HISD adds 42 new classroom teachers

New educator praises helpful colleagues

By SHERRI MARTIN
Staff Writer

Students, "Do Not Enter" signs and air-conditioning systems are not the only things new to Hereford Independent School District this fall.

For the 1996-97 school year, 42 teachers walked into local classrooms for the first time.

Vita Sotelo, a sixth grade teacher at West Central Intermediate School is not new to the classroom.

"Even though I've taught for six years, the school guidelines are new. The teaching still comes from me, but the ends and outs are new," she said.

At a small school in rural Bonita, Ariz., Sotelo taught fifth through eighth grade for five years.

She graduated from Northern

Arizona University in Flagstaff, Ariz., with a bachelor's degree in education in 1989 and a master's degree in education in 1992.

Sotelo recently moved to Hereford with her husband, Adrian and son, Diego. Her husband is self-employed as a farrier. Her son is a freshman at Hereford High School. She also has two children living in Arizona.

At West Central, she said, teachers use a "self-contained" teaching system where she has the responsibility to teach all subjects to students in her class.

"The system works. The great thing about teaching the same students all day is teachers are always conscious of the ability of a student. We can continually work on developing their skills," she said.

While teaching four different grade levels in Arizona, Sotelo used the same teaching style.

"It fits my style of teaching. I'm used to having lots of freedom in teaching skills to fit my classroom and my students. And that's consistent with how I taught in Arizona," she said.

Where she used to be the only teacher for fifth through eighth graders, Sotelo is one of six sixth grade teachers at West Central. Another sixth grade teacher, Mark Stokes, serves as Sotelo's mentor.

"I have all the help I need. All I have to do is ask," she said.

All the sixth grade teachers work together to share information and class materials, she said.

"That's so important. If we don't know something, it's because we haven't asked," she said.

During the first six weeks, all sixth grade classes will study the different types of insects. The teachers are working on integrating the insect unit in each subject area.

Along with making their own insect collections, students will work on writing assignments, will read books about insects and will construct graphs on insects.

"Everyone works together to tie it in. The kids are excited about it so they will learn a lot more," she said.

During her planning period, Sotelo works on general paperwork and parent conferences.

"There is very little time for lesson plans," she said. "Teachers put in lots and lots of time after school. The time during the school day is for the (See TEACHERS, Page 2A)

School sets budget hearing here Tuesday

The Hereford Independent School District will hold a public hearing on the 1996-97 proposed budget Tuesday, Aug. 27 during the second regular board meeting of the month. The meeting will be at the 6 p.m. in the board room, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue.

Also during the meeting, Karen Sherrod will be sworn in as District 1 trustee. She replaces Cherry McWhorter, who resigned from the board when she moved to Canyon recently.

In addition, the board will take action on the City of Hereford's request for help in funding the Hereford Aquatic Center, an attendance incentives program for teachers and campus staff and review bids on property and liability insurance.

Trustees also will vote on a package of policy updates suggested by the Texas Association of School Boards.

Also on Monday, trustees will hear reports from the administrative staff on cafeteria, transportation, maintenance, tax office, enrollment and insurance.

The meeting is open to the public.

New teacher at work

Vita Sotelo, sixth grade teacher at West Central Intermediate School is hard at work. She gave her students a writing assignment -- write a paragraph about their favorite movie. Sotelo is one of 42 new teachers in the Hereford Independent School District.

Confused about property tax rates? Tax bases, effective rates explained

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

When local taxing entities set their tax rates for the new budget year, most taxpayers want to know one thing: "How much will it increase my taxes?"

If the property valuation remains the same, it's not too difficult for a person to figure how much his taxes are going up.

For example, Deaf Smith County set its tax rate last week at 53.5 cents per $100 valuation. Last year's actual rate was 52 cents. For a $50,000 house last year, knock off two zeros (for the per $100 valuation) and multiply 500 times .52. The tax was $260. This year it will be $267.50. (500 x .535) That's a $7.50 hike, or 2.8 percent.

Deaf Smith County Hospital District kept its rate of 22.4 cents per $100 valuation at a meeting Tuesday night. Taxes on a $50,000 house were $112 last year and will be the same this year.

Hereford Independent School District will set its rate next Tuesday night, and the City of Hereford will set its rate early in September.

The taxing entities have several tax rates to consider when determining their rate. Property tax information for Deaf Smith County entities was calculated by the Deaf Smith Appraisal District and recently published in The Hereford Brand.

Those property tax public notices from the appraisal district can be confusing to the taxpayer. They list the actual tax rate, the effective tax rate, the 3-percent rate increase, and this year's rollback tax rate. (Definitions for the rates and terms used accompany this story.)

The tax bases for the county and school district took a big hit this year, and the hospital district base also dropped. Last year's HISD tax base was $433 million after adjustments. This year, the adjusted total fell to $418.2 million. The county tax base also dropped from $503.3 to $492.7 million, or about $10.6 million.

About $10 million of the HISD tax base loss resulted from a court ruling that businesses could elect to declare their inventories on Sept. 1, according to Fred Fox, chief appraiser for the local appraisal district. For some companies--such as Frito-Lay, Holly Sugar, seed companies and grain elevators--there is a huge difference between inventory on hand Jan. 1 and Sept. 1.

Other adjustments are made for lost property, tax freeze values for senior citizens, homestead exemptions, and delinquent taxes collected. Fox also noted that the district lowered some values for Holly Sugar Corporation recently, after tax representatives for the company contested the valuations. The values are still in dispute. Another factor in the total tax base is that there was not much growth in new buildings or businesses.

Each taxing entity adopts a budget and sets its own tax rate. Deaf Smith County's new rate of 53.5 cents per $100 valuation is an increase of 1.5 cents over the past year, or an increase of slightly less than 3 percent.

The county's effective tax rate this

Clinton declares war on tobacco industry

WASHINGTON (AP)--President Clinton is declaring war on the tobacco industry, vowing to end the peddling of cigarettes to teen-agers even as he ignites a hot political issue just before the Democratic convention.

A sweeping crackdown by the Food and Drug Administration aims to cut teen-age smoking in half by ending the advertising images that portray tobacco use as sexy and fun--and by making it harder for teen-agers to illegally buy tobacco.

The regulations were long-anticipated and contained no surprises, but Clinton raced them into law Friday in the hope they become a centerpiece of his re-election campaign's "family values" theme.

"Cigarette companies still have a right to market their products to adults," he told a Rose Garden audience. But "Joe Camel and the Marlboro Man will be out of our children's reach forever."

The rules may be aimed at the nation's 4.5 million teen-aged smokers, but adults will notice them, too. Among the curbs:

--No more Joe Camel ads in Rolling Stone magazine and other publications read by significant numbers of teen-agers. Only black-and-white text ads will be allowed.

--No more Marlboro Man on roadside billboards, where black-and-white text will also be the law. And no billboards at all within 1,000 feet of schools or playgrounds.

--Cigarette vending machines banned everywhere except adults-only establishments such as casinos or nightclubs that require proof of age to enter.

--Photo identification required for every purchase by anyone under age 27.

--No more brand-name sponsorship of sports such as the former Virginia Slims tennis tournament or auto-racing teams and events bearing such names and Marlboro and Winston.

--And no more brand names on T-shirts or other promotional paraphernalia owned by 2.2 million teen-agers.

Clinton approved the FDA's decision that nicotine was an addictive drug, giving the agency authority to regulate cigarettes and smokeless tobacco as the devices that deliver nicotine.

The move lets the FDA curb the sale and promotion of tobacco, just as it regulates the sale and marketing of heart valves or insulin pumps.

But it pits Clinton against the powerful tobacco industry, advertisers, farmers and Southern lawmakers--including Democrats who fear the issue will cost them their seats. Clinton aides feared some Democrats would skip next week's nominating convention in protest.

Democratic Gov. Paul Patton of Kentucky, whose state will play host to part of Clinton's post-convention bus tour, announced that his administration would sue to block the regulations.

Another Democratic governor of (See CLINTON, Page 2A)

Property tax definitions

Having trouble understanding all the terms associated with property tax rates in Deaf Smith County? The following definitions may make things a little clearer:

Actual Tax Rate: This is the rate set by the taxing entity. (Example, the actual tax rate for the Hereford ISD in 1995-96 was $1.239 per $100 valuation.)

Effective Tax Rate: This is the rate that, if approved, would generate the same amount of revenue as the previous year's Actual Tax Rate. If the tax base of a taxing entity increases, the Effective Tax Rate goes down; likewise, if the tax base declines, the Effective Tax Rate increases. (Example, the effective tax rate for HISD this year is $1.275 per $100 valuation.)

Tax Base: This is the total amount of taxable property within the taxing entity. In Deaf Smith County, there are five main taxing entities -- the City of Hereford, Deaf Smith County, the Hereford ISD, Deaf Smith County Hospital District and Walcott ISD. Since the boundaries of each taxing entity varies, the tax base of each entity varies as well.

3 Percent Tax Rate Increase: This is the rate increase under which a district does not have to publish public notice and hold a public hearing. The 3 percent increase is off the Effective Tax Rate.

Rollback Rate: This is the highest tax rate a taxing entity can set before taxpayers may start tax rollback petitions. The rollback rate is found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base with adjustments as required by state law. No taxing entity in Deaf Smith County this year is proposing a rate increase that would reach the Rollback Level.

Elevator back in use at courthouse

After a month of walking four flights of stairs in the Deaf Smith County Courthouse, employees and visitors can breathe easier.

Repairs to the aging elevator were completed, and it was restored to full use on Friday.

To bring the conveyance up to code, it underwent a near complete overhaul.

Wiring and cables were replaced. A new control panel, fire alarm and smoke detection system, and back up system were added.

The original car remains in use with new paneling.

TAXES

year was 52.83 cents, slightly over the 52-cent actual rate last year because the tax base dropped. The county tax hike over the effective rate was just 1.2 percent.

Hospital district directors Tuesday night took a stand on holding the line on taxes. They voted to keep last year's rate of 22.4 cents per $100 valuation. This year's effective rate is 22.78 cents, but the board bypassed that option and will have less revenue this year.

For HISD, last year's actual rate was $1,239 and this year's effective rate is $1,275. The tax base fell about $12 to $15 million, said Fox, after adjustments. This required a larger rate to bring in the same revenues. The district is considering a 7-cent increase--which represents slightly less than 3 percent over the effective rate, or 5.6 percent over the past year's actual rate. The board will approve a budget and set the tax rate Tuesday night.

The City of Hereford has not set its tax rate yet. Last year's actual rate was 42 cents per $100 valuation, and this year's effective rate is 41.54 cents. The city's tax base rose from $231.6 million to $233 million. According to discussions in budget workshops, the commission is expected to keep the same rate as last year.

The Walcott Independent School District set its 1996-97 tax rate Tuesday, keeping the same rate as last year--97.57 cents per $100 valuation.

Due to an increase in the tax base, however, this year's effective tax rate dropped to 89.57 cents. Thus, a decrease of 8-cents in the tax rate would have yielded the same revenue as last year. Since the adopted rate is more than a 3 percent increase over the effective rate, the district was required to publish a notice and hold a public hearing.

The notice was published Thursday, listing a proposed 8.9 percent increase in revenues, but showing no increase in taxes, except where property values increased. The hearing is set Aug. 29 at 6 p.m. in the board room at Walcott School.

The new budget of $685,754 was an increase of $42,754 over last year.

Evidence of explosives found among TWA debris

SMITHTOWN, N.Y. (AP)--Microscopic explosive traces were found on a piece of wreckage from TWA Flight 800, but it isn't conclusive evidence that a bomb or missile brought down the jetliner, investigators said Friday.

FBI Assistant Director James Kallstrom, responding to media reports about the trace evidence, cautioned it was still too early to classify the July 17 blast that killed all 230 people aboard a criminal act.

"Based upon all of the scientific and forensic evidence analyzed to date, we cannot conclude that TWA Flight 800 crashed as a result of an explosive device," Kallstrom said. "The detection of the microscopic explosive traces alone does not allow the conclusion."

The FBI official reiterated that investigators were still considering three scenarios: a bomb, a missile attack, or a mechanical malfunction.

While Kallstrom refused to provide any details about the explosive residue, he said the test results were confirmed by an independent laboratory, and rated the chances of a false positive at "slim to none."

A source close to the probe, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, said investigators were still looking for something "more decisive and more specific.... They need more parts of the puzzle."

The source told the AP, "The sample is just not sufficient enough to rule out possible contamination."

The trace amount also might have come from a passenger who worked with such chemicals, or the wreckage fragment could have come in contact with a chemical after it was recovered from the deck of a salvage ship, or from the overalls of a field worker, other sources said.

Investigators would like to find pieces of metal pitted by the blast or other physical evidence to bolster the chemical finding, Kallstrom said.

Authorities believe the blast took place between rows 17 and 28, above the 747's center fuel tank. The source said the chemical showed up on a piece of wreckage found on the floor of the cabin in that area of the plane.

Clinton modifies welfare reform act

WASHINGTON (AP)--A day after signing welfare overhaul legislation, President Clinton attempted to remedy provisions of the law that he said could harm legal immigrants and their families through no fault of their own.

Clinton issued directives to Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman and Attorney General Janet Reno Friday to ensure benefits to legal aliens are not cut off mistakenly and to speed the citizenship process.

"The president has vowed to repair these provisions of the bill," White House press secretary Mike McCurry said. "In the meantime, however, he is determined to ensure that they are implemented carefully, and that no individuals not actually covered by these provisions are improperly denied the benefits they and their children need."

Bob Dole's presidential campaign took issue with Clinton's action.

"Bill Clinton's actions to weaken welfare reform signal loud and clear that Bill Clinton is more comfortable with the broken status quo than he is with new measures meant to improve Americans' lives," campaign spokeswoman Christina Martin said.

In a directive to Glickman, Clinton ordered that states be given the maximum time allowed by law to ensure that legal immigrants eligible for food stamps continue to receive them.

Glickman will grant waivers allowing any state to extend the certification periods for food stamp eligibility for legal immigrants receiving assistance.

"The extension will give states time to develop the procedures needed to make accurate determinations of the many facts - such as immigration classification, veteran status or work history - that the new law makes relevant to eligibility," McCurry said.

McCurry said that under the terms of the new law, benefits to legal immigrants and their families will be cut off only when they attempt to recertify their eligibility to receive food stamps.

The White House said the waiver has limits and that certification periods may not be extended beyond one year for most aliens or beyond two years for those who are elderly or disabled. In any case, the government may not allow states to extend recertification beyond Aug. 22, 1997.

In a second directive, the president told the attorney general to make every effort to reduce bureaucratic delay for legal immigrants applying for citizenship.

"In the past, hundreds of thousands of eligible people have had to wait unnecessarily to become citizens," the president said in the directive, in which he told Reno to increase the number of people processing applications.

Clinton's directive also orders agency heads to develop public-private partnerships to provide English-language training to those applying for citizenship, to reach out to those wishing to become citizens and to provide special help to refugees and those seeking asylum.

TEACHERS

children. The time after school is for grading papers."

At West Central, each teacher is assigned to a campus committee. Sotelo serves on the discipline committee.

The committee has set up a "No FEAR" (Finish Every Assignment Required) incentive program geared toward getting students to finish their homework assignments. If a student doesn't finish his homework, he is assigned to FEAR detention.

To give students the opportunity to work in group settings, Sotelo arranges her students' desks in pods. "Our goal is to educate our students to work in society. They are going to have to learn to work in a group. This gets them comfortable with working with other people cooperatively," she said.

In a corner of her room, Sotelo has placed a large collection of books on a wooden bookshelf as a library for her students. A large rug covers the floor and two pillows are tossed against the wall.

Each day, Sotelo allows her students to find a comfortable space to read.

"They know reading time is for reading -- not talking to their friends," she said.

Sotelo likes her classroom walls to be covered with the students' work.

On a bulletin board in the front of her classroom, Sotelo used a car racing theme. The board, decorated with brightly colored race cars, says: "Readers -- Start your engines!"

During the first six weeks, students must read four books at or above their reading level to receive a grade of 100.

"I have certain expectations. I think four books is not unreasonable," she said.

Above the "Reader's Race" bulletin board, she has a poster that reads: "There is nothing as unequal as the equal treatment of unequals."

"I believe that teachers have to let atobacco-growing state, Jim Hunt of North Carolina, said he may file suit as well. The rules are "inappropriate or illegal," he argued.

CLINTON

Tobacco makers deny nicotine is addictive or that they entice teens to smoke.

"It's clear that FDA's intent ... is aimed ultimately at banning cigarettes," said a statement from Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp.

"We have absolutely no plans to ban tobacco in this country," Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala responded.

Under the regulations, photo identification will be required in six months, but the tobacco industry and retailers will have a year to comply with almost every other provision. The sports sponsorship rules don't take effect for two years because the FDA noted that auto races and other events are sold that far in advance.

The industry did score a victory Friday as a jury in Indianapolis decided that tobacco companies were not responsible for a smoker's death from lung cancer. "We were very strong in our feeling that personal responsibility is very important," said jury foreman David Anderson.

"This case is not a case of whether cigarettes are dangerous."

a child learn at their own level and progress from there," she said.

On an adjacent wall, she has displayed the students' work on the "ME activity." Under the M, students wrote about themselves. Under the E, students wrote about what they thought they would be doing at age 18, 40 and 80.

The activity allowed students to share information about themselves with their classmates, she said.

Sotelo is pleased with the students' performance.

"These are a good group of kids. They are doing beautifully," she said. By being a role model for her students, Sotelo hopes to teach them respect for themselves and others.

"If they can learn to be healthy, active and responsible," she said, "they can do anything. They can do algebra, physical science or chemistry as long as they feel they can do it."

When her students leave the sixth grade, Sotelo wants them to be independent. To teach them to be independent, she plans to integrate life skills into her daily lessons.

"When things come up within the course of the day, I'll take the moment to teach life skills," she said.

For example, she said, a student did not want to make a presentation in front of the class. In an open discussion, the students shared their feelings about getting up in front of their peers. The student was able to overcome his fear because of the acceptance from his peers.

"They can overcome anything with the help of the classroom," she said. "When the opportunity comes up, you have to use them," she said.

As a new Hereford teacher, Sotelo said her job is made more enjoyable by Principal George Ochs and her colleagues at West Central.

"Mr. Ochs and the whole staff -- they've all been so friendly to me. I have not met anyone here who hasn't been helpful and gone out of their way to assist me. That makes it easy," she said.

"If it wasn't for administration, I wouldn't be able to be the teacher I feel I can be," she said.

Four die in crash of Marine Corps plane

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) - A Marine electronic-warfare plane crashed in the desert Friday, killing all four people aboard in the third military aircraft accident in two days.

The EA-6B Prowler, designed to jam enemy communications, went down at midmorning during a training mission on a gunnery range near the Gila Mountains, about 60 miles east of the Marine Corps Air Station at Yuma.

The cause of the crash was under investigation.

The victims' names were not immediately released. The crew was from the Marine base at Cherry Point, N.C., and was training at Yuma.

On Thursday, a National Guard A-10 warplane crashed in a marsh on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, and a Marine FA-18 fighter went down in the Atlantic off Ocean City, Md. Both accidents occurred in clear weather.

The body of the A-10 pilot, Maj. Michael J. Griffin, 39, of Sellersville, Pa., was found Friday. The pilot of the other single-seat plane, Patrick Gregoire of Portland, Ore., was missing at sea and presumed dead.

After the crash Saturday of a C-130 cargo plane in Wyoming that killed all nine people on board, and three other military crashes in the past month, the Air Force earlier this week halted one-quarter of its routine training flights to review safety procedures.

Texas town enduring burning mulch

By JUAN B. ELIZONDO Jr.
Associated Press Writer

JONAH, Texas (AP) - This small town has a big smell, and some residents are burning mad about it.

A Texas-sized pile of cedar mulch caught fire here about three weeks ago. But state and Williamson County officials say there's little that can be done except to let it burn.

Depending on the wind's direction and strength, the odor of burning cedar can be smelled for up to several miles away. Nearby, the smell is constant and strong.

"It's bad. My three kids all have asthma. They haven't been able to play outside at all," said David Vasquez, one of about 60 Jonah residents.

Vasquez lives about half a mile away from the private property where the mulch is burning.

The cedar pile, owned by an Austin man, is "not quite the size of a football field, but has the look of one," said Terry Hadley, a spokesman for the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission.

The state agency and officials from the Williamson County emergency services and health department planned a meeting with Jonah residents to discuss the situation.

Hadley said there are state regulations on outdoor burning and nuisance laws. But he said those subjective nuisance standards have not been reached.

And he said there is no law regulating the size of mulch piles.

"We're going out there to get more information," Hadley said Friday. "People would have to not be able to enjoy the use of their homes for some time" for the nuisance laws to kick in.

Doreen Holmstrom, a resident who is allergic to cedar, says the situation is beyond a nuisance.

"I've been choked up since it started," she said standing in front of her home, also about a half a mile from the fire. "I guess we'll just have to live with it."

Vasquez said he can't live with it and wants to see something done.

"They say it's out in the country and not hurting anyone. But us nobodies out here pay our county taxes. We're hoping they will come up with some solution."

One proposal would have Vasquez's children and other nearby residents with breathing problems move to another community until the fire burned out.

But Mrs. Holmstrom said she's not moving away.

"It is a nuisance," said Lee Gresham, another nearby resident. "But it's not worth trying to put out if it can't be.

Officials estimate the fire could burn anywhere from two weeks to two months, depending on weather conditions.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says something's wrong--we spend $60 million a year on medical research and $2 billion on get-well cards.

First they tell you that you can't take it with you, then they charge you for leaving it behind.

Realizing that taxpayers are often confused by all the figures and terms when local entities are adopting budgets and setting tax rates, we attempted to explain the system in a front-page article in today's Brand.

It was a difficult article to put together, but we hope that it serves to better educate readers about the complicated taxing process. Our fear is that many readers might say, "That's about as clear as mud!"

If you are one of those who are critical of local governmental bodies for raising taxes every year, you might want to express a big "thank you" to representatives on the hospital board.

In a rare action Tuesday night, the Deaf Smith County Hospital District kept the same tax rate as last year, even though it resulted in a loss of revenue because the effective rate went up.

Taxpayers may also get good news when Hereford City Commission adopts its budget and sets a tax rate. The commission is planning to hold its rate at the current 42-cent per $100 valuation mark.

The city's tax base, however, increased slightly over the past year so - even at the same rate - the projected tax revenue will increase by approximately $5,000.

Supt. Charles Greenawalt has proposed a 7-cent tax rate increase for Hereford Independent School District. The board is scheduled to adopt its budget and set a tax rate Tuesday night.

Greenawalt has said that a major issue is that the 7-cent hike would allow the district to receive maximum state funding. Since all the funds come from taxpayers, some opponents to the tax raise contend the action is a matter of "robbing Peter to pay Paul."

An AP news analysis

Clinton aiming for Democratic center

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

He is aiming at the political center. One bill was of Democratic design, one was a Clinton compromise, one a largely Republican measure he is signing to redeem an old campaign promise, despite welfare strictures he deems too harsh.

His campaign now claims them all as part of his agenda, while Republicans complain that he seeks credit for what they did in Congress to overhaul the welfare system and broaden health care coverage.

"The only play in Bill Clinton's playbook is fake right and run left," said Haley Barbour, the Republican Party chairman. But the Republicans have yet to perfect their defense. Bob Dole, who has been calling Clinton a copycat, said at the GOP convention that he was surprised the president hadn't shown up there.

But with the White House as his political stage, Clinton can and is putting his stamp on the bills Congress passed in a pre-convention burst of legislation, Republican evidence against Democratic complaints that the GOP majorities couldn't deliver.

"A minimum wage increase, portable health care, pension security, welfare to work opportunities - that's a plan that's putting America on the right track," Clinton said of his bill-signing sequence, White House ceremonies Monday through Wednesday.

The health care bill came in the middle, appropriately enough, since that's where Clinton found himself on the issue after the off-year election landslide that put Republicans in control of Congress. It entitles people to keep coverage when they change or lose jobs, even if they have preexisting medical conditions.

But it does not deal with the broader coverage Clinton had sought in his own health care bill, after threatening in 1994 to veto any measure short of universal health insurance. He got no bill at all, but the Republicans got a big-government

We have mixed emotions about this proposed raise. In defense of the superintendent and the board, they are getting hit over the head by the Texas Education Agency. A school district is rewarded for raising its tax rate, or punished for not going along with the system.

If the school board doesn't raise taxes this year and misses out on maximum state funds the next three years, are we going to see a big leap in the tax rate on down the road? Or, as some have suggested, could we make further cuts in the budget, not have a tax hike and still maintain a good school system?

Deaf Smith County has already adopted its budget along with a tax hike of 1.5 cents per $100 valuation. That represents a tax increase of 2.8 percent over last year.

If the school district hike is approved and the city's rate stays the same, the total tax on a $50,000 home (paying city, county, school and hospital district tax bills) would be $1,244. That's a $42.50 increase or a 3.4 percent hike.

While we don't like tax increases, especially when our tax base is falling, we could call this a nominal hike. However, like many folks, we notice that taxes are going up at a faster rate than our income.

Our tax receipt from 1990 shows the total tax rate for city, county, school and hospital districts was $1,854 per $100 valuation. Now, the proposed total is $2,488, or a hike of 63.4 cents. That represents a 25 percent increase since 1990.

It's also interesting to look at the rates of each entity, and see that education and health care account for most of the increases. The school district tax rate was 80.86 cents in 1990; now, the proposed rate is 50 cents higher at 1,309. The hospital rate was 12.94 cents; now it is almost 9.5 cents higher at 22.4 cents.

Over those six years, the county rate only rose from 48.38 cents to 53.5 cents. The city tax rate actually decreased--from 43.26 to 42 cents.

To end these taxing thoughts, we remind you of the old maxim: Only two things are certain--death and taxes.

issue they turned against him in the elections that followed.

Republican presidential nominee Bob Dole stuck to that track, saying the bill the president signed could have been law three years ago but for his insistence that partial steps would not suffice. Dole said what Clinton wanted then was "an overdose of government control on health care," and Republicans said he will seek it again should he get the opportunity.

Clinton stuck to the positive. "With this bill we take a long step toward the kind of health care reform our nation needs," he said in signing it on Wednesday.

In his 1992 campaign, Clinton told his rallies that he would "end welfare as we know it," presenting himself as a new kind of Democrat. But he delayed a White House proposal on that front, and the Democrats lost Congress before it came to action.

Twice, Clinton vetoed Republican welfare measures tied to other issues, including curbs on the budget for Medicaid, which provides health care for the needy. Then they sent him a single issue version, and he accepted it. In signing it, Republican Barbour said, he renounces "the Democratic Party's fundamental principle that the right to welfare should be a government entitlement."

The measure required work for welfare, as Clinton advocated, but it also limits benefits without the safety net provisions he wanted for children, and it denies most aid to legal immigrants who are not U.S. citizens.

Liberal Democrats wanted another veto. They got only Clinton's promise to go back to Congress to changes in provisions he found objectionable. He won't get them unless Democrats wrest back control, a long shot prospect at best.

The bill increasing the minimum wage to $5.15 an hour in two steps, the first about one month before the election, was the clearly Democratic measure among the three, and as he signed it, Clinton praised labor and liberal groups that worked for passage. Among them are some of the people who opposed him on welfare, and there could be ripples of resentment at the Democratic National Convention.

But this is the president who declared the era of big government to be over. And the three-bill parlay fits the message.

Make a promise to strengthen the family

The other day I got thinking about how so many problems in our country (teen pregnancy, juvenile drug use, drop-out rate, teen crime, etc.) stem from the breakdown of the family.

For years now we have seen increases in the number of divorces, one-parent households, step-parents trying to raise children, and people forced to raise their grandchildren because their own children have proved to be unfit (or unwilling) parents.

While nothing will completely solve these problems, I think something can be done. I think back to the wedding ceremony, when a family is first created.

In most wedding ceremonies, couples pledge their love "till death do us part." However, too many couples just mouth the words of the vows, but don't mean them.

I think every married couple should sit down together and pledge once more to each other the promises made at the wedding altar.

Such a pledge might be something like this:

"I (name) promise before God that I will love, honor, respect and care for you from now until death. I promise that I will do nothing to undermine the foundation of our marriage and will put you above

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

everything else in this life, save my relationship with God. I love you and pledge to show you this love in word and deed every day of my life."

Beyond this renewal of the promises of marriage, I think the whole family can make similar promises to preserve that family and keep it healthy.

For example:
Pledge for young children: "I (name) promise before God that I will love and obey you, my parents. You know more than I do and know what is best for me. I will not argue with you, fight against you or hurt you. I will eat what's put before me, bathe when told and go to bed in a timely manner so I will grow big and strong and healthy. I love you and will tell you so every day."

Pledge for older children: "I (name) promise before God that I will love, honor and obey you, my parents.

While I am becoming more independent as I grow and develop, I promise that, while I am under your roof, I will abide by your rules and directions, recognizing that you love me and want what is best for me. I will not borrow the car without permission, I will not violate legal or family curfews and I will not use tobacco, alcohol or illegal drugs. I will keep myself pure before God and you, and endeavor to keep the family name in the manner in which it was kept before me. I love you and will tell you so every day."

Pledge for parents to grown children: "I (name) promise before God that I will love you and support you as you and your spouse build your family. I promise not to tell you how to live your lives, or tell you how to raise your children, unless I am asked, and then only with utmost tact and love. I will be here for you in time of hardship or financial need, to the extent I am able, but I will allow you to mold your family as your upbringing and experience has taught you. I love you and will tell you so as often as I see you."

Promise for children to step-parents: "I (name) promise before God that I will give you the respect that is due you as the spouse of my natural parent. I promise to obey you as the authority figure with my natural parent and will learn to love you as I live with you and grow with you. I will respect your place in our family and your love for my natural parent. I will refrain from making derogatory remarks to you or about you to others and will work with you as we blend our individual parts into a new and unique whole."

Promise for step-parent to step-child: "I (name) promise before God that I will treat you with the respect and honor due you as natural child of my spouse. I will not force my love, devotion, or loyalty on you, knowing that they come with time. I will work with your natural parent in matters of correction, training and discipline. I will spend time with you to learn about you, so we may better learn to love one another. I will be the best spouse to your natural parent I can be and will learn to be the best parent to you that I can be."

Editorials from around the State

Austin American-Statesman on global warming:

There is some room for debate about whether human activity is changing the world climate. If it is accepted that humankind's works do have an effect, there is more room for debate about the extent of the effect.

That much was evident from a lively conference on the subject last week at the University of Texas Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs.

What shouldn't get lost in the debate, however, is common sense, and common sense tells us that it is stupid and dangerous to foul one's own nest. ...

Though a majority of scientists has determined that there probably is an effect on the climate caused by human activity, there hasn't been a determination of the size of the impact. ...

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

As an independent, small business owner and taxpayer in Hereford, I am greatly discouraged over the discussion on raising taxes in all areas. It's probably a "done deal" but I feel I must express my views to any who would listen with an objective ear.

When we came here 23 years ago, this school system was recognized with one of the highest evaluations in the state. Now, it has managed to drop to being monitored by the state because of low SAT scores. We have grabbed every government program available and poured the money into the system from all angles to accomplish this feat. Does it not occur to anyone out there that money is not the solution for everything?

In my business if my seed does not produce, I am held accountable. If I have wild or bad seed, it is removed. I work from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and travel often on the weekends "to be able" to work these hours. When our profits drop, we cut expenses, personnel and trim in all areas--but we maintain the quality of our product.

It has mean everyone working together with determination--it doesn't mean spending more money, hiring more personnel, buying more buildings, or attending more meetings. The enrollment of our school system has not grown, but our budget has increased greatly.

I have a Master's Degree, the same as many school employees, but I don't take home anything like the salary most are making (even in the classroom), and there has not been an across-the-board raise for me or my employees in the last five years.

Our small company is in the top 10 highest-taxed entities in the city of Hereford and the top 20 in the county. We are an established totally ag-related business, yet we have no exemptions on inventory, as the cattlemen.

When we were expanding a few years ago, a tax abatement was discussed which would increase employment and services. We were turned down while outside financiers, who came in and enlarged existing businesses or established new ones, were encouraged and helped.

As we look around now, compared to a few years ago, I think we see Hereford businesses struggling and closing. Raising taxes will only push more out. Think about it realistically and rationally, then attend your school board, city and county commission meetings!

Bill Lyles

Certainly, it costs more to be careful with resources, whether they are renewable or depletable, aesthetic or vital to continued life on the planet. Even if it turns out we're not contributing to global warming, though, we still ought to be good stewards. Who wants to live on an ugly, polluted planet?

Whether life could be sustained on other planets in other solar systems if we ruin this one is something we will not know for perhaps dozens of generations.

What we do know is that for our children and grandchildren, there is and will be only one planetary residence.

The San Angelo Standard-Times on redistricting:

Not that another reason was needed to change the way legislative and congressional districts are mapped in Texas, but a panel of judges has provided it nonetheless.

Three federal judges recently drew new lines in response to a Supreme Court ruling that three congressional districts were unconstitutional because race was too dominant a factor in their creation, it says much that most politicians - including those in the Democratic Party, which got the worst of the deal - were essentially relieved, because the judges did less damage than had been feared.

Not everyone agrees, though, including many of the more than 3 million voters affected by the reapportionment who are likely to be confused by the new voting arrangement.

Though just three districts were declared illegal, changing them also meant changing those nearby, so 10 other congressional districts were redrawn as well.

But it won't simply be a re-vote. This will be more like a special election, which alters the traditional voting pattern and brings the possibility of political mischief into play.

In these elections, anyone can run, not just those who survived party primaries. A candidate must receive a majority of the vote to win on Nov. 5, which means runoff elections are probable. Those will be held Dec. 10, which is an awful time for politics because of the approaching Christmas holiday.

The result could be that a small number of votes will be choosing from among candidates who might not have been in the race had the judges not intervened.

And the courts certainly didn't have to intervene. They didn't in North Carolina, where judges decided that since the Legislature will draw new lines next year anyway - as ours also will do - it wasn't worth the cost and confusion to change the districts now.

Many state leaders, including Attorney General Dan Morales and state Sen. Jeff Wentworth, want to create a citizens' commission to draw the districts. Another proposal is for the Legislature to list priorities - placing people with common interests in one district, not splitting communities unnecessarily, etc. - and then let a computer draw the lines.

Either option would be better than the current system, which gives greater emphasis to protecting incumbents than meeting citizens' needs - and then virtually guarantees that the courts will decide whether the districts stand.

Maybe finally even the legislators are so frustrated that they'll opt for the sensible change.

PLN grant helps two rural colonias in county

Catholic organization funding initiates small landholder-based community projects

In the winter of 1994, the Promised Land Network began working with Mexican-American colonia dwellers in the vicinity of Hereford. Colonias are small unincorporated communities of ranchitos (small ranches) -- a collection of modest houses, fields and livestock pens wherein most families own a small acreage of land. These agrarian villages took shape in the early 1960s when migrant workers settled and built family homes on lots sold by a large property owner. Distinct from suburban areas lying beyond a city's limits, rural colonias in the Texas Panhandle function as productive landscapes where a family agriculture is practiced.

They bear a close resemblance to the ejido system in Mexico, established after the 1910 Revolution to give land to peasants who had been continually denied the access to ownership that Americans take for granted.

In September 1995, the PLN received a grant of $22,000 from the United States Catholic Conference Campaign for Human Development. The PLN also received a grant of $18,000 in second-year funding from the USCC. These funds helped establish a local office and initiate a small landholder-based community organizing project for two colonias in Deaf Smith County -- El Hormiguero and Coronado Acres. El Hormiguero -- the name selected for the project -- is a Spanish word meaning the anthill, a powerful image of achieving great outcomes through small actions.

People in colonias prefer to live in the country rather than in town, even though this choice presents certain challenges and some clear disadvantages. Though many residents own five to 10 acres of land, the majority must work full-time elsewhere to support their families, leaving little time to nurture and develop their own ranchitos. Hardly any of the families own a tractor, nor can they afford conventional farm equipment.

Furthermore, because there are few water wells in the colonias and soils tend to be worn and compacted, development of small-scale farming is risky. Dirt roads that link the colonia together also make transportation to town and school difficult during inclement weather.

Yet from these conditions, colonia dwellers construct lives and works of joy, beauty and harmony. Firmly grounded on their ranchitos, parents teach their children about a rural culture inherited from Mexico, a tapestry woven from customs, traditions, unique garden plants and practices of raising livestock. While many in the U.S. think of a two-car garage, a white picket fence and a huge house as the ultimate "American dream," colonia dwellers are motivated by a different vision. For them, to own and live on a parcel of land is a greater accomplishment.

Lydia Villanueva, lead organizer in the Hormiguero Project, strives to teach community building, leadership and empowerment skills. It is a slow process, mainly because it runs counter to the individualism and negativity that seem to pervade our society.

She conducts home visitations to surface leaders and holds meetings with various trainers to educate residents on participating in the political system and learning how civic structures function. Because land is the basis of colonia life, Villanueva includes an essential land management component in the El Hormiguero Project.

Courses are held in Spanish to instruct the participants in the principles of Holistic Resource Management (HRM) -- how to access the resource base and manage it as a whole, how to formulate a three-part goal and prioritize activities that can move the whole toward a long-term future vision.

Demonstrations of planned grazing and biointensive gardening are also being offered. All training is meant to enhance rather than replace skills residents already have. Their indigenous knowledge and unique practice of agriculture is exactly what the projects seek to preserve and sustain. Ultimately, Villanueva said she learns more from the people than she can teach them.

This past spring, the residents started a community garden in Coronado Acres. The vegetable seeds were donated by a local seed company, the soaker hoses by the local office of the Natural Resource Conservation Service and water by private donors. By having a community garden, residents are learning new methods such as raised bed gardening, companion planting and backyard composting.

Furthermore, the garden becomes a way of establishing community celebrations like the inaugural blessing on May 15, Feast of St. Isadore and Maria and the traditional Offering of the First Fruits on August 14, the eve of the Assumption of Mary.

Along with the PLN, Villanueva has come to believe through her experience in El Hormiguero Project that small Mexican-American landholders are vital to a sustainable agriculture in the Southern Plains.

Through working with those who share her culture, Villanueva and the residents are all learning to see the land as a home, as a foundation for community, family customs and stewardship of God's creation.

"Though it may be undervalued these days, living from the land is a beautiful way of life, something worth passing on from one generation to the next," she said.

Harvesting the community garden

Through a community garden, the Promised Land Network works with Mexican-American colonia dwellers on new gardening methods of raised bed gardening, companion planting and backyard composting. The garden also becomes a way of establishing community celebrations. Here, Elias Reyna harvests vegetables in the community garden.

Flight attendants union wants ValuJet head out

WASHINGTON (AP) - A union representing airline flight attendants amended its safety complaint against ValuJet Airlines Friday, citing reports the beleaguered carrier misled authorities about whether it has conducted critical re-inspections of its fleet.

The Association of Flight Attendants, which represents 40,000 attendants at 26 airlines, is seeking the ouster of Lewis Jordan, ValuJet's chief operating officer, and CEO Robert Priddy because of concerns about the airline's safety.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer reported Friday that ValuJet misled the Federal Aviation Administration last month about whether essential re-inspections had been performed on 25 airplanes and an engine.

A 21-page internal FAA report the newspaper obtained said ValuJet told the agency on July 17 that the inspections were completed. But the next day, the document said, "this office received documentary information indicating total re-inspection of all affected aircraft was not factual."

By July 31, the FAA received confirmation of total compliance with its directives and considered the issue closed.

The FAA refused to comment on the report Friday, but the flight attendants' union amended its complaint with the Transportation Department to include the newspaper's account.

ValuJet was grounded on June 17, about a month after a May 11 crash of one of its planes in the Florida Everglades killed all 110 people aboard. The FAA has been inspecting the airline's maintenance procedures while the U.S. Department of Transportation reviews ValuJet's finances and management.

The airline had been hoping for government approval for a return to service this month, but neither the FAA nor its parent Transportation Department had issued approval.

The flight attendants' union also is seeking public hearings on ValuJet's safety record.

ValuJet spokesman Gregg Kenyon said the airline would not discuss its efforts to meet the government's requirements.

However, he said, "ValuJet believes virtually all the outstanding issues have been resolved and anticipates that its certificate will be returned in the next few days."

— YOUR EYES —

Why Gas-Permeable Lenses?

Recent improvements in contact lenses have enabled people with astigmatism to wear contacts successfully. However, because astigmatism is related to an out-of-round lens, and soft contacts conform to the natural shape of the cornea, these are appropriate only for a mild degree of astigmatism.

A better option for the highly astigmatic is often the hard, gas-permeable lens. This combines a firm, supportive shape, allowing clearer and more stable vision, with a more comfortable plastic that permits oxygen to penetrate and reach the eye. The lenses are bigger than ordinary contacts, but nothing like the oversize lenses of years ago.

Other advantages: many of these lenses feature a slippery surface that wards off protein buildup and, because the gags permeability prevents corneal swelling, there's less "Spectacle blur" when the lenses are removed.

Texan makes his mark in manufacture of golf clubs

What started with round of golf has become international firm for Carl Paul

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - His neighbor might have taken Carl Paul bowling. Instead, they played a round of golf. Not quite 30 years after that first game - played with borrowed women's clubs - Paul ranks as one of the most successful people in the golf business.

Like so much else in the fickle game, how that happened is punctuated with what-ifs. What if Paul hadn't enjoyed golf? What if he'd been a better player and hadn't started tinkering with his clubs? What if his wife hadn't surrendered her Green Stamps, so he could get his first club repair tool, a power drill?

What if buying and assembling components - clubheads, shafts and grips - hadn't become such a popular way of purchasing golf clubs? But all that did happen. And today, Paul's company - Golfsmith International Inc. - employs 675 people, sits on a 41-acre complex complete with practice range and putting greens, receives up to 10,000 phone calls a day, ships club parts to 90 countries and last year recorded sales of $92 million. Catalog Age magazine puts it among the 100 largest mail-order companies in the nation. With the company projecting $120 million in sales this year, Golf Digest magazine ranks the Golfsmith brothers and his wife, Barbara, as No. 15 among the richest people in golf with an estimated net worth of $50 million.

The couple owns two-thirds of the company. Paul's brother, Frank, an accomplished amateur player, owns the remaining third. "I'm just an average golfer," Paul, 56, says. "But I was smitten with the game. And we always wanted to own our own business."

They not only got a business, they created an industry. Golfsmith pioneered the club component market in 1967, designing and selling club parts and supplies to repair shops, hobbyists and custom clubmakers. Although they've expanded into everything from retail sales to golf instruction, components remain the backbone of the company. Golfsmith offers more than 100 models of woods and irons.

It also owns retail stores in Austin, Dallas, Houston and Denver, and is opening one in Canada. It publishes catalogs and runs a 24-hour-a-day telephone sales operation. It has a sister company in Europe and distributors in Japan, South Africa, Australia, Malaysia, Korea, Italy, the Philippines and Mexico. Golfsmith's Austin headquarters is home to a clubmaking school and the Harvey Penick Golf Academy, founded with the late Austin Country Club pro who was author of the best-selling "Little Red Book." Each has taught thousands of students. And it's all because that neighbor invited Carl Paul to try his hand at golf.

In 1967, Paul was an engineer with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, living in a two-bedroom Edison, N.J. apartment. He'd never played golf and had no clubs. The neighbor offered her wife's set. "I'm embarrassed at what all those people must have thought on the first tee when this hacker got up there and swung the golf club," he laughs. "But I loved the game. That night, I went to a discount store and bought a $20 set of clubs. I went to the driving range and started practicing."

Within weeks, he purchased name-brand clubs. But like so many duffers, Paul winced as shot after shot curved off center on that infamous banana-shaped flight path. "I'm slicing. But I know I'm just this terrific athlete, like we all are. I said, 'It can't be me. It's got to be these clubs.'"

"So I start filing on the face of the club. I took the soleplate off the woods and changed the position of the lead weight. I cut down the wood head to make it more aerodynamic. I kept fixing 'em up. I found myself basically repairing golf clubs." Paul went to Barbara with an idea: move their baby into their room and install a workbench and club display rack in the second bedroom.

"She said, 'What for?' I said, 'I want to start a golf business.'" They did. Mailing out four-page typewritten catalogs, they then moved to a house that quickly became a factory: Shafts and clubheads stored in the attic, clubs assembled in the basement, phones answered at the breakfast counter.

"We just happened to see a niche in the marketplace. And we couldn't make clubheads fast enough," Paul said. By 1973, sales hit $375,000. They needed a new location. A native of Bishop, in South Texas, Paul chose Austin for its mild climate and location in the center of the country.

Far removed from the apartment, Golfsmith occupies buildings totaling 190,000 square feet, with another 30,000 square feet of retail showroom space under construction. But it remains a family affair, with eight family members on the staff. The company is proud of its laid-back atmosphere. Most employees wear golf shirts. Everyone - including the president - sports a nametag that includes hometowns but no titles. Executives work in an open area called "the fishbowl." The only private offices are used for job interviews.

Every customer who visits the headquarters-showroom is greeted at the door. An employee might offer a soda or yogurt while you shop. They carry your packages to the car. If it's raining, they hold the umbrella.

All of which fits Paul's straightforward key to success: be nice to your customers.

"They can be the best golf pro in the world, the best accountant, the best salesperson. If they're not nice, we can't hire them," he said. "We can teach them golf clubs. We can't teach them to be nice."

Country music star's husband passes away

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - O.V. "Mooney" Lynn, who persuaded his wife, Loretta, to give her first public performance and watched as she went on to become one of country music's biggest stars, has died.

The spokeswoman in the singer's manager's office, who would not give her name, said Lynn died at 10:30 p.m. Thursday at his home 70 miles west of Nashville. He had been hospitalized frequently in recent years for heart failure and diabetes, and both his feet had been amputated. His age was unknown, but he was believed to be in his late 60s. Associates have said for years they don't know his age.

Lynn was portrayed by Tommy Lee Jones in the award-winning 1980 movie, "Coal Miner's Daughter," based on his wife's 1976 autobiography.

The couple married in the late 1940s, when she was just 13. He bought his wife a $17 guitar for her 18th birthday in 1933, and she always credited him with persuading her to sing in public for the first time seven years later.

"If it wasn't for Doolittle (her nickname for him), there would be no career," she wrote in the book. She wrote that Mooney went up to a bandleader at a meeting hall near where they lived in Washington state and said, "Hey, I got a girl here tonight who's the best country singer there is, next to Kitty Wells, and I ain't kidding."

The bandleader didn't let her sing that night, but did a week later. Within months, she had a recording contract and was on her way to becoming nationally known.

More recently, her husband ran the 1,140-acre Loretta Lynn Dude Ranch which they purchased in 1967.

Charlie Dick, widower of country star Patsy Cline and a close friend of Mooney Lynn, said today he "took care of Loretta. He watched over her."

"We had a lot of fun together," Dick said. "He was a character."

Mooney Lynn had served in the Army during World War II and worked the coal mines before he met Loretta. They had six children, including four by the time she was 18. Their son Jack drowned in 1984.

The singer wrote in "Coal Miner's Daughter" that her husband got the name "Doolittle" as an infant and no one knows why. He picked up the name "Mooney" because he used to run moonshine.

Mooney Lynn often wore a black cowboy hat with a warning for others inside: "Like hell it's yours."

Clarke dies at age 80

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Alyce King Clarke, whose deep, rich voice gave a distinctive sound to King Sisters from the 1930s to television's "The King Family Show" in the 1960s, has died. She was 80.

Clarke was one of three dozen family members who starred in the variety show, which ran in 1965-66 and was briefly revived in 1969.

Earlier, a quartet of the King Sisters sang on radio programs in the 1930s and 1940s and on television on shows of Ed Sullivan, Johnny Carson and Merv Griffin.

They had a series of hits in the early '40s, including the novelty song "The Hut-Sut Song (A Swedish Serenade)" and "It's Love-Love-Love." They also made occasional appearances in films.

They sang with Horace Heidt's band, and later with the band of Alvino Rey, who married Clarke's sister Luise.

According to the reference book "The Penguin Encyclopedia of Pop Music," Alyce King "could sing unusually low for a woman, which gave (the King Sisters) a fuller sound, made them one of the most interesting of '30s-'40s girl groups."

Clarke was born in Payson, Utah, the fourth of Pearl and William King Driggs' eight children. Her father, a voice teacher and classical musician, trained his children to play instruments and booked them for shows as The Driggs Family of Entertainers.

In the 30s, Clarke and various sisters began performing together, sometimes as a trio, sometimes in a larger group. Usually, they were a quartet: Alyce, Donna, Luise and Yvonne. At one time or another, sisters Maxine and Marilyn also performed.

When the family act came to television, all six sisters took part, as did their father, then nearly 80, and various offspring, husbands and cousins. The show combined music with gentle humor, and always ended with the family singing "Love at Home."

Survivors include all five of Clarke's singing sisters.

Family finds Ranger father to bring legend to life

By LUPE CHAVEZ
The Monitor (McAllen)
 MERCEDES, Texas - Like too much oral history, the legend of Daniel Hinojosa, Texas Ranger, was almost lost in time.
 "Our father died in 1932 when we were little," Esperanza Hernandez, now 67, said. "Our mother, Maria del Refugio Alcala Hinojosa, told us stories of him being a Texas Ranger. "And when she died, we were the only ones capable of recounting her memories."

 Hinojosa's story is unusual in part because the reputation of the Rangers is, by and large, much different in South Texas than in other parts of the state. Famed for taming the wilder parts of frontier Texas, the 19th century Rangers were infamous on the border for their often-rough treatment of both Mexican intruders and Mexican-American residents. So a Hispanic-surnamed Ranger in the early years of this century was uncommon indeed.

 Hernandez and her sisters, Genoveva Hinojosa and Rita Puente, had only two heirloom relics of their father - a Bexar County deputy sheriff's badge and an old faded picture of Daniel Hinojosa holding a rifle.
 Neither artifact offered hard evidence that Hinojosa was a Ranger until their sister-in-law Maricela Palmenez made a startling discovery at the Texas Ranger Hall of Fame and Museum in Waco.

 Visiting her daughter Crisela at Baylor University last year, Palmenez was told that if Hinojosa really had been a Texas Ranger, he had to be in the museum somewhere.
 Palmenez searched all the exhibits, finding no trace of the lost lawman until she got to the museum's bookstore. While browsing, she discovered Hinojosa's name in a history book for sale there. She bought a copy.
 On her way out with the $30 book, she turned a corner. There, she saw an exhibit with a picture called "The Mexican Rangers" and a caption that included the name of Daniel Hinojosa.

The present had caught a glimpse of the past.
 Born to Prisciliano Hinojosa and Rita Lozano in Alice on Jan. 8, 1877, Daniel Hinojosa's life as a lawman and Texas Ranger began with a boy carrying water for Rangers stationed in Alice. Young Hinojosa also cared for their horses, and they in turn let him practice his shooting with their cherished rifles. Noticing his brilliant marksmanship - a key requirement for becoming a Ranger - the Alice group helped him join their ranks.
 Hinojosa worked around Harlingen and San Benito starting in 1910. He returned to Alice in 1918 and served under Captain J.J. Sanders. After these years as a Ranger, he took a job with U.S. Customs in San Antonio.
 The Ranger life included some strange experiences.
 "My father, in his short life, became a Texas Ranger and Customs officer," Genoveva Hinojosa said. "But our mother (also) told us how he loved to hunt deer.
 "One night while camping out with his company, they all pulled out their rifles and aimed for the same deer," Hernandez said. "The deer looked at them with his big eyes."
 Known for usually hitting their targets, the Rangers fired and watched the deer drop in its tracks. But when they went to inspect their kill, they were surprised to find no trace of the animal.
 Daniel Hinojosa was convinced forever more that he had seen the devil, Hernandez said, an apparition in the tradition of La Llorona and other South Texas folklore.
 Hinojosa had a far more auspicious meeting a few years later, finding the woman of his dreams during his stint in San Antonio as a Customs agent.
 While on duty, he encountered the family of assassinated Mexican President Francisco I. Madero. They had come to the Alamo City fleeing revolution and civil war in Mexico.

 As he inspected the family's immigration papers, his gaze fell upon their maid, Maria del Refugio Alcala.
 Before long, the lovestruck Hinojosa traveled to Parras, Coahuila, and asked her father for her hand in marriage.
 He paid a tutor to teach his new wife how to read and write English, and she in turn was a patient listener as he shared his dreams and fears with her.
 Hernandez's most painful memory was how fate kept him from a brush with death that claimed the life of his captain.
 The time was Prohibition, and Customs had been on the trail of a dangerous gang of bootleggers.
 "They could never find them," Hernandez said. "One day a woman with one of the men in the gang got mad at her lover and told the gang she was going to turn them in to the authorities."
 She apparently did, and the unit was soon hot on the trail. Confined to bed rest because of flu, Hinojosa could not convince his leader, a Captain Stevens, to wait a couple of days for him to join in the pursuit.
 Soon afterwards, deep in a cornfield, the Customs agents were ambushed in a shootout that proved fatal for Captain Stevens.
 That incident brought Hinojosa face-to-face with his own mortality, Genoveva Hinojosa said, and thereafter he took new safety measures.
 Hinojosa kept guard dogs and lived the rest of his days sleeping with his head at the foot of the bed in case vengeful enemies decided to pay him and his family a deadly nighttime visit.
 They never got to him, though. He died a natural death in 1932 in Harlingen as a 55-year-old deputy constable. His grave marker carries the epitaph, "A Texas Ranger." His widow passed away at the age of 81 in 1979, marking the end of a generation.
 Genoveva Hinojosa would like to see her father's stories alongside others like Hall of Famer Bill McDonald's "one riot, one Ranger" legend.
 Some time after Palmenez's visit, Ranger museum researcher Dan Agler helped Hernandez confirm her father's place in history as one of the few Mexican-Americans who served with the Rangers during the "Bandit Wars" with raiders out of Mexico during the early 20th century. Agler sent her copies of his service records.

 Hinojosa, like many other historic Rangers, is not in the Hall of Fame, Agler said, but has a place in the museum. More than 20 of the most famous Rangers have been inducted into the Hall of Fame for their contributions to Texas law enforcement, but no additions are likely anytime soon.
 "The committee that inducts Rangers into the Hall of Fame sort of dissolved after the Rangers' 150-year anniversary," Agler explained. "Right now, we are looking for a curator and archivist."
 "But we do have plans to update the exhibits: more funding, construction - but that's in a tentative 3-5 year time-frame."
 Some Texas history books already include "The Mexican Rangers" photo Palmenez found in the museum. And Texas Ranger Daniel Hinojosa's name is preserved in archives at the Texas State Library.
 But even more secure is Hinojosa's place in his daughters' hearts, and in their determination to preserve his memory.
 "When Maricela came back with that surprise for me and my sister Genoveva, we all hugged and cried because what our mother had told us was true," Hernandez recalled, pausing every other syllable.
 "An old story had been given a new life," Hernandez said, family pride bringing forth a gentle procession of tears.
 "This sort of thing gives a person a warm glow and sense of pride - to know where you come from and to know that one of your family members was a Texas Ranger," Agler said.

Shopping spies take to stores to get low-down on employees

By ALINE MCKENZIE
The Dallas Morning News
 DALLAS - Kelley McIntyre loves to shop. And about a year ago she found out that a co-worker got PAID to shop.
 "Someone's going to pay me to shop? Where do I sign up?" she said.
 That's how she joined the ranks of "mystery shoppers."
 For a fee, these shopping spies will go into a store, bank, restaurant, real-estate brokerage, garage or any other business and pretend to be ordinary customers.
 Afterward, they tell the company how their employees did. Or didn't.
 "I'm pretty critical, because I was a waitress in college and I was a flight attendant, and I was really trained to look at these things," Ms. McIntyre said.
 "I hate being ignored," she said. "You better get here, and you better get here within three to five minutes, or the whole thing's going south. I've gotten up and left restaurants."
 In the past few years, the mystery-shopping business has gone from a novelty to a force to be reckoned with. And firms have grown rapidly to meet the demand.
 Consumer Impressions Inc. - the company Ms. McIntyre shops for - has grown from 63 mystery shoppers five years ago to more than 2,000, said owner Jodi Paul.
 And Feedback Plus, owned by Vickie Henry, went from about 5,000 shoppers to more than 100,000 in several countries over the past seven years.

to take out a million-dollar loan, Ms. Henry said.
 There are some perks: The shoppers get a free meal for themselves and their families or guests on a restaurant visit, and sometimes they get to keep the merchandise they buy.
 But for the most part, the shoppers say, they are motivated by a simple urge to make the business world a little nicer.
 "Finally, they can at least give some feedback to someone who might make a difference," Ms. Paul said.
 "It's sort of a fantasy trip for me," Ms. McIntyre said. "This'll be my big shot at acting."
 The fun of the business comes when a mystery shopper encounters a real horror story, all three women said.
 One Consumer Impressions shopper went into a restaurant that not only mixed up her food order but also had a filthy restroom with no toilet paper, Ms. Paul said.
 When she went to let them know, the server just handed her a roll of toilet paper.
 Ms. Paul said she told the server: "I don't really feel comfortable walking through your restaurant carrying a roll of toilet paper. Don't you think it's your job to put the toilet paper on the roll?"
 At that point, a manager came by and chewed out the employee for not checking regularly on the restroom as she was supposed to.
 Her response? "I ain't working any harder than I have to."
 Soon she didn't have to work at all; she was fired a few days later.
 Another shopper accidentally spilled her drink and went to let a manager know.
 "He says, 'OK,' turns around, grabs a mop and hands it to her," Ms. Paul said.
 The woman was so surprised that she reflexively took it and went to mop the floor. Unfortunately, the mop was so wet that it made the spill worse.
 Then there was a mystery shopper who went to a bowling alley and couldn't find any clerks to help her - until she looked in the room where the pool tables were, Ms. Paul said. There were the clerks, she said, lying on a pool table, making out.

Ms. McIntyre said she encountered her worst situation on her own time, when she went to get a new battery for her car. A woman was in line in front of her and the single clerk on duty said he didn't have time to serve them because he had too much paperwork to fill out.
 He then asked a friend who was with Ms. McIntyre, "Do you feel like being a good Samaritan today?" and asked if he would check the oil in the other customer's car.
 "We went, 'Thanks, I think we'll try... a competitor,'" she said. "I think that was way wild."
 Ms. Paul and Ms. Henry said such experiences are becoming more and more common as companies continue to downsize, stretching employees too thin - a goal that collides head-on with the goal of providing good service.
 The result, too often, is a sales person who is overworked and simply unable to give enough attention to each customer, Ms. Henry said.
 "I was amazed at how many times, if it's a busy time and there aren't enough people, some of our shoppers are asked to help out," she said.
 Once, one of her shoppers jokingly asked a fast-food clerk if he could help - and the clerk accepted the offer. The shopper ended up flipping burgers.
 Still, Ms. Paul said, "85 percent of the time it's good, and the employees are working hard, and everybody's trying."
 Ms. Paul came across one of the best servers when she wasn't even on a shopping trip but just grabbing lunch, she said.
 She and her 5-year-old son went to a fast-food place that was giving out toy cars in the kids' meals.
 Her son was very, VERY insistent that he wanted a blue car AND a strawberry shake. The usual drill was that cars were randomly put in the meals and shakes weren't included.
 Still, the woman behind the counter directed another employee to look through boxes until he found a blue car. Her son also got a very small shake.
 "You think, as a parent, I didn't walk out that door happy?" Ms. Paul said. "She was absolutely fabulous."
 Distributed by The Associated Press

"Our phone rings off the hook all the time with people who want to be shoppers," Ms. Henry said. "They say, 'I love to go shopping,' and I respond, 'Do you like to fill out paperwork?'"
 Both owners say they ask their shoppers to be objective and precise in giving feedback: not simply saying "it was good" or "it was bad," but actually timing the employees or saying exactly what the bathroom looked like.
 The shoppers aren't in it for the money, and most make just a few trips a month, the owners said. They can earn from $2 for calling a business and grading its employees' phone manners to $100 for pretending to meet the demand.

 Consumer Impressions Inc. - the company Ms. McIntyre shops for - has grown from 63 mystery shoppers five years ago to more than 2,000, said owner Jodi Paul.
 And Feedback Plus, owned by Vickie Henry, went from about 5,000 shoppers to more than 100,000 in several countries over the past seven years.

Herd gains experience in scrimmage

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Very few of new football coach Craig Yenzler's Whitefaces have ever played in a varsity game.

He seemed happy, however, with the way his green troops held up against a seasoned Plainview team in a scrimmage Friday night at Whiteface Stadium.

"Going into the scrimmage I was real apprehensive because (Plainview) had 24 returning lettermen, and with our lack of experience, I didn't know how our kids would react," Yenzler said. "I was real pleased with how they were prepared mentally."

The Bulldogs, with 12 returning starters, scored five times in the 3 1/2-hour scrimmage. The Herd, with three starters back, didn't score, but they got some of the valuable experience Yenzler wants.

"Every snap is a learning experience for this bunch," he said.

Hereford's three starters are linebacker Jeremy Reiter, lineman Josh Alvarado and cornerback Joseph Artho, who lined up as the first team quarterback Friday. There are only three other returning lettermen: receiver C.J. Kubacak, linebacker/fullback John Marty Galan and defensive end/tight end Trip Robison.

There were eight juniors on last year's Hereford team, but two won't return. Chris Garth started at nose tackle last year but leg operations forced him to quit football. Also, backup kicker Adan Tarin isn't playing.

Three returning starters and six returning lettermen aren't the kind of numbers that draw rave reviews from preseason prognosticators. Dave Campbell's Texas Football places Hereford sixth in the seven-team District 1-4A - behind even Dumas, which hasn't beaten Hereford since Jimmy Carter was President.

Yenzler plans to instill the kind of fight the Whitefaces will need to overcome their lack of experience.

"It's always been my belief in football that if you learn to play with heart and have a spirit about you, you can play this game," Yenzler said. "Obviously, there's no substitute for speed and size, but these kids are committed to getting this program back to where it used to be. The most important thing is getting these young men to play with heart and a lot of spirit."

Yenzler, who's starting his first year as head coach, seems to have the enthusiasm to make the Whitefaces believe.

"I told the kids before we went out (for the scrimmage) that after 16 years of being an assistant, I was proud and excited that they'd be my first (team) because of the commitment they've shown. I was so excited on the field."

"This is a big step for me, but it's one that I've been preparing for for a long time. And being under coaches (Don) Cumpton and (Danny) Hancy - that's a teaching tool. The bottom line is I'm having the biggest time of my life."

His mood must have improved over the course of the scrimmage. Hereford's inexperience showed early, but the Herd looked better the longer the scrimmage went on.

The controlled scrimmage began with Hereford on offense, starting at the Herd's own 30-yard line and moving until Plainview stopped them. The Whitefaces moved past midfield twice but were stopped both times - once by an interception thrown by Artho.

"The execution level will get better, because we've had no continuity between the first team, the second team and the third team," Yenzler said. "We're giving these kids every opportunity to make the varsity. Our execution level is probably not as good as it will be in a couple of weeks."

Hereford went on defense for the next session. Plainview managed two steady drives, each ending in a touchdown: a five-yard pass and a 13-yard run by the quarterback.

While Plainview probably had its first-team offense in, Yenzler said Hereford didn't necessarily have its first-team defense in. Coaches haven't seen enough to decide on a first team; that's what scrimmages are for.

"We had a mixture of several kids in there that we wanted to get a look at," Yenzler said. "We don't have a first team defensively."

"Our inexperience showed early

Spikers get through 1st round

The Hereford volleyball team got through pool play at the Amarillo Invitational and won in the first round Friday, setting up an early season matchup with district rival Dumas Saturday morning.

The Herd won five-out-of-six games in pool play. The Herd split with Cleburne, the team it defeated last year in the Region 1-4A finals - Hereford winning 15-6 and Cleburne winning 15-14. Hereford swept the other pool matches: beating El Paso Irvin, 15-7, 15-9 and River Road, 15-8, 15-6.

Hereford then beat Canyon, 15-6, 15-3, in the quarterfinals Friday, and the Herd's record improved to 3-0.

Herd coach Brenda Reeh could not be reached for comment.

Meet the Herd planned for Monday

Meet the Herd will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Whiteface Stadium.

Hereford High School athletes from the four fall sports - football, volleyball, tennis and cross country - will be introduced. The varsity football roster, which will be chosen this weekend, will be announced.

The Whiteface Booster Club will host the event. Herd fans are encouraged to join the booster club, and they can sign up at Meet the Herd.

Reds look forward to day off

By MIKE FLAM
Associated Press Writer

September 5 can't come fast enough for the Cincinnati Reds. That's when the Reds' next scheduled day off is, and - after finishing three games Friday - it's something they deserve. The Reds shook off a short night's sleep to beat the Florida Marlins 6-5 in the first game of a two-night doubleheader but lost the nightcap 8-3. Cincinnati didn't reach its Fort Lauderdale, Fla., hotel until 5:30 a.m., less than four hours after the Reds' 13-inning, rain-delayed 3-2 victory in Atlanta ended at 1:47 Friday morning. At 4:30 p.m., they were playing again.

"This was probably the toughest game we've had to play all year, coming off last night," manager Ray Knight said following the first game. "This team is very tired right now."

In the opener, Giovanni Carrara (1-0) pitched seven strong innings for his first National League victory. The Reds improved to 59-0 when leading after eight innings, but not before Jeff Brantley escaped from his bases-loaded, one-out jam for his NL-leading 35th save.

"When we give him a lead, we're going to win," said Carrara, acquired last month off waivers and making his second start for the Reds.

Al Leiter and Gary Sheffield spoiled Florida's bid for a fifth straight doubleheader sweep. Leiter (13-11) tied his career best with 11 strikeouts and increased his season total to 161, a career high. Sheffield hit his 36th home run and doubled home a run, giving him 99 RBIs.

Eagles' Detmer, Steelers' Stewart shine as backups

By The Associated Press
While Ty Detmer showed he's a capable fill-in for injured Philadelphia quarterback Rodney Peete, Pittsburgh backup Kordell Stewart made it clear he could handle the Steelers' starting job.

"Hopefully, I changed some minds. My time will come," said Stewart, who rallied the Steelers (2-3) within a failed 2-point conversion of victory Friday night in a 20-19 exhibition loss to the Eagles (2-2).

Stewart, who replaced starter Jim Miller late in the second quarter with

Cardinals 1, Astros 0
Ray Lankford homered in the third inning at the Astrodome to send St. Louis to its seventh straight victory over Houston this season. Donovan Osborne (11-8) pitched seven solid innings as the Cardinals took a half-game lead over the Astros in the Central.

Braves 4, Cubs 3
At Atlanta, Greg Maddux (12-10) improved to 4-0 lifetime against his former Chicago teammates with the help of Chipper Jones and Marquis Grissom.

Jones homered twice for the third time this season, and extended his hitting streak to a career-high 17 games. Grissom hit a two-run double in the fourth to extend his hitting streak to 27 games. That matches John Flaherty of San Diego for the longest in the majors this year.

Expos 10, Giants 8
Henry Rodriguez hit two of visiting Montreal's season-high five home runs and the Expos rallied for four runs in the seventh, scoring the go-ahead run on the first of two run-scoring wild pitches by Mark Dewey. Giants outfielder Barry Bonds struck out as a pinch-hitter with two outs in the ninth, but extended the NL's longest current consecutive games played streak to 356. He has a strained left hamstring.

Rodriguez's 32 home runs tie him with Andre Dawson (1983) for Montreal's single-season record. Rondell White, F.P. Santangelo and Mike Lansing also homered.

Phillies 7, Padres 4
Todd Zeile hit his career-high 20th home run and Philadelphia starter Rich Hunter won his first game since April as the Phillies snapped host San Diego's four-game winning streak.

Zeile gave Philadelphia its first lead at 4-3 with a 415-foot home run off San Diego starter Tim Worrell (7-7) in the sixth.

Hunter (2-4) gave up three runs on six hits in five innings.

Jermaine Allensworth emerged from an 0-for-12 slump with his first career four-hit game. His two-run triple in the sixth off Kevin Ritz (13-10) gave the Pirates a 5-2 lead.

Dodgers 7, Mets 5
Eric Karros and Raul Mondesi hit consecutive two-run doubles in the fifth inning as Los Angeles took a 7-2 lead at Dodger Stadium.

Bernard Gilkey hit a three-run homer for the Mets, but Todd Worrell broke his own club record with his 33rd save.

Ramon Martinez (10-6) was helped by two double-play grounders, both by slumping Carlos Baerga. Mark Clark (12-10) allowed seven runs in 6 2-3 innings.

California won its third straight. Boskie (12-6) allowed four hits and permitted only one runner past second base in outpitching David Wells (9-12).

Wells' only lapses came when Davis hit the first pitch of the second inning over the right-field wall and Edmonds homered to almost the same spot in the ninth.

Brewers 6, Indians 5, 11 innings
At Cleveland, Marc Newfield threw out the potential go-ahead run in the eighth and singled home the winning run in the 11th.

At Baltimore, Chili Davis and Jim Edmonds hit solo homers, and Shawn Boskie pitched 6 1-3 solid innings as double off the wall in left-center by Mark McGwire.

In the ninth, Rivera, who had struck out McGwire to end the seventh, fanned the major league home run leader again for his fifth save.

Cecil Fielder hit his 32nd homer and Wade Boggs had a two-run double as the Yankees opened a six-game lead over Baltimore in the AL East.

Twins re-sign Knoblauch

By TOM WITHERS
AP Sports Writer

On his 81st birthday, Minnesota Twins president Carl Pohlad gave his fans a present. Pohlad announced that All-Star second baseman Chuck Knoblauch, rumored to be leaving the team as a free agent, had signed a new five-year, $30 million contract.

News of the signing began to leak out during the Twins' 9-2 victory over the Texas Rangers last night.

"I can't tell you how happy I am," Knoblauch said following the game. "This will finally end all the rumors and speculation that have been going on."

Knoblauch, a three-time All-Star, leads the AL with 114 runs and 11 triples. His on-base percentage ranked fifth in the league and he was fourth in stolen bases.

He had recently rejected a four-year, $22.5-million offer from the Twins, and was thought to be leaving the team after six seasons. Knoblauch was one of 19 players who could become free agents if a new labor agreement includes service time credit for the 75 regular-season days the players were on strike in 1994.

Now that he's staying, Knoblauch thinks the Twins are closer to getting back to the World Series than many would think.

"We're working very hard to get back to that level of play, and hopefully today is a step in the right direction," Knoblauch said. "I think we've proved a lot to the people of Minnesota this year, that we are for real."

Rick Aguilera (7-5), who along with Knoblauch are the only links on the Twins' current roster to their 1991 World Series title team, threw an eight-hitter in pitching nine innings for the first time since Sept. 29, 1989.

Like Twins fans, who saw Kirby Puckett have to retire earlier this season, Aguilera was relieved to learn Knoblauch would remain a Twin.

"It's a tremendous relief for him and for all of us," Aguilera said of Knoblauch's deal. "He's an important part of our success. You've got to give them credit for stepping out and making this move."

Elsewhere in the American League, it was: New York 5, Oakland 3; California 2, Baltimore 0; Milwaukee 6, Cleveland 5, 11 innings; Seattle 6, Boston 4; Toronto 4, Chicago 2; and Detroit 3, Kansas City 2.

Yankees 5, Athletics 3
At New York, Dwight Gooden (11-5) pitched the Yankees past their first-inning problems before leaving after the fifth with a migraine headache, and Mariano Rivera provided late relief.

The Yankees had been outscored 21-1 in the opening inning of their previous six games, but Gooden got out of the first despite giving up a

Packers need to earn home field advantage

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Green Bay Packers can do nothing about having to play at Texas Stadium on Nov. 18. What they can control is avoiding a postseason trip back there.

In the second and third rounds of the NFL playoffs, when regular-season division and conference champions play host to the games that determine the Super Bowl participants, the Packers want to be anywhere other than Irvin, Texas.

Through the luck of the draw, the Packers have played in Dallas in the last three regular seasons, all losses to the Cowboys. And because Dallas has been better than Green Bay the last three years, the Cowboys have been able to play the Packers at Texas Stadium in the playoffs, too.

That meant three more Dallas victories.

The Packers appeared ready to break through last season when quarterback Brett Favre had an MVP season and the Packers took their first divisional title in 28 years. They manhandled San Francisco 27-17 in the playoffs, and they still believe they could have beaten the Cowboys, too, if the NFC championship game had been played at Lambeau Field.

"The thing I think about more than anything is losing at Tampa" on Dec. 10, Favre said. "Maybe that game cost us the Super Bowl; who knows? We beat Tampa and maybe we play at home in the playoffs."

"That's something we have to look at when we start the season. We only play 16 games. It's not like baseball, basketball, hockey; where you play a bunch of games and no one really cares until you get toward the end. Every game counts with us."

"It was a great season, but it could have been a little better."

Favre, 26, despite an addiction to painkilling drugs that landed him in a rehab center during the offseason, established himself in 1995 as the youngest of the elite quarterbacks. Dan Marino, John Elway, Jim Kelly and Steve Young all will be 35 or older before the year is out, and Troy Aikman is turning 30 this year.

So a case could be made that it's Favre's turn to move past all of those likely Hall of Famers.

Favre passed for 4,413 yards and 38 touchdowns in his first season after the loss of All-Pro receiver Sterling Sharpe, whose retirement caused concern the Packers would slip back. But Robert Brooks caught 102 passes, tight end Mark Chmura and RB Edgar Bennett combined for 115 more, and the Green Bay offense was improved.

Perhaps only an average offensive line prevents the Packers from winning 13 or 14 games. Their defense was fourth-best in the NFL in points allowed, stopping just about everyone except the Cowboys.

Reggie White, 34, anchors the defensive line, and Ron Cox was signed from Chicago to replace Fred Strickland, who defected to Dallas.

Detroit looked stronger than Green Bay as the playoffs started last year, but a stunning 58-37 loss to Philadelphia in the wild-card game raised questions about the Lions' future, especially the defense.

The Lions didn't upgrade the secondary in the offseason, and they lost free safety Willie Clay to New England. The other safety, Bennie Blades, balked at a pay cut.

Linebacker Chris Spielman's departure opened a place for Michael Brooks or Pepper Johnson, both formerly of the Giants. The top draft pick, linebacker Reggie Brown of Texas A&M, was injured late in the exhibition season, and positions still were being shuffled in the defensive line.

The offense again should be outstanding, despite the loss of top blocker Lomas Brown to Arizona.

Mitchell nearly matched Favre in passing yardage, and the receiving duo of Herman Moore and Brett Perriman combined for a record 231 receptions and 3,174 yards. Add free-agent Glyn Milburn and third wide receiver Johnnie Morton (eight TDs), and the Lions have an awesome passing attack.

When Mitchell wasn't completing passes, he was handing off to Barry Sanders for another 1,500 yards, giving the Lions the final piece in the NFL's most productive offense.

Minnesota expressed its confidence in Warren Moon by giving him a three-year contract that will carry him to age 42. But despite impressive statistics, Moon is 90-90 as an NFL starter since his CFL days, including a 3-7 record in the playoffs.

But his backups with the Vikings - Brad Johnson and Chad May - have zero NFL starts, so the team will rise and fall with Moon.

The receiving corps is the best west of Detroit with Cris Carter, Jake Reed, Qadry Ismail and third-down back Amp Lee.

The offensive line, led by Pro Bowl guard Randall McDaniel, is first-rate, and speedy runner Robert Smith is perfect - if he can stay healthy - for all the turf fields in the NFC Central.

The defense is shaky, however, finishing 20th in the NFL despite the presence of star tackle John Randle.

Chicago's defense also needs shoring up after finishing 27th against the pass. To cope with the tall NFC Central wideouts, the Bears traded up to draft 6-foot-1 Mississippi State cornerback Walt Harris.

The Bears, solid run-stoppers, should be even better against the rush in 1996 with the signing of Miami's Bryan Cox. Coach Dave Wannstedt plans to move Cox to defensive end on passing downs, allowing end Alonzo Spellman to slide inside.

Chicago took some free-agent hits on offense, losing 82-catch receiver Jeff Graham and linemen Jerry Fontenot and Jay Lceuwenburg, all starters. Michael Timpson moves up from No. 3 receiver to replace Graham in the starting lineup, and Bobby Engram of Penn State has a chance for considerable action on passing downs.

Erik Kramer returns as the quarterback, and 1,000-yard rusher Rashaan Salaam will be joined in the backfield by fullback Raymond Harris, who was injured for all but two games last year.

At Tampa Bay, Tony Dungy gets his long-awaited chance as a head coach, taking over for Sam Wyche.

The Buccaneers suffered a blow in training camp, losing receiver Horace Copeland for the season with a knee injury. Copeland, who caught 20 passes in his last four starts last season, was expected to team with Alvin Harper.

Good receivers are needed because quarterback Trent Dilfer has not developed. He had the lowest QB rating of any starter in the league, and the Bucs were 26th in passing offense.

Despite the presence of solid running back Errict Rhett - who has yet to report in a contact dispute - Tampa Bay ranked 27th offensively.

That was the same ranking as the team's defense, despite the presence of one of the NFL's best linebackers, Hardy Nickerson. For the line, where recent first-round picks Eric Curry and Warren Sapp have been disappointments, the Bucs drafted two more players in the first round this year, Regan Upshaw from California and Marcus Jones from North Carolina.

LAST YEAR'S FINISH: 1, Green Bay (11-5); 2, Detroit (10-6); 3, Chicago (9-7); 4, Minnesota (8-8); 5, Tampa Bay (7-9).

PREDICTIONS: 1, Green Bay (11-5); 2, Detroit (9-7); 3, Minnesota (8-8); 4, Chicago (7-9); 5, Tampa Bay (6-10).

49ers should win tight West race

By BARRY WILNER
AP Football Writer

Let's get one thing straight from the start: The San Francisco 49ers, while still the best of the West, aren't nearly the terror they've been recently.

Does that mean they won't contend for the Super Bowl? Of course not. Does that make them any less entertaining to watch? Obviously not.

What the 49ers have this year, however, is holes. "Cornerback, running back and the entire offensive line and kicking game all are filled with questions."

So even with football's most dominant player (Jerry Rice), most versatile quarterback (Steve Young), best pair of defensive tackles (Dana Stubblefield and Bryant Young), top trio of linebackers (Ken Norton, Lee Woodall, Gary Plummer), and most efficient front office, the Niners could be in for hard times.

That means 10-6 and a tight race before edging Atlanta for the division title.

"I think last year was kind of a humiliating ending to a very good season in many ways, and I don't want to forget that," Young says, referring to losing the regular-season finale at Atlanta, then falling in the playoffs to Green Bay, less than a year after the 49ers became the first five-time Super Bowl winner. "I'm not the only one who doesn't want to forget that. I'd rather do anything else than have that happen."

Young, Rice - who already has most of the significant receiving records, yet still is at his peak - tight end Brent Jones, second-year wideout

J.J. Stokes and perhaps newcomers Terry Kirby and Tommy Vardell in the backfield can do plenty to make sure it isn't a short postseason. And the defense, under the attacking style of coordinator Pete Carroll, ranked first overall and against the run a year ago.

Unlike nearly every year since Bill Walsh brought the Niners to prominence in the early '80s, this team is no lock in the West. The offensive line is too shaky, particularly if tackle Harris Barton or center Jesse Sapolu go down. And the running game is much too uncertain as the 49ers continue to regret not re-signing Ricky Watters in 1995.

Walsh is back as an adviser to offensive coordinator Marc Trestman and head coach George Seifert, and that can't be the most comfortable arrangement. Still, if anyone can get the most out of the West Coast Offense, it's the man who invented it.

With All-Pro Eric Davis gone as a free agent, the cornerback situation has deteriorated seriously since Davis and Deion Sanders manned those spots in the '94 title season. That means mediocre Marquez Pope and unproven Tyrone Drakeford at the corners.

Only Atlanta is capable of pushing the 49ers, and that can only happen if the Falcons upgrade a defense that ranked 29th overall and dead last against the pass, allowing a record 4,541 yards. The Falcons brought in linebacker Cornelius Bennett, who will help the pass rush, and Shane Dronett, who should be an all-around improvement at end. The secondary has potential, even with last year's poor numbers. Safety Patrick Bates came out of retirement and the other safety, Devin Bush, is promising.

Regardless of how the defense does, the Falcons will stay in many games with an explosive offense featuring three receivers who went over 1,000 yards and a runner who gained more than 1,000.

Jeff George, unhappy with his contract situation after getting just a one-year deal from the Falcons, should settle down in Atlanta.

Eric Metcalf, Bert Emanuel and Terance Mathis are the main targets, short and long, while Craig "Ironhead" Heyward handles the rushing. Another weapon, J.J. Birden, was added to the receiving corps, but money would have been better spent improving the line.

Carolina was a major improvement over previous expansion teams, winning seven times (after starting 0-5). Another 7-9 record is possible, particularly with Davis in the Panthers secondary, Kevin Greene going for sacks at outside linebacker along with Lamar Lathon, and Sam Mills his old, reliable self in the middle.

Coach Dom Capers, like Carroll a proponent of aggressive defense, knows he needs help on the defensive line.

Carolina also must protect the ball better after surrendering a league-high 25 interceptions among 41 giveaways. Second-year quarterback Kerry Collins was 7-6 as a starter, but will have more growing pains unless top draftee Tshimanga Biakabutuka quickly overcomes his long, bitter contract hassle.

Steelers must replace departed stars

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Pittsburgh Steelers, who went to the Super Bowl after winning the AFC Central by four games, played their own game of free-agent parity during the offseason.

The Steelers saw quarterback Neil O'Donnell sign with the New York Jets, the worst team in the NFL last season; top lineman Leon Searcy depart for the second-worst team, Jacksonville; and veteran sackmaster Kevin Greene take off for the other expansion team, Carolina.

Suitable replacements are there for Searcy and Greene, however, but the uncertainty at quarterback could leave the Steelers in a close race for first place.

Jim Miller won a three-man competition with Mike Tomczak and Kordell Stewart, who is determined to end his "Slash" reputation as a multi-position threat, for O'Donnell's spot. Miller has an emerging star to throw to in Yancy Thigpen, whose 85 catches in 1995 set a team record.

Bam Morris was released after his marijuana conviction this summer, leaving the running game to scatback Eric Pegrum and Jerome Bettis, looking to rejuvenate his fading career at age 24. Will Wolford replaces the departed Searcy in the line.

Defensively, the Steelers are well-stocked at linebacker despite the loss of Greene, who had 35 1/2 sacks in three seasons, but was slowing down at age 34. Greg Lloyd leads the group, ably supported by Chad Brown, Levon Kirkland, Jason Gildon and Jerry Olsavsky.

Rod Woodson, voted one of the best cornerbacks in NFL history, returns after missing all but one regular-season game with a knee injury. During training camp, he even practiced at wide receiver. "Slash" Stewart, meet "Slash" Woodson.

Cincinnati adds last year's injured rookie, Ki-Jana Carter, to an offense that sparkled through the air behind Jeff Blake, but was 24th in the NFL on the ground. Carter, the top pick in the 1995 draft, was selected to correct that imbalance and gets the chance a year late.

The Bengals, dead last in total defense and 29th in pass defense, did not draft a defensive player until the fourth round, but did address the secondary problems by signing Ashley Ambrose from Indianapolis, Jimmy Spencer from New Orleans and Bo Orland from San Diego.

Houston has one of the up-and-coming teams in the league, but ironically, the Oilers could have few fans to share the excitement in what is likely the franchise's last year in Texas.

Farmer utilizes low-till program

Low-till plan
Steve Brorman holds a handful of corn residue "trash" which helps cut trips through the field in half, saves on irrigation and protects sugar beet crop against erosion and freeze damage.

Steve Brorman's sugar beets may look a little "trashy," but in his low-till beet program, he doesn't mind sacrificing beauty for the bottom line. Planting beets into corn stubble, Brorman saves about $24 per acre by cutting the number of trips through the field in half, getting more out of his irrigation and receives protection against wind damage and even a late freeze that can kill young beet before they can make a stand. Brorman farms about 2,500 acres in northern Deaf Smith County near the Farmers Corner community. His rotation includes wheat, milo, corn and sugar beets. "We've been growing beets since 1982," says Brorman. "Like with our other crops, we are working to find better ways to grow them on less water and less money."

In his low-till program, which started last year, Brorman plants beets in March following corn harvested the previous fall. "After we harvest corn, we disk the stalks twice," he says. "Then we don't touch the field again until late February."

"That's when we run a sweep plow over the corn stalks. The sweep plow brings the 'trash' to the top of the ground. We then pre-irrigate and run a fallow-master sweep once more to make sure the soil is loosened up."

He is ready for planting after making only four trips through the field and is seeing similar results by planting wheat stubble using the low-till system.

"The four trips compare to seven or eight we would make in a conventional beet program," says Brorman. "Before, we would disk twice and chisel ground after wheat harvest. Then we would disk again, level out the soil with a float, list, pre-irrigate, then run a rod weeder before planting."

"At a cost of at least $6 per trip (for fuel and wear and tear on equipment), we're saving up to $24 per acre with the low-till system."

Brorman uses center pivot irrigation installed in recent years to improve watering efficiency. The "trash" beet farming helps conserve water even more. "With the trash or corn residue, the beet field absorbs more water because it is protected from winds."

"The residue also helps us offset any major blowing problems. When everyone else had to run a rotary hoe (after planting), we had no problems at all. The trash protected the plants from high winds."

There are some potential drawbacks to the system, Brorman points out. Even though normal herbicide application is used in early field preparation, an additional spraying is needed to control volunteer corn in the spring.

Also, planting may have to be delayed a week because "the residue prevents the soil from warming up enough for planting very early in March," he says.

However, the insulation that may prevent soil from warming up will also help protect young beet plants from a late freeze. "I believe we can save having to replant in the event of a late freeze," says Brorman.

Since the crop is planted flat and not in rows, there may be a need to go slower during defoliating. "But whatever smaller problems we encounter are more than offset by the benefits of the low-till system," he adds.

"We're seeing a good beet price this year (an anticipated $26 net or $40-plus per ton of production).

"So we're better off with anything we can do to save water and anything we can do to save money without reducing our beet production and quality. That's what we get with this beet program."

Ag Day to be held in Hereford

Deaf Smith County Agriculture Day and Crops Tour will be Tuesday, Aug. 27 featuring programs on cotton and grain production, irrigation, opportunities for marketing and an update on the latest federal farm program. The program will begin at 8 a.m. with registration and viewing of exhibits in the Bull Barn. The event will also feature afternoon tours of result demonstration plots and field trials.

Seed companies, chemical companies and equipment dealers will have displays available to show new products and equipment. The actual program will begin at 9 a.m.

Featured speaker for the event will be Dr. Steve Amosson, agricultural economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Dr. Amosson will discuss the latest information on the 1995 Farm Bill and will update producers on marketing.

The program will also feature presentations by area specialists with TAEX. Presenters for the event will be Jim Leser, TAEX cotton entomologist, who will discuss late season cotton pest and give an update on the boll weevil eradication program being conducted in Texas; Leon New, TAEX agricultural engineer and irrigation specialist, who will provide information on the irrigation of summer crops and fall planted small grains; Dr. Brent Bean, TAEX agronomist, who will discuss fall management of summer planted grain crops and small grains; and Dr. Carl Patrick, TAEX area entomologist, who will cover insect management and control methods for summer and fall grain crops.

Also featured will be Dr. Dan Krieg, professor of crop physiology at Texas Tech University in Lubbock. Dr. Krieg will discuss cotton production techniques and review research in cotton harvest aids and growth regulators.

Following a luncheon provided by the Deaf Smith County Extension Crops Committee and event sponsors, participants will have the opportunity to tour a grain sorghum result demonstration on the Joe and Chris Grotegut farm, a Holly Sugar field trial showing sugar beets produced under minimum tillage and center pivot irrigation, a white food corn demonstration and a replicated uniform cotton variety demonstration being conducted on the Charles Schlabs farm and a BT corn field trial being conducted by Northrup King Seeds on the A.J. Urbanczyk farm.

"We feel that we have an event planned that will provide all producers and those involved in agribusiness with an opportunity to learn more about marketing and also see effective production practices and techniques," Dennis Newton, Deaf Smith County extension agent -- agriculture.

He also said that the Texas Department of Agriculture approved the event for five hours of CEU credit for both private and commercial pesticide applicators.

The program and luncheon is free to all interested producers and agribusinesses. He encourages all to attend and asked that all persons planning to attend to contact the Deaf Smith County extension office at 364-3573 so that event planners might have an indication of the number of persons planning to attend.

The event is sponsored and planned by the Deaf Smith County Extension Crops Committee and Deaf Smith County staff of the TAEX.

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent--AG
Perhaps the biggest event in our Deaf Smith County Extension Program each year is the Annual Deaf Smith County Crops Tour. This year, the tour will be held on Tuesday, Aug. 27 beginning at 8 a.m. in the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn.

The event always attracts a good crowd of interested farmers and those from agribusiness who come out to see the latest in new varieties, chemicals and production practices. The tour, which is planned by the Deaf Smith County Extension Crops Committee in cooperation with those of us in the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, allows producers to get the latest information from experts in a variety of fields. They also get to visit with agribusiness persons that have new or improved products that are coming to the market.

Perhaps the most interesting thing that takes place during the tour and program is the learning that takes place as producers exchange ideas and discuss practices that they have tried on their particular farms and ranches. Agricultural producers are some of the most innovative people in our society. They seem to have an urge to try new things and to take chances. I guess this comes from having to roll the dice every year when they have the faith to plant the seed that will, they hope, produce a crop.

Another thing about farmers that often see is their willingness to share what they have learned or discovered with their fellow producers. I'll bet that this is one of the few, if not the only industry where knowledge and experiences are shared in such an open manner. In most industries, when something new and innovative is discovered, a cloak of secrecy covers that discovery. Not so in farming.

I would encourage all of our Deaf Smith County producers to come out to the Deaf Smith County Agriculture Day and Crops Tour next Tuesday and to participate in this type of idea exchange. The Extension Crops Committee has a good program and tour planned. The Deaf Smith County 4-H Parents Association is going to serve a good roast beef meal and if you come on Tuesday, I'll bet you learn something new from either one of the speakers or from some other producers. We look forward to seeing each of you at the Bull Barn on Tuesday. Think rain. See you next week.

Interested youth need to enroll in 4-H program

Enrollment for all youth interested in the 4-H program in being in the Deaf Smith County 4-H program should enroll on Tuesday, Aug. 27 at the Hereford Community Center. The enrollment will be come and go from 4-6 p.m. There will be a new member orientation beginning at 5:30 p.m. for youth and parents.

4-H is open to all youth without regard to race, color, sex, disability, religion, age or national origin. Any youth between the ages of nine and 19 or in the third grade and above can be involved in the 4-H program.

Although no enrollment fee is charged, there is an insurance fee of $2 for 4-Hers participating in the horse project and $1 for all other youth.

Parents are encouraged to accompany their children to enrollment day to meet leaders and agents and assist their children in deciding projects they wish to join. All 4-Hers are required to enroll each year. Those that are unable to register Tuesday are asked to stop by the Deaf Smith County extension office in the courthouse by Friday, Aug. 30 to complete the enrollment forms.

Youth learn leadership, community service and educational skills in a number of areas. Projects are included in many areas that would help youth to have enriched learning in their specific interest areas. In addition to projects, youth participate in monthly meetings which assist them in learning parliamentary procedure, leadership skills and enhance their abilities to work and lead different groups.

New clubs and new leaders are always welcome and agents will provide training to assist these new leaders.

For more information, contact Alan Patranello or Beverly Harder at the extension office, 364-3573 or come by room 402 at the courthouse.

Agriculture Briefs

The 1996 Texas Upland cotton crop is expected to total 3.65 million bales, 18 percent below 1995. Harvested acreage is estimated at 4.1 million acres, 29 percent less than last year. Dry conditions at planting coupled with continued drought caused poor stands and many acres were abandoned. Yield is expected to average 427 pounds per acre compared with 372 pounds last year.

Corn production is forecast at 162.0 million bushels, down 25 percent from last year and 32 percent below the record set in 1994. Based on Aug. 1 condition, statewide yield is expected to average 90 bushels per acre, 24 bushels less than 1995, while harvested acreage is expected to be down 5 percent.

Sorghum production is forecast at 102.6 million hundredweight (cwt), 41 percent above last year. Harvested acreage is estimated at 3.90 million acres, up 63 percent, as sorghum replaced some lost cotton acreage. Yield, at 2,632 pounds per acre, is expected to be 392 pounds below last year.

Cowboys favored in division despite woes

By BARRY WILNER
AP Football Writer

Opening day. Thank goodness. No team is more grateful for the rapid approach of the NFL season than the Dallas Cowboys. What should have been a celebratory offseason has been marred by all kinds of woes, most notably Michael Irvin's arrest and subsequent five-game suspension under the NFL's drug policy.

When the Cowboys got to training camp, they were minus Super Bowl starters Larry Brown (the MVP with two interceptions), Russell Maryland, Dixon Edwards and Robert Jones from the defense. Injuries this summer have further depleted their depth.

The latest - a sprained left knee that hit Pro Bowl running back Emmitt Smith on Saturday - could prove the most devastating. The team was waiting to learn late Sunday the results of an MRI that would tell if Smith must be sidelined.

Even if that works out well, the Cowboys have problems.

In fact, their best defensive player, Deion Sanders, is concentrating more on playing wideout than shutting down receivers. If tight end Jay Novacek's back remains balky, Sanders and inconsistent Kevin Williams will be the only experienced pass-catchers - if you can call Deion experienced.

"We have no depth at all," said coach Barry Switzer. "This team will have less depth than any returning Super Bowl champion the Cowboys have had. That's the facts of life because of the salary cap."

"We are the thinnest team in football right now."

Not quite. And with Smith, Troy Aikman, Nate Newton and Erik Williams on offense, plus Sanders, Darrin Smith, Charles Haley and Darren Woodson on defense, the Cowboys remain the best team in a mediocre division.

And they remain among the favorites to win the NFC title, which nowadays also means taking the Super Bowl.

"I don't care about all the things that happened," said Packers star Reggie White. "To get to the Super Bowl, we still have to go through Dallas."

Going through the Dallas defense might be easier with all the defections - particularly if Sanders puts in significant time on offense and the other cornerback, Kevin Smith is hampered in his return from a torn Achilles tendon. The Cowboys were ninth in defense last season, and the guys they lost were important players.

Can Fred Strickland and Broderick Thomas contribute anywhere near what Edwards and Jones did at linebacker? Will Chad Hennings be as effective as a starter as he was relieving DT Maryland?

"We have a lot of ifs," Switzer admits.

Not when Dallas gives the ball to Emmitt, though. If healthy, look for the NFL's most productive - and richest - running back to threaten all of his previous career bests. It's not unfathomable for Smith to rush for close to 2,000 yards. Or score 30 TDs. Or catch 70 passes.

It's also not asking too much for Aikman to be All-Pro. He's in his prime, seems more comfortable with Switzer (and without Jimmy Johnson) and is good enough to turn Kevin Williams and Sanders into top-notch receivers by the time Irvin returns.

Dallas doesn't get a break in its schedule and must do without Irvin against Chicago, Indianapolis, Buffalo and Philadelphia - all winning teams a year ago. Only the Colts game is at home.

But the stretch run, which includes games with the Giants, Cardinals, Patriots and two vs. the Redskins, should allow the Cowboys to put away another division title.

Only the Eagles appear capable of chasing Dallas in the NFC East, and they aren't likely to get another gift from Switzer this year. Washington is making strides, but isn't ready to move up so far. Arizona and New York are pitiful.

Philadelphia was an impressive 10-6 despite being outscored by 20 points. Another 10-6 record might lift the Eagles past the Cowboys.

For a team coming off a nice season, the Eagles made lots of changes. Look for Ty Detmer to push Rodney Peete at quarterback, with Irving Fryar the prime target after incumbents Calvin Williams and Fred Barnett left.

Also watch for even more emphasis on running, with a healthy Kevin Turner at fullback leading Ricky Watters and Charlie Garner, both of whom are capable of 1,000-yard seasons.

Uncertainty on the offensive line could unhinge the attack.

Philly has suffered in the secondary, where Eric Allen, then Mark McMillian left in successive years for New Orleans. Coach Ray Rhodes expects to weather those losses after the signing of CB Troy Vincent and with the expected development of Bobby Taylor, who had a fine rookie season.

The big-time playmakers are linebacker William Thomas and linemen William Fuller and Andy Harmon. The most potential is carried by end Mike Mamula.

Washington could be the most improved team in the league and still finish at .500. Considering where the Redskins were when Norv Turner took over, that's not so bad.

Defensively, Washington needed major upgrading. Dealing for tackle Sean Gilbert should help, particularly against the run. Washington ranked 29th last year against the rush.

Mainly, players acquired a year ago need to produce more. Safety Stanley Richard and linebackers Marcus Patton and Rod Stephens certainly cost enough.

Ken Harvey is one of the best outside LBs around, and Darrell Green still seems to have plenty left at cornerback.

Terry Allen not only wasn't washed up. He rushed for 1,000 yards in '95. Henry Ellard gained 1,000 on receptions, and is tutoring Michael Westbrook. The offensive line isn't Hog-like quite yet, but it's getting there.

Turner has created a problem at quarterback by procrastinating over a starter. To be fair, Heath Shuler keeps getting hurt.

So Turner told Shuler and Gus Frerotte they would have an equal shot at the job this summer.

"When the coach said it was going to be 50-50, I said to myself, 'You've got to step it up to that next level or you'll never get in there.'" Frerotte said. "This is all that I could ask for, to have a 50-50 chance and go out to do my best to win a job."

Frerotte was named the starter. There's no question who will be at quarterback for the Giants. Dave Brown hasn't done much in his two seasons as a starter, but the Giants re-signed him for four years and $13 million. They might even have found a receiver for him in Amani Toomer, their second-round draft pick.

New York also shelled out $16.45 million for a proven runner, Rodney Hampton. But how much more battering can he take, particularly behind a weak offensive line for which the Giants spent $10 million over five years for Ron Stone? A backup with Dallas, Stone will start at right guard. Maybe the Giants know something the Cowboys don't.

Otherwise, New York still can't figure out how to play the free agency game. Even with Hampton, the Giants spent more than they really needed to - thanks to the 49ers' power play for him - and they didn't replace linebacker Michael Brooks or tackle Jumbo Elliott with anybody comparable.

At least they spent wisely in re-signing their best defender, cornerback Phillip Sparks. Thomas Randolph, the other cornerback, is promising. That's not a word to apply to many other Giants, except perhaps Mike Strahan at defensive end.

The Cardinals had a strong draft, then couldn't figure out how to sign the rookies. They brought in two useful vets in quarterback Boomer Esiason and tackle Lomas Brown. But that's hardly enough.

Esiason is used to bad offensive lines, which is what he gets in Arizona. The defense has some good players - Eric Swann, Eric Hill, Aeneas Williams - new coach Vince Tobin will like.

What he won't like is how bad the Cardinals can be on the ground, offensively and defensively.

LAST YEAR'S FINISH: 1, Dallas (12-4); 2, Philadelphia (10-6); 3, Washington (6-10); 4, New York Giants (5-11); 5, Arizona (4-12).

PREDICTIONS: 1, Dallas (10-6); 2, Philadelphia (10-6); 3, Washington, (8-8); 4, New York (5-11); 5, Arizona (5-11).

AFC CENTRAL

rookie quarterback Steve McNair along slowly last season, and he responded late in the year with two victories as a starter. Chris Chandler had his best season while McNair watched on the sidelines, and if Chandler starts, Fisher won't need much of an excuse to switch to the franchise player in waiting.

Chris Sanders, who led the NFL in yards-per-catch (23.5) as a rookie, has a new running mate at wide receiver on the Oilers. Willie Davis, one of the top yards-per-catch receivers in the league the last four years, was signed from Kansas City to replace Haywood Jeffires.

Rodney Thomas rushed for nearly 1,000 yards as a part-time rookie starter, but he eventually will share time or make way for Heisman Trophy winner Eddie George, who was impressive in camp and preseason games.

Houston ranked a surprising fifth in the NFL defensively, thanks to strong linebacker and secondary play.

Michael Barrow, Joe Bowden and Eddie Robinson manned the linebacker spots in 1995, but Robinson was signed by Jacksonville. He will be replaced by 10-year veteran Al Smith, injured for all but two games last year.

In the secondary, safety Blaine Bishop and cornerback Darryll Lewis made the Pro Bowl, and big-play man Cris Dishman is designated the franchise player. Free safety Marcus Robertson blew out both knees the last two seasons, but he is back for another try this year.

The Baltimore Ravens fell apart in their last season as the Cleveland

Browns, and a new coaching staff headed by Ted Marchibroda hopes the new surroundings and fewer distractions could mean a return to playoff contention.

Marchibroda is shelving the two-tight end offense favored by Bill Belichick for a no-huddle, one-back set. The change should benefit quarterback Vinny Testaverde and veteran runners Earnest Byner and Leroy Hoard, who can spell each other.

It took Jacksonville coach Tom Coughlin one season and two off-seasons to build the NFL's biggest offensive line.

Searcy joins last year's first-round pick, Tony Boselli, to form an outstanding tackle tandem on a line that will average 6-foot-6 and 325 pounds. Brian DeMarco, a starter at tackle as a rookie, moves to guard, giving the Jaguars a strong run-blocking group, but they must improve on their league-high 57 sacks allowed.

Natrone Means, claimed on waivers from San Diego, will run behind that huge line, teaming with second-year man James Stewart.

Mark Brunell enters the season as a starting quarterback for the first time, and like most speedy young passers, he tends to run too often. But with a receiver corps that had just six plays of 30 yards or more, the temptation to run is strong.

LAST YEAR'S FINISH: 1, Pittsburgh (11-5); 2, Cincinnati (7-9); 3, Houston (7-9); 4, Cleveland (5-11); 5, Jacksonville (4-12).

PREDICTIONS: 1, Pittsburgh (9-7); 2, Cincinnati (9-7); 3, Houston (9-7); 4, Baltimore (7-9); 5, Jacksonville (6-10).

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

The only bad day is the day we spend more time on things than people! EXTRA! EXTRA! Choir news...HJH choir has added a new section! If you wish to be a part of our "hoppin'" group, see Mrs. Scott, counselor, or Mrs. Williams. They will help you change your schedule for the sixth or seventh period choir. Remember, the world will never be the same if it doesn't hear your voice!

The seventh grade Science I students will begin a study of "Graphing With Metrics." This will be an integrated unit including life, earth and physical science.

Seventh grade math classes will be graphing TAAS results. They will graph individual, class and team results. This should help them focus, throughout the school year, on their strengths and weaknesses in the 13 TAAS objectives.

During HAT time, (Homeroom, Advisory and Tutorial time), students have been reviewing the HISD Code of Conduct and Student Handbook. The Code of Conduct should have been read, as well, by parents and students together and the signed statement of having done so returned to the school. Parents, we need your help in getting all the forms signed and returned to school. We apologize that there are so many, but these are required by law and are for your child's welfare. These forms include the one mentioned above, an emergency care card, general waiver for school trips and use of computer and network. All of these forms will be filed and hopefully this will not have to be repeated this school year.

Those students interested in Junior Historians will have an opportunity to meet with members, hear about the activities planned for the year and to join the chapter when they attend the first meeting of the year on Thursday, Aug. 29, at 7:40 a.m. in Room 5 at HJH. We invite any seventh or eighth grader to meet with us. If any of the high school members are able to attend, we will look forward to their attendance, also. Those attending will receive printed information to share with parents about the chapter.

The first week of school was certainly a busy one and we feel that much was accomplished. One concern that we have is that we are already having students absent. Do be sure that your child has the proper rest and care to help toward perfect attendance. We are challenging the students to strive for this.

You can't mold clay when it is dry. We can't achieve the goals we have for our kids without their participation, so sometimes we have to wait a while.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent/FCS
Apples promise to be an abundant crop in Hereford for this fall.

Prepared apple pies in the freezer take up abundant space that may be needed for other summer produce. One way to solve the space problem is to can apple pie filling and prepare stackable frozen pie crusts.

Below are two recipes to prepare for quantity pie preparation and preserve the goodness of summer/fall apples.

Apple Pie Filling
Quantities of ingredients needed for
One Quart Seven Quarts
3-1/2 c. 6 quarts blanched, sliced fresh apples
3/4 c. + 2 T. 5-1/2 c.
granulated sugar
1/4 c. 1-1/2 c.
Clear Jel A
1/2 tsp. 1 tbsp.
cinnamon
1/2 c. 2-1/2 c.
cold water
3/4 c. 5 c.
apple juice
2 T. 3/4 c.
bottled lemon juice
1/8 tsp. 1 tsp.
nutmeg (optional)

1 drop yellow food coloring (optional)

Quality: Use firm, crisp apples. Stayman, Golden Delicious, Rome, and other varieties of similar quality are suitable. If apples lack tartness, use an additional 1/4 cup of lemon juice for each 6 quarts of slices.

Yield: One quart or seven quarts.
Procedure: Wash, peel, and core apples. Prepare slices 1/2 inch wide and place in water containing ascorbic acid to prevent browning.

For fresh fruit, place 6 c. at a time in one gallon of boiling water. Boil each batch 1 minute after the water returns to a boil. Drain, but keep fruit heated or in a covered bowl or pot.

Combine sugar, Clear Jel, and cinnamon in a large kettle with water and apple juice. If desired, food coloring and nutmeg may be added. Stir and cook on medium high heat until mixture thickens and begins to bubble. Add lemon juice and boil 1 minute, stirring constantly.

Fold in drained apple slices immediately and fill jars with mixture without delay, leaving one-inch headspace. Adjust lids and process immediately.

Never-Fail Pie Crust
18 cups flour
6 teaspoons salt (2 T.)
6 cups solid shortening
6 eggs
6 tablespoons vinegar (1/3 c.)
3 cups cold water
Sift together flour and salt; add shortening and cut in until mixture resembles corn meal. Combine egg, vinegar and water and add to flour mixture. Stir lightly with a fork until dough follows fork in a bowl. Form into four balls and chill.

As soon as the dough is chilled, begin preparing pie crust in the pans. To make the top crust, roll out larger than the top of the pie tin then pace on a piece of waxed paper. Place another piece of waxed paper on top and fold the rolled crust into fourths. Place the folded crust into the pie crust lined tin and place the entire tin in a plastic bag.

Pie crust may be stacked on a freezer shelf and frozen for fast use.

When ready to prepare pie, pour the jar of pie filling into the crust, top with the top crust and bake for 10 minutes at 425 degrees then reduce heat to 325 and cook until pie mixture is bubbly and crust is golden brown.

All the goodness of summer is preserved for your eating enjoyment.

When the flag is flown at night, it should be spotlighted.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: This is my hint for pets during summer. Here in Mesa, Ariz., it's not unusual for temperatures to hover around 110 degrees.

We don't have an outdoor dog, but we do walk him for an hour twice a day. It's hot at both 5 a.m. and 8 p.m. So, upon our return home, Boomer gets a frozen treat.

I keep his doggie biscuits in the freezer and he seems to enjoy them, often begging for seconds and thirds. — Joan Vanier, Mesa, Ariz.

Bet he can't wait to get home after his walk! You're a very thoughtful "Mommy."

For more helpful hints for your furry friend, I have compiled a pamphlet full of great ideas that will help dog owners. For those who would like one, please send $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Dogs, PO Box 795001, San Antonio TX 78279-5001.

— Heloise

VACATION MEMORY

Dear Heloise: The next time you go on vacation or just a weekend getaway, stop at a local nursery and purchase a perennial.

You'll remember your vacation and enjoy a flower garden year after year. — Susanne Gaudioso, Grapeville, Pa.

This is a charming hint, but be sure to check the agricultural regulations before crossing state lines. — Heloise

DUSTPANS

Dear Heloise: I bought plastic snow shovels for the grandchildren. One day when I could not find the dustpan I tried the snow shovel and found it was much easier to use. It has a long handle; from the tip of the handle to the edge of the shovel it is about 22 inches.

The handle is flexible and you do not need to bend down so close to the floor. I think this is a great help for older people or anyone who has difficulty bending over to hold the dustpan while sweeping the floor. — Bonnie Huff, Jeffersonville, Ind.

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

We Tired That Once

"Everything you talked about today I already knew," he said. "My business is different, that stuff won't work." "I'd just finished a four-hour presentation to a group of small-business owners. Though I'd pleased most of them with the information I shared, it was obvious that I hadn't connected with one member of the audience.

Later, I expressed my concern to the trade association director who had hired me. I related to her my lengthy conversation with the attendee who told me he'd already heard it all.

"Who were you talking to?" she asked. I told her, and she rolled her eyes and nodded her knowing look. "Not to worry," she said. "Randolph hasn't been happy with anything since 1957."

I laughed, then indicated that I was still disappointed with the feedback. I'd like to think that I could still help someone with more than 40 years experience," I said.

"Forty year's experience!" She exclaimed. "He doesn't have 40 years of experience. He has one year's experience 40 times. He hasn't made any changes in 40 years."

I've replayed that conversation with Randolph several times. One comment he made again-and-again keeps haunting me. As we discussed several options that might help his business, his pat answer became, "We tried that once." It is obvious now that Randolph didn't want to change.

Success requires change

Recently, a friend asked me if I knew how many psychiatrists it takes to change a light bulb. I said, "No."

"Just one," he said. "However, it takes a long time, cost a lot of money and the light bulb really must want to change."

As I study prospering businesses, I find that success usually requires change. And like the light bulb, you must want to change.

A few years ago I worked for a client who had three retail stores. One was losing money, one was at break-even and one was doing very well. The owner lived more than 100 miles from the stores and only visited them occasionally. He asked me to help improve the stores' profitability.

I studied the operation and detailed several changes in a written report. I discussed these with the client, who thanked me and paid for the work.

Outside the box

To overcome resistance to change, I encourage you to begin to think outside the box. Don't allow yourself - or anyone else for that matter - to shutdown new ideas just because someone says it won't work or because you've tried it before.

Even if you've heard something before, look for ways to apply it to improve the current situation. Remember, what you know isn't as important as what you do with your knowledge. Positive, productive people focus on how they can make something happen, rather than spending time and energy pointing out why it won't work. Positive actions are always more productive than negative thoughts.

The first team to scale Mt. Everest did not know it couldn't be done. The Wright brothers flew after scientific geniuses proved that man could not fly. Edison lit the world long after he'd "tried it once."

Here's a little poem that sums it all up...

We tired that once, it didn't work,
There's no reason to pursue it.
You can't and I won't are words that mean,
I'd rather fail than do it.

Mystery, murder and mayhem seem to be the common theme found in the new books this week.

Beginning with The Monkey's Fist, author William D. Pease succeeds in combining a "hard-hitting private eye tale with a compelling story of international intrigue."

Writing in a style similar to that of John LeCarre, this post-cold war thriller begins with veteran homicide detective Eddie Nickles beginning his retirement after 25 years of service.

Eddie intends to enjoy his retirement as best he can, until a mysterious businessman comes to his home with a case of double murder. The man hires Nickles to find the missing street person he believes responsible for the murders.

Eddie's skill as an investigator is so good it almost cost him his life and places the life of his 18-year-old daughter in grave danger. The so-called "street person" has connections with the Russian "free market" mafiosi, ex-KGB officers, street rappers, and a U.S. agency that supposedly doesn't exist.

Eddie soon feels like David in the story of David and Goliath and, like David, Eddie will come out on top.

Walter Mosey's A Little Yellow Dog is another suspense thriller. In 1963 Easy Realigns gave up the street life and accepted the position of supervising custodian of Sojourner Truth Junior High School.

It's been two years now and Easy gets up early each morning, dresses in nice clothes and with anticipation, hurries to school to greet his adopted children. Early one morning Easy is surprised to see one of the teachers already working in her classroom. The teacher has a little yellow dog with her, and a story of her husband going crazy.

Before the day is over the teacher disappears, leaving the dog with Easy and a handsome corpse is found in the school garden. That night a second corpse is discovered. Authorities feel Easy is involved in, if not responsible for, the murders.

Now the principal wants to fire him and Easy has no where to turn. His old friends aren't the same and his new friends may harbor a killer. The little yellow dog is the only one who knows the killer.

Requiem for a Glass Heart may be the best David Lindsey has produced so far. Irina is a cold blooded skillful killer of men and women.

Taking her victims unexpectedly, Irina leaves no trace of her presence behind. Irina, unlike a serial killer, does not enjoy her work but kills at the request of Sergei Krupatin, a brilliant Russian crime lord.

Irina promises herself that this next killing will be her last. She wants out and away from Krupatin. Even though the odds of her survival are not good, Irina knows this is her last chance of escape and regaining control of her own life.

The FBI has learned of the meeting involving the three international crime organizations, the Hong Kong Chinese, the Sicilian La Cosa Nostra and the Russian Mafia. Special Agent Cate Cuevas must pull herself together for the most dangerous assignment of her career.

Still mourning the death of her husband, Cate has just learned of his betrayal. This new assignment will take her total concentration and Cate knows she has to go on with her life. Her assignment is to infiltrate the Russian contingent and stop the meeting.

When Cate and Irina meet, they are drawn to each other and as they both fight for survival among the dangerous, cunning men they become more dependant on each other.

When a thing is funny, search it for a hidden truth.

—George Bernard Shaw

Fern Michaels' Vegas Rich is the story of Sallie Coleman who leaves Texas determined to leave the squalor and make it big in the bright lights of Las Vegas.

By a mysterious twist of fate Sallie suddenly is the most powerful business woman in Nevada. She is rich! First she must become an elegant lady and handsome Philip Thornton is just the man to help her.

Then Sallie turns her attentions to turning the primitive desert town into a thriving showplace. But Sallie cannot forget her long lost brother Seth Coleman so she begins a search for him.

Vegas Rich continues to tell the enthralling story of what happens to the Coleman-Thornton dynasty over half a century and how the dusty mining town becomes a gamblers' haven.

An Elegant Home

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures

Plan G-16, by HomeStyles Designers Network, features decorative corner quoins, copper accents and stunning windows. These stylish touches enhance the brick and stucco facade of this home and create an elegant and inviting facade.

Appointments continue inside, with a sidelighted 11-foot-high foyer leading to the formal living and dining rooms. The living room has a 14-foot vaulted ceiling; the dining room, an 11-footer.

Nearby the dining room the flow-through kitchen has a serving counter that faces the breakfast nook. Windows allow light into the two areas, which share an 11-foot vaulted ceiling.

Adjacent to the nook, the family room features a handsome fireplace and access to a sprawling backyard deck. A fancy fan hangs from the 14-foot vaulted ceiling.

Just off the family room, two roomy secondary bedrooms share a compartmentalized bath.

The master bedroom has its own deck access, a quaint morning porch and a large walk-in closet. The master bath includes a plant shelf, a garden tub and a separate shower. An 11-foot ceiling crowns the master bedroom and bath.

Unless otherwise noted, all rooms have 9-foot ceilings.

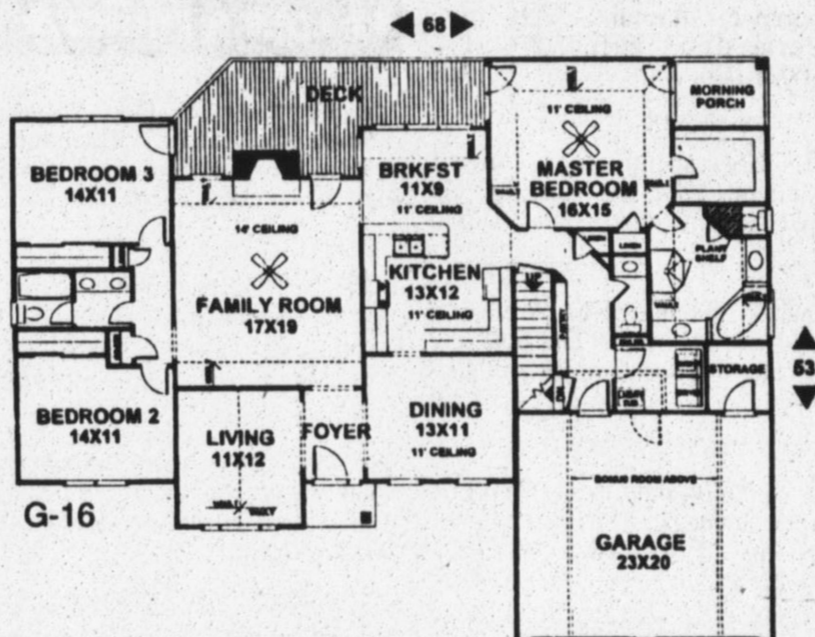

A bonus room above the garage offers the opportunity for expansion.

(For a more detailed, scaled plan of this house, including guides to estimating costs and financing, send $4 to House of the Week, P.O. Box 1562, New York, N.Y. 10116-1562. Be sure to include the plan number.)

G-16 STATISTICS

Design G-16 has a foyer, dining room, living room, family room, kitchen, breakfast room, three bedrooms, two full baths, one half-bath and a utility room, totaling 2,088 square feet of living space.

The plan is available with 2x4 exterior wall framing and a daylight basement foundation. A two-car garage provides 460 square feet of space; the adjoining storage room offers an additional 55 square feet. An unfinished bonus room above the garage provides another 282 square feet of space.

A SHELTERED ENTRY gives way to the foyer, which, in turn, introduces the flanking living and dining rooms. Ahead, the family room offers access to a backyard deck. Two secondary bedrooms and a full bath are just off the family room. Opposite, the walk-through kitchen flows into the breakfast room. Secluded from the rest of the home, the master bedroom has access to both the deck and a morning porch. A private bath completes the suite. A utility room just down the hall from the master bedroom borders the entrance to the two-car garage.

Tips on performing repairs to roof

Caution: Never work on a roof in wind, rain or snow, or when a storm threatens. Stay clear of power lines. For traction, wear soft rubber-soled shoes or sneakers. To move most safely, crawl on your hands and knees. If the roof is excessively steep or high or the repairs complicated, call a professional roofer.

- You can patch any hole in roofing or flashing up to a nickel in size by covering it with a layer of roof cement.

- To repair a partially lifted or curled shingle, dab roofing cement under the corner and press down.

- To repair a torn asphalt shingle, apply roof cement liberally to the underside, press the cemented shingle down, nail the edges and cover the nail heads with cement.

- To replace a broken asphalt shingle, gently lift the shingles in the two rows above it, pry out the nails and remove the pieces. Slip in a new shingle and replace the nails you pulled. Finish by dabbing roofing cement under all affected shingles and pressing down.

If you lack a spare shingle, use a metal patch. Coat one side of a piece of sheet copper or aluminum with roofing cement and push it, cement side down, as far as possible under the damaged shingle. Then coat the top of the metal patch with cement and press the shingle to it.

NBC's Class Reunion follows high school class of '86

Class Reunion, airing Saturday on NBC, is the result of letting the cameras roll when the class of 1986 at Parkrose High School in Portland, Ore., gathers for its 10-year reunion. Graduates featured include (from left) Julie Conaway, Scott Kearney, Kent Kowalski, Marne Lucas, Michael Kellar and Dawn Michelle.

The 10th reunion of Parkrose High School's class of 1986 was different from most. It was filmed for prime-time television.

Class Reunion, airing Saturday, Aug. 31 on NBC, is a two-hour compression of four days spent with 15 carefully selected Parkrose graduates.

The actual reunion party gets only a few minutes at the end of the movie. Most of the film is about the anxieties, memories, grudges and perspectives of high-school alumni who look back at 10 years that were sometimes more bitter than sweet.

Producers Jonathan Murray and Mary-Ellis Bunim chose the Portland, Ore., school after they and a team of researchers spent five months considering nearly 500 high schools.

"Part of the reason we settled on Parkrose was that there were a group of people who represented different cliques within the high school who had clearly definable stories, a reason to go back to their reunion," Murray says.

"They had unfinished business from high school or they had changed in such a way that they wanted to go back and show their classmates how they had changed in their life."

Of these, the most obvious was Marne Lucas, who had hip operations her freshman and sophomore years and walked with crutches and a cane. Short and overweight, she received practically no attention from the boys in school.

After she left Parkrose, though, she grew 6 inches, lost 20 pounds, moved to Europe and embarked on a career as a print and runway model. In Class Reunion, she practically exudes self-confidence and sex appeal.

The film also reunites Julie Conaway and Kent Kowalski. Once inseparable sweethearts, they went their separate ways after high school.

Then there's Chris Kenny, a wise guy who earned the undying hostility of two former friends after he tried to sabotage their courtship. All three are reunited in the film.

In addition to the unresolved conflicts, there were some new ones. One man who refused to go to a dance club frequented by homosexuals became the target of several barbs and the victim of a prank during the reunion party.

Producers Murray and Bunim are best known for making The Real World, which premiered on MTV in June 1992. The series, a cross between a soap opera and a documentary, follows a group of young people sharing living quarters for 20 weeks. Footage of their real-life adventures becomes the basis for the weekly show. Every season a different cast is assembled.

Class Reunion also requires cast members to give up virtually all privacy and allow cameras to record practically everything they say and do.

There's just something about watching real people and real emotions that appeals to viewers, Murray says.

"You're getting an inside look into someone's own experience that you may or may not have gone through. It's very real. It hits you in a way that a scripted drama doesn't hit you because you know it's real."

Also, he says, Class Reunion contains a message that is particularly important for those in high school today.

"You're going to come away from it with a realization that the popular kids had insecurities, too," he explains. "And the popular kids are going to come away with a realization that they do have insecurities and, maybe, they can let their guards down and reach across to other people."

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ August 25-31 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20

A misunderstanding between you and a family member could turn into a full-blown fight if you're not careful. Explain yourself and make your intentions clear. If you've been feeling frustrated lately, you may want to take a closer look at your diet. Are you getting enough nutrients?

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

Reaching for the unreachable will only lead to disappointment. Sure, set your sights high, but keep in mind that there are some things in life you just can't have! A change in the workplace may be a hard adjustment at first. But creative thinking will turn things to your favor.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

With all the changes you've been going through lately, you'll be happy to find this to be a slow-paced week. A Taurus coworker may be the source of aggravation this week - especially if you're in a management position. News of an engagement adds a bright note to the week.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

You may have to do everything short of standing on your head if you want to cheer up a down-and-out friend. Make the effort. It will go a very long way. A tough decision midweek will take up much of your thoughts. Trust your instincts rather than logic to help you choose.

LEO - July 23/August 23

A great week, Leo! Opportunity will come your way when you least expect it and you could find yourself on the express lane to success! Just remember, on Tuesday, be sure to dress your best. A friend who's moved away will move back into your area. Another reason to celebrate!

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

An improvement in your work situation gives you reason to smile early in the week. You'll feel a great weight off your shoulders. In matters of romance, too, there are happy times ahead. If traveling this week, be sure you're packed in advance. Otherwise you could forget something important.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

Tackle a large project with full force if you want to get it done. Taking a half-hearted approach will only make things drag on. Use your Libran tenacity to get things done. A loved one's kindness will give you reason to smile later in the week. A Cancer plays a major role this weekend. Romance looks promising.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

A new Libra friend gives you valuable insight into a troubling situation. You'll realize that there's more than one way to skin a cat. If you've been feeling worn out lately, you may want to take note of your sleeping habits. Are you getting enough? If not, catch up on those zzz's!

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

If you're working on an important project this week, be sure to stay focused on the job at hand. Letting little things distract you will only prolong the inevitable. Keep an eye out for investment opportunities later in the week. You could stumble upon a diamond in the rough.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

What you think of as harmless teasing may come off as offensive or even hurtful to someone who doesn't appreciate your sense of humor. Be especially cautious if your dealing with the extra-sensitive Pisces. Take the lead when planning a special event. Your creativity will add a lot.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

Not dealing with a problem won't make it go away. It will only get worse. Face it head on and work to fix it. A disappointment on Tuesday will prove to be a blessing in disguise. You'll feel that fate probably had something to do with it. A surprise comes through the mail.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

Instead of trying to relieve the symptoms of an ongoing problem, you'd be better off looking for a permanent cure. Try to give a loved one extra space if (s)he is in a crabby mood. This applies especially for the introspective Cancer. Beware of a Leo with bad intentions.

HIGHLIGHTS

Stephen Collins and Catherine Hicks star as a minister and his wife raising five children in 7th Heaven, a family drama premiering Monday on The WB Network.

7th Heaven a highlight of WB's best-ever schedule

The WB Network rolls out what is unequivocally its best lineup of new shows ever this week.

That's faint praise, of course, but for the first time the network wannabe has come up with a roster of rookie offerings that is commendable on several fronts.

Premiering on Sunday, Aug. 25, are The Steve Harvey Show and Life With Roger. The first casts the former Me and the Boys star as Steve Hightower, a former musician now working as a music teacher at an inner-city high school. It's one of several new school-room sitcoms this season, but it's also one of the funniest. The show will later move to Mondays.

Life With Roger plays like Perfect Strangers without the odd accents. Maurice Godin and Mike O'Malley star as an ill-matched pair of guys who become friends almost in spite of themselves. O'Malley, who has the title role, is especially warm and likable, and co-star Hallie Todd (Showtime's Brothers sitcom) is a major asset.

Monday, Aug. 26, brings 7th Heaven, a first-rate family drama starring Stephen Collins and Catherine Hicks as a contemporary couple with five children. The novelty is that he's a minister. The pilot episode boasts perceptive writing and fine performances. Sadly, the show's regular time slot is Sundays, where it will compete with Touched by an Angel.

Premiering on Wednesday, Aug. 28, are Nick Freno: Licensed Teacher and The Jamie Foxx Show. Freno stars stand-up comic Mitch Mullany as an aspiring actor who works as a substitute teacher to pay the bills. CableACE Award winner Stuart Pankin (Not Necessarily the News) co-stars as Nick's pompous adversary, Kurt Fust, the school's dean of discipline.

Another aspiring actor is the central character of The Jamie Foxx Show, in which the talented In Living Color alumnus lives and works at his aunt and uncle's hotel while awaiting his big break. Foxx has all the makings of a genuine star, but his very first episode resorts to the tired "let's put on a show" premise. Not a good sign.

Q: During what years of M*A*S*H did Harry Morgan appear as Col. Sherman Potter? -Brent Turner, Washburn, Maine.

A: Morgan's predecessor, McLean Stevenson as Lt. Col. Henry Blake, was written out of the show at the end of the 1974-75 season. He was replaced by Morgan, who stayed with the show until its demise in 1983, then re-created the character in an ill-fated sequel, AfterMASH.

Q: Flipping through my channels this morning, I came across reruns of Twin Peaks. Did David Duchovny of The X-Files play the transvestite Denise? -J. Rowland via Internet.

A: Yes.

Q: On Christy, who played preacher David Grantland? -Gwendolen Clark, Burlington, Wash.

A: David was played by actor Randall Batinkoff, who may otherwise be best known for co-starring with Molly Ringwald in For Keeps.

Q: Please settle an argument. My friend says that when a film is shot, if the director is happy with the scene, that's it. I say that after a film is shot, it goes to a sound room where the dialogue is added to match the film. Who is right? -Robert W., no address.

A: You both are. The process you are referring to, called looping, is used when the director isn't satisfied with the quality of sound as it originally is laid down during filming. Looping can be an extensive process but, at least in this country, it rarely involves redubbing a film's entire dialogue track.

Q: Why are Harry Smith and Paula Zahn no longer hosting CBS This Morning? -Sharon in Macomb, Ill.

A: CBS hasn't had any luck making inroads in the weekday morning news race and, after years of seeing This Morning stay a consistent, distant third to NBC and ABC, network brass decided some changes were necessary.

Former co-anchors Smith and Zahn, who anchored the show for nine and six years respectively, are moving to other assignments within CBS News, says CBS News President Andrew Heyward.

"This is a chance to forge a strong new identity in the morning," says Heyward. "I am excited about the opportunity to give these fine journalists (Jane Robelot and Jose Diaz-Balart) a new showcase at CBS News."

Q: Please settle a bet. I remember a cop movie starring Joe Don Baker, John Saxon and Linda Evans. My wife says I'm crazy. -Peter O. Scialla, Erie, Pa.

A: Mitchell (1975) is available on video both in its original form and as a particularly funny episode of Mystery Science Theater 3000, wherein its many flaws are gleefully ridiculed.

SOAP TALK

Comings and goings and weddings for stars

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Some people really can keep a secret. Imagine the surprise of cast members, fans and friends who discovered two of their favorite All My Children actors had been married for more than three months.

Kelly Ripa (Hayley) and Mark Consuelos (Mateo) were married May 1 at the Chapel of Bells in Las Vegas.

The couple waited to tell friends and fans until they could tell their parents in person. Consuelos' mom has been out of the country.

Ripa and Consuelos honeymooned in Italy before returning to the AMC set. And we thought the big story in Ripa's life was that she had gone blonder.

In other news: One surprising departure from the soaps is that of Alice Barrett, who plays Frankie on Another World. The actress is leaving the show in a cloud of mystery.

Barrett was let go for story line reasons, which was not what she wanted. "I felt like Frankie still had some great stories to tell," said Barrett.

Coming back to daytime are James Doohan and Jane Elliot.

Doohan returns to his role as Damon, James' father on The Bold and the Beautiful. Damon will be quite taken with Sheila (Kimberlin Brown). Considering Damon's violent past, he and Sheila may make a great couple.

For years fans have begged producers to bring back the character Tracy Quartermaine on General Hospital.

Jane Elliot has reprised the role she made so famous.

Dear Candace: I have a bet with a friend and I'm hoping you can help me out.

I say the actress who plays the stripper in Independence Day used to play Malcolm's (Shemar Moore) girlfriend on The Young and the Restless. My friend says I'm crazy. Can you settle this for us? -Friends in Auburn, Ind.

Dear Reader: I hope you had money on this one. You are not crazy. That is Vivica A. Fox (ex-Stephanie, Y&R) playing Jasmine.

CHITTER CHATTER

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) - The Miss Universe Pageant denied reports Tuesday that the reigning beauty queen is eating her way out of the crown.

"Just ask anyone who tuned into the Miss USA Teen Pageant and they'll tell you that she looked gorgeous," pageant spokeswoman Wooten Lee said from Las Cruces, N.M., where the contest was held last Wednesday.

U.S. and Venezuelan media recently reported that Miss Universe Alicia Machado of Venezuela has been ordered to shed 20 pounds in two weeks or lose her title.

At 5-7, Machado weighed 113 pounds when she won the crown in May. She now weighs 130 pounds, perhaps because of her confessed weakness for chocolate, pasta and corn pancakes, according to the news reports.

Marta Fajardo said her 19-year-old daughter had four wisdom teeth pulled a couple weeks ago, causing her face to swell.

"All that about her having a weight problem is a lie," Fajardo said. "I sent her a fax Sunday, and she called back and said it's just gossip."

Lee said she didn't know Machado's current weight: "We don't put her on a scale and march her around."

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A screenwriter is suing the Walt Disney Co. for $1 million, claiming it stole his idea about a nuclear missile crisis for the hit movie "Crimson Tide."

San Francisco writer Bill Waid says he shopped his 1989 screenplay, "Launch Sequence," all over Hollywood. Disney then used it as the basis for "Crimson Tide," the 1995 submarine thriller starring Denzel Washington and Gene Hackman, the lawsuit contends.

Besides Disney and several subsidiaries, the lawsuit names the estate of Don Simpson, who produced the movie with partner Jerry Bruckheimer. Simpson was found dead of a drug overdose in his home in January.

Disney had no immediate comment, a spokesman said.

HSCA Activities

By Peggy Maxwell, Activities Director

We have had a wonderful month! The Jubilee activities were enjoyed by everyone. The Quilt Show was a huge success. There were many quilts on display as well as other hand made items. The ladies that quilt at the center daily also quilted all day Saturday during the Quilt Show. There were many beautiful antiques for sale and delicious food at the Snack Bar. We thank all the ladies that helped with the Center activities during the Jubilee.

School has started so everyone is getting back to our regular routines. Please check the activity calendar for the scheduled events. The special event this month is the dinner theater scheduled for Sept. 28. Some of the very talented members of the Center are presenting a melodrama at 7 p.m. in the Senior Center Auditorium. There will be a four-course dinner and a delightful story of a lost gold mine.

Canes for community is aim of AMBUCS

The Hereford AMBUCS civic club has started a new project called "Canes for the Community." This is a pilot project designed to provide wooden canes at no cost to senior citizens or others who have the need but not much cash.

The Hereford AMBUCS also has some aluminum canes, crutches and walkers they use as loaners for those who are recuperating from surgery or an illness but who are not covered by insurance and can't afford to buy the products.

Once they are no longer have the need for the cane, crutches or walker they can return it to AMBUCS for someone else to use. The club is working with premier Medical Services of Hereford who provide the equipment at cost and also provide a free fitting or adjustment to the client.

Qualification for the equipment is easy and there is no paperwork involved. Hereford AMBUCS want to provide the canes to folks who are on a limited income and/or who cannot qualify under medical insurance.

There is no prescription or doctors order necessary. If you are short on cash and feel you could use the assistance of a cane, you qualify!

Hereford AMBUCS also accepts donations of cash or equipment to help this project. If you have any equipment such as canes, crutches or walkers in the closet that you no longer use, they will gladly accept them.

The National AMBUCS motto is "Helping create independence for those with disabilities." Our local AMBUCS chapter raises money to help local organizations such as Big Brothers/Big Sisters and Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence. They wanted to start a local project which reflects the national mission, thus "Cane for the Community" was born.

To apply for equipment, make a donation or find out more information, contact Mark Collier at Premier Medical Services 364-4422, Pat Michael at the Hereford Police Department 363-7120 or Capt. Billy at KPAN 364-1860.

Welcome to our New Members!!

Admiring the quilts

A record number of quilts were displayed at the Quilt Show sponsored by Hereford Senior Citizens during the Town and Country Jubilee. A complete listing of participants appears in this issue of the Senior Scene.

Melodrama will be performed at dinner theater on Sept. 28

Some of the very talented members of Hereford Senior Citizens are presenting a melodrama at 7 p.m. on Sept. 28 in the Senior Center Auditorium.

The title of the melodrama is "Golden Fleecing, or the Undermining of Sarah Sweetflower's Sarsaparilla Saloon and Bridal Shoppe."

To start the evening off in a proper atmosphere, a four-course dinner will be served. Items on the eat-with-your-fingers menu are soup, chicken, ribs, potatoes, biscuit, dessert, iced tea and coffee.

Tickets are $12 each.

President's Corner

By Gid Brownd, HSCA President

I don't know when school starts in Washington state, but our grandson has a great adventure coming up. He is to fly alone for his first time to visit us. We have tickets to "TEXAS", will take him water skiing at Uta Lake, set up the trampoline, and "Lady B" has orders to cook lots of food, and lots of steak.

All this grandpa stuff has interfered to some extent with my other duties. Margie says we have another roof leak in the kitchen and there is a leak at the Methodist Church that I need to see about.

The Thrift Store is doing real good. Many may not realize how important this project is to our association. It's a life saver. A few people do a lot of work to make that store go -- it doesn't come easy.

We also have the Festival of Trees coming up. There is much to do and all help is welcome and appreciated. Do come to the Center and join the exercise classes and get in shape. Also join the choir to get in a festive mood. Then you will really enjoy helping with the Festival of Trees.

Margie has bought the paint to paint the outside of the Patton building. This cool fall weather is the time to get that job done. Juanita and I will be gone until about the 5th of September and I hope several of you will be ready to help at that time. If you can't climb a ladder, we'll let you help any way.

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: I have difficulty walking and my doctor has told me I must use a wheelchair. Will Medicare pay for the cost of a wheelchair?

A: Medicare Part B medical insurance helps pay for durable medical equipment such as wheelchairs, walkers, and other equipment prescribed by a doctor for home use. Contact your Medicare carrier listed in "Your Medicare Handbook" for more information.

Q: A close friend of mine has been having difficulty keeping his finances straight and was told by Social Security that his benefits must be paid to a representative payee. Can I be his representative payee if I'm not a family member?

A: A representative payee for Social Security purposes can be a relative, friend, or even a member of a community group or organization provided the Social Security benefits they receive on behalf of the recipient are used for the recipient's needs and his or her best interest. Call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213 for the publication "A Guide To Representative Payees" for more information.

Q: I've been sick and haven't even felt good enough to get to the bank to cash my Social Security check. My son said I should get direct deposit so I can go ahead and pay my bills without getting to the bank. How do I sign up for direct deposit?

A: You have realized one of the most common benefits of direct deposit - it saves you from having to go to the bank. It's easy to sign up. Just call Social Security's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213. When you call, the Social Security representative will ask for your Social Security number, your address, and the name of your bank and your account number, so have that information handy.

Q: I just received my "Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statement" in the mail which shows my earnings for the years that I have worked. How does Social Security know how much a person has earned?

A: Employers report employee earnings to Social Security on W-2 Forms each year. Self-employed persons report their earnings to the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) on their income tax return which IRS transmits to Social Security. Social Security then posts the earnings information to the worker's record. To check whether your earnings are being properly reported, call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213 and ask for the form to request a Personal Earnings and Benefits Estimate Statement.

Q: Do people in the military pay Social Security taxes?

A: Yes, people who serve in the military services on active duty or on active duty for training have paid into Social Security since 1957. While those who served in the military before 1957 did not pay into Social Security, their Social Security records are credited with special earnings for Social Security purposes. For more information, call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213 and ask for the factsheet "Military Service and Social Security."

Breakfast: A Healthy Start

You may be slow to wake up and get ready for the day. Yet you are in a RUSH TO START. Many adults are tempted to skip breakfast. In fact, as many as one out of six skip breakfast. Well, did you know that:

Breakfast jumpstarts your brain. Hunger, even short-term hunger you may experience if you miss breakfast, decreases attention span and ability to concentrate. You are more alert and perform better in all tasks. You are more creative and energetic.

Breakfast is a healthy start for each day. To obtain the needed nutrition to keep your body in optimal health one needs the following:

- *protein for replacement of cells necessary for healing,
- *good sources of zinc, iron, and calcium to help keep bones healthy and reduce the development of osteoporosis,
- *vitamins to help with resistance to infection,

*carbohydrates to give energy. A nutritious breakfast should include a variety of foods, such as cereal or toast, milk, and fruit. One can be adventurous and include some alternate dishes such as burritos. These are fun and along with traditional favorites are good sources of vitamins and minerals.

Breakfast is quality time for the family. Breakfast provides an opportunity for family members to talk and interact with each other. Sitting down to enjoy breakfast together for even a few minutes can provide an important time for family members to discuss what is happening in their lives. This can be a time for parents to serve as role models for healthy eating habits if children are still in the home.

Breakfast is a quick and easy meal that can be fun with little preparation. Eat these Wacky Waffle Stacks with a glass of milk.

Braille books of the Bible for people in 120 countries and in 40 languages, meeting weekly from October through May.

The volunteers who live in this retirement community say they take pleasure in knowing they are spreading the word of God.

"Third World countries are poor, and they need this," said Darlene Holm, coordinator of the group. "When we are making these books, we are sending a part of us wherever we go. I like to think of it as feeling God's work."

Elizabeth Schwartz has been helping make the Braille books for five years.

"I had friends that were blind and I like to help," she said. "It's nice to know that they have Braille."

The books run anywhere from 50 to 97 pages. On one recent Thursday, the volunteers wound up a session by putting the finishing touches on II Kings, one of the longer Braille books at 84 pages.

The assembly line operation begins with one person punching holes in white 8-1/2-by-11-inch sheets of paper. The next volunteer puts the paper between two zinc plates that contain the rough, bumpy imprints that are Braille.

Each different set of zinc plates contains the Braille for one page of a book of the Bible. The plates then are put inside a metal jacket, and taken through the press.

Social Security

By JIM MCDANIEL
Manager in Amarillo

Some 79 percent of those responding to an annual survey of customer satisfaction with Social Security service rated the service "good" or "very good." The result is identical to last year's rating and a slight improvement over the two years before that.

The 12th annual customer satisfaction survey was conducted by the Social Security Administration's Office of Inspector General. The purpose of this survey is to determine the current level of customer satisfaction with SSA services and compare it with the levels of previous years. The survey results are based on a questionnaire mailed to a random sample of 1,500 customers who had contact with Social Security around Nov. 1, 1995.

The survey asked customers to compare the service they received from Social Security to that provided by other government agencies. 58 percent believe that Social Security services are much better or somewhat better, and another 36 percent say Social Security services are equal to the best offered by other agencies. Only six percent said Social Security's service is worse than others.

The survey asked customers to review a list of 17 services and identify those that were most important to them. They said that a knowledgeable, caring staff, easy-to-understand forms and easy-to-reach telephone service are most important.

As a result of previous reports, Social Security revised processes that resulted in a substantial improvement in the telephone service. From January through May 1996, 40 percent fewer people (compared to the same months in 1995) received a busy signal and 17 percent more were served within five percent of calling, even though the total number of calls received increased by two million. 90 percent of people were able to reach a Social Security customer service representative within five minutes.

"We are pleased with the survey results, which tell us that we are pursuing the right course of putting customers first and striving for world-class service," Social Security Commissioner Shirley Chater said.

Today, to "Give one the cold shoulder" is a figurative expression, meaning to slight a person with a snub. During the Middle Ages in Europe, however, "To give the cold shoulder" was a literal term that meant serving a guest who overstayed his welcome a platter of cooked but cold beef shoulder.

At age 87, Chicago woman still running strong

By LINDSEY TANNER
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) - World record-setting runner Anne Clarke is slowing down a bit.

She's sworn off running marathons and does about a 13-minute mile.

Trim and toned, wearing bright blue spandex leggings and well-worn running shoes, Clarke says she has no immediate plans to ditch the second love of her life.

"When I'm the very last one to finish, I may consider just staying home, but that hasn't happened yet," she said.

By the way, Clarke turns 87 in September. And didn't even start running until she was 69.

Incredible? Indeed, even considering that about all she has to do these days to set records is to show up for a race.

"There are people her age who can't even walk, who can't even get out of bed," said David Patt, executive director of the Chicago Area Runners Association, of which Clarke is a longtime member.

Since her first competition, a 10K (6.2-mile) contest she ran in 69 minutes the same year she began the sport, Clarke has competed in more than 500 races worldwide. She holds more than 30 age-related running records in races from 5Ks to 26.2-mile marathons.

From Finland to Hawaii, she has competed in eight marathons - her last in 5:54:10 at age 81 in Chicago, setting a national and world record for her age group.

After competing in about 20 races last year, mostly 5 miles and under, Clarke now plans to limit her running to 5K (3.1-mile) races.

For the first half of this year, she was sidelined with shingles, a foot fracture suffered while teaching aerobics and, most significantly, the death of her 88-year-old husband and life's love, Hamilton Clarke.

"He called himself Mr. Anne Clarke," she says fondly. An insurance agent, Hamilton Clarke was no runner but accompanied his wife to races around the globe, even when he was in a wheelchair in his later years.

The bed in her apartment in Carol Stream, a Chicago suburb, is topped with a colorful quilt her husband made by hand with squares he cut from her old race T-shirts. It's a testimonial of his love and support for a pastime others often thought foolish for a woman her age.

"We had 63 years together," she says, her grief over his death in January still palpable.

Now, she's trying to get back on track, and ran her first race of the year in May, a 5K in an "awful" 42 minutes.

Clarke shrugs when asked about the secret to her tenacity.

"I'm amazed myself," she said in a recent interview. "I can't understand it. I never was athletic at all. I just sat."

She began as an inactive, chubby child. "When I was a child, only boys went out and played games. Little girls played with dolls," she says.

Although Clarke later slimmed down her 5-foot frame, she remained sedentary as an adult.

"I thought anybody was silly to walk if they had a car," said Clarke, who raised two sons and taught second grade in suburban Chicago for 24 years before retiring at age 69.

Her life changed shortly after retirement when she enrolled in a YMCA fitness class that required participants to run a mile.

"I told the teacher I didn't like running. I had on my dollar tennis shoes, and she looked down at my feet and said, 'No wonder. Go out and get yourself a good pair of shoes.'"

Clarke did, for $24 - a pretty high price back in 1978. She ran her first 10K that year and was hooked.

Clarke swears running has cured her age-related aches and pains, including arthritis, bursitis and back pain. "It's my medicine," she said.

She also changed her diet, shunning red meat and eating lots of fruits and vegetables, although she indulges in a weekly piece of chocolate cake and an occasional glass of wine.

Clarke says she got her early inspiration from veteran marathoner Bill Rodgers, whose poster is tacked to her bathroom door with a handwritten message offering his best wishes.

"It kind of shows us ... those of us who are younger, that you can do these phenomenal things," said Rodgers, 48. "That's the greatest message someone like (Clarke) sends: Your life isn't over."

The word "parliament" comes from the French word, parler, which means "to speak."

Calligrapher studied with Queen's scribe

By LOUINN LOTA
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - He has studied with the chief scribe to Queen Elizabeth II and invented a foil adhesive paint that looks more brilliant than 24 karat gold.

Homer Edwards could probably be a millionaire, but after 25,000 certificates, Los Angeles' premiere calligrapher just keeps on scribing.

"People, they love this kind of thing," the 67-year-old Edwards said in a soft, gentle drawl reminiscent of his Nevada, Mo., roots.

"They love to see lettering like this, so I have such a backlog right now that I have to work Saturdays just to get them out."

The quality of his work is so good that even computer-generated items are brought back to him with the plea: "Would you please do this over?"

"I'll tell you something. You can look at the stuff we pump out with the computer. I have to use it sometimes, I have to, but there's such a difference," he added flexing his large, flat thumbs.

"The computer is really stiff," he said, "It's the same angle, the same pressure, no variation in the letter forms, and people are always telling me, 'Homer, they're not half as pretty as yours.'"

Two of Los Angeles' five other city scribes were taught by Edwards, who has been an instructor at the University of California, Los Angeles, California State University, Los Angeles, and Cal State San Bernardino.

Edwards has worked for the city for more than 25 years. His title - graphics designer II. When he started with the city in 1970, he would work there by day and do paste-up and composition for the Los Angeles Times at night. That first city job was in the traffic data illustration department doing charts, graphs, safety slogans and annual reports.

He showed his dedication to the city by staying even after he got Patent No. 4994131 for his foil adhesive.

"It took two attorneys, six years and $20,000, but by 1980 we had the product," Edwards said. "Because I invented it, there's a conflict-of-interest, so I use it for free for the city stuff."

The difference between using gold and Edwards Foil Graphics is the ease of Edwards' invention. The colored foil is on a one-inch roll that's up to 25 feet long. An artist first puts down a pink-colored adhesive. When it's nearly dry, Edwards' foil strip is put on top of the sticky substance and when pressure is applied, the foil paint transfers onto the surface.

He began taking calligraphy and illuminating classes in 1973 and studied for more than a decade. He studied under Queen Elizabeth's scribe, Donald Jackson, from 1973-76. Edwards called Jackson a fantastic teacher who encouraged him to form the Society for Calligraphy in 1974.

Jackson made the students design their own alphabet from scratches they made on paper. Over the years, Edwards has refined his own alphabet in the style of 15th-century Missal Capitals, the lettering used for prayer books.

Sometimes he'll design something that never gets mass printed. So lucky Gloria A. Riley, at her retirement, got a beautiful certificate with cherubim climbing flowers and cherubim with harps.

His favorite city project was a Public Works reminder to cut down weeds to help curb the rodent population. "My favorite was one that said 'Be Careful.' I drew a picture of a rat in the weeds with a water sprinkler spraying water on him and he had a towel, scrubbing his back."

When his mother turned 100 in October 1995, she received the perfunctory certificate given by the city to all centenarians.

Edwards didn't make it. "They made one for her downtown," he said. "Really and truthfully, I didn't have the time to do it."

BRILLE

jackets, the paper goes through a binding process and part of the book is made. The whole procedure lasts about two hours.

The volunteers range in age from 60 to 92. The project is directed by Lutheran Braille Workers Inc. in Yucaipa, Calif., with the money coming only from donations and gifts from churches and other groups across the country.

Since the Sun City group was founded in 1987, it has made thousands of the Braille books for people in countries including Ethiopia, Russia, Thailand, Singapore, Ireland, Japan and Vietnam.

Nationwide and in Canada, there are 201 volunteer centers producing Braille religious books, said Viola Walter, office manager for Lutheran Braille Workers. The organization provides the volunteer centers with all the materials they need to make the books.

Lutheran Braille Workers began 53 years ago when Helene Loewe and her father, Carl Loeber, learned from a Lutheran magazine that religious Braille books were needed in Germany because so many were destroyed during World War II.

"It mushroomed from there," Walter said.

Today, the company ships more than 12,000 books a month in Braille to countries around the world.

The group recently began sending Braille religious books to schools for the blind in Moscow and other parts of the former Soviet Union.

Naturally, the recipients of these books are more than appreciative since, as Walter notes, very little Scriptural material is produced in Braille.

And volunteers like Florence Bartz are just "happy to do the Lord's will."

The Ancient Greeks held Olympic Games every four years from 776 B.C. to honor the god Zeus. After the Roman Empire conquered Greece (100 B.C.), the games lost their religious meaning and in 394 A.D. Emperor Theodosius ordered them ended because of a decline in quality.

Smiley the Clown starts show with bang

By LYNN BULMAHN
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas - With safety in mind, Smiley the Clown diligently warns his audience that he always starts a show with a big bang.

"So if you are afraid of loud noises, cover your ears," he instructs as he waves around a large pistol.

Looking around, he asks if everyone has his or her ears covered. Several have their fingers in their ears or hold their hands against the sides of their heads.

"OK, one, two, three," he counts as he pulls the trigger.

One woman shuts her eyes.

But there is no sound.

Instead, a cloth printed with the word "BANG!" comes out.

"See there? That's a big bang," the clown says, waving the flag around.

Smiley's audience grins sheepishly. Some groan at the bad joke.

There's more. Smiley hears a phone ring. It's in his pocket.

Uncle Louie is calling from the ocean. "How is it there?" Smiley asks.

He listens. "Uncle Louie says it's wet," the clown says. He takes the receiver from his ear and points it toward the room. The spectators are squirted with a stream of water. They shriek with laughter.

The scene is not at the circus, school or a child's birthday party. It takes place at a nursing home and retirement residence.

One thing is the same: the laughter. Senior citizens need a double dose of it, the entertainer says.

Smiley knows a thing or two about senior citizens. He's one himself.

In fact, this clown is 83 years old.

Smiley is also known as Jerry Blunk. He is half of the Cheerios, a local comedy and magic act. His partner is his wife, Virginia, 80, who plays Curly the Clown.

Blunk said the patients are not the only ones who could use some joy and humor in their lives.

"Caregivers need a little laugh," Blunk said. "It's a tough job for them."

For an hour, at least, patients and caregivers alike could leave their burdens at home.

Blunk recruited volunteers from his audience, such as support-group member Walter Demler.

After making Demler wear a silly hat in order to assist him, Blunk pulled it off his head. Out came several scarves and a cloth rabbit.

He then told Demler that his next trick would be dangerous. "Don't be nervous, though, I just lost one guy doing this and that was only last week," Smiley joked.

He then tucked two scarves in Demler's belt near the buckle. The clown told the audience he would pull the scarves through Demler's navel, through his body and out his backbone.

But after several unsuccessful tries, Smiley made a show of giving up. Then he pulled the scarves out of Demler's belt and feigned surprise that they were connected to a pair of men's boxer shorts.

"Oh, I think these are yours," the clown told his hapless assistant.

The audience howled.

There's a serious side to all this clowning around, said Blunk, who's been a magician/clown for the past 20 years. Humor can help people deal with stress so they are better able to cope with the problems in their lives.

The Blunks say they have performed at several nursing homes, the VA Medical Center, libraries and elementary schools. Many times, the places they play for are not in the suburbs, but in blighted neighborhoods.

"We try to go where it's needed," Jerry Blunk said of his clown act. "I think it's really needed when people are incapacitated or poor."
