dallas/Fort Worth citizens

By BARRY SHLACHTER
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Texas - With dead porch cats and pet poodles hanging from their mouths, they have been spotted in posh neighborhoods. They have gnawed wiring on runway lights at Dallas/Fort Worth Airport, prowled an Arlington golf course and killed sheep in Benbrook.

The urban coyote, a brazen, highly adaptable creature, is an ever-growing presence in Tarrant County, which the joint state-federal Animal Damage Control Program calls one of its busiest nonrural areas in Texas.

Almost 550 coyotes were removed last year from the area between Eagle Mountain Lake and Alliance Airport, a partially wooded stretch providing an ideal habitat, said Jan Lovens, who heads the animal program's Fort Worth regional office.

But the species is undeterred by asphalt.

Last month, one bold carnivore coolly entered the Elite Nails and Tanning Salon in far west Fort Worth. "He just jumped through the front door and settled in the back," manager Nick Chau said.

Frightened customers slipped outside, where they waited until police arrived.

Texas' coyote population apparently dropped between 1950 and 1970, a decline some attribute to drought and others to a concerted effort at controlling the population. Yet researchers and animal control officers agree that the numbers have rebounded and that the coyote's territory has expanded.

The increase, they say, is due to a steep drop in demand for coyote pelts because of changing fashions and anti-fur campaigns, combined with the species' adaptability.

There are more coyotes now than a century ago, said Don Steinbach, 52, associate department head for wildlife and fisheries at the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. And, unlike other wildlife, coyotes thrive even when their natural habitat is invaded by man.

"It's not that they're attracted to cities, but the urban areas are really going to the coyotes," said wildlife photographer Wyman Meinzer, 45, who has tracked and observed coyotes for three decades.

Anger among ranchers, concern by state officials and a desire by academics to put the problem in perspective prompted a two-day conference on coyotes of the Southwest in December.

As the consummate survivalist, the coyote amazes naturalists. "It's been said they're the cockroach of the mammals - just everywhere," Steinbach noted. The coyote is bicostal. In recent years, sightings have been recorded in both Los Angeles and the Bronx.

In the countryside, coyotes can live off rabbits and cotton mice, mesquite beans and prickly pear or, to the consternation of farmers, market-ready cantaloupes and watermelons.

In urban areas, there is always garbage or, alas, the pet pooch. The owner of a schnauzer watched in disbelief as the dog was jerked from its leash and carried off by a coyote in a residential area of Eagle Mountain Lake, Lovens reported at the conference, which was held in San Angelo. Larger dogs might be attacked by packs of coyotes.

In Arlington, a resident reported seeing a coyote leap a fence with a poodle in its mouth, and other coyotes raised their young on a golf course in a developed area, Lovens said.

But many North Texas municipalities do not permit hunting or trapping of coyotes within city limits, Lovens said.

The acreage around airport runways is perfect for raising young and concealment, said Lovens, who recalled nuisance complaints about coyotes that gnawed wiring for lights along D/FW Airport landing strips.

In Texas, coyotes have taken over the habitat of the red wolf through interbreeding, "swamping the gene pool" by romancing the wolf out of existence in the wild, Steinbach said.

"Coyotes are very adaptive, creative, very resourceful, elusive and not very easy to trap," said Monte Chandler, a wildlife biologist with the animal control program. "All these things lead to survivability. It's a magnificent animal. On the other hand, they do cause problems."

Scientists importing embryos for superior genetics in cattle

WASHINGTON (AP) - Government scientists are importing embryos of a pure breed of Venezuelan cattle in hopes of providing Southern beef producers a herd with superior genetic traits.

The 143 Romosinuano embryos will be implanted in "surrogate mother" cows at the Agriculture Department's Agricultural Research Service laboratory in Brooksville, Fla.

"Beef producers in this (Southern) region need heat-tolerant and pest-resistant cattle, but they also want quick-maturing breeds to keep feed costs low," said USDA scientist Chadwick C. Chase Jr., who brought the embryos in from Caracas.

"The Romosinuano combines these desirable traits better than existing domestic breeds," said Chase, an animal physiologist for the Agricultural Research Service.

In comparison, Chase said, Brahman cattle can tolerate the South's steamy temperatures and high parasite populations. But Brahman females may take up to a year longer to reach sexual maturity and reproduce, adding to a rancher's overhead. Too, tenderness of Brahman beef is known to vary.

This is the first time cattle embryos have been imported from a country where foot-and-mouth disease is still active, Chase said. This disease can cause devastating economic losses. The United States has not had an outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease since 1929, although Canada had an outbreak in 1953.

To protect domestic herds, researchers took many precautions, Chase said. The parent animals, chosen from Venezuelan herds, were quarantined and tested during breeding to make sure they were free of foot-and-mouth disease. In addition, researchers washed the embryos according to USDA regulations to ensure they remained disease-free.

These precautions followed years of research and diagnostic investigations at USDA's Plum Island Animal Disease Center. There, scientists with ARS and the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service developed protocols that allow importation of embryos to improve American cattle herds.

Unlike embryos imported from Costa Rica in 1990, the Venezuelan embryos come from a pure line of Romosinuano.

Researchers want pure Romosinuano animals from Venezuela to diversify the U.S. gene pool, Chase said. Future generations from these animals may be made available to South American cattle producers who want to preserve the breed, he added.

"A more diverse herd allows us a more accurate picture of how well suited the breed is to the demands of U.S. ranchers in warm climates," said Chase, who works at the Brooksville laboratory which USDA-ARS operates in cooperation with the University of Florida. "We will evaluate reproductive traits, such as age at puberty, and carcass traits such as tenderness."

Ranching seminars to be held in Austin

Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association's School for Successful Ranching will be held at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Austin on March 23-24.

Classes in business management; beef management; and range pasture and wildlife management will be offered in three concurrent sessions on both days.

An intermediate Quicken workshop is also available, but limited to 20 participants per session.

Courses on the beef management session include practical topics such as how to control cow herd feeding expenses, a comparison of cow-calf producer's out-of-pocket expenses, why vaccinations may fail and a discussion of value-added marketing programs.

Agrisoft, Inc. of San Antonio, is sponsoring the Quicken workshop. Registration is $50 per person and participants are encouraged to register in advance.

For more information, contact Sharla Adams or Lionel Chambers at (817) 332-7155.

Agriculture Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mention the words "trade" and "Japan" in the same sentence and a typical American is likely to have a negative reaction. After all, much of this country's trade deficit is caused by the difficulty U.S. manufacturers have in selling their goods in the Asian nation.

But farmers may have a different reaction. The Agriculture Department says Japan is the leading export market for U.S.-produced consumer farm products.

During the 10 months ended last October, the value of such exports to Japan climbed 23 percent to a record $4.4 billion, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service reported. Japanese imports of U.S. fresh, frozen and chilled red meat jumped 37 percent. Shipments of fresh fruit also rose.

The value of all U.S. consumer food exports was $15.4 billion during the period, up from $13.7 billion a year earlier.

Canada, the second-largest importer of U.S. agricultural products, bought $3.5 billion worth during the 10 months, an increase of 8 percent. Sales to Mexico dropped 42 percent, to $764 million, because of a sharp drop in the value of the peso and reduced consumer purchasing power.

Exports of four of the 16 consumer food categories reached annual record levels during the period, with six others expected to hit record marks during the last two months of 1995, the report said.

South Korea is likely to emerge as the No. 2 market for U.S. fresh, frozen and chilled red meat this year; shipments during the 10-month period were up 50 percent. USDA credited a recent settlement with the Koreans over the issue of shelf life of meats.

Cowboys' Sanders does everything first class

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - Strange business this professional sports.
When Deion Sanders decided he was going to take a vacation from baseball, it was news much too big for a Valley Ranch setting.
The press conference took place at his own nightclub, "Prime Time 21" in north Dallas where we're told the cover can reach $15 a head on Saturday nights.
You pull into the parking lot and where you might normally see handicapped parking, you see the first two places reserved for Deion his ownself. "Prime Time 21" is splashed in paint on these two places.

Even for his own press conference, security was tight. One reporter had his name, picture and organization on a card and he was told he needed some other identification.
The place was modeled Greek style and there was even a picture of Deion his ownself hanging from a wall without his shirt on. Didn't get that one. Thought I would see Deion in football and baseball gear somewhere.
Deion was in coat and tie - no toga - for the press conference with one of the most beautiful women in America, his wife Caroline, at his side. She would definitely outshine a Greek goddess.

Now, this was a press conference with some style. Deion even had a little feed for the famished press afterward. This very smart businessman knows how to score points even if the marble in the building was fake.
It beat any Cowboys press conference in a dimming three decades memory for pure class. When Don Meredith retired, the Cowboys had the press conference in what amounted to a broom closet in the building on Central Expressway.
Roger Staubach retiring was a big

Texas Stadium production, but certainly wasn't held by the player at his own establishment.
The expense? Nobody knows if Deion made owner Jerry Jones pay for it.
If Deion didn't, he should have.
On a day cornerback Larry Brown cashed in his Super Bowl MVP award with a move to the Oakland Raiders, the Cowboys got a full-time cornerback and wide receiver starting in July.
Previously Sanders hadn't been available for the NFL until late September, having played baseball every season starting in 1989. The most time he had ever spent in a training camp was two weeks once with the Atlanta Falcons.

This was a blockbuster event for the Cowboys, who now won't have to worry that much about another wide receiver or another cornerback in the draft. They need some depth but there's no telling what having Deion full-time will mean to the team.
"This was a big, big day for us," said a smiling Larry Laceywell, of the scouting department. "It took a lot of pressure off of us. Now I ask you, who will have three better receivers than Michael Irvin, Kevin Williams and Deion Sanders?"
Laceywell said the Cowboys can now focus on their primary area of concern, linebacking, where the free agent foragers could cause some havoc.

"We could be looking hard at finding some linebackers and it will be difficult because there aren't that many good ones in the draft," Laceywell said. "But Deion did us a big favor by taking the pressure off with his early announcement. We must be living right."
With press conferences at posh pleasure palaces, it would seem the Cowboys are certainly living well.
Back in the old days, Randy White or Walt Garrison would have held their press conference at a barbecue joint.

Biggio may keep Astros in Houston

By TERRY BLOUNT
Houston Chronicle
HOUSTON - Few professional athletes ever will be in the position in which Craig Biggio found himself last fall. He was a free agent in high demand, receiving numerous big-money offers from teams that were treating him as if he were a visiting head of state instead of a second baseman.
That part of his scenario is something hundreds of players have experienced in the era of multimillion-dollar deals and freedom to choose the one they find most appealing.

the peak of his athletic skills. He had his best season last year when he was the starter on the NL All-Star team, finishing 1995 with a .302 average and a career-best 22 homers and 77 runs batted in while leading the National League in runs scored with 123.
What can he do to top those numbers?
"I sort of keep those goals to myself," he said. "But the only real goal I have is to win. We were one game short (of the playoffs) last year and were playing great in 1994 before the strike."
"Those things leave a bad taste in your mouth. When you get that close, you want to get over the hump. Last year, a lot of things happened that the team had to deal with, things that were hard on everybody."
The Astros were a team on the rise in 1994, battling Cincinnati for the division lead when the strike began in August. The Astros traded starters Ken Caminiti, Steve Finley and Andujar Cedeño in the offseason mega-deal with San Diego that brought Derek Bell to Houston, but some of the team had been ripped away in the loss of Caminiti.
Despite the changes, the Astros were in the playoff hunt again last year, but injuries to Jeff Bagwell and Bell late in the season proved costly. The team also suffered through internal strife over the addition of former replacement players Craig McMurtrey and Dave Hajek.
In the end, the Astros came down to the final day of the regular season with a playoff spot on the line. Houston made a dramatic comeback to defeat the Cubs in Chicago, but it fell one game short when Colorado came from behind to beat San Francisco.
The results of the last two seasons have been painful for Biggio, who desperately wants to see the Astros reach the World Series. He sincerely believes this team is capable of getting there.
"We went into spring training in 1994 a lot like we are going into this one," Biggio said. "We knew who the starters were and what the rotation would be. The difference is this team will have a lot more experience than that one had. Just about everyone we're counting on now has a few years under his belt."
"So I'm pretty excited about this season. I look at the team we have and I see as good an opportunity as anybody in our division. I know it's an old cliché, but if we can stay healthy, we can win it."

Biggio realizes there is more at stake this season than wins and losses on the field. Whether the team stays in Houston will be determined by how well the team performs and how many people pay to see it.
Of course, one has a major impact on the other. The more the team wins, the more paying customers it can attract. But a slow start or a losing record could be a serious blow to the attendance goals.
And that's an added pressure the players don't need.
"You can't let yourself look at it that way," Biggio said. "You are going to go through some good times and some bad times over the course of a 162-game schedule."
"We can't control what happens to the club off the field. All we can control is what happens between the white lines. We hope we get off to a good start, but the Reds didn't have a good start last year and look what happened. It's a long season."
The Reds ran away with the Central Division last season, mainly because they defeated the Astros in 12 of 13 meetings. But the Reds lost key players Ron Gant, Benito Santiago and David Wells in the offseason.
Gant signed with the St. Louis Cardinals, who hired Tony La Russa as their new manager. Along with Gant, the Cardinals beefed up their club by adding third baseman Gary Gaetti, pitchers Andy Benes and Todd Stottlemyre, and shortstop Royce Clayton. The Reds offered Biggio a $25 million deal to join them before Biggio agreed to a contract with the Astros worth $22.36 million.
On paper, it would appear the Reds have fallen back to the pack while the Cardinals have taken a step up.
"I don't see it that way for one reason: It's on paper," Biggio said.
Biggio listed the Cardinals as one of four finalists in his decision-making process about where he wanted to play. Colorado and San Diego also were in the race with the Astros, but the Rockies are the team that Biggio seriously considered.
"I'm not sure what to expect when we go to those cities," Biggio said. "It could be a little different and I might get a few boos, but you can't make everybody happy. It will be interesting to see how it plays out."

Biggio is confident this season is going to play out well for Houston. In fact, he is so confident things are going to work out that he and his wife Patty recently bought a new home in West University.
After spending most of the offseason at their home in New Jersey, they returned to Houston a few days ago to begin the move.
"I've been back in town a week, and I've never heard so much talk about baseball this time of year," Biggio said. "It's real encouraging."
It was discouraging to Biggio and his teammates last season when the team was in the heat of a playoff race in late September but the paid crowds at the Dome were less than 15,000 most nights, and the actual attendance was less than 10,000.
"If we can get 25,000 a night instead of 9,000 or 10,000 it will make a world of difference," Biggio said. "There's an electricity that builds in the Dome when you have a good crowd. It really can create a spark and lead to a true home-field advantage."
"I can give you an example of what just one game like that can do. When (Hideo) Nomo pitched here, we had 39,000 people in the stands and we played a great game."
Doug Drabek and the Astros defeated Nomo and the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-0 on July 25 in front of what proved to be the largest crowd of the season.
Biggio knows the Astros need a lot of crowds like that this season if they hope to continue to call the Astrodome their home. But Biggio decided to make a commitment to the Astros, and now he is asking the fans to do the same.
"I'm very happy with the decision I made," Biggio said. "All I would say to the fans is to come out and watch us. Just give us a chance. I think they will like what they see."

Maybe the Astros would have survived if Biggio had signed with another team, but they have a much better chance of staying in Houston with him than without him.
Owner Drayton McLane says the team needs to draw 2.5 million fans this season to keep him from possibly selling the team to someone who would move it elsewhere. Had Biggio signed with another team, the chances of reaching such lofty attendance goals would have been greatly diminished.
So Biggio carried a rare burden in his decision-making process about where he would play baseball. In the end, he opted to stay for many reasons - love of his teammates, love of the city and a good chance to win a championship.
But in the eyes of this community and its fans, Biggio will be viewed as a man who had a choice of jumping off a ship that might sink or staying on board and trying to keep it afloat. Biggio elected to start bailing water, and it has given the Astros a chance to keep sailing in Houston.
"The people here have been great to me," Biggio said. "It's a special place for me. I have two children who were born here, and I've been a part of this organization for a long time."
"I've put my heart and soul into this team. We haven't won yet, but we've been so close. We were on our way in 1994 before the strike, and we were one game away last year."
At age 30, Biggio appears to be at the peak of his athletic skills. He had his best season last year when he was the starter on the NL All-Star team, finishing 1995 with a .302 average and a career-best 22 homers and 77 runs batted in while leading the National League in runs scored with 123.

What can he do to top those numbers?
"I sort of keep those goals to myself," he said. "But the only real goal I have is to win. We were one game short (of the playoffs) last year and were playing great in 1994 before the strike."
"Those things leave a bad taste in your mouth. When you get that close, you want to get over the hump. Last year, a lot of things happened that the team had to deal with, things that were hard on everybody."
The Astros were a team on the rise in 1994, battling Cincinnati for the division lead when the strike began in August. The Astros traded starters Ken Caminiti, Steve Finley and Andujar Cedeño in the offseason mega-deal with San Diego that brought Derek Bell to Houston, but some of the team had been ripped away in the loss of Caminiti.
Despite the changes, the Astros were in the playoff hunt again last year, but injuries to Jeff Bagwell and Bell late in the season proved costly. The team also suffered through internal strife over the addition of former replacement players Craig McMurtrey and Dave Hajek.
In the end, the Astros came down to the final day of the regular season with a playoff spot on the line. Houston made a dramatic comeback to defeat the Cubs in Chicago, but it fell one game short when Colorado came from behind to beat San Francisco.
The results of the last two seasons have been painful for Biggio, who desperately wants to see the Astros reach the World Series. He sincerely believes this team is capable of getting there.
"We went into spring training in 1994 a lot like we are going into this one," Biggio said. "We knew who the starters were and what the rotation would be. The difference is this team will have a lot more experience than that one had. Just about everyone we're counting on now has a few years under his belt."
"So I'm pretty excited about this season. I look at the team we have and I see as good an opportunity as anybody in our division. I know it's an old cliché, but if we can stay healthy, we can win it."

Biggio realizes there is more at stake this season than wins and losses on the field. Whether the team stays in Houston will be determined by how well the team performs and how many people pay to see it.
Of course, one has a major impact on the other. The more the team wins, the more paying customers it can attract. But a slow start or a losing record could be a serious blow to the attendance goals.
And that's an added pressure the players don't need.
"You can't let yourself look at it that way," Biggio said. "You are going to go through some good times and some bad times over the course of a 162-game schedule."
"We can't control what happens to the club off the field. All we can control is what happens between the white lines. We hope we get off to a good start, but the Reds didn't have a good start last year and look what happened. It's a long season."
The Reds ran away with the Central Division last season, mainly because they defeated the Astros in 12 of 13 meetings. But the Reds lost key players Ron Gant, Benito Santiago and David Wells in the offseason.
Gant signed with the St. Louis Cardinals, who hired Tony La Russa as their new manager. Along with Gant, the Cardinals beefed up their club by adding third baseman Gary Gaetti, pitchers Andy Benes and Todd Stottlemyre, and shortstop Royce Clayton. The Reds offered Biggio a $25 million deal to join them before Biggio agreed to a contract with the Astros worth $22.36 million.
On paper, it would appear the Reds have fallen back to the pack while the Cardinals have taken a step up.
"I don't see it that way for one reason: It's on paper," Biggio said.
Biggio listed the Cardinals as one of four finalists in his decision-making process about where he wanted to play. Colorado and San Diego also were in the race with the Astros, but the Rockies are the team that Biggio seriously considered.
"I'm not sure what to expect when we go to those cities," Biggio said. "It could be a little different and I might get a few boos, but you can't make everybody happy. It will be interesting to see how it plays out."

Biggio is confident this season is going to play out well for Houston. In fact, he is so confident things are going to work out that he and his wife Patty recently bought a new home in West University.

'Woman of Year' will be named as highlight of luncheon

The "Club Woman of the Year" will be named during the Annual Appreciation Luncheon sponsored by the Deaf Smith County Family Community Education Council on Monday in the Hereford Community Center.

Special motivational speaker for the luncheon will be Gavin Gadberry, attorney, from Amarillo. Gadberry is a native of the Texas Panhandle and will present a tribute to the Panhandle.

Members of the Rotary Club will be special guests for the event. Nominees for the "Club Woman of the Year" award, which is sponsored for the 45th year by The Hereford Brand, are recognized for their leadership, growth and development in extension club work and their involvement in the community, church and family.

The nominees submitted resumes which were judged by two out-of-county FCE club members.

Jo Lee of the Wyche Family Community Education Club was last year's "Club Woman of the Year" recipient.

FCE club members who have had perfect attendance at the monthly council meetings will receive a special presentation. Those who have had perfect attendance at the club meetings will also be recognized.

Members who have been in club work for fifty years or more will be presented roses and certificates.

Nominees for "Club Woman of the Year" who have been submitted by their individual clubs are Alta Mae Higgins of Bippus FCE Club, Nell Pope of Cultural FCE Club, Tonic Vaughn of Draper FCE Club, Loretta Urbanczyk of Ford FCE Club, Martha Lueb of North Hereford FCE Club and Shirley Brown of Wyche FCE Club.

Alta Mae Higgins represents the Bippus FCE Club as Woman of the Year candidate. Alta Mae grew up in a rural home with a mother who was also a member of Home Demonstrations Clubs.

From this early beginning, Alta Mae learned the importance of food nutrition, how to preserve food and the importance of good homemaking skills.

The values that were learned are cited by Alta Mae as serving her well through 34 years of teaching and having a family of her own.

She feels that her membership in Bippus Club has kept her current with up-to-date information while still emphasizing the importance of love, warmth and sharing responsibilities with each other.

She has contributed her talents and energies in nursing homes, in teaching other club members, working with the adopted neighbor program and holding community gatherings and being a support in the community.

Alta Mae is an active member of the First Baptist Church of Hereford. She is a member of Hereford Senior Citizens, the "Young at Heart" choir and the Retired School Employees Association.

She cites her hobbies as cooking and caring for others. She is applauded by her club members as an example of "what extension work is all about"--family, community and education.

Cultural Family Community Education Club presents Nell Pope as their Woman of the Year nominee.

Nell has been a member of Cultural FCE Club for 16 years during which time she has served in officer positions and leadership positions on County Council. She currently serves her club as president and historian and is chairman of the recreation committee for County Council.

Nell's enthusiasm for club work has been an inspiration for other members to increase their participation and she has been responsible for recruiting new members. Nell states that her work in FCE club and on council has taught her leadership skills.

She is accomplished in needle work and as a seamstress. She shares her talents in these areas by giving programs to other clubs and organizations.

Nell enjoys exhibiting her canning, baking and textiles skills and has won numerous honors at the Tri State Fair.

Nell is married to George Pope. Her four children, eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild benefit not only from her love but also from her hobbies of cooking, sewing, crocheting and cake decorating.

Support group for parents of ADD/ADHD patients planned

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Two years ago, Carla Keener's son was having difficulty in school.

His grades suffered and his behavior was distracting to the other children and caused trouble for the teacher.

Then Keener learned the truth -- his inability to concentrate on school work and his difficulty in staying in one place were caused by Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder, not simple disobedience.

Now Keener wants to help other Hereford parents who may have a child diagnosed with either ADHD or its sister ailment, Attention Deficit Disorder.

Keener has announced the formation of an ADD/ADHD Support Group that will hold its organizational meeting this week.

The session will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 29, in the Hereford ISD administration building.

The support group is open to anyone who has a child diagnosed with ADD or ADHD, or who is interested in the disorders.

Keener said parents are asked to attend the session without their children, as child care will not be available.

People who need information about the support group may call Keener at 364-4408.

She said the intent of the group is to offer support to parents of ADD/ADHD patients and to help them gather information that will help in the treatment and raising of their children.

"You put a group of us together and we can share ideas" that parents "hopefully (will) be able to take home with them and help their children," she said.

Keener said she will attempt to bring special speakers to future support group meetings to give updated information on the conditions.

Simply put, Keener said, ADD/ADHD is defined as being that a child has "a difficult time paying attention. They have an inability to follow directions."

The difference between ADD and ADHD, she said, is that one child not only cannot concentrate on instructions or focus on what he is doing, he also cannot remain still.

The disorders, she said, are usually diagnosed in first grade, when the inability to focus on tasks becomes apparent at school.

She said a child with either syndrome cannot respond to a multiple command such as "I want you to pick up your tennis shoes, then put away your coat, then come to dinner."

That child, she said, will only hear the first instruction. Instead, instructions must be very specific and very simple, because "it's only going to cause frustration in the child."

TERRI DEBORD, ROBBY JENNINGS

Engagement announced

Martha DeBord of Hereford and Claude DeBord of Clarendon announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Terri Lee, to William Robert Jennings Jr.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Robert Jennings of Pflugerville.

The couple plans to marry June 15, in the First Presbyterian Church in Hereford.

The bride-elect is a 1991 graduate of Hereford High School and a 1995 graduate of West Texas A&M University.

She is currently employed by the Hereford Independent School District as a substitute teacher.

The prospective groom is a 1988 graduate of Pflugerville High School and a 1992 graduate of WTAMU.

He is currently attending Baylor College of Dentistry in Dallas.

The couple was recently honored with an informal engagement party hosted by Randy and Lynn Kriegshauser, Gary and Betty Kriegshauser, and Wesley and Jane Gulley.

of Christ she can be found working as needed in the church and also contributing to Senior Citizens. Nell has branched the future of FCE clubs with her energetic contributions.

Exemplifying the pioneer spirit is Tonia Vaughn of the Draper Club.

The caring spirit of pioneers that branched the settlement of the Plains is seen in Tonia each day. She is well known for her gifts of food, expressions of kindness and phone calls to check on the safety and well being of others.

Tonia cites the past 16 years as an FCE member as being a personal growth time--growth of self esteem, growth of leadership and growth in working on a local and district level.

She is the mother of seven children and enjoys being an active grandmother. She can be found serving as a volunteer working with youth in many of the activities in which her grandchildren participate.

Tonia states that the great thing about FCE is that you can set your own level of involvement and get there at your own pace. The level of involvement that Tonia has chosen has benefited her club, community and family.

She feels that the FCE organization helps members realize potential that might otherwise have gone untapped. Serving as president and reporter of her club and as reporter for County Council have helped Tonia tap the abilities in leadership she possesses.

Loretta Urbanczyk has been a member of the Ford FCE Club for three years.

She served as vice president of the Ford club this past year and has served as chairman on various club committees. She has devoted her time in helping with the club fund raiser and preparing for the Appreciation Luncheon.

Dedicated and caring are words that describe Loretta as she always seems to be busy helping others. She is a volunteer for Crown of Texas Hospice and spends time each week making others feel better.

She is a supporter of the Deaf Smith County 4-H program and has worked diligently with the 4-H Parent's Association as treasurer for several years. She has served as an adult leader for 15 years and received the District One 4-H Leadership Award in 1994.

Loretta is currently serving as Ford FCE Club president and as treasurer for the FCE Council.

An active member of the St. Anthony's Catholic Church, Loretta is chairman for the funeral dinner committee. She is currently serving as a member of the Family Living committee for the Deaf Smith County Extension Service.

Loretta explains, "If each household would practice what the FCE Creed states, our country would be much better off. FCE is best explained by their emblem. The hearth symbolizes the home (comfort, peace and protection), the oak leaf (strength of home), and lamp of knowledge (the wisdom with which a home and family must be created)."

Ford FCE Club believes that Loretta has also been a symbol, one that all FCE club members would like to follow.

North Hereford FCE Club is honored to have Martha Lueb as their Club Woman of the Year nominee for 1995.

Club members have cited her as being a caring person in all areas who works diligently to carry out duties successfully as a dedicated member of our community.

Martha is a 30 year member, has served the North Hereford FCE Club as secretary for six years and has represented her club as Council Delegate for nine years.

She has given many hours to volunteer service, contributed to the growth of the club and served on the recreation committee this past year. Martha has been active in FCE fund raiser activities and assisted with the Appreciation Banquet.

She actively serves her community at all county elections, works at the Senior Citizens Center each day and delivers meals to those less fortunate. Many of her volunteer hours are spent working on the Festival of Trees each year to help benefit the Senior Citizens Center.

She is an officer in St. Anthony's Organization and a greeter at the church door.

Martha has stated, "North Hereford club means a lot to me. I have learned so much from other club members."

Martha's hobbies include needle craft and quilting and she enjoys playing bridge and other card games.

Wyche FCE Club is honored to present Shirley Brown as Club Woman of the Year nominee.

Shirley is a seven year member of Deaf Smith FCE and was also a member in Lynn and Lubbock counties.

Shirley credits her mother with assisting her in 4-H in learning the skills that have sustained her and assisted her in raising three boys.

She is president of the Wyche club and serves on various committees in her club and on the Education Committee for FCE Council.

Shirley is a busy worker in the First Baptist Church as she participates in Sunday School, WMU, Bible study and sings in the Senior Citizens and Golden Tones choir. She also serves as an officer of Eastern Star.

She keeps busy with hobbies of ceramics, line dancing, sewing and making quilts.

Shirley was one of the first students in the Licensed Vocational Nurses Training classes in Hereford. She states that this was a personal accomplishment since she graduated at 46. She worked for the hospital for 31 years until her retirement.

She says that she feels one can become self-educated and with a "positive attitude" can accomplish anything with a little tenacity and hard work.

Shirley has taken her training and updated knowledge from FCE and taught lessons on nutrition, health and home safety in her club.

Shirley's club members value her dedication, skills and devotion to her volunteer work as she leads them to like attributes.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Reading makes immigrants of us all-it takes us away from home, but more important, it finds homes for us everywhere. - H. Rochman, Against Borders

Students who passed all parts of the TAAS practice will be recognized by receiving a ticket to a Hawaiian Swimming Party Friday night. These tickets are compliments of the Hereford Aquatic Center.

Monday is the last day for participation in the penny war among teams at HJH. Each team has been collecting pennies in large water bottles. The winning team, with the most money in pennies, will receive a free swim day at the Aquatic Center. The money will be donated to "Build On The Dream" for the Aquatic Center Park.

Plans for School-Parent Compact include regular parent meetings, a parent resource center and a mentor program for students. A parent meeting is scheduled for March 19.

A Strike Force Assembly will be held Tuesday morning. This program has been proclaimed America's number one assembly program. It will address the five major issues among youth today: alcohol use and abuse, drug use and abuse, suicide contemplation, premarital sex and peer pressure/self esteem. These topics are discussed in a very serious, but sometimes humorous nature. The overall theme is "You Are Special!" This program is sponsored and funded by the Youth Ministerial Alliance.

Report cards will be given out Monday. Parents, please sign and return these as soon as possible. If your student does not have his or her card, please ask them about it!

Students are having some type of TAAS preparation in practically every class during each week. English and math classes, in particular, are spending a tremendous amount of time in this area.

We invite you to visit our campus to observe what our, and your, youth are accomplishing. However, we do have an important request in this area--be sure to check in at the office before your visit. This is important for the safety of each child.

Diedra Drake and I plan to attend the One Hundredth Annual Meeting of the Texas State Historical Association Feb. 29-March 2 in Austin. From the vast amount of sessions to attend, we hope to have much to share with our students and department.

Thanks so much to my school "family" for their constant support during these days of Don's illness. It is great to have fellow teachers "cover" for you at a moment's notice, check daily on our progress and share some important hugs. My student's have been wonderful, also, and I thank them, too. It's great to be a part of the HISD family!

Spend some time reading with your child. Even junior high students still like to be read to!

Thank You

The Dawn Community & Volunteer Fire Dept. would like to thank everyone for their support of the Chili Supper. A special thanks to the women of Dawn who donated the desserts.

The Fire Dept. would also like to thank Connie Waker for the entertainment, Earnest Brown and the Forestry Service for their donation of a 6-X-Truck and thanks to Chris Cabbiness of BJM for the donation of an 86 Mack.

We hope everyone had an enjoyable evening and we look forward to serving you next year.

Never miss an important phone call again!

Getting married and managing a career can make life pretty hectic. That's why Shannon Hacker Redwine has been depending on her cellular phone and XIT Cellular so much!

As office manager for Foster Electronics of Hereford, she oversees a very demanding schedule generated by the local computer company's growing clientele.

And since she recently added a new last name to her list of accomplishments, she freely admits that her need for a cellular phone hasn't always been business related.

"I'd say I use my cellular phone 50-50 between business and personal calls," she said. "Lately though, I think my personal calls have increased, and more calls have been made on the road than in town."

"I've been an XIT Cellular customer for about two years, and they've been fabulous to me," she said. "XIT recently offered a FREE phone-cleaning clinic, and besides cleaning my phone, they found and repaired a defective battery. They are very customer-oriented and I'm very impressed!"

Becky's Camp Site

By Becky Camp

Electricity has me spoiled. I didn't realize how badly until last weekend when our electricity was off for two hours during the dust and wind storm.

It's almost impossible to visualize how our ancestors existed without electricity. Of course, their lifestyles were drastically different.

We are used to electric lights, radio, television, computers. Electricity for cooking, washing clothes, washing dishes, heating water.

Everyone at my house felt rather lost when the electricity went off. How would we pass the time?

Since it was still daylight when we lost power, we spent some time reading and playing cards, but then it began to get dark.

So, we rounded up all the candles we could find, lit them, and placed them in strategic locations in the living room and kitchen. (There weren't enough to put them in any other rooms.)

But the light was hardly sufficient to see by and certainly not sufficient to do anything by. I can't imagine thinking that was "good" light.

Perhaps this was a good lesson for me. It's easy to take things for granted on a day to day basis. I'll try to appreciate the everyday things more.

For some reason, this has been the week for conversations about age. It's a puzzling topic.

When does someone become old? Who many years difference should there be between the age of the husband and the age of the wife? Who is actually in your generation?

I don't think any of these questions have a definite numeric answer.

My earliest memories of my grandmother are of an old lady, but she was hardly older than I am now. (And I certainly don't consider myself old.)

Oddly enough, grandmother didn't age--in my eyes--as the years past. She was old when she died, but not noticeably older.

If there are 15 years between the ages of a husband and wife, we either condemn them or condone them. If the man is 30 or so and marries a girl of 15, he's a cradle robber. But a 75-year-old man can marry a 60-year-old woman and it's an admirable "late life" romance.

The question of who is in my generation has always been a mystery to me. How many years are in a generation? Am I in the middle of a generation or at the beginning or end? How do you determine?

When I was in school, I wouldn't have considered someone 10 years older or younger than me as in my generation. But now, 10 years hardly seems to make any difference at all.

My only conclusion from all of this is that age is relative. It's relative to your present age, the age of those around you and your own experiences in life.

may get in trouble because of his inability to follow instructions.

That, Keener said, can hurt the child's self-esteem and make him think he is incapable of behaving right or completing work.

Keener said she was alerted to her son's troubles in class by his teachers.

"There can be a bird out there on a limb and he can be distracted," she said, recalling a recent breakfast when her son was enticed to the window by the drone of a nearby crop duster.

After suspecting something was wrong, Keener took her son to a psychologist in Lubbock who, while unable to diagnose ADHD or prescribe medication to control it, did provide Keener with a questionnaire about the disorder.

She found a child psychiatrist in Amarillo who examined her son and determined his condition.

"I think it took one visit," she said with a laugh, adding that she was grateful to HISD officials who worked with her to monitor her son's condition and keep her abreast of his work.

After he was diagnosed, Keener's son was placed on the drug Ritalin, which, although it is a stimulant, works to calm down some ADHD patients.

Keener said the medication has helped, but added that while a child is taking drugs, he is "learning the proper way to behave."

Drug therapy, she said, has to be coupled with behavior modification.

Keener said her son will always have ADHD, but that the behavior therapy will help him get along as he gets older.

Keener urged parents of ADD/ADHD patients to seek information about the conditions and to use that information to improve the life of their children.

She said a positive diagnosis by a doctor or psychiatrist is needed as well in order to begin a course of action that helps the child learn to concentrate and complete tasks.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing about the letter from "Silently Weeping," the 70-year-old wife who found condoms in her husband "Wilmer's" wallet shortly after he suffered a fatal heart attack.

"Weeping" also discovered kinky gadgets and pornographic pictures in Wilmer's office desk and in the garage. Apparently, he was a decent man who honored his marriage vows and took care of his physical needs by himself. She was lucky. My husband wasn't nearly so discreet. -- A Kansas Wife

DEAR K.W.: I received a great deal of reaction to that letter, and almost all the women who wrote condemned Wilmer. The men, however, had a different point of view. Keep reading:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Surely you didn't miss the key to Wilmer's drama. His wife found the condoms in his wallet. She wrote, "He certainly wasn't using them at home." It sounds as if she cut him off because she was no longer interested in sex, but apparently, HE was. This often happens to couples who have been married 50 years or more. It happened to me. A counselor told my wife, in my presence, that she had better reverse her thinking and suggested

Red Cross Update

A disaster Services class "Introduction to Disaster Services" will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. This is the first class in the Disaster series and is a prerequisite for all other classes. It will be held at the Red Cross office.

Mass Care--an overview--will be held Wednesday beginning at 7:30 p.m. at the Red Cross office.

Registration for the life guarding class is open until March 1. To register for the class call the office at 364-3761. The class will be held March 9 and 10.

A CPR review class will begin at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday at the office. This is a class for anyone holding a current CPR certificate who needs to renew the certificate. Call to register for the class.

An update on the Pacific Northwest and Mid-Atlantic Floods disaster relief efforts indicates the cost of the Northwest flood is now $5.9 million with 6,541 family dwellings affected and an estimated cost of $11 million for disaster relief in the Mid Atlantic.

that I be more "romantic." We met each other halfway, and it was the perfect solution. -- Toronto

FROM MEMPHIS: I was also married to a porno freak and full-time gadgeteer. He wasn't interested in the real thing. Lord knows I tried -- for 10 years. The "Wilmer's" of this world are hopeless adolescents. They should never marry.

JACKSON, MISS.: The fact that Wilmer put up with his uptight wife for 50 years speaks volumes about his character. You should have told that self-centered Puritan to quit whining and thank her lucky stars for such a man.

SAN JOSE, CALIF.: You missed the boat regarding Wilmer. You should have asked his wife how often she has a headache. Condoms in a wallet are not proof of infidelity.

Some males use them for solitary sex.

SOMEWHERE IN IDAHO: I am a therapist. In my practice, I have encountered many married men who look elsewhere for sexual satisfaction because their wives are no longer interested. The ignorance in this area is appalling. I have seen many women who have had unnecessary hysterectomies without being informed that their desire for sex might be diminished whether or not they go on hormones. Hormones will keep the mucous membranes flexible, but they do very little for the libido. (Also, men who have had prostate surgery are often not told that this operation could render them impotent.)

I told my gynecologist friends they should really educate their patients about this possible loss of libido. Two of them closed the door of the conference room and said, "If you want to keep getting referrals, you'd better drop the subject."

So, dear readers, I hope you learned something useful today. I certainly did.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor
IT'S THE

LITTLE THINGS

(Last of two parts)

Last week in the first part of this series, I pointed out that little things often ruin an otherwise pleasant experience. Flies can ruin an outdoor barbecue and mosquitoes can spoil a relaxing evening on the patio. In business, little details can cause customers to become dissatisfied and go elsewhere.

As we journey into the next century, details may become increasingly important. Few companies will be out in front of their competitors by a county mile. Inches maybe, millimeters more likely, and it will be the small advantages that allow businesses to grow and prosper.

In the good old days, focusing on the big picture was enough. A good product combined with reasonable service could keep your firm profitable. Then came total quality management, mergers, downsizing, mega merchants and power nichers. The level of competition increased at a frantic rate, and ignoring smaller issues became fatal.

In the 90s, the trend of continual improvement grew more widespread. Competition for customers and market share increased and attention paid to detail began to distance the successful firms from the also rans.

Last week, I shared some examples from the fast-food industry. I'm not picking on those companies or singling them out as the only poor examples. Rather, I'd suggest to you that even well-run companies can leap ahead of their competition by paying attention to the little things.

More examples

Recently, I conducted a simple study for a hotel chain I was speaking to. I called several high-volume travelers to inquire of them what elements went into a pleasant stay at a hotel or motel.

What surprised me was the number of times these men and women - all seasoned travelers - prefaced their answers with, "I know it's a little thing, but..." then they went on to describe details that contributed to their satisfaction or discomfort.

They mentioned items such as burned-out light bulbs, hair in the sink or tub, soiled carpets, no non-smoking rooms, misspelled names on reservations, valet parking charges when they arrived by cab, etc. Small things, little details, but all too often ignored.

Pull ahead by a nose

Here are some suggestions for focusing on the details.

- Think like a customer. Examine every aspect of your business from the customer's point of view. Consider your best customer's views of your business first, but don't ignore any input. A once-every-so-often customer may tell you why they aren't doing more business with you if you're listening.

- Create an employee think tank. Encourage your team to come up with a list of "100 details to be mindful of every day". Reward them for their thoughts, then manage those little things. Remember, employees are more likely to respond positively to ideas and changes they help generate.

- Ask your customers to play. Solicit their input in finding detailed areas where your business could serve them more effectively. Offer a gift certificate for their best suggestion of the month, or give everyone who makes a suggestion a token of appreciation.

- Keep a "detail diary." Our brains will only hold a little information in our short-term memory. When you think of details that will improve your business, make written notes. I've let some great column ideas slip away because I didn't jot them down.

- Watch your customers closely. You can pick up non-verbal signals if you pay close attention to your customers facial expressions and body gestures. Keep your eyes open. A frown or a grimace may tell you you've got some details to work on.

Remember this final detail: All businesses exist solely to serve the customer. You can't go wrong if you focus on the little things that make customers happy.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

So this is my swan song. One dictionary defines a swan song as "the last work, act, utterance, or achievement of a person...before death, retirement, dissolution, etc. (so called from the belief that the dying swan sings)." I'm not much of a singer, and I would be the last to compare myself to a swan, but I guess this column is my last act as Assistant Director of Deaf Smith County Library.

On Monday I assume duties as Director of Library Services for Moore County. (I hope I can find a business card long enough to print my title on!) In everyday language that means I'm going to be head librarian at Dumas and Sunray.

I'm A Lucky Guy is the title of a book (available through inter-library loan) by Frank Gilbreth Jr, co-author of Cheaper By the Dozen. I know how he feels. I deeply appreciate all of the good wishes and expressions of regret over our leaving, but it got me to thinking... Because we are leaving, many people have had good things to say in our presence. We have heard them and appreciated them, and it makes it both easier and harder to go.

But what about those that stay here plugging away until the day comes when their leaving is of a more "permanent" nature? Then we say nice things about them, too, but they can't hear it or appreciate it any more.

Thanks, folks, for all the kind words these past couple of weeks. We cherish your thoughts and appreciate your kindness. But, while you're thinking about it, call someone you think highly of, or who's doing a good job, or who just needs some encouragement, and tell them.

I intended to thank a lot of people by name here, but the list got too long. I must, however, mention a few that had a large impact on my stay in Hereford. First, thanks to Clint Formby and Buddy Peeler for offering me the job that got me back into the Panhandle and to Hereford. I was not at all sure I wanted to come here, but I'm glad I did. We made some good friends, had some good times. I got to know my sisters and nephews better, and I was near when my parents passed away.

Thanks to Speedy Nieman and Mauri Montgomery who offered me a job I knew nothing about and trained me to do it. I'm going to miss strolling into the newspaper office and rolling my own film, chatting with the Brand staff.

And special thanks to Rebecca Walls who believed that I could be an asset to the library, even though I knew nothing about the business. She taught me what I needed to know, and allowed me to interject some new things. Once we got harness-broke we made a pretty good team. Thanks, too, to the library staff for helping out--Lajuana, Betty, Diana, Annie, Alex, and others, past and present. I've never left a job I liked so well.

Thanks to Ron Cook, Mark Kelley (best wishes in your new endeavor, too!), Hereford Toastmasters, Bruce Hernandez, Mike Carr, Mike Harris, Bobby Boyd, Rodney Douglas and others who offered encouragement and support. You'll never know how much you helped.

We will miss our house, our neighbors, Langley Park, Kiwanians, Baptists, Gideons and Merry Mixers. We have enjoyed the Hereford Aquatic Center, and appreciate J.C. Michael, Tyson Duncan, and others who offered encouragement when this middle-aged fat guy was trying to get into shape. (Support the HAC and the "Build On the Dream" campaign. That facility and park is one of Hereford's greatest recreational assets!). And we're not looking forward to finding a new doctor, dentist, pharmacist, accountant, mechanic, banker, grocer...the list goes on--what a chore!

I'll miss the kids, of course. I've grown to really look forward to Scout and school programs and helping the little rascals when they come in the library. All of them are special, but some that come to mind are Brianna and Britni F and Cody H, Emily and Amanda W, Eddie T, Ryan L, Clay C... And Katie S... And Emily S... And Michael and Anthony R. It goes without saying I'll miss Seth and Caleb Pietsch, and Matt and Trevor Baird. (This, too, could go on forever.)

I know I have not mentioned a lot of names that I should have. You don't mean any less to me. Thanks to all of you for being good friends, good neighbors. We will miss you. And thanks for making me realize that I, too am a lucky guy!

Master Gardeners offer class in garden design

The third and last of the February classes on "Gardenscaping" being offered by the Master Gardener Association of Deaf Smith County will be held in the Heritage room of the public Library at 7 p.m. on Monday.

The final class will cover garden design, soil preparation and perennial flowers. It will be presented by Master Gardeners Ella Marie Veigel, Jan Furr and Carmen Flood.

A Master Gardener is one who has completed an eight week course offered each spring by Texas A&M in conjunction with the County Extension Agents of Texas.

After completing the course of study, each gardener is required to give 50 hours of volunteer service to the community through information and instruction of gardening techniques each year.

The Deaf Smith County Association currently has a membership of six gardeners who are working as volunteers.

Master Gardener instruction will be held in March and April at the Extension Building on Amarillo Boulevard. Fee for the course is $60 and the class is limited in number.

For more information contact the Deaf Smith County Extension office or any Master Gardener.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER

County Extension Agent - FCE
So how would you rate your appetite? A number of reasons the elderly cite as their reasons for failing to eat meals include being too bored to eat, a lost appetite for food and having trouble tasting certain dishes.

Research has shown that there is a loss of production of digestive juices, resulting in decreased appetite and inefficient absorption of nutrients in the aged. Some of the age-related changes -- dry mouth, low tolerance of spicy or acidic foods, problems chewing, swallowing and altered taste and olfactory (smell) sensation.

Loss of sight, hearing, reaction time and memory may also occur. Any of these age-related changes can have an effect on appetite.

In addition to the age-related changes affecting the nutritional status of the elderly, there are certain psychological and social changes such as loneliness, depression and generalized lack of purpose in life.

These may accompany lifestyle changes, changes from retirement, illness, financial difficulties or loss of loved ones. Poverty, ignorance and social isolation are external risks for failure of the elderly to live well. All these factors have an effect on appetite.

Ways to plan ahead to increase a lagging appetite are to use a variety of different spices that can enhance the flavor of foods and thus the appetite. Also, any broth or alcohol increases the flow of gastric juices, which can enhance the appetite. Also, exercise can perk up the appetite.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: What is the easiest way to remove old paint from doorknobs and other such hardware? — Gina Richey, West Lafayette, Ind.

Our contact says most doorknobs and hardware have a protective lacquer finish on them. To remove old paint splatters, you would have to use a paint remover, which would probably remove the protective coating. Doing this may permanently damage the doorknobs or hardware by exposing them to the elements, which can cause them to rust.

If the old paint cannot be removed with lots of warm, soapy water, it's best to leave it alone. Or, install new doorknobs.

So this doesn't happen again, remove all doorknobs and hardware before painting. Or, protect it with a coating of petroleum jelly or a plastic bag, which will keep paint splatters from sticking until you can wipe them clean. — Heloise

UPSTAIRS, DOWNSTAIRS

Dear Heloise: If you live in a two-story house, keep a supply of grocery bags on the upper floor to use when you dump wastebaskets. It's easier than carrying the baskets! — G. Daniel Miller, Scottsdale, Ariz.

— YOUR EYES —

The Old Folks Not At Home

Senior citizens in nursing homes and senior residences need and deserve special eye care, indeed, in some states, every nursing home resident is required to have a complete eye examination every year. In between examinations, though, amidst the tumult of activities in the residence, eyeglasses may be lost or exchanged. Elderly residents may withdraw from group activities and seem disoriented--all because they can't see clearly.

It often falls to family members to keep in touch with their parents and other relatives in the nursing home. Check now and then that there have not been any changes in vision, headaches, pain around the eyes, mucous discharges or eye inflammation.

If the elderly relative is ambulatory, a visit to the optometrist's office can provide a more complete eye exam. And it's wise to identify eyeglasses with the patient's name on the temple so that they can be returned if mislaid.

DUPLEX PLAN WORTHY OF PARTICULAR NOTE

Two Separate Floor Plans

FEATURE HOMES

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D. Each unit of this duplex plan is packed with conveniences, including a single garage. Unit "A" is shown with two bedrooms, each isolated from the other. The front foyer directs traffic into the great room with adjoining dining area. The great room has a vaulted ceiling and rear fireplace with view to a sun deck. The kitchen is adjacent with the sink overlooking a snack bar. Linen, pantry, utility and coat storage are all indicated in this area. The exterior of this duplex is country traditional with a multitude of roof lines and accented with distinctive window treatments. A combination of brick and horizontal siding create a look of stylish livability.

The front bedroom has a vaulted ceiling and utilizes a full hall bath. A laundry closet is tucked away in this area as well. The master suite includes a tray ceiling and private garden bath, with double vanity and corner whirlpool tub. A large walk in closet also indicated.

The other side of the duplex is buffered by a fire wall, providing not only protection from fire, but also a sound barrier. Entrance to unit "B" is from a covered front porch into a great room with tray ceiling and fireplace. The dining area with bay window is open and adjacent to the great room. The unique kitchen radiates appeal. The sink overlooks a snack bar and the family living portion of the home. Laundry facilities and a pantry complete this area.

The bedrooms for this unit are grouped together with twin sized bedrooms for family and/or guests. These two bedrooms share a hall bath with daytime use. The master suite has generous proportions and a tray ceiling enriches the look of the bedroom. The garden bath is packed with conveniences.

The exterior of this duplex is country traditional with a multitude of roof lines and accented with distinctive window treatments. A combination of brick and horizontal siding create a look of stylish livability.

Unit "A" includes 1,130 square feet of heated space and unit "B" includes 1,278 square feet of heated space. The plan is furnished with crawl space or slab foundations and includes construction details necessary for energy saving construction.

Expect to hear new voices at this year's Grammys

Popular teen singer Brandy seems to have the world on a string. She's the star of Mosha, a comedy airing Tuesdays on UPN, and she's been nominated for a Grammy in the best new artist category. The 38th annual Grammy Awards airs Wednesday on CBS.

BY SUZANNE GILL

If the recording industry is a circus, Michael Green is its ringmaster.

Green is president of the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences, the organization that runs the Grammy Awards.

The 38th annual Grammy Awards takes place Wednesday, Feb. 28, on CBS, with Los Angeles' Shrine Auditorium as the "big top." Ellen DeGeneres has been selected as host, with scheduled performers Hootie & the Blowfish, Alanis Morissette, Coolio, TLC and Dwight Yoakam, most of them first-time Grammy nominees. Mariah Carey and Boyz II Men are set to give their first live performance of "One Sweet Day," which they recorded together.

Nominations fall into 88 categories, from pop to classical, jazz to heavy metal. A membership of nearly 8,000 votes on the winners.

"The Grammy tent is rather big," Green admits. "And tent is probably a good word to call it, because it's a circus, in terms of the people and their lifestyles.

"If you can imagine any place that has gangsta rappers and metalheads in the same organization as gospel and contemporary Christian artists, and all points in between, it's safe to say that they disagree on almost everything, except the importance of music."

Since ringmaster Green put on his figurative red coat six years ago, the Grammy organization has begun recognizing that diversity with new award categories.

"When I came in," he recalls, "this organization was just stuck somewhere in the '50s. There was no hard rock, no metal, no alternative, no rap, no world music, no new age music. None of those categories was here.

"I think we've done a pretty good job of catching up."

Each member votes in just seven of the 28 Grammy "fields," depending on his or her area of expertise. But in four Grammy categories — record of the year, album of the year, song of the year and best new artist — every member has a say.

"That," Green says, "means polka people, Latin people, gangsta rappers, contemporary Christian, jazz, classical artists, composers, producers, engineers. As a result, from time to time (in the past) we were getting some rather homogenized nominations."

All that changed this year with the addition of a 25-person nominating committee, chosen from NARAS membership, that screened the top 20 nominations in each of the big four categories and selected five finalists.

Consequently, Green says, "we saw some much younger nominees. We also saw one of the first legitimate rappers, Coolio, show up in record of the year. A country artist (Shania Twain) showed up in best new artist, and that has never happened (before)."

Also among the best new artist nominees is Brandy. It's a heady honor for the 16-year-old singer, who juggles school, music and a starring role in the UPN comedy Mo'Nisha.

"I'm up against Alanis Morissette and Hootie & the Blowfish (for best new artist)," she notes. "That's a lot of competition; plus, I'm a big fan of both of them. But I'm going to get through it, if I win."

She certainly won't be caught unprepared. Half joking, she scripts a sample acceptance speech:

"I would like to thank my dad for all his support. Watch my show Tuesday nights at 8. Thank you for the award. Good night."

MOVIES ON TELEVISION

Watch for March highlights on The Family Channel

The Family Channel is quickly becoming cable's home of novels for television, airing such classics as "Kidnapped," "Jesus of Nazareth," "North and South," "Rich Man, Poor Man," and "A Woman of Substance."

Jean Seagrove stars in "A Woman of Substance"

Ian Neeson, Deborah Kerr and Barry Bostwick star in the miniseries "A Woman of Substance," based on Barbara Taylor Bradford's best-selling novel about an English peasant girl who will stop at nothing until she becomes one of the wealthiest and most respected women in the world, premiering Sunday, March 3rd, at 12:00 Noon, and then encore presentations will air on March 10th and 7th.

Then saddle up for a double shot of Newman out west on The Family Channel. Paul Newman stars as a hard-nosed "judge" and a down-on-his-luck cowboy in two western classics -- "The Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean," who also stars Ava Gardner. The story of the life of the Southwest's legendary self-proclaimed "judge" who prospers while ruling a desolate West Texas town. "Roy Bean" will air on Sunday, March 3rd from 6 to 9 pm.

"Pocket Money," which airs Saturday, March 16 from 9 pm to 11:30 pm on The Family Channel. Paul Newman stars as a cattleman down on his luck who is sent to Mexico to buy rodeo bulls for a shady entrepreneur. While in Mexico, he enlists the aid of an old friend whose free-wheeling, fast talking style lands the cattleman in jail. Lee Marvin and Strother Martin also star.

Walter Matthau stars in "The Incident," the award-winning suspenseful drama about a scandalous murder in a small town during World War II, whom a down-and-out attorney is called upon to defend a German POW accused of committing the murder of a popular local physician, airing on Sunday, March 17th at 6 pm.

And of course, television's most romantic couple, Jonathan and Jennifer Hart, (Robert Wagner and Stefanie Powers), travel to Sydney to purchase a run-down wildlife preserve filled with endangered species, but get caught up in a complex adventure of seduction, murder and intrigue airing Saturday, March 24th and 6 pm.

The Family Channel then presents the miniseries "Dream West," starring Richard Chamberlain and Alice Krige. The incredible life story of John Charles Fremont, an impetuous young explorer who blazed a trail West across America, and his devoted wife Jessie, the spirited daughter of Thomas Benton, the formidable senator from Missouri. "Dream West" debuts March 30th at 7 pm.

Franco Zeffirelli's critically acclaimed four-part miniseries "Jesus of Nazareth," crowns The Family Channel's Easter lineup, featuring the life of Christ with a stellar cast and exotic locations, airing March 31st through April 3rd. (Check local listings for time).

Continuing in March, "Rich Man, Poor Man," with Nick Nolte and Peter Strauss as the Jordache brothers battle for the affection of their parents and as World War II ends, begin a 20-year odyssey that takes one to wealth and power and the other to the brink of destruction. Airing on March Sunday, 3rd at 2 pm.

Tackling danger and romance is "Christy," also airing in March, (check local listings for time). In an exciting new episode Rev. David Grantland and Dr. Neil MacNeill both vie for Christy's affection, but who will come out the winner? Tune in to find out.

Other Family Channel movies to air in March include "Barbarosa," Willie Nelson and Gary Busey star as two men who meet accidentally out in the desert. The younger one is fleeing a family trying to kill him because he accidentally killed one of their sons, while the older one is being sought by a large Mexican family because he got their daughter pregnant. "Barbarosa," airs Saturday, March 9th at 9 pm.

A one-hour salute to Lassie's television career features over 200 clips of Lassie's greatest moments, candid anecdotes by all of the living original cast members as well as humorous tongue-in-cheek tributes of today's stars of television. "Lassie Unleashed" airs Tuesday, March 5th at 2 pm and again on Wednesday, March 20th at 2 pm.

Lucille Ball and Henry Fonda star in this old-fashioned comedy about the logistical problems of raising 18 children in one middle-class modern family. "Yours, Mine and Ours," airs March 31st at 1:30 pm.

The Family Channel is becoming cable's home for classic movies and miniseries, with month after month of great family features, comedies and romance movies.

ARIES - March 21/April 20

Give a loved one the space (s)he needs in order to get closer. Remember, sometimes you have to step back to forge ahead. An unexpected excursion may be in store, especially if you're in the world of business. You may bump into an old friend at a public event this weekend.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

The old saying "it's a small world" will apply early this week when you bump into someone from your past in an unlikely place. A Libra may be the bearer of bad tidings later in the week. Take heart. If you look for a bright side, you are sure to find it. Success comes in an unusual fashion.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

If you're planning a party this week, it's sure to be a hit. Between your creativity in the kitchen and your charming personality, you're sure to be the perfect host. An unusual dream mid-week provides a solution to an ongoing problem. You may have known the answer all along.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Before you learn a lesson the hard way, think before you act. You have a talent for seeing the faults in others, but when it comes to yourself, the picture isn't always so clear. An invitation from a business associate could lead to a new friendship. Get out of your shell and have some fun!

LEO - July 23/August 23

Keep a lid on spending or your financial woes will only get worse. Buy only what you need and get the things you want when your wallet is a little thicker. A challenging work project will keep you on your toes throughout the week. Your time to shine is now. Keep up the good work, Leo!

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

Something you do to help out a relative will be the source of inspiration for many. It's true, when the Virgo puts forth an act of kindness, it can be quite profound. Disappointing news comes in the workplace. You may have to compensate for a shortage of help. Keep a good attitude.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

Use your Libra logic to find an answer to a difficult problem. A heart-to-heart discussion with a loved one will let you see another side to a mysterious story. Suddenly all the puzzle pieces will fit together. At work, stay focused and keep abreast of your priorities. A challenging project is likely to be offered.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

An uncomfortable social situation will put a damper on the beginning of the week. Don't let it get you down, though. More light-hearted times are on the way. If you're a parent, you may have to play the role of serious disciplinarian if you want to get your point across.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

A roller coaster ride of emotions is likely to drain your energy reserves. Make sure you get extra rest to recharge your drained batteries. At work, a simple problem could turn into a serious one if too many people get involved. Remember, too many cooks in the kitchen spoil the pot.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

Don't let negative attitudes get you down. An optimistic approach is the key to success. If you're in a creative field, Wednesday and Thursday are the days you'll be at your peak. Inspiration will come from an unlikely source. At home, positive change is rapidly approaching.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
A little spontaneity will not only make your week more interesting, but will inspire those around you, too. Give in to creative urges and you'll see that your options are limitless. Advice from a Cancer friend should be considered seriously. Meditation lifts stress from daily life.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
An opportunity to be a big fish in a little pond may come your way. Swimming to the top may get your gills in gear, but weigh out all options before taking the plunge. In matters of love, try not to jump to conclusions before you know all the facts. Friday is a lucky day.

IN FOCUS

The seductive Ann-Margret stars as a manipulative high school teacher who devises a plan to murder her husband (Peter Coyote) in Seduced by Madness: The Diane Borchart Story, premiering Sunday, Feb. 25, and concluding Monday, Feb. 26, on NBC.

After her husband asks for a divorce, the jealous, possessive woman becomes obsessed with revenge and hires three teen agers (Freddy Rodriguez, Christian Campbell and Jonah Blechman) to kill her husband.

Kahlil Hicks, a young father living in New York City's Harlem, is one of nine young people profiled in Harlem Diary: Nine Voices of Resilience, airing Sunday, Feb. 25, on the Discovery Channel.

Released theatrically in a limited area in October 1995, the movie follows Hicks and the others as they tell in their own words of living in Harlem and of the personal goals they have set. The film also shows how, despite obstacles, each one has managed to stay focused on these goals.

Charlton Heston is host of The Mysterious Origins of Man, a one-hour special that takes a hard look at the conventional wisdom about prehistoric man, premiering Sunday on NBC.

Mysterious Origins of Man examines new evidence

BY JOHN CROOK

Researchers look for new answers to old questions in The Mysterious Origins of Man, a one-hour special premiering Sunday, Feb. 25, on NBC.

Charlton Heston is host of the telecast, which comes from the Emmy-winning producers of Mystery of the Sphinx and challenges conventional, accepted beliefs about prehistoric man.

Among other theories posited during the hour is the possibility man may have made the "climb" from Stone Age to civilization more than once, and modern man is simply the latest in this cycle.

More startling is testimony from researchers who claim evidence supporting this and other unorthodox notions is being systematically suppressed by the scientific establishment. One woman even states her career was short-circuited after she steadfastly insisted on revealing evidence that she says proves the early man known as "Homo erectus" may be far older than has been widely accepted by Charles Darwin and the mainstream research community.

Some of the supposed insights featured during The Mysterious Origins of Man require vast leaps of faith. The discovery of fossilized manlike footprints next to those of what appear to be a dinosaur is not hard evidence humans and dinosaurs coexisted, as the program hints.

Nor does an ancient map that appears to designate the continent of Antarctica offer proof of a highly advanced society during prehistoric times.

If the special fails to provide any easy answers, it does raise some valid questions. Darwin's theory of evolution held that man and ape shared a common ancestor, yet decades after the British writer published his findings, the so-called "missing link" - the backbone of Darwin's theory - has yet to be found.

Of course, Darwin's theory may still be sound, but executive producer Robert Watts and his team of investigators have done a credible enough job of showing just how shaky conventional wisdom about the origins of man really is. Ultimately, this special raises some prickly issues indeed.

TV PIPELINE

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: Now that Due South and Diagnosis Murder have rightly been returned to CBS, is there a chance this will happen as well with another terrific series, Under Suspicion? If Picket Fences gets any more inane, surely CBS could dump it and make room -- and Phil (Karen Sillas) was shot in the last episode we saw! --G.V., Hanover, Pa.

Karen Sillas

A: At the moment, there are no plans to do even a wrap-up episode of Suspicion. "You never know what's going to happen," says the show's creator, Jacqueline Zambrano. "They've done Cagney & Lacey movies. Certainly I'd love to see Karen Sillas be Rose Phillips again.

"But let's just assume that she went to the hospital (and) she lived. She found the perfect man. She got married. She was brilliant at her job. Is that enough of a fairy tale?"

Q: My family and I really enjoyed Here Come the Munsters on Fox last Halloween, and I understand it did well in the ratings. Is Fox planning any future films? --A fan in Pawtucket, R.I.

A: Yes, a new Munsters TV movie is currently in development.

Q: When Fox canceled Sliders last season, they promised the show would air as a replacement this season. Will it be back? --Ron Lin, Alameda, Calif.

A: Yes, I ran into Sliders star Jerry O'Connell at a party recently, and he confirmed that new episodes are in production. Sliders will resume in March.

It's scheduled to go into the Friday slot now occupied by Strange Luck on March 1, after that series finishes its new episodes for the season.

Q: What happened to Central Park West? Will it be back? --C.G., Middletown, N.Y.

A: This highly touted show tanked on a humiliating scale last fall, rejected by virtually the entire viewing audience. CBS, which invested a ton of money in the show, is trotting out a revamped version in March or April, with new stars Gerald McRaney and Raquel Welch, but minus Mariel Hemingway.

Q: Who played Tommy on the sitcom Alice? I say it was Alan Jackson, but my daughter says it was Nancy McKeon's brother. --C.M., Sherman, Texas.

A: She's right. It was Philip McKeon, Nancy's brother.

Q: My boyfriend and I have a standing bet regarding the actress in the Tic Tac commercials. He says it's Farrah Fawcett with a new short hairstyle. I disagree. --Vicki J. Anderson, Erie, Pa.

A: If we're thinking of the same commercials, that's Kelly Harmon (Mark's sister).

F.I.S.T. ★★½ (1978) Sylvester Stallone, Rod Taylor. A gritty laborer rises from local union organizer to national power and prestige in this story inspired by Jimmy Hoffa. 3:15. February 28 12:45am.

A Fistful of Dollars ★★★ (1964) Clint Eastwood, Gian Maria Volonte. Sergio Leone's classic about a mysterious drifter's involvement with warring factions in a Mexican border town. 2:00. February 29 7:05pm.

Flaming Feather ★★★ (1952) Sterling Hayden, Aileen Whelan. Vigilantes ride to the rescue of a white woman captured by a band of renegade Indians. 2:00. February 29 3pm.

Flight Commander ★★½ (1930) Richard Barthelmess, Douglas Fairbanks Jr. Two British flying aces throw caution to the wind in their pursuit of honor and glory during World War I. 2:00. March 2 8am.

The Flood: Who Will Save Our Children? (1993) Joe Spano, David Lascher. Rescue workers struggle to save summer-camp youths caught in a flash flood near Comfort, Texas. Based on a true story. 2:00. February 26 8pm.

For a Few Dollars More ★★★ (1965) Clint Eastwood, Lee Van Cleef. A pair of rival gunslingers forms an uneasy partnership in their common quest to hunt down a vicious outlaw. 2:45. February 29 9:05pm.

From the Earth to the Moon ★★ (1958) Joseph Cotten, George Sanders. A post-Civil War inventor launches mankind's first expedition to the moon. Based on the Jules Verne novel. 2:00. February 29 3am.

The Funhouse ★★★ (1981) Elizabeth Berge, Sylvia Miles. Four teen-agers are stalked by a hideous monster when they decide to spend the night in a sleazy carnival funhouse. 2:00. February 29 4am.

Tracey Gold stars as a rebellious young mother who is accused of child abuse by her own manipulative mother (Kate Jackson) in A Kidnapping in the Family, premiering Monday on ABC.

SOAP TALK

More cast changes for Guiding Light

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Since the day he left the role of Blade/Rick on The Young and the Restless, it was rumored Michael Tylo would return as Quinton Chamberlain on Guiding Light.

Tylo, who portrayed the popular archaeologist Quinton from 1981 to 1985, has returned to the role for a short stay. The character returns to honor his late father, Henry. But Nola (Lisa Brown) does not welcome Quinton, especially when his traveling companion is revealed.

Other cast changes on the show include the departures of two popular characters, Dr. Ed Bauer (Peter Simon) and Nick (Vincent Irizarry).

Simon has decided to leave the show when his contract is up in June. Irizarry's contract ends this month, and he has been let go for financial and story line reasons.

At Days of Our Lives, Peter Reckell, who recently returned to play Bo, has extended his stay.

Dear Candace: In regard to your article on Susan Lucci, I don't care what anyone says or who votes for the Emmys. These people have no concept of good acting. Lucci deserves an Emmy Award for her performance. Those who do the voting need to seriously re-evaluate their criteria. -A Lucci fan in Royal Oak, Mich.

Dear Reader: There is no doubt Lucci is talented. It does make one wonder why the Emmy has been so elusive.

Dear Candace: Can you please settle an argument? My sister says on Days, Sami (Alison Sweeney) had a one-night stand with Lucas (Brian Dattilo) about the time she got pregnant. My sister says the baby could belong to Lucas. This surprises me. -Shirley Brennan, Port Huron, Mich.

Dear Reader: Your sister is correct. Sami slept with Lucas, so the baby could be his. There has not been any reference to Lucas and Sami sleeping together since it happened. It would be a safe bet to say there is a chance Austin (Austin Peck) could one day discover the baby is not his.

CHITTER CHATTER

NEW YORK (AP) - Esquire magazine asks, and Frank Sinatra answers:

- What should a man never do in the presence of a woman? "Yawn."

- How do you know when a hat looks right on you? "When no one laughs."

- How do you know when you've picked the right barber? "When you leave the shop and no one hands you a hat, you're OK."

Those are a few of the snappers from Sinatra in the March issue of Esquire. Writer Bill Zehme corresponded with the 80-year-old Sinatra, asking "essential questions, the kind that could save a guy's life."

NEW YORK (AP) - At age 54, Ann-Margret can kid about her sex symbol image.

"Me? Sexy? I'm 95!" she says.

"My sexuality! That's in the eye of the beholder."

Seriously though, she's comfortable with the image the years have yet to diminish, since it always came naturally.

"I have always moved the way I move," she said in the Feb. 24 issue of TV Guide. "I have always walked the way I walk. Since I was a little girl. I don't think about it. I feel I have movements like a cat. I study them. I am a tactile person."

And for her, there are three things that make men sexy.

"A guy who is shy, this is one of the three sexiest things on Earth," she said. "The other two - I won't tell you."

In her latest role in an upcoming miniseries on NBC, Ann-Margret plays a schoolteacher who has her husband killed. She says her own real-life husband, Roger Smith, had to persuade her to take the role.

"He says to me, 'Ann-Margret, do you always want to play heroines?'"

A rose is a rose is a rose—except when it's a one-plant arbor. A Lady Banks rose tree at Tombstone, Arizona, has a trunk 40 inches thick and stands nine feet tall. Supported by 68 posts and several thousand feet of piping, 150 people can be seated under the arbor. The cutting came from Scotland in 1884.

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

The Braschler's are coming! They will be performing March 8 for two shows. We had an early sellout and have a waiting list. We only have seating for 350 per show and wish we could seat 500. We feel we could sell at least that many. This is a good clean show and very entertaining. They have become good friends of our Seniors.

Also on March 8 we are having dinner from 5 p.m.-9 p.m. You can choose from a selection of beef stew, coleslaw, cornbread; or croissant sandwiches, potato salad and fruit cobbler/ice cream or meringue pie. This is only $5 and also includes your drink. Come on out and enjoy the evening. You do not have to come to the show to eat.

Our Seniors elected a new Valentine King and Queen in February. Congratulations to Dr. Trow and Margie Mims! Our outgoing couple is Verdon and Billie Watts.

The itinerary for the spring tour is as follows:

April 15-30, 1996

Double: $1,175

Triple: $1,050

Single: $1,500

FEATURING: Nashville--General Jackson Cruise with show and dinner, step on guide tour of Nashville, River Taxi down town, and TV Show Prime Time Country.

Virginia--Thomas Jefferson's Monticello, colonial Williamsburg-Washington, D.C. area, see Washington after dark, see our national monuments and federal buildings flooded in lights, from the illuminated dome of the U.S. Capitol to the breathtaking view from the roof of the Kennedy Center.

STEP OFF THE COACH AND VISIT: Jefferson Memorial, Kennedy Center, Marine Corps Memorial (Iwo Jima) and the Lincoln and Vietnam Veterans Memorials.

VIEW FROM THE COACH: U.S. Capitol, Library of Congress, Supreme Court, House and Senate Office Buildings, Pennsylvania Avenue, White House, Capitol Reflecting Pool and Georgetown. Visiting Arlington National Cemetery--Mount Vernon and Old Town Alexandria--interior of the Capitol, and the Smithsonian.

In Philadelphia visit Betsy Ross Home and the Liberty Bell and the simple life of the Amish with a wonderful Amish meal at Good N' Plenty in Lancaster County, Penn. Also Gettysburg--See Hershey's Chocolate World--On to Niagara Falls, U.S. and Canadian areas. Back home through St. Louis and the Gateway Arch and a dinner cruise--through Carthage, Mo., with a stop at Precious Moments Chapel.

Call me at the office, 364-5681, or home, 364-0428, for more information. A deposit of $100 will be due at the time reservations are made, with the balance due by April 1.

This is an interesting and fun trip. The cost covers transportation, rooms, luggage handling and tickets to all events. Special dinners will be provided such as dinner cruise, Amish dinner and the last night banquet in Tulsa. Several hotels will have continental breakfasts.

President's Corner

By Gid Brownd, HSCA President

I'll be you agree with me that food is a very important part of our lives. That is one reason it is high on the list of things to do right at our Senior Center. We are blessed there with good food and a varied menu. Most of you know that the Senior Center serves between 8,000 and 9,000 meals a month. That is a lot of planning, cooking, ordering, paperwork and serving!!

The person who is in charge of preparing and protecting all this food until it is served is our own Natalia Barkley. Natalia has only been with us for a short time, but don't you agree that she is doing a beautiful job? She is always there with her big smile and she has done wonders with her squash casserole. Thank you Natalia.

Sold out

Both performances of the Braschler Music Show at the Senior Citizens Center on March 8 are sold out.

AARP releases guide to assist older voters

AUSTIN--The American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) voter education project, AARP/VOTE has released its '96 Presidential Voters' Guide.

The purpose of the guide is to help older voters learn about the candidates' stands on issues. AARP/VOTE is the nonprofit, nonpartisan voter education project of the American Association of Retired Persons.

AARP/VOTE neither supports nor opposes candidates for public office; and it does not contribute money to political parties.

In the Presidential guide, candidates were asked to respond to questions on AARP's priority issues pertaining to Medicare, Social Security and Federal Tax Reform.

Candidates were also asked their views on Long-Term Care and Campaign Finance Reform.

"Our goal is to provide voters with clear objective information on important issues in the campaign," said Eugene I. Lehmann, president of AARP.

"Older people take seriously their right to vote. They vote in greater proportions than other age groups and want to use their vote wisely during Presidential primaries on Election Day," Lehmann added.

Single copies of the Presidential Voters' Guide are available free of charge by writing the Texas State Office-AARP, 98 San Jacinto Blvd., Suite 750, Austin, Texas 78701.

March is great time for indoor activities

By PEGGY MAXWELL
Activities Director

March is traditionally known as a windy month. This will be an excellent opportunity for you to come participate in the indoor activities at the Hereford Senior Center.

We will have a special meeting on March 14. Toby Turpin will explain gun safety and the new rules. This is a meeting we can all benefit from whether we own a gun or not. Come listen to Toby at 1 p.m. on Thursday, March 14.

Check the activity calendar for the activity of your choice. You are most welcome to come to any of the activities. There is a new addition to the Wednesday Craft Class. We have a knitting machine, with Kathryn Ruga as our instructor-advisor. Come out on Wednesday afternoon at 1 p.m. and see this interesting machine displayed. We also have Ann Carrol as the instructor-advisor for all hand crafts. So be a part of our craft class.

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: I'm 64 years of age, receiving Social Security retirement benefits, and earned wages of a little over $1,000 in 1995. Someone told me that I have to report those earnings to Social Security before April 15. Is that true?

A: Yes. If you had wages or self-employment earnings (or a combination of these) in excess of $8,160 (for people under 65) or $11,280 (for people 65 to 69 years of age) in 1995, you must file an Annual Report of Earnings with Social Security on or before April 15, 1996. You must file this report with Social Security in addition to filing a tax return with IRS. Failure to file a timely report with Social Security can result in a penalty so be sure to phone or visit us in person before April 15.

Q: I'll be 65 in June. I'm currently receiving Social Security payments on the record of my late husband. What do I have to do to start medicare coverage at age 65?

A: Since you already are receiving a Social Security payment, you will receive a Medicare enrollment package by mail about three months before you are 65. This package will provide you with the material needed to enroll in Medicare. If you have questions upon receiving the package, phone us at our toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213.

Q: A friend, who was in the Korean War, recently filed for Social Security and was told by the representative that he may receive additional work credits for his military service. Is that correct? I'd like to know because I was on active duty in the Korean War, and I'll be filing for Social Security later this year.

A: People who served in active duty before 1957 may benefit from special Social Security credits even though no Social Security taxes were paid by service personnel during that period. (Since 1957, all military personnel have paid Social Security taxes.) When you file for Social Security, be sure to bring in your original discharge paper(s) or a certified copy. For more information on who can and who cannot qualify for the additional credits, contact Social Security at 1-800-772-1213 and ask for a copy of the Factsheet entitled "Military Service and Social Security."

Q: I won't file for Social Security until 1998. I recently divorced and have changed my name. Do I need to report this to Social Security?

A: Yes. It is very important that you change your name on Social Security records. This will ensure that all of your work earnings are correctly posted to your work record. To change your name, you will need original or certified copies of documents that show your new name and your old name. In your case, the divorce record and your marriage record would be sufficient.

Q: At my doctor's office, they told me that Medicare will cover part of the cost of the services, but that I must pay the coinsurance amount. What do they mean by the "coinsurance amount?"

A: The coinsurance amount is the percentage of the approved cost of covered services which the beneficiary must pay. For each covered service you receive under Medicare medical insurance (Part B), Medicare will pay 80% of the approved charge. You are responsible for the remaining 20%, which is the coinsurance amount.

If you wish to have your questions answered in this column, please write to: Byron Sansom, District Manager, Senior Scene, Social Security Administration, 3501 W. 45th, Suite E., Amarillo, Texas 79106.

Nutrition Notes

By CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
RD/LD

Heart-healthy eating is easier than ever, thanks to the array of foods high in fiber and low in saturated fat. Eating plans high in soluble fiber and low in saturated fat and cholesterol, along with healthy lifestyle habits, may help you control your cholesterol level within a healthy range. Maintaining a blood cholesterol level at less than 200 milligrams per deciliter lowers the risk of heart disease.

Fiber is found only in plant foods, such as fruits, vegetables, and grains. Dietary fiber is the part of the plant we eat as food. In the recent years, scientists have found that the human body requires fiber to maintain good health.

The outer part of grains such as whole wheat, brown rice, corn and oats are called bran and are a rich source for fiber. Almost all of the fiber in the grain is found in the bran. The brans from different grains have varying types and amounts of fiber. Wheat bran has a higher concentration of fiber than most other brans. How much fiber should one eat? Americans should eat 20-35 grams of fiber each day. Currently, we only consume an average of about 11 grams of fiber each day. Fortunately, there are ways to improve our fiber consumption.

Why should one eat fiber? Fiber has important benefits for health, particularly through its effect on the digestive system by helping maintain regularity. A low fat diet that contains plenty of fiber-containing foods, may play an important role in reducing the risk of certain types of cancers.

Wheat bran may be one of the most effective sources of fiber in reducing risk of colon cancer. A simple way to ensure that you eat the recommended amount of fiber each day is to follow The Food Guide Pyramid to include 2-4 servings of fruit, 3-5 servings of vegetables and 6-11 servings of grains (including cereals, breads, rice and pasta). Note the number of servings you typically eat in one day and then check the rating below to see how you score.

1/2 cup beans, such as pinto, red, lima, navy, and blackeyed peas = 3 g. fiber.

1 cup broccoli = 3 g. fiber

3/4 cup brown rice = 3 g. fiber

3/4 cup carrots = 3 g. fiber

1/2 cup green peas = 4 g. fiber

1/2 cup lentils = 8 g. fiber

1 small pear = 3 f. fiber

1 cup strawberries/blueberries = 3-4 g. fiber

2/3 wheat bran cereals = 5-10 g. fiber

1 muffin/slice of wheat bran bread = 2 g. fiber

Rating (count the number of servings of food you ate):

* Two or fewer - try adding a few more...it's easy!

* Three to five - you're on your way to better health!

* Six or more servings - you're doing fine..Keep it up.

How do I add fiber to my diet?

Since fiber is found in so many foods, there are plenty of ways to add it to your diet. The best way to include more fiber in the diet is to add a little each day, slowly building up to the recommended levels.

Simultaneously, you should be drinking more water and other fluids, at least 8-12 cups daily. This gives the body time to adapt to the change in the diet and promotes regular digestion.

Here are some easy ways to increase fiber intake:

1 - Start your day off with a breakfast cereal that contains fiber. Look for one that provides 5 grams of fiber per serving. Read the food label on the cereal box side panel to determine fiber content and look for wheat bran in the ingredient list.

2 - Use the food label to choose breads that contain fiber. Remember that just because a bread is brown in color does not mean that it is a good source of fiber.

3 - Carry fiber-rich foods such as fruits and vegetables as snacks.

4 - Add wheat bran cereal to muffin, cookie, bread and casserole recipes for extra fiber, flavor, and texture.

Why are grain foods important?

Whole grains provide fiber, protein, B-Vitamins, and minerals. Grain foods are a rich source of complex carbohydrates for energy. And when prepared without added fat, they are cholesterol free and low in fat and saturated fat.

What about fruits and vegetables?

Fruits and vegetables, such as oranges and green beans, can be low in fat and saturated fat and cholesterol free. And they contain fiber, vitamins, and minerals. Enhance the flavor of vegetables by adding seasonings such as herbs and lemon juice.

In summary: Eating foods containing fiber everyday as part of a low-fat, heart-healthy eating plan will help maintain desirable blood cholesterol levels. Controlling your blood cholesterol at a desirable level is one way to reduce your risk of heart disease.

Sensible eating and regular physical activity are good habits for a healthy heart - and that can mean a healthier you.

Social Security

By JIM MCDANIEL
Social Security Manager
in Amarillo

A friend who knows I work for Social Security asked me how Social Security compares with other insurance programs. Specifically, he was wondering if he could get a better deal if he were able to use the money he puts into Social Security to purchase private coverage.

I pointed out that comparing Social Security to private insurance is not a fair comparison. This is because no private insurance company can match the Social Security coverage for the price. The protection includes retirement, survivors, and disability insurance coverage.

The value of Social Security survivors benefits for an average wage earner who dies and leaves a spouse and two children is equivalent to a $295,000 life insurance policy. The average monthly payment would be $1,350. The importance of these benefits is underscored by the fact that younger Americans face roughly a one in five chance of dying before reaching age 65.

The disability protection for workers unable to work is equivalent to a $203,000 disability policy for an average income earner with a spouse and two children. The average monthly payment to such a family would be about $1,100. Benefits continue until the youngest unmarried child reaches 18. A 20-year-old worker stands a one in three chance of becoming disabled before age 65.

However, most people who compare Social Security with private insurance are thinking about retirement income. It's true that if you invested the Social Security tax for a strictly retirement annuity, you would probably do well. However, many forget that Social Security benefits are increased annually to keep up with the cost of living; and they continue for life. These features are not found in most private policies.

As a social insurance program, Social Security is primarily concerned with whether it is meeting the needs of society as a whole. To this extent, Social Security gets high marks.

It provides a base of income that permits workers to build their retirement income and a valuable package of disability and survivors protection for their working years. About 95 percent of the people age 65 and over at the beginning of 1996 were receiving benefits or would be able to receive benefits when they or their spouses retire.

About 98 percent of the children under 18 and their mothers or fathers (with children under 16) can count on monthly cash benefits if a working parent dies. About four out of five men and women aged 21-64 can count on monthly cash benefits in the event the wage earner suffers a severe and prolonged disability.

Even these social benefits can be quantified as a benefit to you to the extent you are relieved of the burden of supporting your parents. It's something to think about.

Although the Isle of Man has belonged to Great Britain for over 200 years, British law does not apply there unless the island is specifically named in the legislation. A 1,000 year-old parliament regulates internal affairs there.

'Wide-awakes' are common in seniors

By LYNN BULMAHN
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas — If counting sheep or a warm glass of milk doesn't put you to sleep, don't feel alone.

Many older adults are in the same boat, tossing and turning. They have the wide-awakes most of the night.

Health experts say difficulty in sleeping is extremely common with older people.

"I think a lot of seniors have trouble in that area," said Rose Moyer of Central Texas Senior Ministry, which operates local senior centers.

"Statistics say that more than half of older adults have difficulties getting to sleep," said Sarah Head, a registered nurse with Concepts of Care's senior center office at the Kate Ross center.

Head said that translates to some 33 million elderly insomniacs nationwide.

Yet, it's not normal to have the wide-awakes, said Robert Gieski, coordinator for the Center for Sleep Disorders at Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center.

"A lot of people think the older you get, the less you sleep," Gieski said. "But when you're older, you don't need less sleep. You actually need more sleep."

He said elderly people with sleep problems should see their doctor about the problem. But few do.

"They feel, 'I'm just getting old, my hair's getting grayer, and I should expect this to happen,'" Gieski said. "That just isn't the truth. Everyone, no matter how old, should get a good night's sleep and feel healthy and normal during the day."

Head said sleep patterns do change as people age. Doctors have found that when senior citizens sleep, they remain longer in the lighter stages of sleep.

It's also known that elderly men take longer to fall asleep and stay asleep than do women the same age.

Head said Concept of Care home nurses often report their patients are awake all or most of the night. Many of these people appear to be afraid to go to sleep, Head said.

Many live alone and may be afraid of crime. Others have chronic illnesses and may be afraid they won't wake up again.

"There is a huge overuse of prescription drugs and over-the-counter sleeping pills," Gieski said.

At least 24 million prescriptions are written annually for sleeping pills, and 30 percent to 40 percent of them are taken by seniors. Yet the sleeping pills themselves can be the culprit. The longer you take them, the more habit-forming they are.

Even more dangerous, Gieski said, is the possibility that the sleeping pill taker has sleep apnea and doesn't know it. If so, taking the sleep medication could increase that person's chance of suffering a heart attack.

Gieski says it's best to avoid sleep medications altogether, while Head says a doctor's prescription should be a short-term one. Most will not last for more than two weeks, she added.

Medicines for conditions other than sleeping problems may interfere with your sleep. Drugs for hypertension and asthma can keep patients awake.

Physical conditions such as sleep apnea and restless leg syndrome, in which sleepers kick their legs during the night, can rob you of quality sleep, Gieski said.

But often, Head said, people may not know they have such problems unless a bed partner complains about the snoring or excessive movement.

"People over 60 can awake briefly for as many as 110 to 160 times in a single night and not be really aware of it," Gieski said. "This is called unconscious arousal."

He said the sleep center can evaluate patients and track their sleeping patterns.

Head said her company's nurses often go into the home and teach seniors how to take care of themselves. This includes giving them pointers on getting some sleep.

Ombudsmen specially trained to aid elderly in nursing homes

The Area Agency on Aging of the Panhandle has joined forces with Heart to Heart, a new statewide collaboration between the Texas Department on Aging and the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) aimed at placing a volunteer ombudsman in every nursing home in the state.

Ombudsmen are specially trained and certified individuals who help nursing home residents and their families resolve problems related to their care, generally without the intervention of regulatory agencies or legal action.

During their regular visits to nursing facilities in their areas, they explain rights and benefits to residents, investigate complaints and provide access to advocacy services.

The 34-hour training course is provided by the Texas Department on Aging's Long-Term Care Ombudsman office. After the training, new ombudsmen serve a three-month internship before being placed in a nursing facility. Ombudsmen receive no pay and are not employees of any public or private organization.

Weldon Scarbrough, the staff ombudsman at the Area Agency on Aging of the Panhandle, said the Heart to Heart program seeks to recruit at least 500 new volunteer ombudsmen, bringing the statewide total to almost 1,200.

"In our region, we'd like to add about 20 volunteer ombudsmen. Most of our volunteers tell us they receive tremendous personal satisfaction from their work," Scarbrough said.

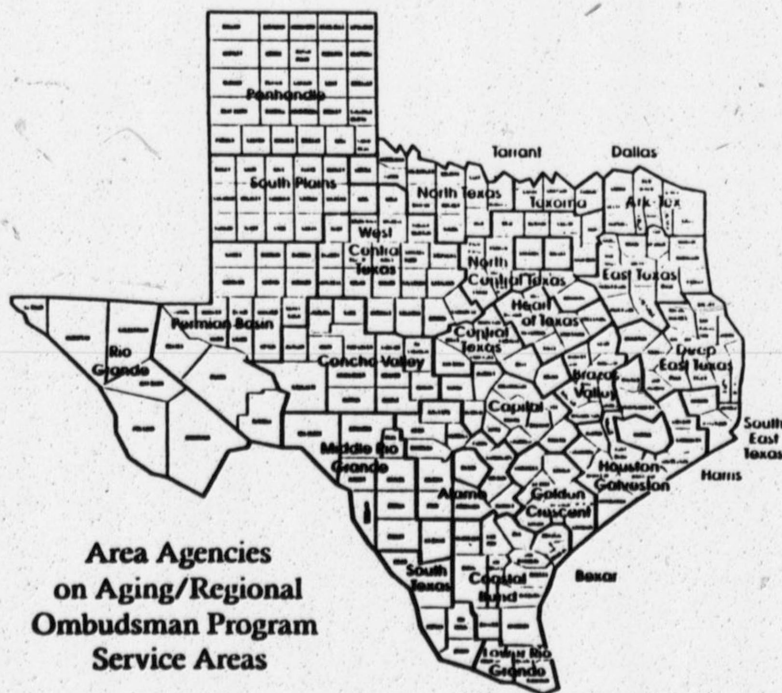

"But they must also be ready to accept a great deal of responsibility. They're asked to commit at least two to four hours a week to their duties and to be at their assigned facilities 48 weeks out of the year."

For more information about Heart to Heart, the long-term care ombudsman program or other local volunteer opportunities for those who wish to help older persons, call Scarbrough at 806-372-3381 within the Amarillo area or 1-800-6452-6008 outside of Amarillo.

Man gives God credit for miraculous recovery

By SONJA MERRICK
The Odessa American

ODESSA, Texas - What with running a growing church, preaching crusades country-wide and spending large chunks of time counseling, the Rev. Dr. George Golden, pastor of Odessa's First Church of God, is a busy man. That's why, he said, when his health began failing about two years ago he didn't bother consulting a doctor.

"I started turning yellow and people around me noticed it. I thought I was just tired," he said.

Then, on Valentine's Day 1994, registered nurse Nadeen Whiteside, who is a member of the church's congregation, told him he had yellow streaks in his eyes and strongly urged him to see a doctor.

"When I went home that night I started itching all over," Golden said.

The next morning he called a physician, who called another physician, and many tests ensued. The results were not good.

"They found a tumor in my bile duct," Golden said. "And they said they couldn't operate here in Odessa, so they made arrangements for me to go to Baylor in Dallas."

"His wife asked me to be honest and I told her it looked like it was hopeless," Whiteside said. "In my opinion, there wasn't much they were going to be able to do. With tumors like that, the outcome isn't very good."

Whiteside also said that she shared her apprehension with other members of the community as she watched him deteriorate. "I told a friend that if God didn't perform a miracle he wouldn't last three months. He was probably one of the sickest people I've seen in my life."

More tests were conducted, surgery was performed, and the news went from bad to worse.

"My gall bladder was completely full of cancer and they removed it. They found lesions in my liver - that means cancer, too - and the tumor was inoperable," Golden said. "They said it is a deadly tumor and radiation and chemotherapy won't kill it. They gave me four to 24 months to live."

Dr. David Snyder, an oncologist who has been treating Golden since his return from Dallas, said, "It was a disease that generally the outcome is not favorable."

While in Dallas, Golden's weight dropped from 210 pounds to 172 - in about two weeks time.

"Doctors say this particular-style tumor takes you down to skin and bones," he said.

Golden returned to Odessa where he began undergoing chemotherapy and radiation treatments in the hopes of reducing the size of the tumor.

That was almost two years ago. And that is when Whiteside noticed that, much to her surprise, Golden seemed to be improving.

"When people go through that kind of thing (chemotherapy and radiation) it brings them to near death, but the outcome in his physical condition was remarkable," she said. "When I saw his blood work I was amazed at how normal it was - even his liver function studies were good."

And, according to Whiteside, although most who undergo those types of treatment lose their appetite and hair, Golden didn't. "Although he had some of the side effects - like tiredness and depression."

Today, instead of breathing his last breath in a seriously deteriorated state of health, Golden is back at work - putting in his standard 60 to 80 hours a week of ministerial duties. His weight is back up to 220 pounds.

And the tumor?
"It's still there, but it's not active," Golden said. "It's not doing anything."

Golden gives full credit for his return to health to God. And the thousands of people who prayed for him during his illness.

"When the doctors told us about the tumor, my staff here contacted every church in Odessa asking them to be in prayer for us," he said. "My wife received hundreds of calls from pastors and people throughout this wonderful city."

And then the circle of prayer widened to include people from coast to coast. Golden said his staff also sent letters to every church in the country where he had preached a crusade. The result was thousands of cards, letters and telephone calls.

"They assured us they were praying for us," he said.

There are lots of thanks that need to go around, Golden added. "We thank God for medical science and our doctors and nurses. But we know it (healing) happened in the name of Jesus. He is not only our Savior, but our healer."

Whiteside agreed.
"From my standpoint as a nurse I knew it was hopeless in the beginning. It was hard for me to have faith like some did because I was seeing the medical side of it," she said. "But (now) there's no doubt in my mind that God performed a miracle on him because his people love him and believed and prayed and wanted him healed so much."

Snyder said that patients' attitudes and their faith are important in recovery - but so are such factors as state-of-the-art medical care.

"From a scientific standpoint, it's hard to quantitate which is most important," he said. "But to try to discount any component is not fruitful."

Snyder has his own definition of the miraculous.

"I think he's (Golden) a miracle for many reasons. His whole attitude toward life, his relationship with his faith community, the fact that he's alive today without any recurrence is miraculous," he said. "It's miraculous, I think, regardless of what happens is inspiration to us. It's a happy story."

McDaniel reminds seniors to have direct bank deposit

Noting that the recent bad weather has sometimes obstructed the delivery of checks from Social Security, Jim McDaniel, Social Security Manager in Amarillo reminded Social Security beneficiaries that they can avoid such problems by having their benefits delivered directly to their banks.

"Direct deposit is now the preferred method of payment for Social Security, Supplemental Security (SS) and Black Lung beneficiaries. New beneficiaries with bank accounts will be paid electronically unless they specifically request to be paid by check," McDaniel said.

McDaniel said that current beneficiaries will continue to be offered the chance to switch to direct deposit.

At present, more than half of the 43 million beneficiaries receive payment by direct deposit. Direct deposit is safer, more reliable, more economical, and more convenient than receiving benefits by checks. Specific advantages include:

- *There are no mail delays.
- *Beneficiaries who travel do not have to make special arrangements to safeguard their checks.
- *Direct deposit payments are traceable through the banking system. In the rare event of a problem, it usually can be resolved quickly.
- *Problems associated with check cashing, i.e., proving identity, long bank lines, are eliminated.

"We hope that direct deposit will eliminate the risk of loss and other problems for Social Security beneficiaries who depend on the monthly income for their basic needs," McDaniel said.

Women finds 'better way' to prepare Hispanic food

By JOY AULT
Valley Morning Star

MCALLEN, Texas -- Velda de la Garza of McAllen knew it could be done.

As a registered dietitian, she was concerned about the health aspect of the delicious foods of the Hispanic culture.

And by applying her knowledge to the foods she loved cooking, she found a better way to prepare them.

"What you eat can be as good as the best medicine," said De la Garza, whose extensive experience has included working as a dietitian for M.D. Anderson Hospital, as a consultant for the University of Texas Health Science Center, both in Houston, and as a renal dietitian specialist.

De la Garza wanted people to know many health problems are related to what they eat, and many diseases are preventable.

"People can take the reins where health is concerned," she said.

She wanted to put her knowledge in a book, and her husband, a cardiothoracic surgeon, said do it.

The book, "Healthy Mexican Cooking: Authentic Low-Fat Recipes" ($14.95), was about five years in the making, as De la Garza compiled recipes, analyzed them, contacted a publisher, edited and re-edited.

The 256-page book, published by Appletree Press, Mankato, Minn., was released around Thanksgiving and is available at many bookstores or by calling (800) 322-5679.

The author gives concise overviews of some diseases and obstacles to good health and how eating habits assist in prevention.

Other chapters provide recipe modifications and list speciality suppliers. Still others tell the essential tools and ingredients of a Mexican kitchen with hints for heart-healthy Mexican meals.

De la Garza uses oil to make white-flour and wheat-flour tortillas.

For tamales, she uses corn oil margarine - chicken instead of pork and mozzarella cheese, a lighter cheese. These are healthier options.

She steams tortillas for enchiladas. An easy thing to do, but it alters the fat content.

She has written little introductions for the desserts with insights into Hispanic cooking and how the foods are prepared. Teas are made from cinnamon sticks, and the tea is used to flavor pastries.

De la Garza is proud of presenting much-loved foods in a healthier way.

Her training lent a lot of credibility to the book. She completed her dietetic internship at St. Mary's Hospital of the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., and earned a master's of science degree in nutrition from Texas Woman's University.

The author feels children can be programmed to eat right, to make better choices. Although her children are normal, and eat candy and fast food occasionally, they also compare the fat grams at the grocery store. Little things make a difference. And she packs their lunches to make sure they get what they need.

"Better health is a gift you can give them," she said.

The following recipes are from the book's storehouse, which De la Garza believes will make a difference in helping people follow a healthier lifestyle.

POBLANO CORN RELISH "Maiz con Chile Poblano"

2 fresh Poblano chiles
1 small onion, diced
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
1 cups frozen corn kernels
2 tablespoons cilantro
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
Nonstick cooking spray
Preheat oven to 500 degrees. Rinse Poblano chiles and prepare baking sheet with aluminum foil. Place on baking sheet and roast, occasionally turning until skin has completely blistered. Immediately place chiles between damp, clean kitchen towel and set aside.
In a skillet sprayed with nonstick cooking spray, saute onions and garlic until onions are translucent. Add frozen corn kernels and continue to warm about 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, remove chiles from towel and peel off outer skin. Remove stem and seeds. Chop chile into small pieces. Add chile, cilantro, salt and pepper to corn mixture and heat for about 5 minutes more. Serve warm or cold.

Serves 8.
Nutrient analysis for 1 serving: 45 calories, trace fat, 1g fiber, 69mg sodium, trace saturated fat, 0mg cholesterol.
Diabetic Exchange: 1/2 vegetable.

ORANGE CHICKEN "Pollo con Naranja"

1 can (6 ounces) frozen orange juice concentrate 2 cloves garlic
1/2 teaspoon pepper

1/2 teaspoon cumin seeds
1/2 teaspoon red chili powder
1 small jalapeno, seeded and diced
1 teaspoon salt
1-1/2 pounds chicken breasts, skinned
1/2 cup onions, cut in strips
8 small red potatoes, scrubbed and cut in quarters
Set crock pot to high.
Add orange juice, garlic, pepper, cumin, red chili powder, jalapeno and salt to blender or food processor and blend until smooth.

Place chicken breasts in crock pot and pour orange juice mixture over chicken. Top with onions and potatoes.

Cook for 6 hours on high. Chicken temperature should reach 160 degrees before serving.

Serves 4.
Nutrient analysis for 1 serving: 465 calories, 2.6g fat, 4.8g fiber, 658mg sodium, .6g saturated fat, 98mg cholesterol.

Diabetic exchange: 1-1/2 bread, 5 meat, 1/2 vegetable, 1 fruit.

Names in the News

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) - Times have surely changed: CBS censors used to get worked up about a navel or a little cleavage on "Gilligan's Island."

"We were always covering ourselves up. TV is certainly more liberal these days," said Dawn Wells, who played wholesome Mary Ann on the '60s series. Her co-star Tina Louise played the movie star Ginger.

"My navel and Tina's cleavage were always the subject of debate," Wells said.

Wells was in Columbus on Wednesday to help kick off a senior citizens program sponsored by two hospitals. She addressed about 100 senior citizens and autographed her "Gilligan's Island Cookbook."

Almost 30 years after the comedy series' final original episode aired, Wells is still riding the waves of Gilligan's popularity.

"Everyone wants to ask me about Gilligan and the Professor and my days on the island," said Wells, who is in her early 50s. "And I love to talk about them."

She still sees Bob Denver (Gilligan) and Russell Johnson (The Professor), but she doesn't see Louise that often.
